Mr. Hetfield said that the Mayor must be in his dotage, or else his memory was uncommonly bad. It was only because of what the Mayor and the people had said to him that he had introduced his original resolution, and the speaker wanted it to be understood that he did not cast any reflection on the integrity of any person, but believed that the City ought to have an engineer that would give the construction of the Water Works his personal supervision. And there were no politics in the matter, the resolution being offered for the best interest of the City.

Mr. Newhall thought that the venerable Mayor had been criticised enough, and after further comment it was agreed to defer action for two weeks.

ROUTINE WORK OF THE SESSION.

The routine work of the session began with the customary roll-call, showing all members present. The minutes of the meeting of February 7, were read by City Clerk Coward and were approved as read.

Petitions for electric lights on West Second street near Elmwood place, on Irving place between Seventh and Eighth streets, and on New street between Third and Fourth, were referred to the Committee on Public Lights.

A petition asking for a correction of the sidewalk grade in front of Hand's new building on West Second street, was referred to the Committee on Streets.

WHERE OUR WATER IS PUREST.

"Report of Progress, No. 1," from Rudolph Hering for the Plainfield Water Works company, was read. It gave details concerning the best wells driven and the quality of water obtained. Experiments to determine the quantity procurable from the best locality thus far found—that Northeast of the city, beyond Leland avenue—were about to be made. In the Leland avenue neighborhood the best results of any had been obtained, and very satisfactory work was expected. By chemical tests the water was very good, while that from near the mountain in other tested localities came from beneath red shale, was impregnated with iron and was unsatisfactory.

The report was received and filed. The "iron" statement is one of the things disputed by Mr. Hetfield.

APPOINTMENTS BY THE MAYOR—FIRE AND POLICE.

The resignation of Eugene A. Laine as First Assistant Fire Department Engineer was presented and accepted, and Mayor Male's appointment of J. Erwin Waters as his successor was confirmed.

Eugene A Laine and Joseph Cooney were recommended by the Mayor for regular police duty and were appointed. Chief Carey was authorized to procure regulation suits and outfits.

The nomination of Robt A. Meeker to be Street Commissioner was confirmed.

A communication from H. H. Baker seeking further patronage in the matter of placing name signs on streets not now indicated and "City Limit" signs on important roads, was referred to the Committee on Streets.

Firemen were nominated as follows: Alert Hose Co., No. 1, Wm. F. Arnold, Jas. W. Davis; Engine Co., No. 2, Geo. France, Adolph Karner, Frank B. Randolph. The nominations were tabled, but were subsequently confirmed with these others: Engine Co., No. 3, W. S. Marsh, Harry Hartpence; Zephyr Hook and Ladder Co., No. 1, J. W. Gavett, Chas. McGinney, John K. Harding, Geo. Stoddard.

A great batch of hackmen's and peddlers' licenses were granted, and twenty-five hackmen's badges were ordered.

Bills were ordered paid as follows:

Salaries—Geo. M. Angleman, $90; John Johnson, $125; A. Titsworth, $76.50; Vincent W. Nash, $55 75; Craig A. Marsh, $23 42.

Miscellaneous — Plainfield Electric Light company, $675.17; Plainfield Gas Light company, $4.20; J. C. Pierson, Jr., $14.70; W. L. Force & Bro., $200.75; Times Printing and Publishing company, $19.50; J. L. Crowell, $7; John B. Naylor, $26.

Police—Tunis J. Carey, $90; G. W. Grant, $60; P. J. Flanagan, $60; Chas. Giese, $60; Thos. McCue, $60; Patrick Lynch, $60; S. B. Hope, $10; Joseph Cooney, $6; Jacob Kriney, $1.50; Andrew Muir, $5; District Fire Alarm Messenger Telegraph company, $8.

Streets—Geo. M. Angleman, $65 92; John H. Angleman, $11.25; J. Adams, $19 14; M. Burk, $3; J. Brennan, $21; T Burk, $19; J. Connolly, $27.30; John Dunn, $11.63; Thos. Flynn, $12; John Heffernan, $12.75; S. Jones, $1.50; John Keefe, $6; John Kellett, $7.50; Albert Mannock, $3; A. J. McLain, $30; Thos. Melville, $12.15; Robt. Randolph, $9.75; Michael Sweeney, $6.75; J. F. Scott, $1 50; J. W. Stout, $6.75; Michael Welsh, $44; J. H. Wilson, $230.58, $10,23.

Poor—Sundry claims making a total of $204.50.

Fire Department—T. O. Doane, $42.06; Hiram B. Voorhees, $10; John B. Gabel, $12.50; J. Cooney, $13.33; D. A. Woodhouse, $12; Plainfield Gas Light company, $40.50; C. F. Gieseler, $5; F. B. Randolph, $25; J. J. Sharp, $3.50; A. M. Griffen (hot water heating at No. Two's Engine house), $995; A. M. Griffen, $27.67; Eugene A. Laine, $6.25; Plainfield District Fire Alarm Co., $1.50; M. J. McCarthy, $5; Geo. Conover, $41.66.

The report of the Tax Collector, John Johnson, showing for the month receipts of $2,728.65, of which $775.80 was for school purposes, was received and referred to the Finance Committee.

The report of City Treasurer Alex. Titsworth, showing a balance on hand of $15,770.10 took a similar course.

PAUPERISM, ILLEGITIMACY AND WIFE-DESERTION.

The annual report of Overseer of the Poor, J. Oakley Nodyne, was presented. It showed that during the year $2,022.29 had been expended on the city poor. 71 families had been aided. The Overseer regretted that because the legal punishment was so small the number of cases of infants who were likely to become public charges was on the increase. Cruel and wilful desertion by husbands was also an alarming and growing evil, and because of its growth the pauper roll was visibly lengthened. The laws were too lax, the punishment was inadequate. Both matters needed thorough legislative revision.

CHIEF CAREY'S $200 PRIZE.

The quarterly report of City Judge W. R. Codington showed that out of the 29 prisoners, 24 had been fined, 3 had been committed to jail and 2 had been discharged; on one sentence had been suspended. There had been collected in fines $569, of which $400 had been from Michael Watson for the illegal sale of liquor. Of this $400, $200 had been given to Chief Carey, complainant in the case, as prescribed by law.

The Committee on Fire and Public Buildings reported favorably on Albert Hedden's petition to erect on East Fourth street a building covered with corrugated iron and tin, and it was granted.

The Street Committee reported that Melissa U. Angleman's petition concerning the opening of Sanford street, was outside of its jurisdiction.

The Water Committee reported the receipt of $1,000 from the Water company on account. The money was, by resolution of Mr. Newhall, ordered paid in to a special Water Fund at the City National Bank, where all other similar moneys are to be deposited.

$200 TO PUNISH LICENSE OFFENDERS.

By resolution of Mr. Hetfield, the sum of $200 was appropriated for use by Tunis J. Carey, Chief of Police, in detecting and punishing all illegal liquor selling, whether by licensed or unlicensed parties.

DR. JENKINS PRESCRIBES FOR THE TOWN CLOCK.

Councilman Jenkins reported that the Methodist church trustees desired the town clock in their edifice repaired and kept in running order. As it was the city's clock he moved that the Committee on Fire and Buildings investigate as to the cost of repairs. The motion was amended so that the committee would report to the Council before making expenditures and was adopted.

Mr. Dunham said that he knew of a man who could produce testimonials from numerous persons, which it was his business to repair such clocks as this, which was not an old clock, only a new one out of gear, and he (the repairer) could put it in good shape. Mr. Dunham's man has tinkered with the Trinity clock in New York and may be trusted with the Front street timepiece.

HIGH LICENSE ON BEER WAGONS.

An ordinance to amend the ordinance providing for the licensing of "quart" houses where beer may be sold to be drunk off the premises was introduced, passed on second reading and ordered engrossed and advertised. It raises the license fee from $100 to $250, and provides heavy penalties. It compels all drivers of beer wagons to carry a certificate that they are licensed and to show it on demand. Mr. Jenkins alone opposed the ordinance.

The disputed bill of J. H. Wilson for crushed stone was returned by the Committee on Streets and referred to the Committee on Laws and Ordinances.

The Council adjourned till Monday night March 17, when street railway and other matters will come up, and when the public will join with the Council in making a rigid investigation of the Water-Works question.

VACATION SET.

Board of Education Meeting.

All the members were present at the meeting of the Board of Education, on Monday. After the usual routine of scrutinizing and passing bills was over, several items of interest were discussed.

The time for the usual Spring vacation was fixed to extend from Friday noon, April 4, to Monday morning, April 14.

The petition of ladies from the Monday Afternoon club for the introduction of manual training classes into the public schools, which at the last meeting of the Board was referred to the Committee on Teachers and Text Books, was reported back and considered at length.

On motion of Dr. Hurlbut, it was decided in view of the little time remaining in this school year, the absence of the Principal and the small balance in the treasury over the known wants for the present year, to postpone the further consideration of this subject until the opening of another school year.

The President reported that the night schools had been suspended at the end of February, in consequence of the light attendance.

A proposal was received from Mr. Ernest Ackerman to furnish an American flag for the High School, if the Board would provide a flag-staff, which was accepted, and the Committee on Buildings and Repairs were directed to procure the staff. This makes three out of the five schools which are provided with flags. As this city set the fashion in this matter of furnishing flags for the schools, which has spread all over this and other States, it is to be hoped that the other two schools of this city will not have to wait long before they are also thus equipped.

Acting Principal Goodrich reported $116 as the profits of the school concert, and that the money with the balance on hand from former concerts had been spent in purchasing singing books for the school. He also reported something over $400 as the receipts of the second quarter for tuition in the High school. The receipts for the year from this source will amount to nearly $2,000, a gratifying fact showing the estimation in which the High School is held. In this respect it should be remembered that no scholars are taken from outside the city limits excepting into classes which are not filled with Plainfield pupils.

Mr. Goodrich also stated that since the boys had been stopped from playing ball in the street through the complaint of one lady out of all the residents on the avenue, they were not now provided with sufficient play ground, and suggested that the windows adjacent to the yard be protected with screens, and the boys be permitted to play ball in the yard between the building. The matter was referred to the Committee on Buildings and Repairs. The Board adjourned at 9:30.

The Night School Closed.

The attendance at the night school for men of late being on the decline, the Board of Education has decided to close the school from now on. Thursday there were but twenty-three scholars present, and this number does not warrant a continuation of the night session.

It is to be regretted that the night school has closed. Where such excellent educational facilities are offered by the Board of Education, they should certainly be appreciated.

Handsome Silk Mixed Suits Complete in All the New Cuts for $12, $13 and $15.

Watson & Co. are showing in window next to Market street, samples of these stylish suits on which their idle custom tailors have been working during the dull season. They are suitable for dress wear, as the small neat patterns are formed by fine silk threads in various colors, skillfully woven through the cloth, and when you come to put them on for every day they are the most genteel and satisfactory wearers made. If you prefer a pair of pantaloons of a more pronounced pattern, or a lighter shade, they can give you a hundred handsome new designs to select from of sufficient weight to put on now and still keep the price of the COMPLETE SUITS, $12, $13 and $15.

Notice the elegant cut of these garments and remember that they are all made by idle custom tailors during the dull season as exact copies of ordered work and that Watson & Co. use no cutting machines.—Newark Press.

RE-OPENED.

The Auditorium of the First Baptist Church Was Opened Sunday After Being Closed for the Past Five Months for Improvements and Repairs—Appropriate Exercises.

The congregation of the First Baptist church, met in the auditorium of the same Sunday morning and evening for worship after its being closed for some time past.

The morning service was very appropriate, consisting of singing and a sermon by the pastor, the Rev. D. J. Yerkes, D. D. Dr Yerkes took for his text the V Psalm and 7th verse, "But as for me, I will come into thy house in the multitude of thy mercy; and in thy fear will I worship toward the holy temple." From this text Dr. Yerkes preached a very instructive and interesting sermon. During the services the new choir under the leadership of Mr. Chas. W. McCutchen, rendered several beautiful selections and assisted in the musical part of the exercises, accompanied by the new Midmer organ which was presided over by a young organist from New York who was on trial and proved himself to be very satisfactory. The choir is composed of the following persons:

Soprano—Mrs. M. I. Cooley, Mrs. Geo. A. Chapman, Mrs. Waring, Mrs Saunders, Mrs. Miln.

Altos—Mrs L. H. Biglow, Jr., Mrs. Perry, Miss Worth, Miss Emma Whitlock, Miss Gussie Runyon.

Tenors—Mr. C. W. McCutchen, Mr. S. McJ McCutchen, Mr. L. H. Biglow, Jr.

Bass—Mr. B. T. Barnes, Mr Bonnell, Mr. T Armstrong, Mr. Bowman.

"The Rev. Mr. Fernald, a retired Baptist minister who lately took up his home in this city, assisted in the devotional services."

The evening service was one of song and praise. The pastor, the Rev. Dr Yerkes, preached a short sermon from the XXIII chapter of Proverbs and the 7th verse, "For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he: Eat and drink, saith he to thee; but his heart is not with thee," which was listened to very attentively by his hearers. The choir rendered several beautiful selections during the evening, and a solo was also sung by Mr. B. T. Barnes, after which the pastor pronounced the benediction which brought the service to a close.

The church has been closed for the past five months to make necessary improvements. The interior has been entirely renovated and remodeled and a new Midmer organ has also been substituted for the old one. It is also lighted by electricity, and has been refurnished throughout, which makes a very beautiful and attractive appearance.

New City Attorney for Elizabeth.

At a meeting of the Elizabeth City Council Saturday, night, City Attorney Frank Bergen, who for nearly ten years has held the place with honor to himself and credit to the city, tendered his resignation. It was a surprise to the Aldermen. Hon. Fred C. Marsh was elected City Attorney.

A Popular Young Man.

George G. Somers, the popular young operator at Bound Brook for the New Jersey Central, is a great favorite with the employees and patrons by reason of his strict attention to duty. George is at present acting as ticket agent in this city, and by his gentlemanly ways is fast becoming a favorite here. Bound Brook should be proud of such a citizen as George. He captured burglars on different occasions while night operator by his daring work and prompt actions.

One of Frazee Lee's Heirs Dead.

Ezra D. Hetfield, joint heir with his brother, Daniel Hetfield, to the Frazee Lee estate of about $250,000, died at his home, in Fanwood, Saturday, at the age of ninety-three years. The cause of his death was paralysis, which was caused by a severe attack of "la grippe." He was wealthy before his rich relative Frazee Lee died and left him his property. It is believed that his death will bring to a close the several suits pending relative to the disposal of valuable entailed properties. The surviving heir, Daniel Hetfield, is eighty-nine years old.

A Falling Off in the Membership.

The League of American Wheelmen membership in New Jersey in 1887 was 865; in 1888 it was 740; and last year it had dropped to 627. All this time the number of wheelmen has been increasing rapidly. This does not speak well for the administration of league affairs in this State. Some say it has been owing to the threatened interference of the league with road racing. Perhaps so and perhaps not. Be this as it may, the wheelmen look to Chief Consul Brown to restore the division to its prosperity under his former administration.

Y. M. C. A. Convention.

The twenty-first annual State Convention of the Y. M. C. A., of New Jersey will be held at Morristown, beginning on the 13th instant. Following is the first day's programme:

7:30 P. M.—Organ Voluntary; Anthem by Choir; Call to Order, Mr. C. W. Shoemaker, President; Opening Exercises—Reading of Scriptures; Prayer; Congregational Singing; Welcome Address; Appointment of Committee on Permanent Organization; Selection by Choir.

8:30 P. M.—Address, "The Word of the Lord," the Rev. Henry Spellmeyer, D. D., Orange, N. J; Notices; Report of Committee.

An Honest Association.

About nine years ago "Gypsy Queen," a mare belonging to the late John C. Meyer of New Brunswick, trotted in a race in this city, being driven by Mount Morris. Owing to the bad weather, seven heats were trotted, and the race lasted two days. The race was under the rules of the National Trotting Association, and both Mr. Meyer and Morris believed that the mare had fairly won third money, but it was given to another horse.

This matter has been thoroughly investigated by the Association, and it was recently discovered that one of the horses which trotted against "Gypsy Queen" was a "ringer," that is a horse trotting out of its class. Upon this discovery the officials of the National Trotting Association at once forwarded a check for the amount of the third money in this old race to Mrs. J. C. Meyer, thus doing "Gypsy Queen" and her driver justice.

His Predictions May Prove True.

A writer in Town Talk, an illustrated journal published every Saturday at Elizabeth, has the following to say with reference to the Central League Bowling Tournament:

"The Central Bowling League battle has begun in earnest. Elizabeth has done even better than I expected both in games won and scores made—four straight victories with an average of 831. This is a record certainly not to be sneezed at, and with the material the club has I see no reason why this should not be kept up, at least as far as scores go. With such high figures to back against I do not think their opponents can capture more than a very small proportion of the games played. Certainly their past records do not show it. At the present outlook, I repeat, Elizabeth should win 'hands down.' Fanwood, Nameless and Monday Night should have a good fight for second place and at home give the Elizabeths a hard rub. I fear, however, that the Crescent, Olympic and Somerset teams are hardly in the hunt. I do hope that results will prove my predictions valueless; for in the interest of the game I wish to see the fight as close as possible all around."

THAT SCOTCH PLAINS SCHOOL HOUSE.

Some Pertinent Questions Concerning Its Erection, and a Few Facts for the Trustees to Answer.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Mr. David P. Hall, Trustee of Scotch Plains School District, No. 14, in a letter to THE PRESS dated February 18, 1890, refers to the comments of a "Fanwood Old Timer" in the issue of January 23, as a "reading notice" ("i. e., a paid article.") From this misleading insinuation, it would appear that he wanted to create the impression among "those people in Plainfield, who are not in the habit of visiting the beautiful little hamlet," that the criticisms in THE PRESS' news columns of public officials and public works is influenced by the ring of the Almighty dollars. It would seem hardly necessary to refer the gentleman to the large circulation of THE PRESS among the reading public, (of which I am sorry to note that Mr. H. acknowledges that he does not belong,) or to call upon them to attest to the fact that THE PRESS is fearless in honest criticisms of public affairs. In all of the history of THE PRESS it has never been called upon to retract anything or to get down upon its marrow bones and apologize, to cancel a libel suit. Ever since the institution of the Republic honorable men who assume offices of public trust, have considered it a high honor to have their official acts criticised by the press of the country. And why Mr. Hall should feel alarmed that the "county papers" do harm when he has the backing of Messrs McKim, Mead & White, a firm of architects, who "enjoy a National, almost a World wide reputation," is a mystery.

In regards to his good or ill fortune as a trustee of School District, No. 14, men who seek office should be prepared to take the responsibilities as they come. Just where the animus that he attributes to Fanwood architects and builders come in the comments of "Fanwood Old Timer," is a puzzle that can only be solved in the proverb of old, "that a guilty conscience is self-own accuser." Oh, what a relief it must afford a person troubled with such a conscience to unload the responsibility on other shoulders. And what kind considerate voters that reside in District No. 14, to appoint at their June meeting an Advisory Committee for the purpose of relieving the trustees of all blame and responsibility of the selection of the plans for the much ridiculed edifice. This scholastic edifice has also a great local history, commencing with the giving away of the old school building and lot to a syndicate at the District meeting in June under a set of legal resolutions.

The alleged appointment of two members of the syndicate on the Advisory Committee; the adoption of the Hebrew style of awarding the contract; the meanness of the contractors in not furnishing sufficient material for a secure scaffold, resulting in the death of one workman and making another a cripple for life are all matters to take into consideration. To review this history would consume too much valuable space. But whoever wishes to obtain information relating to it can visit the little hamlet, and talk with the people and they will get the full history. I will now give Mr. Hall and the other trustees a few facts to answer in connection with this scholastic subject.

Mr. Hall refers to provisional plans that the trustees had in contemplation which were laid aside under the advice of the Advisory Committee. This is the first official intimation that the people of the District has had that other plans were under consideration. But it has been generally understood, unofficially, that there were plans submitted to them of a building that contained 200 square feet more seating space, 100 per cent. more light, and costing about $3,000 less money than the present structure.

When the contracts were awarded it was generally understood that the specifications called for the foundation walls to be built of good local quarry stone. The brick work to be built with good hard burnt North River brick, or brick equally as good. Red cement mortar to be used. Reference is made to these clauses in the specification to show what the people are to receive. The foundation walls are built with field trap rock from the stone crackers. The North River hard brick was obtained from a local brick yard. The walls are now variegated with every shade of a brick from a salmon to a cherry red. The walls are now bulged an inch or more in many places, and some of the brick are now showing signs of disintegration. The chimneys on the roof are built so that the wood-work of the belfry ends up against the flues that lead from the furnace in the cellar. The lumber used is said to be not up to a first-class standard.

These are all plain visible facts that do not require the acute eye to detect. Upon whom shall the responsibility fall for this state of affairs? It is altogether unnecessary for Mr. Hall to try and divert public attention from the edifice by giving a list of the buildings and places where these New York architects have performed work in their defence, for the Scotch Plains school building will speak for itself.

FANWOOD.

A Small Fire.

An incipient fire started in Dr. James Hayes' residence on East Front-street, a few evenings since, which destroyed about $50 worth of lace curtains, lambrequins, etc. No alarm was sent out.

Westfield's Public Library.

Rev. J. K. Folwell, E. Francis, J. Delamater, W. G. Peckham, J. T. Burke, G. H. Brown and W. G. Endicott have been appointed a committee to select officers and further the organization of the Westfield Reading Room Association. At a mass meeting held last week, the need of a public library was recognized by leading citizens, who subscribed liberal amounts toward its formation.

ELIZABETH WINS AGAIN.

But Plainfield Will be Most Interested in Friday Evening's Battle.

The Olympics of this city went to Elizabeth, Monday evening, and bowled two more of the scheduled matches for the championship of the Central Bowling League. Elizabeth won both as follows:

ELIZABETH.	1ST	2D	OLYMPIC	1ST	2D
Fleming	181	153	Wilbur	119	141
Davis	161	174	White	161	160
Price	184	173	Wyckoff	131	149
Hedlner	200	159	Van Alstyne	143	170
Turnbull	176	180	Collier	144	167
	901	839		700	789

The most exciting games of the tournament will occur on Friday evening when the Crescents and Olympics meet for the first time. The games will be rolled on the Olympia alleys.

The record of the Central Bowling Tournament, now stands:

	WON.	LOST.
Elizabeth Athletic Club	8	0
Monday of Westfield	5	1
Fanwood of Fanwood	4	2
Nameless of Westfield	3	3
Olympic of Plainfield	2	6
Somerset of Somerville	0	10
Crescent of Plainfield	0	0

No Citizens' Meeting to be Held.

The meeting of citizens of North Plainfield to nominate township and borough officers, that was advertised to be held this evening, has fallen through. No one would "father" it.

Probably Not So.

The Deaf-Mutes' Journal, published in New York, says: "Smiling Pat. Gately has signed to play with the Brooklyn Association the coming season, at a salary of $1,050 a year."

As Gately's work in the box last season for the Crescents, was not, as a general thing, to be depended on, the price named above is far beyond his worth.

A Boom for Justices of the Peace.

The following is reproduced from the Home News of New Brunswick:

"Plainfield having returned to its license system, after a year of no license, it now draws $700 from each hotel and saloon, but finds it necessary to have two additional policemen to maintain order under the new conditions. The justices of the peace may now anticipate a boom in their business."

A Somervillian in Irons.

Mr. Otto Schwab of the U. S. man-of-war "Enterprise," arrived in New York last Friday on that vessel. He is one of the most popular young men of the crew, and has high testimonials for good seamanship. He is a resident of Union Village, where his numerous friends will give him a hearty welcome home. Several of the officers and crew of the above-named vessel were found to be in irons, under the hatches, the crew for insubordination and the officers for cruelty to some of the crew. One of the officers who was in irons was Lieutenant Kline of Somerville.

PERHAPS no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most distressing and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the multitude of modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.

—Thirty persons signed the pledge at Reform Hall, Sunday night.

—The lower hall, office and barroom of the City Hotel have been papered and [illegible] lighting.

—The bicyclists, especially in the side streets, seem to think they only have the right of way on the [illegible] paths. The law thinks otherwise.

—Parents should see that their boys are off of the streets at [illegible] hours, and not permit them to stay out until 9 or 10 o'clock at night.

—During the evening service at the First Baptist church, Sunday, the main chandelier which is lighted by electricity, by some cause or other went out.

—The congregation of the Crescent Avenue church met for worship for the first time in the new chapel, February 23. The Rev. W. R. Richards, the pastor, made a dedicatory address.

—Farmers and others driving into town report that the roads are in a deplorable condition. In some places the mud is nearly hub-deep, and it is with much difficulty that town is reached.

—The second trial of the case of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals vs. Walter Smalley for alleged cruel treatment to a horse, has been adjourned by Justice [illegible] for 60 days.

—The Executive Committee of the State Firemen's Association has prepared an explanation of the tax exemption law which will be printed in the shape of a circular and sent to the firemen throughout the State.

—The Republicans of Westfield will hold their primaries on Thursday evening of this week. The Democratic voters will hold their primaries on the following evening. The election will take place on the 11th instant.

—A laughable incident occurred on West Front street after church Sunday evening, when a German family, consisting of a man, his wife and daughter were all seen to fall heavily on the sidewalk and roll about in the snow.

—The Congregational church of Westfield has decided to erect a five thousand dollar extension to the church. Mr. O. S. Teale of North Plainfield, is the architect. The contracts for the work have been awarded, and the work will begin as soon as the weather becomes settled.

—One of the handsomest houses in Washington Park, is for sale. Mr. E. J. Waring is going to give up his large establishment, well [illegible] and also his residence place at the corner of Myrtle and [illegible] avenues. The grounds [illegible] over three acres laid out in fine lawns with fruit and shade trees.

—The Central Railroad has decided to erect a new freight house West of Bound Brook, nearly opposite the roundhouse. The contracts have been given to local builders. The old freight house will be torn down and the site turned into a yard. It is rumored that the company will build a station near the new freight house.

A VARIED VOCAL.

What This Evening's Concert Will Be.

This evening in Music Hall, will be given the second of the series of subscription concerts by the Plainfield Choral Society. The programme to be rendered will be particularly pleasing in every way. There will be much variety, and the music as a whole will be "lighter" in character than usual.

Two of the numbers will be arrangements by Mr. Fitzhugh himself. One, Strelezki's "Dreams" is fresh from the publisher's hands and has never been sung before. In fact, it was arranged by Mr. Fitzhugh especially for the Plainfield Choral Society. The other of the leader's compositions, is a quartette for male voices.

The soloists of the evening will be Mrs. Sarah Baron Anderson, the greatest of New York's contraltos, and Mr. Wm. Ward Stephens, pianist. At the next concert the Messiah will be sung with full orchestra. Miss Alice Holmes, Mr. Elmer Runyon and Mr. Wm. M. Richards were elected into the Society Tuesday evening.

Up Goes the Price of Ice.

Notwithstanding the fact that not a pound of ice has been gathered by the local dealers, there is plenty of it to be had in this city. Beginning Saturday, however, the price has been increased. According to the present schedule the dealers will furnish ice to private families for one dollar a hundred, seventy-five cents a hundred to merchants and for sixty cents to butchers. Heretofore the prices ranged from forty to eighty cents a hundred.

The Last Sad Rites.

The funeral ceremonies following the death of the late Anna A. Lowry, wife of the Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry, who died on Tuesday, took place from the house on Madison avenue, Friday afternoon. The Revs. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, A. B. Dilts and Dr. Pelt, the latter of Philadelphia, all took part in the service. A quartette composed of Miss Alice Holmes, Mrs. Wm. A. Freeman, Mr. C. C. VanArsdale and Master Arthur Freeman rendered delightful and appropriate music. Interment was made in the family plot in Hillside cemetery.

Iron Discovered at Washingtonville.

Mr. Theo. Zeller of Washingtonville, while quarrying out stone for building purposes recently, had his attention attracted to some substance in the soil that was lodged in between the stone. On examination it was found to contain bright specks, indicating ore. By the advice of friends he sent some of the specimens to the State Geologist at New Brunswick, who assayed it and found it to be iron ore of a good quality. If in sufficient quantities it would pay mining costs and more. Mr. Zeller will probably feel inclined to pay costs in the enterprise.

Death of Freeholder Vanderbeek's Mother.

At the home of her son in North Branch, Sunday afternoon, occurred the death of Eliza D. Vanderbeek, the estimable mother of Freeholder Vanderbeek of this city, in the 89th year of her age. Mrs. Vanderbeek would have been 90 years old had she lived until April 25, and she was in possession of all her faculties up to within a few hours of her death.

The funeral took place from the church at Lamington on Wednesday at 11:30 o'clock.

It is but just and right to state that the present champion of the State Chess Association, Clarence L. Murphy, did not take part in the contest at New Brunswick, being otherwise engaged on Feb. 22, when the playing took place.

Mr. James Evans, an employee of the Potter Press Works of this city, started on an extended trip to Denver, Col., for the benefit of his health. His many friends will therefore miss him, as he has made himself very popular among his fellow acquaintances.

Mr. S. J. Samelson for the past year manager of the Plainfield Wall Paper warehouse left Monday for Poughkeepsie, N. Y., from there he will leave in a few days for California, where he expects to make his future home. His many friends wish him success in his new undertaking.

There was quite a large attendance at the funeral of Henry Kline in the Crescent Avenue church, Tuesday. The Rev. Mr. Richards preached the sermon. Kline had been the faithful sexton of the church for many years, and was its pensioner at the time of his death.

To quote a universal expression of opinion, "The Court of Chancery and the people of the State are to be congratulated on the appointment of so able a lawyer, so upright a citizen and so energetic an official to the vacant Vice Chancellorship as ex-Governor Robert S. Green."

The Rev. Father C. J. Kelly, of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church in Jersey City, sailed last Saturday on a two months' trip through Europe. Father Kelly is one of the most eloquent as well as most popular priests in Jersey City. He studied for the priesthood while a resident of this city.

Miss Celia E. Gardner, the gifted writer, of this place, is the authoress of a new book entitled "Tested," just issued by G. W. Dillingham of New York. The narrative dwells on the history of a girl's life, intermingled with which is a love tale. Miss Gardner also has in press another new book entitled "Seraph or Mortal," which promises to eclipse all her former efforts.

Some weeks ago, THE PRESS disclosed the secret that a committee in search of a successor to Dr. Cuyler of Brooklyn, had been to Plainfield listening to the Rev. Wm. R. Richards. The item was of much general interest, as Dr. Cuyler's church, now that the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher is dead, is the most important in all respects in all Brooklyn. The New York and Brooklyn papers, however, enlarged upon the facts stated in these columns, and said that Mr. Richards had received the call with an offer of $8,000 a year, but had declined. Mr. Richards writes THE PRESS Tuesday: "No such call has been extended."

OBITUARY.

Death of Assessor Isaac Brokaw.

At his home, on Duer street, North Plainfield, about 7 o'clock Tuesday morning, occurred the death of Assessor Isaac Brokaw, after a lingering illness from a complication of diseases resulting from liver troubles. Mr. Brokaw was perhaps one of the most well and favorably known men in Somerset County. He was about 50 years old at the time of his death, and for the past 13 years he had held the office of Assessor in North Plainfield township, with credit both to himself and to the township. In public life Mr. Brokaw was one of North Plainfield's foremost citizens, and his friends were a legion. He leaves a widow and one son.

Mr. Brokaw was also engaged in the real estate and insurance business. He was Commander of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., also a charter member of No. 2 Engine Company of this city, besides being a Free Mason and a member of the Knights of Pythias. He was also a member of the First Baptist church.

MR. BROKAW'S BIOGRAPHY.

Isaac Brokaw was born September 1840, at Harris' Lane, one mile this side of Bound Brook, New Jersey, on the farm now owned by his uncle, Wm. H. Smock. His father was the son of Isaac Brokaw, who formerly owned the farm now the property of Wm. Rice, near Good's Mill, and his mother was the second daughter of Henry Smock by his first wife. Isaac Brokaw attended the school at Harris' Lane until he was 15 years of age. He then left the farm and went to Newark, N. J., and learned the trade of silver plating with the firm of Edwards & Frazee. After serving his apprenticeship he worked some three months at this trade.

On the eve of the breaking out of the Rebellion business became stagnant on account of suspended intercourse with the South, where the greater portion of the firm's goods were shipped. He left Newark and returned to the farm, and in the Spring of 1860 he and his brother took charge of his grandfather's farm. In August, 1862, he enlisted in Co. C, 28th Regt., N. J. Vols., as Third Sergeant, and on Dec. 13, 1862, was detailed to act as First Lieutenant of his Company, owing to the sickness of that officer, and continued in that capacity until June 23, 1863, the date of his discharge.

He participated in the Battle of Fredericksburg, December 13, 1862, Burnside's mud march in February, 1863, and the Battle of Chancellorsville, May 1, 2 and 3, 1863, being connected with the 1st Brigade, 3d Division of the Second Army Corps, commanded by Gens. Couch and Hancock. He was wounded at Fredericksburg and also at Chancellorsville, on May 3, and mustered out of service June 26, 1863, by reason of the expiration of his term of enlistment.

After his discharge he formed a partnership with Mr. George H. Martin in silver plating at 57 Mechanic street, in the City of Newark and in 1865 closed his affairs there and came to this city and continued in the plating business until 1883. He married the youngest daughter of Mr. Wm. M. Jennings, January 19, 1865, and has one son a young man just of age and until lately connected with the United States Express company in New York.

Mr. Brokaw was elected Clerk of the Township in 1876 and re-elected to the same office in March 1877, and upon the death of Israel Coon, Assessor, in June of the same year, was appointed Assessor by the Township Committee to fill Mr. Coon's unexpired term and has been re-elected to the same office continuously since. He was a life long Republican and for the past 7 or 8 years has been largely interested in the Real Estate and Insurance business. He was an honored member of Odd Fellowship, of Free and Accepted Masons and the Knights of Pythias, was a charter member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and the only comrade ever honored by a re-election to its Commandership.

A Child's Hands Scalded.

Ethel, the five-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Lorton of West Fifth street, accidentally upset a pitcher of boiling water from the dining room table, Thursday morning, terribly scalding the child's hands.

Death of a Faithful Janitor.

At his home on West Third street, early on Friday, occurred the death of Mr. Henry Kline, aged 58 years. Mr. Kline was for many years past the faithful and competent janitor of the Crescent Avenue church, having been appointed janitor when the church was located on East Front street where the Y. M. C. A. rooms are now situated. His death resulted from a complication of diseases.

Death of Mr. A. T. TenEyck.

The death is announced of Mr. A. T. TenEyck formerly of this city which occurred at his home in Samptown, Monday night, after a long and painful illness from asthma. Mr. TenEyck had many warm friends here who will learn with sorrow of his demise. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias and was until recently employed by Mr. W. W. Coriell, the butcher of West Front street. The funeral will take place from the house on Friday at 2 P. M. Interment will be made at Samptown.

Sunday's Accessions to the Churches.

Sunday was communion Sunday in five of our churches, and each church was further strengthened by the following accessions:

Trinity Reformed, sixteen—10 by letter and 6 on confession of Christ.

Methodist, ten—7 by confession and 3 by letter. There were also 20 converts baptised.

Crescent Avenue, fourteen—10 by confession; 4 by letter.

Congregational, ten—5 by letter and 5 on confession.

Park Avenue Baptist, two by letter.

A Reception to Mr. "Joe" English.

The series of temperance revival meetings which are being held in Reform Hall this week, continues with unabated interest. Thursday the hall was again crowded, and there was great enthusiasm. President Harper was at his post of duty, and the regular choir under the efficient leadership of Mr. H. J. Martin furnished the music. Mr. English conducted the devotional exercises. He also delivered one of his characteristic addresses, which was listened to with close attention.

The meeting closed about 9 o'clock, after which an enjoyable reception, arranged by the ladies of the Temperance Aid Society, was tendered to Mr. English in the parlors of Reform Hall.

Wedding Bells.

At the home of the bride on Somerset street, North Plainfield, at three o'clock Thursday afternoon, occurred the marriage of Mr. Isaac C. Ireland of Philadelphia, to Miss Carrie M. Woodland. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. J. Yerkes. The bride was handsomely attired in a light drab traveling dress.

Friends and relatives were present from this city, Newark, New York, Philadelphia and elsewhere. The newly married couple started on the 3.20 P. M. train, intending to visit Washington and Baltimore on their wedding tour.

They will make their future home at Philadelphia, where the groom has an extensive business. The wedding presents were many and costly. Mr. Edwin B. Maynard was the caterer.

Avoid Appearances.—A worthy gentleman, having an unusually red nose, was long suspected of being a tippler on the sly, by those not well acquainted with his strictly temperate habits. His unfortunate disfigurement was readily cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

LOAN EXHIBITION

A Fine Collection of Beauty and Art—Presentation of Hon. Job Male's Portrait and a Lecture by John Ward Stimson.

Notwithstanding the rain there was a large attendance at the opening of the Loan Exhibition at the Job Male Library and Art Gallery, on Thursday. The collection of paintings is very fine, in fact superior to any one ever before shown in Plainfield. It is also noteworthy because of the number of portraits which it contains, all of local interest showing a variety of handling and the characteristics peculiar to the different artists. Mr. Julian Scott has on view, besides the full length portrait of Mayor Male, which was the subject of the presentation of the evening, others of Mr. J. Kirkner, Col. M. W. Tyler, Editor W. J. Leonard, Mr. J. W. Yates, Mrs. Yates and her daughter. Jas. H. Beard has three, Mr. and Mrs. Babcock and Gen. Custer, and one of Mr. Babcock's son by Harry Beard. There are two by Fagnani, Mrs. Tyler and her aunt, and one of Mrs. Tyler's grandaunt painted in 1769 by Earl.

Besides these there is a portrait of Jeremiah Evarts, uncle of Mr. J. Evarts Tracy, Esq., and one of Mr. Leo Daft's mother, and an old portrait by Peal.

Another notable feature of this exhibition is the dozen or more paintings of Swiss scenery by Volweider, mostly loaned by Mr. Schepflin. They are pictures of great merit. But we have not space, nor do we intend to give a catalogue; one must go and spend an evening to appreciate these, and the Corot, the Diaz, the Evans, the Beards, the Britcher, the Parton, etc., etc.

The exercises of the evening were introduced by City Counsellor Craig A. Marsh, who in a neat speech presented to the Directors of the Library and Art Gallery on behalf of Mr. Julian Scott, the portrait of Mayor Male, a perfect and striking likeness. He took the occasion to refer to the fact, not as well known as it should be, that the present position and success of the Art Gallery is due in a great measure to the unwearied and unselfish efforts of Mr. Scott, who from the first has held his services at the constant service of the Art Committee. Mr. Geo. H. Babcock, as chairman of the Art Committee, accepted the gift, thanking the donor in behalf of the Art Committee, the Directors and the citizens-at-large. He called attention to the fact that the gift was peculiarly appropriate, as it was not only a portrait of the gentleman who had presented the Library Building to the city, but of the first and the present Mayor of the city; Mr. Male having been four times elected to that office. Mr. Babcock said it was also a point on which the citizens should congratulate themselves that the picture was the product of home talent, and instanced the cases of Haarlem, the Hague, and Antwerp, which had become famous through their early patronage of home talent, in Vandyke, Frans Hals, Paul Potter and Rubens.

The lecturer of the evening, Mr. John Ward Stimson, is an enthusiast in his profession, and his eloquent setting forth of the evolution of art from nature, its relations to the infinite, its elevating and ennobling effects on the character of mankind, its antagonism to materialism and atheism, and its applications to all the pursuits, occupations and social life of humanity, was listened to with wrapted attention by his audience.

GARROTED IN HIS SHANTY.

Old Flagman Perry Attacked by a Robber and Left Unconscious.

Old Sam Perry, says a New York paper, is a flagman whose station is in the deep cut near Fanwood, N. J. His business is to see the track is kept clear, and he lives in the little shanty the railroad company has erected upon the bank. It is a lonely life for the old man, but he has learned to know the engineers and firemen who speed the trains through the gap, and they wave their hands out of the cab windows at him as he waves the white flag at their approach.

The few visitors are mostly tramps and peddlers, who from motives of economy, or because they haven't the money, use the company's highway as a footpath.

It was late Monday night when a rumble announced the approach of a train, and the old man, lantern in hand, went out to signal "all right." It was a coal train, and as it passed the figure of a man dropped to the ground from the side of one of the empty cars.

Perry does not like tramps, and when he saw this one he climbed the bank and went into his shanty. He had just placed the lantern on the table and bolted the door when there came a knock.

"Who's there?" asked the old man.

"It's only me," replied the tramp. "I want a drink of water."

"There is no water here," said Perry. "Go down to the spring at the bottom of the bank and you'll get all you want."

"Open this door —— quick," yelled the man, as he battered the wood with his fist. "You'd better open it or I'll smash it in."

The old man shrunk back to the corner of his little room, so stricken with terror that he could not utter a word.

"Open up, d'ye hear?" repeated the tramp, as he brought his feet into play and fairly shook the shanty with the force of the blows. Presently the wood began to splinter and crack, and in a minute the door was burst in.

The old man in the corner saw all this by the flickering light of the lantern on the table. He saw a figure, strong and athletic looking, with a face the outlines of which were concealed by a few weeks' growth of beard, advance toward the corner where he tremblingly crouched.

He heard a voice demand that he give up his money. He had $42—his month's wages—in his pocket, but he denied the existence of it. Then, the last thing he remembers, a pair of strong, muscular hands reached out, and, clutching his throat, contracted slowly. The lantern on the table seemed to dance up and down before his eyes; then its outlines became indistinct, and for a brief while he saw a queer, indistinct light bobbing and shooting about the room, which finally went out altogether.

The cool morning air coming through the broken door revived the old flagman at daybreak. He was in a bad way and could hardly move. His neck was purple in ridges and his face bore evidence of the beating he had received. His money was gone and a chest in the room had been smashed open and rifled.

A track walker found him and sent out an alarm for the garroter. A great deal of excitement prevails, and there is likely to be trouble if the man should be caught.

An Exciting Runaway.

A horse belonging to Mr. Thos. Burns, the hackman, got frightened at the cars while passing under the Park avenue railroad bridge on Saturday, and ran away. Mr. Burns and his son were in the vehicle at the time and they were thrown out when the wagon struck an electric light pole opposite Reynolds' pharmacy. The former was badly bruised about the head. The wagon was considerably wrecked.

A Woman's Sweet Will.

She is prematurely deprived of her charms of face and form, and made unattractive by the wasting effects of ailments. To check this drain upon, not only her strength and health, but upon her amiable qualities as well, is her first duty. This is safely and speedily accomplished by a course of self-treatment with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, a nervine and tonic of wonderful efficacy, and prepared especially for the alleviation of those suffering from pains, sensations of [illegible]—a boon to her sex. "UNCLE BILLY" MOORE'S WILL.

The Caveator Asking to Have the Proceedings for Probate Certified to the Circuit Court.

(From the Elizabeth Journal.)

Some weeks ago William Moore, a railroad contractor, residing at Plainfield, died leaving an estate of between $50,000 and $80,000. Two days later his wife to whom he had willed most of his property died. A second will was also discovered in which the deceased's only son was left no share in the estate. Young Moore filed a caveat against the probating of the will.

Wednesday, Feb. 26, the caveator was represented in the Orphan's court by Mr. R. V. Lindabury, and Mr. Jackson of Plainfield, and the executors of the estate by Mr. James E. English.

Mr. Lindabury said the citations were now returnable, and he moved that the court make an issue of an order certifying the proceedings to the Circuit Court for a trial before a jury. He dwelt upon the importance of the case, and gave reason for a belief that it would be more satisfactory to have the question of the testamentary capacity of the testator, and the fact whether if the will was made without undue influence passed upon by a jury. He quoted the statute providing for such certification of will cases. He said it could be shown that the last will of Moore was made one and a half days before his death, and when he was in extremis, at least, as his breathings could be heard outside the house.

Mr English opposed the motion. He said the executors were desirous of having the regular mode of procedure carried out in the case. He held that the statute was enacted to enable the Orphan's Court to certify questions out of the ordinary that may appear in a case to the Circuit Court. It did not appear that this was an extraordinary case, and he thought the counsel did not mean to intimate that a jury were more competent to pass judgment than the regularly constituted court for such cases. He said the proceeding would be moved in the county. He spoke also of some complications, and referred to the two wills.

After further argument of the case, Judge McCormick said it was the first occasion since he had been on the bench that an application had been made for such a procedure. He said he did not remember that an application was ever made in this county. His opinion of the statute was that it was passed to aid the court when it was thought the case ought to be guided by a jury. He saw nothing in this case to induce the court to take that course. He therefore denied Mr. Lindabury's motion.

The case was referred to the Surrogate, to take testimony to be given within fifteen days.

CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH CONCERT.

A Large Audience Listens to an Exceedingly Well Rendered Programme.

Despite the entire revolution in the programme, and the fact that the concerted music by the mixed quartette had to be given up, as there was no time for practice, the concert at the Crescent Avenue church, Saturday evening, was declared by many to be one of the finest that has ever been given in this city.

The new chapel is a fine place for such an entertainment, as it is not only a charming room, but the acoustics are perfect, and the ventilation excellent.

The Misses Myers were received with great applause, as they have many friends here who have before enjoyed their singing. It is not often that four sisters, who are so in reality, can be arranged into a quartette; but the Misses Myers have sung so much together that they are in perfect sympathy with each other, and sing with great expression.

Miss Alice Stoddard, by her charming manners and beautiful voice delighted every one. Having been ill and unable to rehearse, Mr. Wm. Chapman of New York, kindly offered to play her accompaniments. Miss Marion Simms also gave great pleasure. Her enunciation is perfect, and she enters so into the spirit of her songs, that her hearers appreciate them.

Mr. Wm. E. Courtney sang the most difficult solo of the evening, "Sound an Alarm," from Judas Maccabaeus. When one felt the perfect control he had over his voice, and the grand manner in which he rendered the solo, he understood the reason for the success which has attended him as a teacher, his pupils reaching far and wide. Mr. J. A. Metcalfe, by his fine presence and beautiful voice also charmed every one.

Mr. Venino played exceptionally well and was particularly successful in his Chopin number, playing that in a most divine manner. Mr. Chapman, leader of the Rubinstein and other large societies, paying him the compliment that it required an artist to play Chopin as he (Mr. Venino) did.

One of the most thoroughly appreciated especially by those whom she accompanied, was Miss Jessie M. Utter. The accompaniment to "Old Heidelberg" is extremely difficult, and some of the others, notably "Sound an Alarm" had never been rehearsed. With her as an accompanist, a singer feels at ease, as she is always in perfect sympathy with those whom she accompanies.

After the concert, the artists and their friends were entertained by Mrs. J. K. Myers, to whom is due, to a great extent, the final success of the concert.

A New Pastor for Dunellen.

The Rev. W. C. Stinson, the popular pastor of the Presbyterian church at Manalapan, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Dunellen Presbyterian church. A special meeting of the Monmouth Presbytery was held in the Manalapan church on Wednesday to dissolve Mr. Stinson's relations with his charge and to recommend him to the Elizabeth Presbytery.

Stole Two Coats and Got Three Years.

The Court of Special Sessions met at Elizabeth, Feb. 28. The first prisoner on whom judgment was passed was Alexander Williams, a colored man, who pleaded guilty to entering the residence of Spencer Conway, in Plainfield, and stealing two coats valued at $15. He was once convicted of assault and battery.

The court without any remarks imposed a sentence to State Prison for a term of three years.

Mr. English Closes His Engagement.

Reform Hall was again crowded Sunday evening, when Mr. "Joe" English, the temperance revivalist, brought his series of meetings to a close. President Harper was in the chair, and the Rev. W. E. Honeyman conducted the devotional exercises. The choir was led by Mr. Horace Martin, with Mr. George Rogers, accompanist.

Mr. English delivered one of his most interesting addresses, and at times created such a profound sensation that a pin might almost have been heard to drop.

Mr. H. N. Spencer and Mr. Jacob Voehl at the request of Mr. English, delivered brief, but very effective testimonies on behalf of personal abstinence from the drink habit.

The meeting closed Mr. English's present engagement in Plainfield. He went to Scotch Plains on Tuesday evening, and to Flemington the last of the week.

—The case of the City vs. Michael Watson for illegal selling was dismissed by Judge McCormick at Elizabeth, Friday.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

A Birthday Party.

A birthday gathering was held at the residence of Master John H. VanWinkle, Jr., No. 21 Duer street, North Plainfield, on Thursday, the occasion being the 13th anniversary of his birth. There was a large attendance of the relatives and schoolmates of Master VanWinkle. The playing of games and the serving of refreshments were features of the evening's enjoyment.

Here's a Chance for Some Man.

Mr. Jesse Hatfield, proprietor of the meat and vegetable market at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, received several boxes of eggs from the far West, a day or two since, and in one of the cases was an egg on which was written the following message:

"SHELBY, MO., January 26, 1890.

"If any young gentleman who is matrimonially inclined should get this egg, he will please address Miss Mamie Muirhead, Shelby, Mo."

The lady, it is said, is well-known by a gentleman in this city, who has just returned from Missouri. She is said to be of a good family and of considerable means.

Nothing New About Somerville.

All of the Somerville police force are in the World contest for the $10,000 paid up life insurance policy. Of course the policy will go there.

Bound Brook's Finances.

The finances of Bound Brook have never been in better condition than at present. The Board of Street Commissioners has received from the Township Collector as regular taxes $1,687.58. This is an increase of more than $300 over what was received last year, owing to the rapid growth of the town and consequent increase of taxable property.

Real Estate Transfers.

Endowment Rank Statistics.

The quarterly statement of the Supreme Secretary of the Knights of Pythias shows that the order is in a flourishing condition.

Following is the statement of the membership and endowment—fourth class:

In force September 30, 1889. Number of members, 19,872; amount of endowment, $43,000,000; admitted during quarter—new applicants, number of members, 831, amount of endowment, $1,720,000; admitted during quarter—re-admissions, number of members, 9, amount of endowment, $20,000. Terminated during quarter, by forfeiture—number of members, 132, amount of endowment, $284,000; by resignation—number of members, 10, amount of endowment, $14,000; by death—number of members, 65, amount of endowment, $142,000; in force January 1, 1890, number of members, 20,505; amount of endowment, $44,300,000.

Membership—first, second and third classes—number in force at end of last quarter, first class, 54; second class, 74; third class, 39. Terminated by death, resignation and suspension, first class, 8; second class, 5; third class 1. Remaining in force January 1, 1890, first class, 46; second class, 69; third class, 38.

Total receipts, $154,260.23. Endowment fund, account with bank depository, first, second, third and fourth classes and expense fund, total, $92,907.15.

It will at once be seen from these figures that the society is advancing rapidly in membership and financially.

A Bloody Affray.

is often the result of "bad blood" in a family or community, but nowhere is bad blood more destructive of happiness and health than in the human system. When the life current is foul and sluggish with impurities, and is slowly distributing the poisons to every part of the body, the peril to health, and life even, is imminent. Early symptoms are dull and drowsy feelings, severe headaches, coated tongue, poor appetite, indigestion and general lassitude. Delay in treatment may entail the most serious consequences. Don't let disease get a strong hold on your constitution, but treat yourself by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and be restored to the blessings of health. The "Discovery" is guaranteed to cure in all cases of diseases for which it is recommended or money paid for it will be refunded.

Coughing

IS Nature's effort to expel foreign substances from the bronchial passages. Frequently, this causes inflammation and the need of an anodyne. No other expectorant or anodyne is equal to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It assists Nature in ejecting the mucus, allays irritation, induces repose, and is the most popular of all cough cures.

"Of the many preparations before the public for the cure of colds, coughs, bronchitis, and kindred diseases, there is none, within the range of my experience, so reliable as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. For years I was subject to colds, followed by terrible coughs. About four years ago, when so afflicted, I was advised to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and to lay all other remedies aside. I did so, and within a week was well of my cold and cough. Since then I have always kept this preparation in the house, and feel comparatively secure."—Mrs. L. L. Brown, Denmark, Miss.

"A few years ago I took a severe cold which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continual use of the Pectoral, a permanent cure was effected."—Horace Fairbrother, Rockingham, Vt.

The New Era Washer

Is a simple, easy and practical application of the ONLY principle ever known, discovered or practiced in washing clothes, viz: the forcing of water through the article to be cleansed.

From the old "pounding-barrel" down through all the improvements in Washing Machines, washing boards, etc., to the present day, this one principle is recognized and acted upon as the actual cleansing process. Rubbing on a washboard is not cleansing (else rub them when dry); it is simply one process (and a tiresome one) of forcing the water through just that portion of the article that is subjected to the pressure of the hand; therefore every part of each article must be brought under that pressure to be cleansed; whereas, by the NEW ERA WASHER, every stroke of the piston or plunger forces two quarts of water (suds) through six or eight inches thickness of clothes, laid in the bottom of the tub; and this, too, with no more muscular effort than one rub of the hands from the top to the bottom of the washboard!

But as practical demonstration is more convincing to many than published statements, we leave the acceptance of the foregoing to those who are willing to obtain a correct knowledge before forming a conclusion in this matter. See large circulars for further particulars.

J. M. PICKELL, Esq., No. 111 WEST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J., Local Agent for this section, will respond to inquiries, and also to a limited number of applications per week, to give a practical illustration of the working and merits of the NEW ERA WASHER.

MICROBE KILLER
Cures All Diseases.

The claim to cure all diseases, may at first glance seem very absurd; but after reading our pamphlet, giving a history of the Microbe Killer, explaining the germ theory of disease, and reading our testimonials, which prove conclusively there is no disease it will not cure, the truth of our assertion becomes clear. No person suffering from any blood, chronic or contagious disease should let a day pass without getting and reading this interesting book, which will be given away or mailed free. LITERARY GLEANINGS.

Charlotte M. Yonge is said to be writing her one hundred and [illegible] book.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis is busily engaged, at Beauvoir, upon the life of her late husband and will soon have it completed.

It is said that R. D. Blackmore, the author of Lorna Doone, is better known at his home in Teddington as a market gardener than as a writer.

An American company have given two French painters an order for a panorama of Stanley's two journeys through Africa. It is intended for the World's Fair of 1892.

Marshal MacMahon, of France, it is understood, has completed his "Memoirs," but they are to be printed for private circulation only, and only a few copies in all will be issued.

Count Tolstoi, yielding to the solicitation of his friends, has resumed his literary work. He is now working on a novel to be called "La Sonate de Kreutzer." It is a family romance and will be very long.

Mr. Gladstone's literary activity shows no signs of abatement. Six magazine articles are shortly expected from the pen of the aged Liberal leader. One of them is a critical review of Lord Tennyson's new poem.

Charles J. Bellamy, a brother of Edward Bellamy, the author of "Looking Backward," has written a story called "An Experiment in Marriage." He has already published a novel entitled "The Breton Mills."

The Parisian literary world is exercised over a proposed revision of French orthography. The reform has many strong advocates as well as determined opponents. A society has been formed to promote the change, which is designed to simplify the forms of words.

The collapse of "Carmen Sylva," the Queen of Roumania, is due to overwork. She has been very ambitious to win fame in literature, and to a certain extent she has accomplished her object. But her constitution was not strong enough to endure the strain to which she subjected it.

Mark Twain has spent about [illegible] in perfecting the Paige typesetting machine, and he is the principal owner of the company that will manufacture them. The machine is sixteen feet long, nine feet high in the middle, and, it is claimed, will set, justify and distribute [illegible] ems of type daily.

The royal library at Berlin possesses a manuscript which proves that autograph fiends existed as early as four centuries ago. It is Luther's handwriting and contains, besides his signature, only these six Latin words: "[illegible]" [illegible] asked for my autograph; here it is."

SCRAPS OF SCIENCE.

The three hundredth anniversary of the invention of the microscope is to be celebrated at Antwerp this year.

A scientist tells us that in analyzing the stomach of an oyster nothing but vegetable matter has ever been found.

The hydraulic process of treating [illegible] that it will not corrode is said to cost less than one-half of that of galvanizing, while the durability, under similar conditions, is considerably greater.

Soap bubbles blown with newly prepared hydrogen gas have been found to act as electrical condensers, the liquid of which when broken exhibited a negative charge. It is suggested that this fact explains the so-called fire-balls sometimes seen during thunder-storms.

A number of London medical men have joined to form a hypnotic society, the purpose of which will be to prevent by law public exhibitions of mesmerism and hypnotism. Another object will be to study privately and in a scientific manner the phenomena of those morbid states.

It takes a prodigious amount of vegetable matter to form a layer of coal, it being computed that the present growth of the world would make a layer less than one-eighth of an inch in thickness, and that it would take a million years of vegetable growth to form a coal bed ten feet in thickness.

The poisonous grain known as [illegible] dal which having been used as an article of food among the poorer classes of India, has, under the experimentation of a continental doctor, been found to give up its poisonous qualities if subjected to a sufficiently high temperature. It promises to be extensively grown, as it is very productive.

A French savant has calculated the time required for a journey round the earth, and has obtained the following results: A man, walking day and night without resting, would take [illegible] days; an express train, [illegible] days; sound, at a medium temperature, [illegible] hours; a cannon ball, [illegible] hours; light, a little over one-eighth of a second, and electricity, passing over a copper wire, a little under one-tenth of a second.

A recent German patent for a new insulating material for electric conductors specifies the use of paper which has been thoroughly soaked in an ammoniacal copper solution. The pulpy mass is then pressed against the conducting wire to be covered by means of rollers, and the whole is finally subjected to strong pressure. When dry, the covered wire is passed through a bath of boiling linseed oil, being left in it until the covering is saturated. This makes it elastic and impenetrable to moisture. The covering is said to be durable and efficient as a non-conductor.

The Lancet, in discussing the excessive use of opium by the late Wilkie Collins, says: "Overwork produces exhaustion in all cases. Physiological laws can not be set at defiance. So far as opium is concerned, it undoubtedly diminishes the susceptibility to external stimuli, and hence may enable a man whose attention is diverted by pain to obtain relief and perhaps to concentrate his thoughts more fully upon some particular point; but, as a 'mental stimulant,' its employment is to be deprecated as useless and dangerous. The constant [illegible] engendered by its use does not strengthen the position of a stimulant, so often erroneously claimed for this drug."

PASSING PERSONALITIES.

Prince Bismarck is fond of American apples. A barrel of pippins was recently forwarded to him from New York City.

Marshall Wilder, the clever dwarf humorist, made his first appearance on the stage on the back of Joseph Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle."

Senator Evarts, Chauncey M. Depew and Robert G. Ingersoll are said to be men who take scarcely any exercise in the ordinary sense of the word.

William Henry Hilliard, the American painter, always gets a great reception when he goes to Amsterdam, because he is a descendant of Jan Van der Heyden.

The youngest millionaire in New York, if not in the world, is Marshall Roberts, son of the late Marshall O. Roberts, who is worth [illegible], and only ten years old.

Franklin B. Gowen made a scrap book of the hundreds of threatening letters which he received during the prosecution of the "Mollie Maguires," and in after years often looked it over with grim amusement.

Charles Villiers is now the oldest member of the British House of Commons. He is eighty-seven years old, and has sat continuously for Wolverhampton since 1835. He was associated with Cobden and Bright in the reform agitation.

Emperor William is in the future to appear at great reviews and state functions, when on horseback, mounted on a magnificent Arab, which has been presented to him by the Sultan, and which is entirely black without a single speck of white.

Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British Minister at Washington, is studying American literature. Until he left England he paid little attention to our men of letters, but now he is going over the ground thoroughly and is surprised at what he finds.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Rev. Samuel May and Rev. S. F. Smith recently dined together in Boston. They were graduated from Harvard in the famous class of 1829. Eleven members of the class survive, the greatest of whom is the genial old autocrat.

The Czar of Russia is a man of gigantic stature, with a full brown beard and a weakness for boiled rice. He is very well-meaning and very weak-kneed. He dislikes being Czar and having so many of his subjects in prison, but he has no choice and a prematurely white-haired consort. He is forty-four years old. He is profoundly religious, eats five meals a day, would have made a good, honest citizen, and hasn't a nerve in his body.

REVISION OF CREEDS.

SERMON OF DR. TALMAGE, DELIVERED SUNDAY, MARCH 2, 1890.

"Loose Him, and Let Him Go," John xi, 44, the Text of the Discourse, Which Is Here Reported in Full—The New Tabernacle to Be Ready in September.

Brooklyn, March 2.—At the Tabernacle this morning the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., said he thought the new Brooklyn Tabernacle would be dedicated in September, and that the idea would be carried out of building the church by subscription to The Christian Herald, of which he has become editor, all the subscriptions up to a hundred and fifty thousand to be paid to Mr. John Wood, treasurer of the Tabernacle, Fulton street, near Clinton, Brooklyn, N. Y. The subject of his discourse was "Revision of Creeds," and he took for his text John xi, 44: "Loose him, and let him go." Dr. Talmage said:

My Bible is, at the place of this text, written all over with lead pencil marks made last December at Bethany on the ruins of the house of Mary and Martha and Lazarus. We dismounted from our horses on the way up from Jordan to the Dead sea. Bethany was the summer evening retreat of Jesus. After spending the day in the hot city of Jerusalem he would come out there almost every evening to the house of his three friends. I think the occupants of that house were orphans, for the father and mother are not mentioned. But the son and two daughters must have inherited property, for it must have been, judging from what I saw of the foundations and the size of the rooms, an opulent home. Lazarus, the brother, was now the head of the household, and his sisters depended on him and were proud of him, for he was very popular and everybody liked him, and these girls were splendid girls, Martha a first rate housekeeper and Mary a spiritualistic, somewhat dreamy, but affectionate and as good a girl as could be found in all Palestine. But one day Lazarus got sick. The sisters were in consternation. Father gone and mother gone, they feel very nervous lest they lose their brother also. Disease did its quick work. How the girls hung over his pillow! Not much sleep about that house, no sleep at all. From the characteristics otherwise developed I judge that Martha prepared the medicines and made tempting dishes of food for the poor appetite of the sufferer, but Mary prayed and sobbed. Worse and worse gets Lazarus until the doctor announces that he can do no more. The shriek that went up from that household when the last breath had been drawn and the two sisters were being led by sympathizers into the adjoining room all those of us can imagine who have had our own hearts broken. But why was not Jesus there as he so often had been? Far away in the country districts preaching, healing other sick, how unfortunate that this omnipotent Doctor had not been at that domestic crisis in Bethany. When at last Jesus arrived in Bethany, Lazarus had been buried four days and dissolution had taken place. In that climate the breathless body disintegrates more rapidly than in ours. If, immediately after decease, that body had been awakened into life, unbelievers might have said he was only in a comatose state, or in a sort of trance, and by some vigorous manipulation or powerful stimulant vitality had been restored. No! Four days dead. At the door of the sepulchre is a crowd of people, but the three most noticeable are Jesus, who was the family friend, and the two bereft sisters. We went into the traditional tomb in December and it is deep down and dark, and with torches we explored it. We found it all quiet that afternoon of our visit, but the day spoken of in the Bible there was present an excited multitude. I wonder what Jesus will do! He orders the door of the grave removed and then he begins to descend the steps, Mary and Martha close after him and the crowd after them. Deeper down into the shadows and deeper! The hot tears of Jesus roll over his cheeks and plash upon the back of his hands. Were ever so many sorrows compressed into so small a space as in that group pressing on down after Christ, all the time bemoaning that he had not come before? Now all the whispering and all the crying and all the sounds of shuffling feet are stopped. It is the silence of expectancy. Death had conquered, but now the vanquisher of death confronted the scene. Amid the awful hush of the tomb the familiar name which Christ had often had upon his lips in the hospitalities of the village home came back to his tongue, and with a pathos and an almightiness of which the resurrection of the last day shall be only an echo, he cries: "Lazarus, come forth!" The eyes of the slumberer open, and he rises and comes to the foot of the steps and with great difficulty begins to ascend, for the cerements of the tomb are yet on him and his feet are fast and his hands are fast, and the impediments to all his movements are so great that Jesus commands: "Take off these cerements; remove these hindrances; unfasten these grave clothes; loose him, and let him go!" Oh, I am so glad that after the Lord raised Lazarus, he went on and commanded the loosening of the cords that bound his feet so that he could walk, and the breaking off of the cerements that bound his hands so that he could stretch out his arms in salutation, and the tearing off of the bandage from around his jaws so that he could speak. What would resurrected life have been to Lazarus if he had not been freed from all those cripplements of his body? I am glad that Christ commanded his complete emancipation, saying: "Loose him, and let him go."

CHRISTIANS BUT HALF LIBERATED.

The unfortunate thing now is that so many Christians are only half liberated. They have been raised from the death and burial of sin into spiritual life, but they yet have the grave clothes on them. They are like Lazarus, hobbling up the stairs of the tomb, bound hand and foot, and the object of this sermon is to help free their body and free their soul, and I shall try to obey the Master's command that comes to me and comes to every minister of religion: "Loose him, and let him go." First, many are bound hand and foot by religious creeds. Let no man misinterpret me as antagonizing creeds. I have eight or ten of them; a creed about religion, a creed about art, a creed about social life, a creed about government and so on. A creed is something that a man believes, whether it be written or unwritten. The Presbyterian church is now agitated about its creed. Some good men in it are for keeping it because it was framed from the belief of John Calvin. Other good men in it want revision. I am with neither party. Instead of revision I want substitution. I was sorry to have the question disturbed at all. The creed did not hinder us from offering the pardon and the comfort of the Gospel to all men, and the Westminster Confession has not interfered with me one minute. But now that the electric lights have been turned on the imperfections of that creed—and everything that man fashions is imperfect—let us put the old creed respectfully aside and get a brand new one. It is impossible that people who lived hundreds of years ago should fashion an appropriate creed for our times. John Calvin was a great and good man, but he died three hundred and twenty-six years ago.

The last centuries of Bible study have come since then, and explorers have done their work, and you might as well have the world go back and stick to what Robert Fulton knew about steamboats, and reject the subsequent improvements in navigation; and go back to John Guttenberg, the inventor of the art of printing, and reject all modern newspaper presses; and go back to the time when telegraphy was the elevating of signals or the kindling of bonfires on the hill tops, and reject the magnetic wire which is the tongue of nations; as to ignore all the progress and the philologists and the theologians of the last three hundred and twenty-six years and put your head under the sleeve of the gown of a sixteenth century doctor. I could call the names of twenty living Presbyterian ministers of religion who could make a better creed than John Calvin. The Nineteenth century ought not to be called to sit at the feet of the Sixteenth.

THE SAME, BUT [illegible].

"But," you say, "it is the same old Bible, and John Calvin had that as well as the present student of the Scriptures." Yes, so it is the same old sun in the heavens, but in our time it has gone to making daguerreotypes and photographs. It is the same old water, but in our century it has gone to running steam engines. It is the same old electricity, but in our time it has become a lightning parcel errand boy. So it is the old Bible, but new applications, new uses, new interpretations. You must remember that during the last three hundred years words have changed their meaning and some of them now mean more and some less. I do not think that John Calvin believed, as some say he did, in the damnation of infants, although some of his recent [illegible] would seem to imply that there is such a thing as the damnation of infants. A man who believes in the damnation of infants himself deserves to lose heaven. I do not think any good man could admit such a possibility. What Christ will do with all the babies in the next world I conclude from what he did with the babies in Palestine when he hugged and kissed them. When some of you grown people go out of this world your [illegible] destiny will be an embarrassment to ministers officiating at your obsequies, who will have to be cautious so as not to hurt surviving friends. But when the darling children go there are no "ifs" or "buts" or guesses. We must remember that good John Calvin was a logician and a metaphysician and by the proclivities of his nature put some things in an unfortunate way. Logic has its use and metaphysics has its use, but they are not good at making creeds. A gardener hands you a blooming rose, dewy fresh, but a severe botanist comes to you with a rose and says: "I will show you the structure of this rose," and he proceeds to take it apart, and pulls off the leaves and he says: "There are the petals." And he takes out the anthers and he says: "Just look at the wonderful structure of these floral pillars," and then he cuts the stem to show you the juices of the plant. So logic or metaphysics takes the aromatic rose of the Christian religion and says: "I will just show you how this rose of religion was fashioned," and it pulls off of it a piece and says: "That is the human will," and another piece and says: "This is God's will," and another piece and says: "This is sovereignty," and another piece and says: "This is free agency," this is this and that is that. And while I stand looking at the fragments of the rose pulled apart, one whom the Marys took for a gardener comes in and presents me with a crimson rose, red as blood, and says: "Inhale the sweetness of this, wear it on your heart and wear it forever." I must confess that I prefer the rose in full bloom to the rose pulled apart. What a time we have had with the dogmatics, the apologetics and the hermeneutics. The defect in some of the creeds is that they try to tell us all about the decrees of God. Now the only human being that was ever competent to handle that subject was Paul, and he would not have been competent had he not been inspired. I believe in the sovereignty of God and I believe in man's free agency, but no one can harmonize the two. It is not necessary that we harmonize them. Every sermon that I have ever heard that attempted such harmonization was to me as clear as a London fog, as clear as mud. My brother of the Nineteenth century, my brother of the Sixteenth century, give us Paul's statement and leave out your own. Better one chapter of Paul on that subject than all of Calvin's Institutes, able and honest and mighty as they are. Do not try to measure either the throne of God or the thunderbolts of God with your little steel pen. What do you know about the decrees? You cannot pry open the door of God's eternal counsels. You cannot explain the mysteries of God's government now, much less the mysteries of his government five hundred quintillion of years ago. I move for a creed for all our denominations made out of Scripture quotations pure and simple. That would take the earth for God. That would be impregnable against infidelity and Apollyonic assault. That would be beyond human criticism. The denomination, whatever its name be, that can rise up to that will be the church of the millennium, will swallow up all other denominations and be the one that will be the bride when the Bridegroom cometh. Let us make it simpler and plainer for people to get into the kingdom of God. Do not hinder people by the idea that they may not have been elected. Do not tag on to the one essential of faith in Christ any of the innumerable non-essentials. A man who heartily accepts Christ is a Christian, and the man who does not accept him is not a Christian, and that is all there is of it. He need not believe in election or reprobation. He need not believe in the eternal generation of the Son. He need not believe in everlasting punishment. He need not believe in infant baptism. He need not believe in plenary inspiration. Faith in Christ is the criterion, is the test, is the pivot, is the indispensable. But there are those who would add unto the tests rather than subtract from them. There are thousands who would not accept persons into church membership if they drink wine, or if they smoke cigars, or if they attend the theatre, or if they play cards, or if they drive a fast horse. Now I do not drink wine or smoke or attend the theatre, never played a game of cards and do not drive a fast horse, although I would if I owned one. But do not substitute tests which the Bible does not establish. There is one passage of Scripture wide enough to let all in who ought to enter and to keep out all who ought to be kept out: "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Get a man's heart right and his life will be right. But now that the old creeds have been put under public scrutiny, something radical must be done. Some would split them; some would carve them, some would elongate them, some would abbreviate them. At the present moment and in the present stage they are a hindrance. Lazarus is alive, but hampered with the old grave clothes. If you want one glorious church, free and unencumbered, take off the cerements of old ecclesiastical vocabulary. Loose her, and let her go!

DOUBTS AND FEARS.

Again, there are Christians who are under sepulchral shadows and hindered and hoppled by doubts and fears and sins long ago repented of. What they need is to understand the liberty of the sons of God. They spend more time under the shadow of Sinai than at the base of Calvary. They have been singing the only poor hymn that Newton ever wrote:

'Tis a point I long to know,
Oft it causes anxious thought—
Do I love the Lord or no,
Am I his or am I not?

Long to know, do you? Why do you not find out? Go to work for God, and you will very soon find out. The man who is all the time feeling of his pulse and looking at his tongue to see whether it is coated is morbid, and cannot be physically well. The doctor will say: "Go out into the fresh air and into active life, and stop thinking of yourself, and you will get well and strong." So there are people who are watching their spiritual symptoms, and they call it self examination, and they get weaker and sicklier in their faith all the time. Go out and do something nobly Christian. Take holy exercise and then examine yourself, and instead of Newton's saturnine and bilious hymn that I first quoted, you will sing Newton's other hymn:

Amazing grace, how sweet the sound
That saved a wretch like me!
I once was lost, but now am found,
Was blind, but now I see.

What many of you Christians most need is to get your grave clothes off. I rejoice that you have been brought from the death of sin to the life of the Gospel; but you need to get your hand loose and your feet loose and your tongue loose and your soul loose. There is no sin that the Bible so arraigns and punctures and flagellates as the sin of unbelief, and that is what is the matter with you. "Oh," you say, "if you knew what I once was and how many times I have grievously strayed, you would understand why I do not come out brighter." Then I think you would call yourself the chief of sinners. I am glad you hit upon that term, for I have a promise that fits into your case as the cogs of one wheel between the cogs of another wheel, or as the key fits into the labyrinths of a lock. A man who was once called Saul but afterwards Paul declared: "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief." Mark that—"of whom I am chief." "Put down your overcoats and hats and I will take care of them while you kill Stephen"—so Saul said to the stoners of the first martyr—"I do not care to exert myself much, but I will guard your surplus apparel while you do the murder." The New Testament account says: "The witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet whose name was Saul." No wonder he said: "Sinners, of whom I am the chief." Christ is used to climbing. He climbed to the top of the temple. He climbed to the top of Mount Olivet. He climbed to the top of the cliffs about Nazareth. He climbed to the top of Golgotha. And to the top of the hills and the mountains of your transgression he is ready to climb with pardon for every one of you. The cross of Calvary is mightier than the thunder of Sinai. Full receipt is offered for all your indebtedness. If one throw a stone at midnight into a bush where the hedge bird roosts, it immediately begins to sing; and into the midnight hedges of your despondency these words I hurl, hoping to awaken you to anthems. Drop the tones in the minor key and take the major. Do you think it pleases the Lord for you to be carrying around with you the debris and carcasses of old transgressions? You make me think of some ship that has had a tempestuous time at sea, and now that it proposes another voyage keeps on its davits the damaged lifeboats and the splinters of a shivered mast and the broken glass of a smashed skylight. My advice is: Clear the decks, overboard with all the damaged rigging, brighten up the soiled [illegible], open a new log book, haul in the plank, lay out a new course and set sail for heaven. You have had the spiritual dumps long enough. You will please the Lord more by being happy than by being miserable. Have you not sometimes started out in the rain with your umbrella and you were busy thinking, and you did not notice that the rain had stopped, and though it had cleared off you still had your umbrella up, and when you discovered what you were doing you felt silly enough? That is what some of you are doing in religious things. You have got so used to sadness that though the rain has stopped you still have your umbrella up. Come out of the shadow. Ascend the stairs of your sepulchre. Step out into the broad light of noonday. We come around you to help remove your grave clothes and a voice from the heavens, tremulous but omnipotent, commands: "Loose him, and let him go."

SOME GOOD ADVICE.

Again, my text has good advice concerning any Christian hampered and bothered and bound by fear of his own dissolution. To what the Book refers when it speaks of those who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. The most of us, even if we have the Christian hope, are cowards about death. If a plank fall from a scaffolding and just graze our hat how pale we look. If the Atlantic ocean plays with the steamship, pitching it toward the heavens and letting it suddenly drop, how even the Christian passengers pester the steward or stewardess as to whether there is any danger, and the captain, who has been all night on the bridge and chilled through, coming in for a cup of coffee, is assailed with a whole battery of questions as to what he thinks of the weather. And many of the best people are, as Paul says, throughout their lifetime in bondage by fear of death. My brothers and sisters, if we made full use of our religion we would soon get over this. Backed up by the teachings of your Bible, just look through the telescope some bright night and see how many worlds there are and reflect that all you have seen, compared with the number of worlds in existence, are less than the fingers of your right hand as compared with all the fingers of the human race. How foolish, then, for us to think that ours is the only world fit for us to stay in. I think that all the stars are inhabited and by beings like the human race in feelings and sentiments, and the difference is in lung respiration and heart beat and physical conformation, their physical conformation fit for the climate of their world and our physical conformation fit for the climate of our world. So we shall feel at home in any of the stellar neighborhoods, our physical limitations having ceased. One of our first realizations in getting out of this world, I think, will be that in this world we were very much pent up and had cramped apartments and were kept on the limits. The most even of our small world is water, and the water says to the human race: "Don't come here or you will drown." A few thousand feet up the atmosphere is uninhabitable, and the atmosphere says to the human race: "Don't come up here or you cannot breathe." A few miles down the earth is a furnace of fire, and the fire says: "Don't come here or you will burn." The caverns of the mountains are full of poisonous gases, and the gases say: "Don't come here or you will be asphyxiated." And, crossing a rail track, you must look out or you will be crushed. And, standing by a steam boiler, you must look out or you will be blown up. And pneumonias and pleurisies and consumptions and apoplexies go across this earth in flocks, in droves, in herds, and it is a world of equinoxes and cyclones and graves. Yet we are under the delusion that it is the only place fit to stay in. We want to stick to the wet plank, [illegible] while the great ship "The City of God," of the Celestial line, goes sailing past and would gladly take us up in a lifeboat. My Christian friends, let me tear off your despondencies and frights about dissolution. My Lord commands me regarding you, saying: "Loose him, and let him go."

HEAVEN! HEAVEN!

Heaven is ninety-five per cent. better than this world, a thousand per cent. better, a million per cent. better. Take the gladdest, brightest, most jubilant days you ever had on earth and compress them all into one hour, and that hour would be a requiem, a fast day, a gloom, a horror, as compared with the poorest hour they have had in heaven since its first tower was built or its first gates swung or its first song carolled. "Oh," you say, "that may be true, but I am so afraid of crossing over from this world to the next, and I fear the snapping of the cord between soul and body." Well, all the surgeons and physicians and scientists declare that there is no pang at the parting of the body and soul, and all the seeming restlessness at the closing hour of life is involuntary and no distress at all. And I agree with the doctors, for what they say is confirmed by the fact that persons who were drowned or were submerged until all consciousness departed and were afterwards resuscitated declare that the sensation of passing into unconsciousness was pleasurable rather than distressful. The cage of the body has a door on easy hinges, and when that door of the physical cage opens the soul simply puts out its wings and soars. "But," you say, "I fear to go because the future is so full of mystery." Well, I will tell you how to treat the mysteries. The mysteries have ceased bothering me, for I do as the judges of your courts often do. They hear all the arguments in the case and then say: "I will take these papers and give you my decision next week." So I have heard all the arguments in regard to the next world, and some things are uncertain and full of mystery, and so I fold up the papers and reserve until the next world my decision about them. I can there study all the mysteries to better advantage, for the light will be better and my faculties stronger, and I will ask the Christian philosophers, who have had all the advantages of heaven for centuries, to help me, and I may be permitted myself humbly to ask the Lord, and I think there will be only one mystery left, that will be how one so unworthy as myself got into such an enraptured place. Come up out of the sepulchral shadows. If you are not Christians by faith in Christ come up into the light; and if you are already like Lazarus, reanimated, but still have your grave clothes on, get rid of them. The command is: "Loose him, and let him go." The only part of my recent journey that I really dreaded, although I did not say much about it beforehand, was the landing at Joppa. That is the port of entrance for the Holy Land, and there are many rocks, and in rough weather people cannot land at all. The boats taking the people from the steamer to the docks must run between reefs that looked to me to be about fifty feet apart, and one mistroke of an oarsman or an unexpected wave has sometimes been fatal, and hundreds have perished along those reefs. Besides that, as we left Port Said the evening before an old traveler said: "The wind is just right to give you a rough landing at Joppa; indeed, I think you will not be able to land at all." The fact was that when our Mediterranean steamer dropped anchor near Joppa and we put out for shore in the small boat, the water was as still as though it had been sound asleep a hundred years, and we landed as easily as I come on this platform. Well, your fears have pictured for you an appalling arrival at the end of your voyage of life, and they say that the seas will run high and that the breakers will swallow you up, or that if you reach Canaan at all it will be a very rough landing. The very opposite will be true if you have the eternal God for your portion. Your disembarkation for the promised land will be as smooth as was ours at Palestine last December. Christ will meet you far out at sea and pilot you into complete safety, and you will land with a hosanna on one side of you and a hallelujah on the other.

"Land ahead!" its fruits are waving
O'er the hills of fadeless green,
And the living waters laving
Shores where heavenly forms are seen.

Rocks and storms I'll fear no more,
When on that eternal shore:
Drop the anchor! furl the sail!
I am safe within the veil!

The Lion Tamer's Secret.

The boldest individuals, who put their heads two or three times a day into the lion's mouth, have told me that the best way to withdraw it from the gulf is, first of all, not to open the acquaintanceship with this experiment; and, secondly, to perform it with great nerve.' Nerve, that is the great secret of the lion tamer, the sole cause of his authority over his beasts. When he has studied a subject for some time, endeavoring to master its character—and among the higher animals the character is very individual, very accentuated—one morning the man quietly walks into the cage. He must astonish the beast and overawe him at once. As to the training, it consists—and here I quote the words of an expert in such matters—in commanding the lion to perform the exercises which please him; that is to say, to make him execute from fear of the whip those leaps which he would naturally take in his wild state.

There is one fact which no one would suspect—that it is easier to train an adult lion taken in a snare than an animal born in a menagerie. The lion of the booth is in the same position as sporting dogs which play much with children; they are soon spoiled for work. Pezon possesses five or six lions which he has brought up by hand. As a rule they live with the staff of the menagerie on terms of perfect familiarity, but this frequently leads to tragic accidents. Lions, even tame in a fair, will devour a man in fine style. Can I say that the fear of such an accident is ever sufficiently strong to make me pause on the threshold of a menagerie? No. I cherish, and like me, you also cherish, the hope that some day perhaps we may see a lion tamer eaten. This contingency sometimes occurs, in fact more often than is usually supposed. For instance, without leaving the Pezon menagerie, it is not a year since the proprietor narrowly escaped being devoured by his bear Groom, at Chalons-sur-Marne. He would have perished if his son Adrien Pezon had not thrown himself, sabre in hand, between the two combatants and killed the bear on the spot.—Acrobats and Mountebanks.

A LITTLE LEVITY.

Angry Father—"Another tailor's bill, I suppose. Well, what's to be done about it?" Son (meekly)—"That's for you to settle."

There was one New York hackman the other day who failed to overcharge his customer, but he died on his box before he got to his destination.

It is funny to hear two women talking to each other across a fence as they are hanging out clothes, each with a half dozen clothes-pins in her mouth.

"An umbrella is a very nice thing to have in the house when it rains," said Mr. Smith. "Yes," answered his companion, "but why don't you get your house shingled?"

"You won't go to Heaven if you are such a naughty boy, Michael!" "Oh, well, one can't expect to go everywhere! I went to the circus yesterday and to the pantomime the day before!"

FACTS FROM FOREIGN FIELDS.

During the last five months 800 patients have been treated at the Pasteur Institute in Paris, and not a single death has occurred.

American clams are to be planted at various points on the English coast, in the hope that they may be propagated for the market.

For many years India has been growing tobacco only for domestic use, but now an effort is being made to induce its cultivation on a large scale for commercial purposes.

A play at one of the English theaters has just had to be modified because the actors had a superstition against the appearance of a peacock or its feathers on the stage.

The consumption of tobacco in England has nearly doubled in the last forty years, amounting at present to nearly a pound and a-half per head of the population.

American cattle have been shipped in such large numbers to Liverpool of late that many of them are delayed landing on their arrival because of insufficient accommodation.

The London authorities have put a stop to the holding of lotteries for the benefit of charitable institutions, which have heretofore been winked at when quietly conducted.

The experiment of putting the Eiffel tower and the spires of the Rouen cathedral in optical communication is a failure because of the rising of the soil caused by the spherical form of the earth.

New South Wales is troubled with an oversupply of mutton, there being now about 50,000,000 sheep in this colony, of which 23,000,000 are ewes. Breeders are hoping for a revival of the frozen meat trade, which collapsed a year or two ago.

Auction marts, in which the farmers sell their own produce direct to the consumers, have now almost entirely displaced the open markets in England. The latest venture of this kind is at Sterling, where the farmers, in addition to establishing a mart of their own, intend to have their cattle sold by live weight only.

Immense quantities of currants and Turkish and Spanish raisins are annually imported into France for the manufacture of wine. This importation has now increased to between 40,000 and 50,000 tons of currants and 60,000 tons of raisins. The wine thus produced is largely used by the poorer classes in France, Germany and Switzerland.

Burmah is capable of more than making up the greatest possible deficiency in the world's supplies of kerosene oil. The oil-bearing strata of Upper Burmah covers an area of probably 100 square miles. At twenty-five per cent. of Dr. Fritz Noetling's estimate the quantity annually produced would be about 1,184,000,000 gallons, which would still be greatly in excess of the highest rate of production ever obtained in America. 912,000,000 gallons, in 1882.

SOME NEW INVENTIONS.

A new contrivance has been applied to watches called an "appointment reminder." A small dial is set into the watch's face, upon which one can set the hands at any hour required.

A new calculating machine has just been invented in France and obtained a gold medal at the exhibition. The inventor is M. Bollee, of Le Mans, a clever machinist, already very favorably known by other useful inventions. The machine does addition, multiplication and division with astonishing rapidity and all by the turn of the wheel.

An important invention has just been tested on the Michigan Central railroad that promises to have an important bearing on the future of railroading. A locomotive has been built with high and low pressure cylinders, as is used in stationary engines, with the addition of a valve that makes both high and low pressure when desired. This saves about one-half the coal, but does not add to the speed. Other improvements are expected to perfect the locomotive so as to make it the most economical in existence.

Umbrella-making is among the most interesting of Birmingham industries. Although probably not more than one thousand hands are employed, something like one thousand patents have been taken out during the last twenty years. The most recent inventor, who, if successful, will eclipse all rivals, is a maker who claims to have contrived a transparent umbrella, which, while being equally as waterproof as silks and alpacas, will have the great advantage of allowing the wayfarer in a rain-storm to avoid collisions with lamp-posts and other obstacles along the way.

A musical gas machine is an English invention, and it is called the pyrophone. Its compass is three octaves, with a key board, and it will be played in the same manner as an organ. It has thirty-seven glass tubes, in which a like number of gas jets burn. These jets placed in a circle contract and expand. When the small burners separate the sound is produced; when they close together the sound ceases. The tone depends upon the number of burners and the size of the tubes in which they burn, so that by a careful arrangement and selection all the notes of the musical scale may be produced in several octaves. Some of the glass tubes in which the jets burn are nearly eleven feet long.

At a little dinner at a New York restaurant one of the members of the party fished out from his pocket an ingenious contrivance which he said considerable lessened the miseries of life for mustached men. The affair had a steel shank about three inches long which fastened by a spring to the handle of his soup spoon. The other end of the shank supported a silver guard, which lifted his long, heavy mustache and held it out of the way while the contents of the spoon were emptied into his mouth. A touch of the finger on the handle end of the shank lifted the whole affair to an upright position, if he wished, so that the guard was not "in the soup" at all. When in place it was not connected with the bowl of the spoon, but was held by the shank about an inch from the edge.

COMMERCIAL CLIPPINGS.

A wine company in California lately received an order from England for 50,000 gallons of sweet wine.

Sixty-five tons of butter were shipped from Montgomery County, Pa., to Liverpool recently.

A shipment of rubber shoes to Austria was made a few days ago by a Rhode Island rubber company.

South American railway companies have given large contracts for locomotives to be made in the United States.

The chewing-gum industry is increasing in magnitude in this country, the present product amounting to over $6,000,000 annually.

California fruit-growers have discovered that fruit can be kept fresh for a long time by packing it in carbonated wheat bran.

The San Francisco News-Letter thinks that one of the causes of the depression in the California wine trade is to be found "in the production of too much poor wine."

The rise of the price of ivory may be described by the statement that the great cutlery firm in Sheffield, Rodgers & Sons, used to pay £600 a ton, but they have lately paid £1,200 and in some special cases £1,600.

More apples were shipped from America to Europe last year than ever before in a single year, the total being 1,401,269 barrels. The largest previous shipments were in the year 1880-81, when the exports reached 1,328,806 barrels.

French champagne is being exchanged for large quantities of American cider. Two trips across the Atlantic, with a little manipulation on the other side, serve to convert common apple juice into extra brands of champagne, duly labeled.

Steam-heated piers for the preservation of fruit and other perishable commodities landed upon them in cold weather is the latest novelty in shipping circles. One is already in use in Boston. When inclosed and heated the piers are likely to be in demand for special purposes.

The trade of Canada with the United States is greater in amount than her commerce with Great Britain. During 1888 she sold to us merchandise to the amount of $43,572,065, and to Great Britain to the amount of $42,094,954. Her imports to this country were to the amount of $48,481,848, or $9,000,000 greater than from Great Britain.

Florida is dreaming dreams of commerce. An American steamer entered the port of Tampa last week from a foreign port for the first time in its history. The steamer brought cocoanuts and bananas from Jamaica, and fortnightly trips will be made to Central American ports. There is a plan to transport the Pan-American delegates back to their homes via this Tampa banana boat.

Brazil produces something besides coffee, hides and revolutions. The manufacture of so-called "peat" candles is growing to be an important industry in the late Empire. These candles are not made directly from peat, but of a paraffine distilled from peat, which is even more plentiful in Brazil than in Ireland. A Scotch concern is now having machinery installed capable of producing eighty tons of paraffine a month. The firm is also extracting from the turf a valuable lubricating oil.

HISTORICAL FRAGMENTS.

In the time of Confucius, B. C. 500, books were formed of slips of bamboo, upon which they wrote with a point of a style. About 250 B. C. paper was invented, when the Chinese wrote on rolls and formed volumes.

It is not generally known that the custom of keeping birthdays is many thousand years old. It is recorded in the fortieth chapter of Genesis, twentieth verse: "And it came to pass the third day, which was Pharaoh's birthday, that he made a feast unto all his servants."

The advertising card is of entirely modern origin, although the Egyptians, Greeks and Romans knew something about advertising. They accomplished the desired result through the medium of posters, as several bills, painted in black and red, were found on the walls of the Pompeiian dwellings.

It has been estimated that more than 400,000,000 human mummies were made in Egypt from the beginning of the art of embalming until its discontinuance in the seventh century. Herodotus and Diodorus agree in the statement that there was three grades of embalming. The first cost, in our money, about $1,225, the second about $375, and the third was very cheap.

Latin ceased to be spoken as a language of the people in Italy about 581. It was first taught in England in the seventh century, and speedily became the learned language of the kingdom, and the one in which English literature and law were expressed. Its use in law-deeds gave way to the common tongue about the year 1,000, was revived by Henry II., and again replaced by English by Henry III.

Butter, which is almost indispensable nowadays, was almost unknown to the ancients. Herodotus is the earliest writer to mention it. Spartans used butter, but as an ointment, and Plutarch tells how the wife of Deiotorous once received a visit from a Spartan lady whose presence was intolerable because she was smeared with butter. The Greeks learned of butter from the Scythians, and the Germans showed the Romans how it was made. The Romans, however, did not use it for food, but for anointing their bodies.

"Petroleum," says a correspondent in Notes and Queries, "was known, and even refined, long before it was used in lamps. A Frenchman is said to have spent years in vain endeavors to construct a lamp in which the new oil would burn without smoking. Accident helped him at last. Vexed by failure, he had drained his wine-flask—a long-necked, thin bottle, like oil-flasks—and set it down on the table so hard as to break the glass bottom. He then chanced to catch it up and hold it over the flame of his smoking lamp. The smoke ceased, and he saw that what he sought was found."

CURIOUS CUSTOMS.

Ram fighting is said to divide with cock fighting the affections of those of sporting blood among the natives of Ceylon.

In Denmark elder unmarried sisters dance at a younger sister's wedding without shoes, to counteract their ill-luck and procure them husbands.

In China when the rain is too abundant the officials set the images of the native gods out in the rain to induce them to stop the down-pour.

In South China for the bride to present her husband with a pair of shoes is a way of signifying that for the future she places herself under his control.

On St. Nicholas day in Italy persons hide presents in the shoes and slippers of those whom they wish to honor. This festival is called Zapata, from the Spanish word shoe.

In China should a betrothed lady die the intending bridegroom obtains her shoes and for two years burns incense to them, believing that her spirit will be present, enticed by the shoes.

Among the Jews in Barbary the relations of the deceased, for seven days after the interment, stir not abroad, or if by some extraordinary occasion they are found to go out of doors, it is without shoes, which is a token with them that they have lost a dear friend.

When a Corean marries he is careful to present his wife with a wild goose, even if he is obliged to hire the bird specially for the occasion; for, once upon a time, a wild goose whose mate was killed returned year after year to the same spot to mourn her loss, and the Corean bridegroom wishes his bride to understand the virtue of constancy.

A traveler in Corea writes: "Buddha worship, as conducted among Coreans, is a species of idol-worship. Diviners walk the streets in the persons of blind men with long staffs, who announce their presence with a peculiar professional cry. Demon-worship prevails in various superstitious practices, to ward off disease and other ills of life."

Among the lower classes of Calabria the young laborer when making love to his sweetheart sings the love songs of his country at night under her window. If she accepts the young man's suit she opens the window and shows him a lighted taper, and then he is invited to join the family circle in the house and sit at the family table, where all is merriment and happiness.

Every body smokes in Japan. The pipes hold a little wad of fine-cut tobacco as big as a pea. It is fired, and the smoker takes one long whiff, blowing the smoke in a cloud from his mouth and nose. The ladies have pipes with longer stems than the men, and if one of them wishes to show a gentleman a special mark of favor she lights her pipe, takes half a whiff, hands it to him and lets him finish out the whiff.

Among the Cree Indians of Canada the husband lives in the wife's house, but never speaks to his parents-in-law till his first child is born. This alters the whole situation, for, though the father is not a member of the family, his child is, and so confers on him the status of "father of so-and-so," which becomes his name, the whole affair being then brought to a logical conclusion by the family ceasing to cut him.

A boarder sent his cup to be filled for the fifth time. "You must be very fond of coffee, Mr. Brown," said the landlady, severely. "I am," said he, "or I would not drink so much water to get a little."

A Frenchman says that women have such an innate vanity for dress that if you were to tell one that she was to be hanged in the presence of twenty thousand persons she would at once exclaim: "Great heavens! I've got nothing to wear."

Don't waste your time, says the National Car Builder, talking spitefully to the station master when you find that you have missed the train. Buy a pint of peanuts and scatter the shells all over the station floor. That is about the only way in which you can get even with the company.

Indignant Father of the Young Lady—"What! You, who have never made your own living, apply for the hand of my daughter?" Would-be Son-in-law—"Well, you see, my own father is getting tired of supporting me, so I thought I'd look around and give some other family a chance." —[illegible]

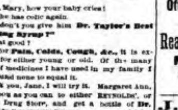
BEFORE TAKING. AFTER TAKING



Why, Mary, how your baby cries!
Yes, he has colic again.
Why don't you give him Dr. Taylor's Best Soothing Syrup?
Is that good?
Yes, for Pain, Colds, Cough, &c., it is excellent for either young or old. Of the many kinds of medicines I have used in my family I have found none to equal it.
Thank you, Jane, I will try it. Margaret Ann, go as soon as you can to either Reynolds', or Shaw's Drug Store, and get a bottle of Dr. Taylor's Soothing Syrup. 1-3-6m

HOW CAN THE LONG BE THE SHORT ?

A line may be a very long one and yet be the shortest between given points. For instance, the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway has over 3,000 miles of road; magnificently equipped and managed, it is one of the greatest railway systems of this country; for the same reasons it is the traveler's favorite to all points in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana. It is the only line to Great Falls, the future manufacturing center of the Northwest; to the fertile free lands of the Milk River Valley; and offers a choice of three routes to the Coast. Still it is the shortest line between St. Paul, Minneapolis, Fargo, Winnipeg, Crookston, Moorhead, Casselton, Glyndon, Grafton, Fergus Falls, Wahpeton, Devils Lake, and Butte City. It is the best route to Alaska, China and Japan; and the journey to the Pacific coast Vancouver, Tacoma, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco will be remembered as the delight of a life-time once made through the wonderful scenery of the Manitoba-Pacific Route. To fish and hunt; to view the magnificence of nature; to revive the spirit; restore the body; to realize the dream of the home seeker, the toiler, or the gold-seeker, the capitalist, visit the country reached by the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway. Write to F. I. Whitney, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn., for maps, books and guides. If you want a free farm in a lovely land, write for the "Great Reservation;" read it and resolve to accept the golden

PERIODICAL POEMS.

Life's Changes.

"No life is always sunshine,
Nor yet 'tis wholly rain—"
Life is full of sunshine never,
Sounds of sorrow ring out ever.
Little gleams of light we see
Through the clouds which sail so free,
Tho' they hide the glittering star
Well we know they glimmer afar.
If we gaze with downcast eyes
Never then will we be wise,
God sends His mercies rich and fast,
Yet when they're forever past
We forget they were so rare,
Do not see the sunshine there.
Quaffing sadly from the fountain
Of a mite we make a mountain,
Thinking life is wholly rain.
For so little have we gained
Of the warmth ever rich and light
Shedding rays so free and bright.
Joys and griefs, fast they gather,
So do clouds and fair weather.
Let us then look upward, seeing
That the Author of our being
From goodness does not refrain,
For no life is wholly rain.
—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Fatal "Spare-Room" Bed.

"Death rides on every passing breeze, he lurks in every flower,"
And do our best we can't escape his grim and awful power;
He stalks upon the battlefield, where thousands meet their fate,
He's ever knocking at the palace and the cottage gate.
In peace and war, by night and day, he's garnering his sheaves
Of fair and tender buds and blooms and sere and yellow leaves;
But of all places where he loves to linger it is said
No other pleases him so well as does the "spare-room" bed.

Within this damp and awful thing that never gets the air
Death comes with bold impunity and makes his fatal lair;
Its ticks are deep and chill and drear, its sheets are moist and cold,
And death serenely smiles on him within their icy fold.
In that far corner of the house where sunshine never strays
Upon the helpless victim there his chilling hand he lays,
The angels know how many of our loving friends are dead,
Because they dared to sleep within the awful "spare-room" bed.

How oft is Providence accused of stealing from our hearts
The smile of one whose going hence a gloom to earth imparts;
'Twas not the angels called him to his sleep among the dead;
By giving him that awful room, we murdered him instead.
'Tis not until our January guest is laid away
That we recall his couch was dressed just warm enough for May.
Our guilty conscience tells us then the column at his head
Should read, "Here lies a victim of the damp, cold, spare-room bed."
—Chicago Herald.

A Jolly Wizard.

Oh! a wizard dwelt in a cave by the sea,
And a dreamer of dreams was he;
The wild waves' roar as they broke on the shore
Gave him mirth and jollity;
For he'd people the rocks and the sounding deep
With phantasies weird as the products of sleep.

Oh! he dreamed of a maiden fair as a star,
Who came o'er the rolling sea
On the snowy crest of the billow's breast;
With airy tread walked she;
And her face was as white as the driven snow,
And her voice was like music sad and low.

Oh! she sang of love, and of lover's pain,
And she sang of a dream so sweet
That had urged her soul to a desperate goal,
For the sake of a wild heart-beat.
For the lover she loved in her fondest dream
Was false as the glitter of brook and stream.

Oh! the wizard dwelt in a cave by the sea,
And a dreamer of dreams was he;
Through phantasies sad and phantasies glad
He kept his jollity;
"For a dream is a dream, and not life," quoth he,
"But love which is life ne'er a dream can be."
—Washington Star.

The Wail of the Russian Slave.

"Why not take"—with a groan
As of one in deep pain
He put out a weak hand;
"If you love me, refrain.
All my neighbors and friends
Have prescribed round my bed,
And my wife—jealous soul!—
Followed all that they said.
I have swallowed things soft
And have bolted things hard;
I've worn plasters until
I am sore by the yard.
I've had ice on my head
And hot irons on my spine,
And been dosed with hot teas
Till for Iceland I'd pine.
I have soaked my poor feet
Till they're tender as boils,
And most sneezed my head off
In snuff's fiendish toils.
If there's aught left to do
From your mind let it slip,
For on 'remedies rare'
I've just got the grip.
This began as a cold,
But so complex has grown
With the names it's been dubbed
That I do not dare own.
That the one thing I need
Is to be let alone."

The Hare in the Corn.

Beyond, in the distance,
Goes by the gray moon,
And from the far sea-wall
Comes up a gay tune;
The music drifts nigh me,
And, sure as you're born,
'Tis a piper lad playing
"The Hare in the Corn."

How it quickens my pulses,
That lilting old tune,
And brings back the time
When, a merry gossoon,
I tripped it with Peggy
From night until morn,
And the piper's best tune was
"The Hare in the Corn."

Ah! Peggy, sweet Peggy,
The stars on the sea
Shone never so bright
As your blue eyes on me.
Small need of a ribbon
Your looks to adorn,
As we jigged it so lightly—
"The Hare in the Corn."

'Twas backward and sideways
And then an advance,
Like a feather you floated
Along in the dance;
We'd never a fiddle,
No flute or a horn,
Just the piper lad playing
"The Hare in the Corn."

Faith! then was the day
I'd walk many a mile
For the touch of your hand
And the light of your smile;
Sure a queen or a princess
You'd put them to scorn
As I faced you when dancing
"The Hare in the Corn."

But alas for us both!
For you faded from sight
And the ghost of my youth
Walks beside me to-night,
And the faint echoes o'er me
Sound sad and forlorn—
'Tis a piper lad playing
"The Hare in the Corn."
—Ernest McGaffey, in Arkansaw Traveler.

A GRIST OF GOOD ONES.

COUNSEL (to witness)—"Have you ever seen the prisoner at the bar?" Witness (a Prohibitionist)—"Sir, I am not in the habit of frequenting bars."

PRISONER—"He applied an appropriate epithet to me." Magistrate—"What was it?" Prisoner—"He called me a lying scoundrel." Magistrate—"Well, you mean opprobrious, but I won't contradict you. It may have been appropriate."

IMPORTED TONSORIAL ARTIST—"They say, sir, that hinfluenza's hin the hair, sir." Nervous Customer—"Then pray be very careful what brushes you use." Cockney Barber—"Hi don't mean the air hof the 'ed, sir; Hi mean the hair of the hatmosphere."

"IS THERE any opening here for an intellectual writer?" asked a seedy individual of the editor one afternoon. "Yes, my friend," replied the man of quills, "a considerate carpenter, foreseeing your visit, left an opening for you. Turn the knob to the right."

"WILL you trust me, Fanny?" he cried. "With all my heart, with all my soul, with all myself, Augustus," she whispered, nestling on his manly bosom. "Would to Heaven that you were my tailor," he murmured to himself, and took her tenderly in his arms.

BELINDA—"I think that Mr. Jenks, your fiancee, is too lovely for any thing. What soulful eyes he has." Mabel—"Yes; but, my dear, you don't really know Alfred until you hear him read poetry." "How delightfully romantic! What business is he in?" "He is in a wholesale hides and pelts establishment."

"THANK God! there is one man who never spoke a cross word to his wife," said Sam Jones at an Omaha meeting the other night, as a round-faced, good-natured man rose, in response to Sam's question if such a man was present. The good-natured man smiled a bland smile and said: "I haven't any wife. I'm a bachelor!"

A GIRL in a Chicago public school asked for leave to be absent for half a day on the plea that they had company at home. The teacher referred her to the printed list of reasons that the school committee think sufficient to justify absence, and asked her if her case came under any of them. She naively replied that it might come under the head of "domestic affliction."

"LOOK here, Mr. Higginbottom," said the grocer, by way of a joke to the old farmer, "I found this stone, which weighs five pounds, in the bottom of the last crock of butter I bought of you." "Lucy, consarn her picter, this is your fault!" rejoined the man, as he turned to his wife. "Tain't neither! You handled the crocks!" "But you must hev mixed up down cellar." "No, I didn't, though the gal probably did. She's just that keerless." "Wall, Smith, I'll allow fur it. The crocks got mixed. This was the one we were going to send to the preacher's donation party, and I've been hornswaggled out of a clean dollar. I orter hev put a label on it."

RUSSIA, although in many respects a semi-barbarous nation, is making steady progress in civilization. The announcement is made that the infliction of corporal punishment on peasants is to be abolished in the Baltic provinces. It has been the custom to employ the lash for petty offenses or as a means of extracting rent or taxes.

AT the international hygienic congress at the Paris exhibition a resolution was unanimously voted affirming the general principle that kitchen refuse should never be kept in the house over night, but should be placed outside in metallic boxes, and that it should be removed every twenty-four hours. This is the regulation which is now rigorously enforced in Paris.

THE stupendous plan for supplying the city of Liverpool with water involves the removal of a whole Welsh village, including woods, cottages, churches, etc., this immense space to be devoted to a reservoir four and one-half miles long by half a mile to a mile broad, and eighty feet deep. There are to be three lines of pipe, each sixty-eight miles long, with filtering beds and secondary reservoirs, and the cost of the aqueduct alone is estimated at $15,000,000.

THE Government of India has been compelled by law to purchase three copies of each new book issued in the country, and it has been discovered that a practice has grown up of printing new books simply for the sake of the sale of these three copies, for which any price within reason could be charged. A change is about to be made in the law, and hereafter the publishers will have to present the copies to the Government.

SCRAPS OF SCIENCE.

IN the purest air subjected to test for the causes which produces the dimming effect of haze there were about 34,000 dust particles found in each cubic inch.

ACCORDING to the Berlin correspondent of the Lancet, Prof. Forster, head physician of the Royal Eye Hospital in Breslau, maintains that short-sightedness in children is not infrequently due to their wearing too tight-fitting collars.

A RUSSIAN practitioner recommends the use of hyoscyamus seeds for toothache. His plan is to burn the seeds and to convey the smoke through a little paper tube to the hole in the tooth. He declares that in nearly all cases one application, or at most two, will suffice to cure the toothache.

IT has been proved that fish that live near the surface of water can only descend to a comparatively slight depth; under an increased pressure they die, and—this is very remarkable—the water being forced into their tissues, their bodies become rigid and brittle as glass.

IT takes but a small quantity of non-transparent matter to produce the dimming effect of haze. If the eye can observe the color produced in a drop of water by the fifty-millionth of a gramme of fuchsine, possibly a weight of water or dust not much greater would suffice for visibility in a column of air 1,000 feet long.

AN interesting astronomical discovery is announced from Italy. After ten years of investigation Schiaparelli has found that Mercury, the planet nearest to the sun, has a rotation like that of the moon. The planet turns once on its axis during the period of its revolution round the sun, so that the same side is always turned toward the sun.

HYDROGEN gas has been liquified, but it requires a pressure of 10,000 pounds to the square inch and a temperature of 220 degrees below zero. It forms a blue liquid, which, by the cold produced by its own evaporation, may be frozen for an instant to a solid with a metallic luster, thus confirming the theory that hydrogen is a gaseous metal, just as mercury is a liquid one.

Decline in Immigration.

The human tide has been setting strongly from Europe to this country during the present century. Since 1820, fifteen millions of emigrants have crossed the Atlantic, and of the six millions that have set out from the British Isles, three and a half have gone from Ireland alone. All the Norse races appear to favor the American continent. During 1889, Norway and Sweden, notwithstanding their small population, sent forty-five thousand emigrants thither. Germany comes next to the British Isles in its human output. But it is now to be noted, as a sign that the stream of emigration is being diverted to other channels, that the number of immigrants to the United States is steadily declining. Last year there were one hundred thousand less than the year before.

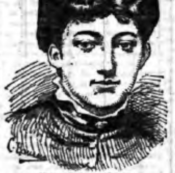
WHEN LENT IS PAST.

Some of the Notable Weddings to Be Solemnized.

The Penitential Days Brightened By Preparations for These Happy Events. Charming Easter Brides and Lucky Grooms.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

Society is now enshrouded in penitence for Lent. Sackcloth and ashes are mere metaphor, however, as far as New York is concerned; for while our grand dames, their husbands and daughters, may have to forego their dinners, balls and receptions during the forty days before Easter, they still contrive to make the time pass pleasantly enough. One of the pleasant duties of Lent is the preparation for the matrimonial matches that come like a flood at the earliest days of the Eastertide. The past season has been prolific in notable engagements, and the first week in April will in all probability witness many very brilliant marriages.



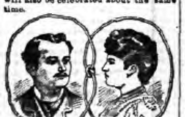
MISS NELLIE BAYARD.

One of the most notable in some respects will be that of Herbert Ward, the young Englishman who was for a time the companion of Stanley in his African explorations, to Miss Sanford, the daughter of Banker Charles H. Sanford of Fifth Avenue, New York. There is quite a little romance connected with this match. Mr. Ward, who is about 26 years of age, and whose heart has for many years been set on African exploration, had only begun to win the fame that surely awaited him in literary and geographical fields when, last summer, on his return from Zanzibar, he met in London and at once fell hopelessly in love with the charming lady who is about to become his wife. Of course, his African dreams are exploded and he will go there no more.

A coming wedding in high life is that of Count Loewenhaupt, of Sweden, to Miss Nellie Bayard, the youngest and favorite daughter of ex-Secretary Bayard. The engagement when recently announced was quite a surprise to many friends of the Delaware statesman's family. Miss Nellie has been known as a charming figure in Washington society. Her betrothed, who is the heir to large estates abroad, is now in this country, studying practical mechanics at the shipyard of Harlan & Hollingsworth, one of the most extensive in the United States. The Count is a fair-haired martial-looking young fellow of about twenty-five, and a scion of one of the oldest families in Sweden.

Another match announced to come off when Lent closes, and which has a delicate flavor of romance about it, is that of Mr. Lawrence Turnure, Jr., and Miss Romaine Stone, the lovely daughter of Gen. Roy Stone. The Turnures and Stones are both in the Four Hundred, the first being one of the richest families in that array of American Crœsuses. Gen. Stone is not a wealthy man. The Turnures usually spend the summer at Lenox, where the ladies of the family are very popular, and noted as fine equestrians. Miss Stone was their inseparable companion, although, unlike the Misses Turnure, her physique was delicate and her beauty of the spirituelle order. She has been prominent in society for two seasons, and at the last New Year's ball was considered one of the loveliest women upon the floor.

There is another Turnure wedding on the tapis, too, the high contracting parties being Mr. Arthur B. Turnure, one of the editors of the "Cosmopolitan Magazine," a son of the late David Turnure, and nephew of Lawrence Turnure, to Miss Lisa Harrison, the daughter of Mr. Jared Harrison, a prominent lawyer of New York City. The bride is wealthy and is quite a social favorite. The wedding of Miss Grew, a member of one of the oldest and most influential families of the "Hub," and Mr. John Morgan, son of Mr. Pierpont Morgan, will also be celebrated about the same time.

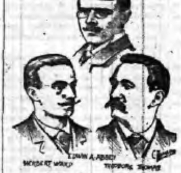


A wedding that is likely to attract considerable attention during the Eastertide is that of Mr. Herman Oelrichs to Miss Theresa Fair, of San Francisco. The engagement has created more than a flutter in social and club circles, for Mr. Oelrichs was considered one of the best catches in town, and Miss Fair, besides being a beautiful and talented young woman, will have a dowry of $5,000,000. There is no more familiar figure about town in New York than Mr. Oelrichs. He, more than any other man in New York, might properly call himself a cosmopolitan. Besides being an athlete, a boxer, an oarsman, a fencer, a member of all the leading clubs of the city and several in London, a student who graduated from his college with great honors, a man who has traveled all over the world, and is quite as much at home in London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, or Moscow; he is a business man of unusual ability, and a leader of the german who is always in demand. Miss Fair, his fiance, is well known in Washington and on the Pacific slope. She is the daughter of the Fair of bonanza fame, has seen considerable of the world, been educated here and in Europe, and is altogether a young lady, aside from the rich dowry she carries in her dimpled hand, who would attract attention even in a crowd. She was a marked figure at the great New Year ball, where handsome women were almost as numerous as the leaves in the famed valley of Vallambrosa. With her mother she has spent the winter at the Hoffman House in New York. She has been seen at the theatre, the opera and at dance to a considerable extent, and has made a very pleasing impression upon society. There is nothing loud about her. She has abundance of elegant clothes, and jewels sufficient for a king's ransom, but she is not ostentatious in their display. She is a good whip, an enthusiastic sailor, and generally a lover of outdoor sports. Her mother, who obtained a divorce from the Pacific slope nabob, has been her chaperone. Like her daughter, she is quiet in dress and easy in manner, and has made many friends in the gilded circle of New York society.

Mr. Edwin A. Abbey, the well known artist, is about to become a benedict, and will be married about Easter, the bride being Miss Gertrude Mead, the daughter of Frederick Mead, a rich tea merchant of New York City. Mr. Abbey is about 37 years of age, and Miss Mead slightly younger. Like her future husband, she is devoted to art, and is something of a poet and astronomer. She has made a very large and valuable collection of pictures, which has been on exhibition in New York on several occasions. The acquaintance began in London several years ago through a mutual love of art, and the betrothal occasioned no little surprise to Mr. Abbey's friends, who thought him absolutely wedded to his profession and out of the matrimonial field.

As an offset to the Abbey-Mead match, it is announced that Theodore Thomas, the impresario, will, after Lent, espouse a beautiful and accomplished Chicago girl, Miss Rose Fay, the daughter of the late Rev. Charles Fay, an Episcopal clergyman of Worcester, Mass. For several years Miss Fay has been a belle in Chicago society, her brother being President of the Chicago Telephone Company, and her sisters, Mrs. Wilmerding and Miss Amy Fay, being all very popular in elite circles in the Lake City. The bride-to-be is about 28 years of age, petite and dark haired, with a lovely complexion and decided musical talent. Her sister, Miss Amy, is one of the finest pianists in Chicago.

The heiress market, with the exception of two or three notable quotations, has been rather dull this season. Some of the most attractive matrimonial prizes hang fire in a remarkable manner. It isn't often the case that a young girl who possesses wealth in addition to beauty remains single after her third season in society. The diligence of the mammas and the obvious fact that the girl has great expectations from her father's money-bags, rarely fail to accomplish the capture of a desirable fiance within the time mentioned. Yet there are some who do mysteriously remain single, and whom, despite charms, accomplishments and riches, Cupid passes scornfully by, season after season. Among the maiden millionairesses of New York there are at least three notable instances of this sort just now. Of course, it is possible that the failure of a good many brilliant alliances that were celebrated with great eclat in the past may have something to do with this state of affairs. There is beginning to be a very shrewd suspicion in New York society that the professional marrying man is not at all times a desirable parti, more particularly when he comes from abroad. When a girl lays down her ducats with the deliberate purpose of buying a prince or a duke, she takes all the chances. Fortunately, in the present case, all the auguries are favorable and there is every reason to believe that the matches will prove very happy ones.



THREE HAPPY GROOMS.

Since Consuelo Yznaga married Lord Mandeville some ten years ago, her example has been followed by a score of American heiresses, each of whom has captured a titled spouse, some of them with an undesirable accompaniment of debts and other peculiarities. Of course there were fortunate exceptions; but many will recall the purely commercial aspect of the Hamersley-Marlborough affair, the interrupted engagement of Mrs. Marshall O. Roberts and the Earl of Arran; the match between Miss Mackay, the bonanza king's daughter, and Prince Colonna, a penniless Italian with a resplendent pedigree; Miss Ada Hungerford, the sister of Mrs. Mackay, and Count Telfener. The American girl is learning her lesson, slowly by hard experience, and the mammas of our young and ambitious heiresses are now doubly careful of encouraging aspirants who have nothing but the veneer of aristocracy to commend them as sons-in-law. It needs no prophet to predict that the impecunious nobleman will soon be a drug in the matrimonial market.

BARON ROTHSCHILD, the Paris banker, lives in fear of the commune. His cellars are always impregnable, and his pictures and jewels are protected in such a way that the most grasping mob could not reach them. He lives in a state of constant fear.

MRS. CUSTER, widow of the gallant General, is said to be a woman absolutely without fear. She used to accompany her husband wherever he would allow her to go during his campaigns, and her fondness for out-of-door life has never left her.

BUFFALO BILL had an interesting experience at Barcelona. As he was about to leave that city he was accosted by an envoy of the Spanish Government, who asked him if he would accept a certain decoration. "Not by a long sight," said Colonel Cody. "I am already Duke of Colorado." The envoy bowed respectfully and disappeared.

WILLIAM E. GLADSTONE is a voracious reader of current periodical literature and always reads the advertisements. He subscribes for the American edition of certain American-English magazines, in order that he may obtain from their advertising pages any new ideas to be gleaned therefrom as to American industries and enterprises.

VARIOUS attempts have been made to account for the marvelous influence which Stanley, the African explorer, exerted over his Zanzibari followers, and also over all the natives with whom he was brought into contact during his transafrican expeditions, but perhaps the most feasible is that which attributes it to the peculiar expression of his eyes. One of his European companions in his recent expedition has said that "Stanley first looks at the natives as if he were going to eat them, and then when they give in and do what he wants he looks as if he had done so and was grateful to them for the meal."

THE price of game in France is alleged to depend principally upon the state of the moon. When the moon is dark the poachers can not see to set their snares at night, and game is scarce. When the moon is full there is plenty of light, and the poachers get lots of game.

OUR practice fleet in the Mediterranean has a good deal of trouble with foreign regulations. Spain forbade the landing of crews anywhere on her shores for land practice, and Italy has a law that, more than three war ships of any foreign power shall not be in any one of her ports at the same time.

THE English Government has been redeeming at their nominal value the old gold coins that have become short weight through much use, with the idea of getting them out of circulation. It was supposed that there were twenty million dollars' worth of such coins in the country, but the call only brought out about half that sum. After the 13th inst. the old rule of taking such coins only by weight will go into force again.

A CHEMIST has lately performed a feat of no common order. The explosion and fire at Antwerp reduced to a charred mass a bundle of one thousand florin Austrian obligations. Without presentation in some identifiable form there could be no payment. The imperiled obligations were given to a chemist and he succeeded in separating the whole of them and finding out the numbers, and upon his report the money has been paid.

AMONG the pictures at a recent exhibition of old masters in London was a Romney, owned by a maiden lady, who wanted it insured for $2,500 because it was a family heirloom. This sum was thought excessive, but soon after the exhibition opened the old lady was offered $8,500 for it, and in a day or two afterward a dealer raised the bid to $20,000. She took time to consider and another dealer offered $30,000. She did not accept that, either.

IN speaking of the sanitary value of sleep, the Hospital says: "In this age of hurry and worry, with its consequent nervous exhaustion, of which so much is now heard, the necessity of taking sufficient sleep can not be insisted upon too forcibly. To lay down any hard and fast rule for its regulation is not possible, for, naturally, brain workers require more than the drones of society; in fact, every brain worker, if he wishes his powers to last, should take from eight to nine hours' sleep out of every twenty-four.

BARBARISM.

The brutal treatment of Siberian exiles by the Russian Government, as vividly portrayed by Mr. Kennan from personal investigation, and recently confirmed through other sources, has justly aroused popular indignation.

It is a foul blot upon the civilization of the nineteenth century, and ought to evoke a thundering and effective protest from Christians of every land.

Refined and cultivated men and women rudely thrust away from home and friends, and not only consigned to the climatic rigors of Siberia and filthy prisons, but flogged to death, to appease the hyena-vengeance of officials commissioned by a government claiming to be civilized.

And for what alleged committed crime?

Simply because, exercising the God-given right of thought and judgment, they had avowed fidelity to the inalienable principles of justice, and criticised, or been suspected of opposing Russian despotism.

Where breathes a true-hearted American who will not cry aloud—down with such inhuman tyranny.

If the Czar of Russia, in the exercise of supreme authority over the lives and liberties of millions of enslaved subjects, cannot be induced to respect the common rights of humanity, should not other nations cease to hold diplomatic relations with a ruler so infamously barbaric.

Assemblyman Ulrich Votes for the Weekly Payment Bill.

When [illegible] bill [illegible] which provides for weekly payment of wages by corporations, came up in the Assembly at Trenton, Tuesday, the Hon. Thus there would be no possibility of conflicting laws on the subject being adopted during the session.

But postponement was opposed. One Assemblyman said the bill was demanded by the labor organizations, who have petitioned for its passage. Another favored bi-monthly payments, but was willing to vote for a bill asked for by the laboring people. The bill was favored by Mr. March of Elizabeth. The motion to lay the bill over was lost, and the bill was then passed, 45 to 0. Mr. Ulrich voted for the bill.

A PIONEER IN HOMOEOPATHY.

Biographical Sketch of a Busy, Useful and Successful Life.

Dr. Randolph Titsworth, whose funeral, as recorded elsewhere in this paper, occurred Tuesday afternoon, was one of the pioneer physicians in the practice of homoeopathy, and his career, though at times a hard battle against many obstacles, was throughout one of thorough usefulness and continuous success. He was born February 20, 1821.

His paternal ancestors were of Welsh origin, the Titsworths of New Jersey being descendants of five brothers who emigrated from Wales and became early settlers in the State. His paternal grandfather, Lewis, was a farmer, and at different times resided at Spotswood and New Market, Middlesex county, where he reared a family of ten children. His maternal grandfather, Isaac F. Randolph, a wealthy and influential citizen of New Brooklyn, was a descendant of the Fitz Randolphs, early settlers in Woodbridge.

Abraham, son of Lewis Titsworth, was during his early manhood a merchant tailor at Metuchen, subsequently a farmer, and died at New Brooklyn in May, 1860, at the age of seventy-three years. He was highly esteemed as a citizen for his integrity in all his relations. He was a member of the Seventh Day Baptist church, and for several terms served as Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. His wife, Juliet Fitz Randolph, survived him and in 1882 was eighty years of age and had born him eight children—Dr. Randolph, the subject of this sketch; Mary Ann, wife of Daniel Rogers of Metuchen; Caleb S., a lawyer and ex-Judge of the city of Newark; Julia E., wife of David L. Randolph of New Brooklyn; John Howard, a farmer in Pardee, Kansas; Isaac Lewis, deceased; Amanda, widow of Wm. B. Maxson, of Plainfield, and Thomas Stillman, deceased.

Randolph Titsworth's early education was received in the schools at home, and his preparatory course at the High School at Shiloh, N. J., and at DeRuyter, N. Y. In his efforts to obtain an education he was obliged to depend on his own resources, and sometimes pecuniarily he worked his way, struggling against obstacles incident to straitened circumstances, until he finished his schedule of preparatory studies.

In 1847 he began the study of medicine with Drs. E. T. Richardson and J. G. Loomis, of Syracuse, N. Y., but soon afterwards Dr. Loomis was appointed to the chair of Obstetrics in the Homoeopathic College at Philadelphia, and Dr. Titsworth accompanied him, continuing his studies with him in the College until his graduation in 1852. Prior to this he practiced about a year in the College, and for some time had charge of the dispensary department. At this time the practice of medicine by what was termed homoeopathy was in its infancy, and only here and there could be found an exponent of the new theory. In what is now Union county there was only one, Dr. Green, of Elizabeth, and in Middlesex county also there was only one homoeopathic practitioner, Dr. Robinson. Dr. Titsworth settled in Plainfield in the Spring of 1852, and was the first in that section of New Jersey to invite the people to examine the new departure in the practice of medicine. He found only two families ready to receive it willingly, but with that earnestness and zeal which characterized his entire professional career, and with full confidence that it required only time for the more intelligent and thinking public to give credence to this new theory, Dr. Titsworth, by his skillful and scientific treatment of cases coming before him, gradually won his way to a place in the profession as a worthy exponent of homoeopathy, although he was opposed at every step by doctors of the regular practice. Through this pioneer and his associates, this new school of medicine rapidly developed its theory before the people and made a new era in the theory and practice of medicine. The results today are too well-known to need recounting here.

Dr. Titsworth will long be remembered as the founder of homoeopathic practice in and about Plainfield; during his more than thirty years' practice in the neighborhood his quick perception in the diagnosis of complicated cases of disease, and his devotion to his patients, had won him an enviable reputation and placed him among the first in his profession in the State. His practice was continuous since he first settled in Plainfield, with the exception of one year, 1861, which he spent travelling for his health in the West, and some three years that he practiced in New York city.

Early in life Dr. Titsworth identified himself with membership in the Seventh Day Baptist church, but since his residence in Plainfield he was a member of the Trinity Reformed church and had served as both deacon and elder. He was a member of the American Institute of Homoeopathy, and of the State Homoeopathic Medical Society, founded in 1853, for which he served as treasurer during the first two years of its existence.

In 1844 he married Miss Lucinda L., daughter of Samuel Caldwell of Pompey, N. Y., a native of Massachusetts. She died in May, 1875, leaving one child Josephine, wife of Wm. M. Runyon of Plainfield. His second wife, who survives him, was Miss Isabella L. Bragg of White House, N. J. He married her in July, 1879.

WILL IT PASS?

A LAW PROPOSED TO HELP THIS CITY OUT OF A DIFFICULTY.

It Was Drawn by City Attorney Marsh and Introduced by Assemblyman Marsh as Instructed and Requested by a Committee of the Council—Its Provision for Sewers Built by Private Capital and at no Cost to Any Citizen not Using Them.

The act which Assemblyman Fred. C. Marsh, of Elizabeth, introduced in the Legislature of New Jersey, at Trenton, on Monday, at the request of a committee of the Common Council of this city, has for its object to enable Plainfield to authorize a corporation formed for the purpose, to put in a system of sewerage without expense to the city.

Upon the bill being introduced and its title read, it was referred to the committee on judiciary of which Assemblyman Marsh is a member. Assemblyman Ulrich, who is the representative of this district, and a resident of this city which the bill is meant to particularly apply to, objected to the reference ordered. He wanted the bill placed where he could get at it in the interest of his constituents. Thereupon by a vote of the House, the bill was taken out of the hands of the committee on judiciary and placed in the hands of the committee on municipal corporations of which Mr. Ulrich is a member.

A proposed bill already before the House of Assembly, as already published in THE PRESS, provides for a system of sewerage in cities to be built by the cities and paid for by assessments and the issuing of bonds. The bill introduced by Assemblyman Marsh for the Plainfield Council, provides a way for the granting of a franchise for the purpose to private capitalists, and the corporation so to be formed is to derive its revenue solely from those property owners—and no others—who may chose to contract with the corporation for the use of the sewers.

To enable the corporation to carry out the purposes of its organization, the power to condemn lands is necessary, and is provided for in the bill. The act contains further provisions as to how many shall be requisite to form the company, how the directors shall be chosen, what officers may be appointed, what the capital stock shall be, how the pipes shall be laid, how the preliminary examinations, levels, etc., may be taken, and when the work shall be begun and completed. The act further provides that the consent in writing of the corporate authorities shall be obtained before any company can be incorporated thereunder, and authorizes the annexation of conditions to the granting of such assent, which conditions are made operative and binding upon the corporation, its successors and assigns.

Such is the general outline of the provisions of the act. The scheme is practically indentical with that adopted by the Legislature in 1876 with respect to water works. In drafting the proposed act, City Attorney Marsh adopted the scheme of the above because it was fair to assume that the latter, having stood unrepealed on the statute books for fourteen years, can have no very serious objections.

Plainfield is free from debt, and its citizens are opposed to the issuing of bonds. Water works are about to be constructed by a private company, under the act of 1876 referred to above, and the Council desire to have sewerage introduced on a similar principle, and, if possible, at the same time, so as to avoid tearing up the streets again.

The bill which is numbered 370, is entitled, "An act for the construction, maintenance and operation of systems of sewerage in cities, towns and boroughs."

Opposition is already heard of from certain quarters—where and why, THE PRESS is just now bound in honor not to disclose. If necessary for its passage, the proposed act can be limited to cities, and if still further limitation should prove necessary, it could be provided, as Governor Abbett so universally desires, so as to take effect in such cities only as should first approve of the act by a popular vote.

THE PRESS does not desire to be misunderstood—the proposed act has not been submitted to the Council, but the committee was instructed to have such an act drafted and submitted to the Legislature without further action on the part of the Council.

The full text of such sections of the proposed act as are of most importance to the public in general, are as follows:

"Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That any number of persons, not less than seven, a majority of whom shall reside in this State, may form a company for the purpose of constructing, maintaining and operating a system of sewerage in any city, town or borough, in this State, for the purpose of supplying said city, town or borough and the inhabitants thereof with an adequate means of disposing of sewerage.

"Sec. 2. That such persons desirous of forming a company for such purpose shall make, sign and acknowledge, before some officer authorized to take such acknowledgment of deeds, a certificate in writing, which shall state the corporate name adopted by the company, the amount of the capital stock, the term of its existence, the number of directors, the names of those who shall manage the affairs of the company for the first year, or until their successors are elected and qualified, and the name of the city, town or borough in or for which such sewerage system is to be constructed, and the business of the company carried on. Such certificate shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of State together with the consent in writing of the corporate authorities, if any, of the city, town or borough in which such sewerage system is to be constructed.

"Sec. 3. That when such certificate and consent shall have been filed as aforesaid, the persons who shall have signed and acknowledged the same, and their successors, shall be a body politic and corporate, and shall have power as such to build, erect, alter, repair, enlarge and maintain all necessary works and appurtenances within or without said city, town or borough, and to lay down all such pipes and conduits for sewerage at such times and in such places as shall be necessary and proper to enable said corporation to carry into effect the purposes of its incorporation.

"Sec. 4. That it shall be lawful for such corporation to enter upon any and all lands in the neighborhood of the borough, town or city which it is intended to supply with such system of sewerage and to make all such preliminary examinations, explorations, measurements and levelings as may be necessary and proper for its corporate purposes, doing thereby as little damage as possible to the owner or owners.

"Sec. 12. That such company be and they are hereby fully authorized and empowered to lay their pipes beneath such public roads, streets, avenues and alleys, as they may deem necessary for the purposes aforesaid, free from all charge to be made by any person or persons, or body politic whatsoever, for said privilege; provided that said pipes shall be laid at least three feet below the surface of the same, and shall not in anywise unnecessarily obstruct or interfere with public travel, or damage public or private property; and provided that the consent shall be obtained of the corporate authorities, if any there be, of any town through which the same may be laid.

"Sec. 13. That the said company may contract with property owners and others for the use of said system of sewerage for such price or prices, or quarterly or annual rents, and such restrictions as they may think proper.

"Sec. 14. That each company shall commence the construction of the proposed system of sewerage within six months from the date of their organization, and shall complete the same within two years from the date of commencement.

"Sec. 15. That it shall be lawful for the corporate authorities of any such city, town or borough to annex to the consent referred to in Section 2 of this act, any condition or conditions upon which such consent is granted, and if said certificate be filed, there shall be annexed thereto and filed therewith said condition or conditions, or a copy thereof, and such filing shall be conclusive evidence that said corporation has assented to said condition or conditions, and the same shall be deemed and taken to be binding and operative upon said corporation, its successors and assigns.

TAIL-ENDERS YET.

The Crescent Bowling Team Drop Two More Games in the Central League Tournament.

A man by the name of "Jim Fancher" of Fanwood, stood on the platform of the railroad station, Westfield, Monday evening, and swore the members of the Plainfield Crescent League "couldn't bowl a little bit." The crowd around him were all Plainfielders and members of the Crescent League, yet but one disputed the assertion and he quietly withdrew when asked for proof to sustain his objection.

The trouble all arose because the Crescents had just been bowling in such hard luck on Gale's alleys at Westfield, as to lose two games to the Mondays. Fancher had lost his money on the Crescents, and they had lost all heart because of their disappointment and were ready to agree with anything that he said about them. But they feel better now, and Thursday night on their own alleys, the Crescents propose to win both games back again from the Mondays. Probably VanEmburgh, Emerson, Haven, Theirs and Rogers will be the contesting team then.

Everything was against the visiting team that evening. The alleys are lighted by lamps that shine only on one side of the pins, and only those at home can tell which of the front three is the king pin. Reed, on whom so much always depends, had the most unfortunate breaks, and bad luck attended Howe and Haven. The Mondays wound up the first game in splendid shape, and rolled a beautiful game in the second. Ex-Captain Ike won the first game by doubling up strikes in his last frame, while the last four frames in the second game by Grand Stand Dilts were the finest of the evening, netting him 80 pins. South Paw Stitt, the best bowler in Westfield, and Cy Wilcox also done themselves honor in the second game.

Assessor Julius Cesar Marsh acted as umpire, but was so busily engaged in giving out pasters to the Republicans who wanted to vote for his reelection, that he never saw a foul. The pin boys had struck, so the irrepressible John Peiffer, aged 70, and his irrepressible son, aged 17, set 'em up. The scores were as follows:

At a regular meeting of the Plainfield Bicycle Club held on Monday, two more members were elected, and the officers nominated at a caucus on the first of March were chosen for the ensuing year as follows:

President—Townsend Rushmore.
Vice President—Thomas S. Burr.
Secretary—Geo. C. Martin, Jr.
Treasurer—Harold Serrell.
Trustees—Dr. J. H. Cooley, A. L. C. Marsh, F. L. Kirchoff, Roger F. Murray, James H. Halleck.
Captain—F. L. C. Martin.
First Lieutenant—J. E. Erickson.
Second " —Stanton M. Smith.
Color Bearer—L. E. Waring.
Bugler—Geo. C. Martin, Jr.

The gymnasium committee reported that the apparatus had been ordered and would be ready for use in about two weeks. A motion was made to tender an entertainment or reception in honor of the young women who so generously donated articles and assisted at the recent fair. The Trustees were authorized to arrange whatever they thought best in the matter.

PLAINFIELD WHEELMEN NEWS.

As Contributed to the "Bicycling World" by Captain F. L. C. Martin.

The mammoth fair held by the Plainfield Bicycle Club on February 20, 21, and 22, is now a thing of the past. An unqualified success to the tune of about $1,100 crowned the efforts of the members. The fair was held in the new gymnasium recently erected by the club. The walls were handsomely and artistically decorated with costly rugs, portieres, bric-a-brac, Japanese lanterns, etc., the large and exquisite open fireplace added much to the attractiveness of the room, which presented a scene of grandeur. A bevy of Plainfield's beautiful young ladies was in attendance at the various booths. During each session a musical concert was given by the Murray Brothers performing on a variety of instruments, and by Mr. Mecklem (a New York banker,) on the harp, and his daughter, on the saxophone. Miss Mecklem is a pupil of Le Fevre. She is only fifteen years of age, but has already developed musical talent of the highest order. A brilliant future evidently awaits her.

A large number of costly articles were disposed of by chance, prominent among which was a Columbia Safety Bicycle, won jointly by Messrs A. L. C. Marsh and F. L. C. Martin, and a handsome diamond ring, won jointly by Messrs Thos. S. Burr and the inevitable A. L. C. Marsh, who also captured several minor prizes. The billiard room in the club house was converted into a phonograph concert hall, and added considerably to the amusement of those present, besides netting very good returns. The shooting gallery, under the supervision of Messrs R. F. Murray and E. B. Ryder, proved another good source of revenue. A handsome souvenir badge made by Mr. R. H. Radford, one of the members of the club, composed of the club colors, cardinal and old gold, was presented to each lady assistant, and also to the chairman of each committee.

The members are very much indebted to their lady friends for the manner in which they worked, and the magnanimity they displayed by their donations, and are arranging to give a reception in their honor at an early date, as an evidence of the appreciation of their kind services. The Almanac Programme, a 36-page edition issued in connection with the fair, is a very interesting production, and reflects much credit upon the ingenuity of the editor, Vice President Thos. S. Burr, who was ably assisted by his daughter, Miss Helen.

At the last monthly meeting of the Hudson County Wheelmen thirteen new members were elected, which carried the membership just over the century line, and for the first time in the history of the club. They now have the largest membership of any of the cycling clubs in the State, followed closely by the Plainfield Bicycle Club, with 96 members. The Plainfields held first place for a short time only, but claim that they will "get there" again, and at no very distant day.

EXEMPT FIREMEN.

The Exemptions Allowed by Law and How Obtained.

The New Jersey State Firemen's Association having had many inquiries from all parts of the State as to when an active fireman becomes exempt and as to what exemptions are allowed by law and as to how they are obtained, has prepared information that will be of interest to Plainfield firemen.

An active fireman becomes exempt from jury and militia duty under State law, where he is a member of a company incorporated under the act of 1876, page 266, amended in 1877, page 220, after serving seven years. There is no other State law fixing when a fireman becomes exempt. Exempt certificates are granted under local rules, ordinances or custom, and they vary in cities, towns and villages. A bill drawn by the counsel of this association is now pending in the Legislature fixing seven years' service as the period to make exempts. To obtain the exemption from jury duty, under the act of 1877, a certificate signed by the President of the company, showing that seven years has been served by the member claiming exemption, must be filed with the Clerk of the county in which the exemption is claimed.

By the act of 1888, page 479, all active firemen under supervision or control of Common Council, Township Committee, Fire Commissioners or other governing body, are exempt from general and special poll tax, and from State, county, and municipal taxation, upon real or personal property or both, to the amount of $500, where the same is assessed against them by the authority of the corporation under the control of which they are doing fire duty, and all exempt firemen are entitled to the same exemption at the place where they have served and become exempt. Under that act a list of all active and exempt firemen must be made by the clerk of the city, borough or township, or such other municipal or other officer having charge of the records, showing what persons are active or exempt firemen, and that certificate must be given to the assessor before the time of assessment closes, which is by State law the twelfth of August, but earlier in cities and towns. A like copy must be given to the collector or receiver of taxes also. The chief of each fire department or such officer as has control of the records, should see that the certificate is made out, certified and delivered to the assessor and collector.

By the act of 1889, page 19, exempt firemen are entitled, upon the production of a certificate under the hand and seal of the Clerk of any county in this State, setting forth that the exempt certificate of any such exempt firemen is duly filed in the office of such Clerk, to the same exemption anywhere else in the State that he may move to, that he would have where he became exempt. An exempt fireman is also entitled to relief from the local relief fund in the place of service in which he became exempt, and if the exempt firemen form an association they will be entitled to send representatives to the board of representatives of the local relief association in like manner as the various companies send representatives now.

OLYMPICS AND CRESCENTS MEET AT LAST.

The Former Win Both Games on Their Own Alleys.

There was blood on the moon Friday night, when the Crescent and Olympic bowling teams of this city met for the first time and rolled two of the scheduled games of the Central League Tournament. The Olympics won the first with bells on, as the score below shows, but the second game they only snatched from the grasp of the Crescents after a hard pull.

Naturally the Olympia alley, where the match was rolled, was crowded with rival partisans and a few ladies. The latter were choked with smoke and deafened with whistles and yells. Mr. Isaac Seeley, captain of the "Mondays," acted as umpire and called two fouls on Haven and one on Howe. Messrs Stevens and Emerson scored on the board for the Olympics and Crescents respectively, while Stover and Demarest kept the books.

The first game through the failure of Howe to uphold his reputation and the hard luck of Teel, was most disastrous for the Crescents. In spite of his two unfortunate fouls in the first game, however, Haven put up the highest score of all and also attained the top average of the evening. When the second game began there was determination in the way the Crescents went to work. They took the lead at the start and were 60 pins ahead on the third frame. But the Olympics were determined also, and when it was told that a friend of the Crescents had wagered $125 against $50 that the Olympics would lose, the latter started in to pull themselves up the hill. On the seventh frame they were still 53 behind, but on the next got within 18 of the leaders. On the ninth frame the Crescents led by only 8, and on the wind up Collier by doubling up the strikes won for the Olympics by two pins.

The scores were:

"HE DID EXACTLY RIGHT."

Mr. Marsh is so Fortunate as to Receive the Approval of an Editor From Somerville.

(From the Unionist-Gazette.)

Counselor Marsh of Plainfield was before a justice of the peace as a defendant last week. He had turned out of his office a man whom, he says, insulted both an employee of the office and himself.

We do not know just what are the precise facts in the case, but, if they are as Mr. Marsh states, he did exactly right in the premises.

It ought to be understood once for all, by everybody, that a man's office, as well as his house, is his castle against every one but the sheriff; and the only right another person has in it is by leave of the party who owns the place. The incomer is there upon his good behavior. If he raises a disturbance, or uses insulting and offensive language, he is to be asked to leave; if he will not go, hands may be laid upon him in other than apostolical fashion, and he may be put out. The law is well settled that the owner of any premises may use as much force as is necessary to remove therefrom one who has no right there; and if the intruder resist the attempt of the owner of the house to turn him out, he is guilty of assault.

When the case of Mr. Marsh came before the justice, the justice dismissed it with the quiet remark that if he had been in the Counselor's place he would have done likewise. He had a correct conception of the law, at least.

WESTFIELD SOMEWHAT REPUBLICAN.

But the Democrats Gain a Committeeman and a Commissioner of Appeal, and Retain the Offices of Clerk, Assessor and Constable.

The total vote cast at the Township election in Westfield, Tuesday, was 503. The Republican tickets numbered 285, and the Democratic, 218. The principal fight was made for Constable and a Commissioner of Appeal. The following were elected:

Town Clerk—Charles E. Clark, Democrat, 92 majority.

Assessor—J. M. C Marsh, Democrat, 281 majority. His opponent received a total of 102 votes.

Collector—A. K. Gale, Republican, 180 majority.

Freeholder—James T. Pierson, Republican, 168 majority.

Town Committee—Addison S. Clark, Democrat, 102 majority.

Constable—J. M. C Marsh, Democrat, 50 majority.

Commissioner of Appeal—Benjamin H. Woodruff, Democrat, 1 majority over Andrew A. Smith, Republican.

The Rev. Dr. Hurlbut at New Brunswick.

The Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut of this city, delivered an interesting and instructive lecture at the Pitman M. E. church in New Brunswick, on Thursday. His subject was, "The Ideal Young Christian." The Times of that city says: "Those who have heard Dr. Hurlbut have pronounced him as being a most instructive speaker. Mr. Hurlbut is one of the principal leaders of the Epworth League movement, which is becoming a great factor in Methodist church work."

The New Chautauqua Center.

Correspondence to THE PRESS from Buffalo says: "The central office of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle—that organization which has made Chautauqua a household word in the United States—has just taken commodious quarters in the Tucker Building in this city. More than a year ago Bishop Vincent, Chancellor of Chautauqua, became a resident of Buffalo, and partly in consequence of his presence here and partly for the sake of securing a more central headquarters the offices were removed from Plainfield, New Jersey.

"Under the new arrangement a consolidation of interests has been effected which cannot fail to strengthen greatly this wide-spread educational agency. The Chautauqua text-books under a new contract made at the last meeting of the Chautauqua Trustees will be published at a much cheaper price and in connection with The Chautauquan magazine at Meadville, Pa.

"Thus all the departments will be within easy communication and all under the general oversight of the Chancellor, whose interest and enthusiasm have not abated one whit since his election as Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church."

It Stands Alone.

There are many blood medicines advertised, but only one that is backed up by its manufacturers with a certificate of guarantee, and that one is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which is warranted to benefit or cure in all diseases for which it is recommended, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded. It cures all skin, scalp and scrofulous affections, sores and swellings, salt-rheum, tetter and kindred ailments.

BOROUGH ELECTION.

Considerable Interest Manifested in the Result, But the Entire Republican Ticket is Elected.

The annual election for Borough and Township officers of North Plainfield, took place Tuesday; the old adage, that "a stormy day is a Republican defeat," was reversed. In fact the Republican ticket was almost, if not all, elected in the Borough. There were three polling places, the Borough election being held in the shop adjoining Boyce's Hotel; the Township elections were held in Spencer's Hall and in Warren Engine house, the former being in the Second District, and the latter in the First.

The result of the Borough election is told below:

The City the Worst of the Violators.

THE PRESS threw a stone Friday at a certain city officer who allowed the snow to remain on the walk in front of his premises in direct violation of a city ordinance. But it seems the stone hit other city officers besides the one in mind, for the same reason.

Everyday some dozens of the people ask why the police—who they say have nothing else to do—don't compel the violators of the ordinance to clean their walks. Such inquirers don't seem to know the police in that particular.

The iciest, slushiest, filthiest piece of sidewalk in the whole city, is always to be found on Park avenue right in front of the Station House.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors was held March 5, at the Library building. Present, Messrs Job Male, M. W. Tyler, G. H. Babcock, J. Evarts Tracy, J. B. Dumont and W. M. Stillman.

The treasurer reported the sum of fifteen hundred and thirty-seven dollars and thirty-five cents to the credit of the general fund, and one hundred and fifty-four dollars to the credit of the special fund. The following resolutions were presented, and on motion adopted:

"Resolved, By this Board, and this Board hereby determines that the sum or amount of twenty-five hundred dollars is required in the year 1890 for the maintenance of the Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room under and pursuant to the act of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, entitled 'An act to authorize cities to establish and maintain free public libraries and reading rooms, approved March 14, 1879, and the act amendatory thereof, approved March 6, 1886.'

"Resolved, That the President of this Board forthwith certify to the Common Council of the City of Plainfield that the amount or sum of twenty-five hundred dollars will be required in the year 1890 for the maintenance of said Library and Reading Room."

On motion the following resolution was passed:

"Resolved, That the Secretary be and he hereby is directed to convey to Mr. Scott the thanks of the Board for the portrait of Mr. Male painted and presented by him to the Art Gallery."

Bad blood causes dyspepsia and dyspepsia reacts by causing bad blood. So both go on, growing worse, until the whole system is poisoned. The surest means of relief for the victim is a thorough and persistent course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Sorry It's Not So.

(From the Chronicle.)

The Plainfield Press a few evenings since printed the following item of news:

The Central Railroad has decided to erect a new freight house West of Bound Brook, nearly opposite the round house. The contracts have been given to local builders. The old freight house will be torn down and the site turned into a yard. It is rumored that the company will build a station near the new freight house.

Station Agent Frech of Bound Brook knows nothing about this and it is a rather improbable story. Likely it arose from the fact that the Philadelphia and Reading company is about to build a freight house at Bound Brook crossing, where the Lehigh Valley crosses its tracks.

The State Convention.

The twenty-first annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations of the State of New Jersey will be held at Morristown, March 13 to 16, inclusive, and a large number of delegates and others interested will be present from this city. Among the prominent speakers and association men who will be there, are the Rev. Henry Spellmeyer, D. D., James Bridle, Edwin F. See, William S. Sloan, Prof. W. R. Newton, Robert E. Spear, and Dwight L. Moody.

Among the topics to be presented for discussion will be those pertaining to district work, social work, progressive work, in Bible and training classes, financial support, educational work, and avenues of extension and development.

The Bible readings conducted by Mr. James Bridle, and the addresses by Mr. Moody, and the presentation of work for and by college men by Mr. Spear promises unusual usefulness and interest.

Parlor conferences will be held in the private homes of citizens of Morristown for the following classes of delegates: 1st, for Presidents and Directors; 2d, for college delegates; 3d, for railroad delegates; 4th, for members of district committees, and 5th, for delegates interested in boys' work. And at each one of these conferences topics pertaining to the special work of these departments will be discussed.

PERHAPS no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most distressing and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the multitude of modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - City Editor.

—Oh, for a Y. M. C. A. building.

—The date of Plainfield's swell Charity Ball at the Crescent, is fixed for Tuesday night, April 8.

—Ten o'clock Thursday night the thermometer registered only seventeen degrees above zero.

—If you want the finest imported English tricycle in this country, at a bargain, address this office.

—There are said to be quite a number of cases of scarlet fever in the city at present, mostly among children.

—Girls just let into society are wearing shorter gloves than last year. They hardly reach the [illegible] now.

—The thermometer was four degrees above zero at six o'clock Friday morning—the coldest morning thus far this Winter.

—There will be about $25 added to the extension fund of the Crescent Avenue church, from the proceeds of the recent concert.

—Mr John Tucker has received a carload of ice direct from Lake Champlain. The ice is of good quality and is about ten inches thick.

—The handsome new cigar image which designates Mr. John Haberle's store, on Somerset street, has just been painted in an artistic manner by Mr. William Sutton.

—A bill allowing two Justices of the Peace to decide on the merits of a criminal case before it is submitted to a Grand Jury, has been presented in the Legislature.

—Thus far fifty presbyteries of the Presbyterian church have voted on the question of revision of the Westminster confession of faith, and the victory seems to be with the Revisionists.

—In a practice game at the Crescent League bowling alleys, Thursday night Messrs H. Teel, C. Rogers, C. Teel, Harry VanEmburgh and Dr. Chas. R. Thiers scored a total of [illegible] points.

—During the Democratic primary held at Mount Bethel Hall, Saturday afternoon, the floor sank about six inches under the weight of the crowd and considerable excitement prevailed.

—Messrs A. M. Runyon & Son, the undertakers, have recently purchased a handsome team of black horses. The animals came from Upper New York State, and they are well matched.

—One of the cycler's journals says: "The Plainfield Bicycle Club has been riding the fair [illegible]. Enlisting the services of the fair they held a fair, and secured a fair sum for the club treasury."

—The blue bird and the robin have come, but their songs are but entirely free from sadness. Possibly they realize that there is yet time for the blizzard to bump itself and gripe them hip and thigh.

—Mrs. Flemming of Fourth street and Richmond, whose boy was one of those arrested and held for breaking into a railroad car and stealing crackers, says the boy was at church and Sunday school at the time.

—The new Borough Council will have the appointment of two members of the Board of Health, one in the place of the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, whose term expires, and one in place of the late Isaac Brokaw.

—The Central Railroad company has paid $1,200 to [illegible] Packenham, the horse-car driver who was badly hurt when his car was struck a few months ago by an express train, in settlement of his claim.

—The only thoroughly correct chronometer in town is the costly one just purchased by Caleb Dickinson, the jeweler, at 15 Park avenue. Watches and clocks regulated by it [illegible] vary three seconds in a month.

—The Elizabeth Journal may improve also in its spelling by careful attention to the columns of THE PRESS. There is only one "r" in the name of Hering, the present supervising engineer of the Plainfield Water Works.

—A meeting of the Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, was held Friday night, and among the attendants were two past Department Presidents, namely, Mrs. J. B. Atwood of Brooklyn and Mrs. Elizabeth Work, of Old Bridge.

—A festival for the benefit of the Emmanuel Baptist Mission, will be held in the Democratic Association rooms on West Front street, Thursday evening, March 13. The proceeds will go, it is said towards furnishing the hall.

—Mr. Edward Martin the carrier employed by the railroad company to transport the mails to Plainfield's postoffice, is just now as hot as the little red wagon that has been sent out for his use. He is very proud of himself and his new cart.

—Germs of scarlet fever, it is claimed were carried into a Rock View avenue residence in North Plainfield, by a box of candy sent through the mail. The germs it is alleged, developed, and several of the members of the family were laid up with the disease.

—The Elizabeth Herald says: "Mr. J. A. Oakley, Jr., of this city, is getting up the plans for two handsome buildings to be erected at Jamesburg, N. J., also just completing a row of buildings on Somerset street, Plainfield, being nearly a block in length and the handsomest row in Plainfield."

—The Christian Endeavor Union is the name of a new four-page journal published monthly under the auspices of the Young People's Christian Endeavor Societies of the First Baptist and Seventh Day Baptist churches of New Market and the Presbyterian church of Dunellen, and circulated free.

—Every day that the Journal of Elizabeth copies the Plainfield "news" from any paper but THE PRESS, it makes a blooming show of itself. It now states that "The first ball game of the season in Plainfield will be played on April 12th." It is presumed that April 13 is meant, yet that date is a Sunday.

—The grand fair, or Household Bazaar, for which the ladies of the Crescent Avenue chapel have been working for months, will be held in the new chapel on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, March 27, 28 and 29. It will open on Thursday evening with a New England supper, and there will be various attractions every day, and music every evening.

—Shortly after 10 o'clock Monday night, gas that had escaped probably from a leaky main, and accumulated in the outlet to the fire well at the corner of Somerset and Front streets, blew the cover off with a loud report, that was heard by Councilman [illegible] at "Netherwood," and by a commotion that rattled the windows for blocks around.

—In calling attention to the advertisement of the successors to G. F. & C. E. Brown & Co., we may say that the business on an enlarged scale is continued at the same place, 331 Canal street, New York, by Mr. George F. Brown's brother, Mr. J. Warren Brown, and Mr. C. Edward Brown, who during his trip last Fall to England and the Continent, picked up a number of good things in modern and Antique Decorations. His importation of English Ranges has been so successful that they have been obliged to cable for more of the same materials. They also manufacture Window Shades that roll straight.

PERSONALS.

The wife of Mr. Edward Campbell of Orchard place, is confined to the house by illness.

Among those who are ill of scarlet fever in Plainfield just now, is the infant child of Mr. John Mortimer.

During the past few weeks fifty-seven persons have united with the Methodist Episcopal church in this city.

The Rev. Dr. Hurlbut preached in the Wilson Memorial Chapel Sunday evening. His subject was, "Your Life is Hid."

Miss Ellen E. Nixon, one of the corps of public school teachers, entertained a number of her friends, Friday evening.

Gerald, the five-months-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. DeCourcy, of 66 East Second street, died Saturday morning at 3 o'clock.

Mr. James Cronan and family, and Mrs. Edgerton, have returned to their Summer home, after a Winter season in New York city.

Mr. Edward Searing of Madison avenue, has been confined to the house for a week past, by a severe strain to his back, which he sustained recently.

It is reported that Mr. Frank Vosseller, formerly of this city, but now of Chicago, Ill., was recently married to a very wealthy lady of that place.

Mr Charles P. Leggett officiated as organist at Trinity Reformed church, on Sunday, during both services, in the absence of Mr. Arthur L. Titsworth.

In the absence of the President, Vice President Wm. D. Murray will open the State Convention of the Y. M. C. A., at Morristown, Thursday evening, March 13.

Mrs. Isaac Brokaw has received from Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias the funeral benefit of $100 together with the sympathy of the Lodge in her great loss.

Mr. Harry P. Moore of Grove street, was last week elected a trustee of the Crescent League to fill the unexpired two-year term of Mr. A. W. Waldron, resigned.

Peter P. Randolph, a popular resident of Westfield, died a few days ago while on a business trip West. He leaves a wife and two children. His home was on South avenue.

Mr. Edward Nelson, whose condition has been so serious that his friends have been greatly concerned, is improving with gratifying steadiness under the care of his physician.

The funeral of Mr. A. T. TenEyck, took place from the late home of the deceased at Samptown on Friday afternoon at two o'clock. Interment was made in the Samptown cemetery.

Mr. Rudolph Hering, the supervising engineer appointed by the city to overlook the construction of its water works, was among the distinguished visitors at THE PRESS office, Tuesday.

Saturday, at the home of her parents, 423 Plane street, Newark, occurred the death of Mabel A., only child of Robert F. and Anna E. Reeve, and granddaughter of Mr. J. J. Sharp of this city.

The wedding will take place on Wednesday of next week, of John T. Cox and Miss Emma Conway, at 42 Plainfield avenue. The ceremony will be performed at 6:30 o'clock in the evening.

Mr. Ed. Marble—to whose gratuitous efforts, earnest sympathy and unequaled ability, was due most of the success of the late minstrel entertainment by the Crescent League—has been presented by the members with a purse of $50.

Mr. Mulford Estil has just purchased the beautiful residence property of Mr. George F. Brown, on Grove street, and will occupy it after the first of April. Because of her continued ill health, Mr. and Mrs. Brown will go to California.

Mr. Charles H. Potter of Westerly, R. I., is visiting his sister, Mrs. Robert Mitchell of No. 29 Grant avenue. Since his coming here Mr. Potter has presented his seven-year-old niece, a daughter of Mrs. Mitchell, with a handsome gold watch and chain.

Mr. Ed. Marble, of minstrel fame, begins today to drill the Class of '90 of Rutgers College in amateur minstrelsy. The performance will take place during the second week in April, and the members of the Crescent League of this city will probably go over in stages.

The death occurred Thursday at Los Angeles, California, of Mrs. Dr. Burlingham of this city. This sad news will be a great shock to the entire community who loved her for her her personal worth or revered her for her righteous life and character. Her death was at the home of Mrs. Allen Hale, formerly of this city, who Mrs. Burlingham was visiting.

Mr and Mrs. Joseph A. Haynes, of this city, are grandparents now. A little girl was born last week to their son, John C. Haynes, at his home in Annandale. The child represents the fifth living generation. Her great, great grandfather is living hale and hearty at the age of 96, and she has one or two great grandparents and lots of other grandparents besides.

Mr. Lemuel Wm. Serrell, of this city, consulting and constructing, mechanical and electrical engineer, has issued a business pamphlet full of interesting and instructive information regarding electricity, fuel, steam and power. Mr. Serrell is the designer of the machinery now manufactured by the "C. & C." electric motor company, and until his resignation some months ago, was Superintendent of the Daft Co.

Dr. Randolph Titsworth died at his home on East Front street at ten minutes before twelve o'clock on Saturday. The cause was pneumonia, and the sickness of a few days duration. He took communion at Trinity Reformed church Sunday March 2, and in the evening was in consultation with Dr. Rebecca Page over the case of Mrs. Amy Moore who has since died. Doctor Titsworth was seized with chills on his return home but did not send for a physician until the next day.

A large number of the members are already in the field with a big boom for Mr. Charles A. Reed as President of the Crescent League. He is the most popular man in the club and will undoubtedly be elected by a flattering majority. President Klob insists that his resignation of the office shall be accepted, although the members say "No" and have laid the matter over. Mr. Klob argues that a Plainfield club of one hundred resident members, should have a Plainfield man at its head.

Counselor McClure is one of the principal "hustlers"—and at the same time a most effective worker—for Charles A. Reed as President of the Crescent League. The latter, if he took into consideration his own preferences and the demands on his time of his large practice, would decline, but his friends won't let him. When Mr. Howard Emerson or any other as fit and popular a man is mentioned for President, Counselor McClure jumps up and down and swears that nobody's worthy of being even thought of for the office "alongside Deacon Reed."

A Brooklyn paper of last Thursday had this to say in its account of the Amphion Society's concert of the night before: "The baritone solo was sung by E. A. Swain, a well-known church singer of the Eastern District. It was a dainty number, the serenade of the lover being accompanied by a hidden chorus of male voices, and it was admirably sung both by soloist and chorus. Mr. Swain is careful not only with his music, but with the enunciation of his words as well, so that all of his text is easily to be followed." Mr. Swain is a son of Mr. Wm. Swain of this city, and for many years was a resident and business man of Plainfield.

Mr. Walter N Chamberlin of Madison avenue, has once more ventured outdoors after a siege of illness.

Mr. Louis Melville Evans, son of the late ex-Mayor Evans of this city, and Mrs. Evans, have gone South for a month's trip in their yacht "Sandanona."

For the office of Assessor in North Plainfield, Monday night, Messrs Chas. Lyman and John Vetterlein were the two candidates. Mr. Lyman ran well, having been beaten by only five votes.

A private letter from Chevalier George A. Bayard, of Westfield, who recently sailed for the South on a trip of recuperation, states: "I arrived in Savannah in good health and had a smooth passage."

Senator Miller was heard to remark at the Westfield polls, Tuesday, that he had probably cast his last vote in New Jersey. Regret at his loss to this county, especially, will be universally shared with THE PRESS by everybody.

The property at the East corner of Broadway and Sixth street, occupied by Dr. Utter and belonging to the Lee estate, has been purchased by Mr. J. Wesley Johnson who now owns the entire frontage on Broadway from LaGrande avenue to East Sixth street.

Mr. David P. Arnold was the purchaser of the homestead property Wednesday at the West corner of Seventh street and Arlington avenue. The price was $6,400, besides which the buyer will pay to the city about $200 of back taxes that are a lien on the property.

Mr George Wharton Edwards of this city has a very pretty story in the current issue of Harper's Young People. It is entitled "Yakey," and recounts a personal mid ocean experience in which the Captain's sturdy cabin boy saved the steamship from collision with an iceberg, when others failed in their duty. The story is illustrated by the author.

Mr. Edward C. Pease, of Park place, North Plainfield, a member of Dr. Yerkes' church and an earnest and effective Christian worker, was last Sunday elected Superintendent of the Warren Mission Sunday school. The Mission is to be congratulated upon Mr. Pease's consent to serve. Its influence and the results of its work will be greatly increased.

Miss Blanche Fellows, of Albany, a niece of Mrs. J. M. Bettman of Washington Park, has been engaged as leading soloist in the choir of Dr. Ketcham's church. It was so stated exclusively in these columns the other day, and as a consequence a number attended church last Sunday to hear the talented vocalist. It should have been noted that her engagement begins on the 4th of May.

VERY SUDDEN DEATH.

A Prominent North Plainfielder Passes Away After Only an Hour's Warning.

Nathaniel J. Martin, aged 72 years, died at 3 o'clock Monday morning, at his home, 72 Somerset street. He ate a hearty supper Sunday night, went to bed in his usual good health and fell asleep calmly.

His wife was aroused about two o'clock by her husband's sufferings. He complained of a terrible pressure about his heart, and of his inability to breath freely. Dr. Tomlinson was summoned but the unfortunate man was dead within an hour after he was taken ill, conscious to the last.

He was a large fleshy man, and has had similar attacks before. Heart failure is given as the cause of death. He leaves a wife, one son and a daughter. No man was more highly esteemed in the community, and no family has more cause to feel the loss of father and husband, than his. The funeral was held at the house, Thursday at twelve o'clock noon.

More Than Some Churches Raise in a Dozen Years.

The offering in the Crescent Avenue church, yesterday morning, was for the Board of Foreign Missions for work in heathen lands. The collection amounted to over one thousand dollars.

Plainfield is Too Well Known.

Plainfield is a city of about 9,000 inhabitants. But it has no location upon the large map published in 1888 by the U. S. Land Office. This map, says a Somerville paper, is presumed to locate every notable place in this country. "What is the matter with our sister city?"

A Local Circle's Programme.

The 111th meeting of the local circle of the C. L. S. C., will be held at the home of Miss Randolph, 46 West Second street, Wednesday evening of next week. The programme will be:

Roman Empire in the time of Nero.
Miss Carrie Randolph
Vespasian and Titus..........Mr. Sperry.
Virgil..........Miss A. G. Hasbrouck.
Recess Music
Logarithms..........Miss Ackon.
Italian Republics in the Middle Ages.

A Valuable Piece of Pottery.

Mrs. Wilson Fulper of North avenue, has on exhibition in Messrs Woolston & Buckle's store a very valuable piece of pottery known as a rose jar. The jar is about eighteen inches high, of Mosaic design and contains over two thousand separate pieces of chinaware, glass, etc., all of which are put together with putty. Some of the china in pieces came from Postmaster-General Wanamaker's own table. The jar is considered more valuable from the fact that some of the pieces are over one hundred years old. It can be seen in Messrs Woolston & Buckle's show window for a few days longer.

Ex-Councilman Marsh Fighting for a Firm of Brewers.

Mr. F. E. Marsh of this city, Tuesday morning appeared before Vice Chancellor VanFleet at Newark, and made a motion to dismiss the bill filed by Charles Weiss against the Enterprise Brewing company, to have said company enjoined from giving a deed to the Home Brewing company, who recently purchased their brewery, until they pay him the commission he claims to be due him on such sale.

It appears that Weiss claimed to have a contract with the company for the sale of the brewery, which the company denies. Mr. Marsh asked for the dismissal of the bill for want of equity. The Vice Chancellor, while admitting that there was no equity in the bill, gave counsel for Weiss until 2 P. M., today to amend his bill.

Week-Night Worship.

For many years it has been the custom of a few house holders in North Plainfield to open their homes for week-night meetings of religious worship. Like all such movements, time brings changes and improvements upon the quaint old method. Recently the "Gospel Band," a new feature, have taken charge of these meetings and imparted new life and activity, especially in their singing and knowledge of Scripture truth.

Tuesday night one of these meetings was held at the residence of Mrs. Voehl. The room was full, and the singing with the aid of instrumental music, was especially helpful. The scripture was briefly handled as an educator, and the result of all was especially evidenced in the expressions of strong desires for spiritual advancement.

—Information in regard to the Y. M. C. A. State Convention to be held at Morristown, March 13 to 16, may be obtained at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, or from Messrs W. D. Murray [illegible] of the State Committee, and Mr. [illegible] of the District Committee.

Mellin's Food is not the bulky, indigestible product of the miller or baker, but is the result of skillful manipulation, by careful and uniform chemical processes based upon scientific principles; it is a soluble dry powder, made from wheat and malted barley, and is the concentration of nourishing properties.

ISAAC BROKAW'S FUNERAL.

Impressive Services at the First Baptist Church Thursday Afternoon—Interment Made in Evergreen Cemetery.

There were sad and impressive funeral services enacted at the First Baptist church at two o'clock Thursday afternoon over the remains of the late Isaac Brokaw for many years past Assessor of the Borough and Township of North Plainfield. The burial was made with military honors, members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., Jerusalem Lodge No. 26, F. and A. M., Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., and delegates from other secret societies all of which the deceased was prominently identified with, attending in a body. The Plainfield Cornet Band and the members of Winfield Scott Post, of which Mr. Brokaw was Commander at the time of his death, marched to the house on Duer street, at half-past one o'clock and escorted the body to the church, where a large congregation was in waiting to assist, by their presence, in the services.

The pall-bearers were all Past Post Commanders including Dr. W. E. Mattison, Capt. Wm. Hand, J. A. Atwood, Wr. Addis, F. V. Z. Stryker and W. B. Wyckoff, the latter of Post No. 75 of Somerville.

The service at the house was of short duration, but at the church the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes paid a fitting and loving tribute to Mr. Brokaw whom he characterized as a man of sterling worth.

Dr. Yerkes first read the funeral service and then spoke feelingly of the growing grace of the departed, and of the steadily increasing strength of his faith. The last words of the dying man were: "I am tired now, and going to sleep. I may not awake again in this World. If not I will awake with Jesus." The subjects of the minister's remarks were, first, the "uncertainties" of this life, and then the certainty of the future for those who loved God and served him.

Among the floral designs was a Maltese cross from the Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, Auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post; a broken column from the Free Masons; a floral G. A. R. badge and flag from Winfield Scott Post, with the words "Our Commander" inscribed thereon, together with a beautiful design from the Odd Fellows.

At the grave the services of the Grand Army were performed by acting Commander Chas. B. Stevens, assisted by Officer of the Day, I. McVoy. Three volleys were fired over the grave after which the mourners and members of the various societies departed.

Interment was made in Evergreen cemetery.

Death of Mrs. Isaac P. Brown.

At her home on Broadway this city, Mrs. Susan C. Brown died suddenly, Thursday, in the 80th year of her age. She was the wife of Mr. Isaac P. Brown. The funeral services were held at the house, Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock. Interred Monday morning at Union, N. J.

The estimable woman died of heart disease as quietly as if falling asleep. She laid back in her chair, gave a slight gasp and passed away. She was of a particularly lovable nature and dear to the hearts of hosts of friends who unite with the bereaved husband in sincerely mourning her loss. Mr. E. P. Thorn is a nephew of the dead woman's.

A Small Fire.

Between 5 and 6 o'clock Friday evening, fire was discovered in the one-and-a-half story frame building, situated in the rear of and adjoining Mr. Daniel Sommers' barn and wagon houses on Peace street. The fire burned briskly and when the firemen arrived, in response to a general alarm sent out, the upper portion of the building was enveloped in flames.

Chief Doane and his assistants directed the movements of the firemen, and in a short time the fire was under control. Gazelle Engine No. 1 took water from the well at Park avenue and Second street, while No. 2 Engine was located along the raceway at the foot of Stiger alley.

The building was used for storage purposes, but most of the movable material was taken out and conveyed to a place of safety. The structure belonged to Mr. Robert Meeker. It was damaged to the extent of about $150.

Attacked By a Highwayman.

Charles Barber was seized by a highwayman on West Fourth near New street, Monday evening between 11 and 12 o'clock. He grabbed Barber fiercely by the collar of his heavy coat and demanded his "money or his life." It was very dark and Barber could not make out whether the assailant was white or black. Being unarmed he could only struggle to escape.

The highwayman pulled Barber's coat off his back, but slipped in the mud and fell. Barber says he "Thought a good run was better than a bad stand," so he made tracks for the home of Dr. Rushmore by whom he is employed. The doctor upon opening the door found Barber shaking with excitement, entirely out of breath and covered with mud. The case was reported to the Chief of Police.

Killed By the Cars.

Daniel Gill, a young man about twenty-one years of age, who was employed by Mr. C. K. Compton, the baker and confectioner, of West Front street, was killed by the cars while on the way to his home at Netherwood, about 9:30 o'clock Friday night, his skull being crushed in and the left leg entirely severed from the body.

Although there were no eye-witnesses to the accident it is supposed that the young man attempted to board an East-bound coal train, drawn by Engine No. 366, when he slipped and fell under the wheels with the above result. The body when discovered, was taken to the freight house on a stretcher, and later Morgue-keeper Patrick Casey took charge of the remains.

The young man was the second oldest son of a widowed mother who, with her five children, three sons and two daughters, occupy a house near the Netherwood station. The oldest son works at Seguine's livery stable and a younger brother works for Frank Day.

Captain Morrison and Mr. Titsworth Speak.

There was a fair attendance in Reform Hall Sunday night. President Harper occupied the chair, Chaplain Honeyman conducted the devotional services, and the choir, under the leadership of Mr. King, with Miss Alice Smith as accompanist, rendered the music.

The first speaker was Mr. Alexander Titsworth, who in well chosen language extolled the blessed fruits of temperance, right action, the value of true friendship, home happiness, and the saving results of religious faith and living. He was followed by Captain George D. Morrison in a similar strain of opposition to the liquor evil. Captain Morrison vividly portrayed his ocean experiences, drawing therefrom moral lessons of great interest, and spoke in detail of both sea and land sharks, the last named being venders of intoxicating drink who seek the ruin of many a poor sailor. Deep religious sentiment pervaded the remarks of the Captain, and he urged as the only anchor of hope and preservation an abiding dependence upon the Lord Jesus. Both speakers commanded unbroken attention. The meeting closed with a touching prayer from the lips of Captain Morrison.

Miss Bessie H. Bodine, of Burlington, Vt., had a disease of the scalp which caused her hair to become very harsh and dry and to fall so freely she scarcely dared comb it. Ayer's Hair Vigor gave her a healthy scalp, and made the hair beautifully thick and glossy.

BAD WEATHER AND A COLD AUDIENCE.

Although Deserving a Better Fate, the Second Concert of the Choral Society Was Not so Successful as the First.

There was a larger chorus but a smaller audience at the second of the Choral Society's concerts, Thursday, at Music Hall. Although every carriage, stage and other vehicle on wheels was brought into use, many were still kept at home by the bad weather under foot.

It was a cold, cold audience, too. Nothing was received with sincere rapture, and the main part of the applause came as a means of relief from those who were tired of sitting still. The selections merited greater favor, but possibly the majority of those present were not aware of the fact. The only part song of which a repetition was insisted on, was Pearson's "Three Doughtie Men." It was well rendered but not deserving of the only encore the Chorus received. But then, the words were so funny and their spelling so quaint.

The soloists included Mrs Sarah Baron-Anderson, a woman of charming manners with a contralto voice of perfect purity, and, in the lower tones especially, very rich. She was heartily encored, as was also Mr. Townsend H. Fellows, baritone. His first selection seemed to be a badly chosen one for the occasion. Yet one of the fair sex present whispered, "Let's encore him and maybe he'll sing something nice." Mr Fellows displayed a fine voice, even throughout, and of remarkable flexibility as shown by his perfect rendition of the encore piece of the second part.

Mr. William Ward Stephens was also well received. In his case as in those of the other soloists, the most pleasing selections were given as encores. His playing of Moszkowski's "Serenata" was charming. Mr. Stephens' soli included works of Liszt, Schumann, Gottschalk and Greig, so well rendered as to show his familiarity with and ability to interpret a wide range of piano composition. If there can be any fault found with Mr. Stephens, it is that he lacks at times that measured recurrence of accent that marks the character and expression of the music.

The songs of the Chorus were first, "Lord Ullin's Daughter," sung with expression and in which the attacks were rather good. Next was a five-part madrigal, particularly sweet but too quiet to be appreciated so early in the programme. Streleski's "Dreams," arranged as a part song by Mr. Fitzhugh, was sung as well as possible, in true ballad style; but Mendelssohn's "Lord, How Long wilt Thou Forget Me?" was the most perfectly sung of the evening's selections. Mrs. Anderson rendered the solos effectively, the choral was very good and the fugue parts clear and well defined. The closing selection, "Boatman's Good Night," by Schira, was one of the best sung with the exception of the syncopated parts. The expression was excellent, but ability to sing a syncopation well must be born in one and cannot be inbred by a few rehearsals.

The part song for female voices, "To Daffodils," was commendably rendered; and if the rumor is true that it had only two rehearsals, it deserves unqualified praise. But the men in their part song, "Rose Marie," did not acquit themselves nearly so well. The parts were not well balanced and the intonation was bad. When it is noticed that the majority of the selections of the programme included in their words sentiments of death or supplications of the dying, the frigidity of the occasion will be thus accounted for by the frivolous. There can be no doubt, however, that in one particular the second concert far excelled the first. It was—the piano.

THE LAST EARTHLY TRIBUTE.

Beautiful and Impressive Funeral Ceremonies Over the Late Dr. Titsworth.

All that was mortal of the late Dr. Randolph Titsworth was laid away to rest Tuesday afternoon, when funeral services were held at the family home on East Front street. The remains occupied a beautiful casket in the room formerly used as an office by the doctor. The house was thronged with mourners. The services were opened by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, with whom, at the Trinity Reformed church, the late Dr. Titsworth was a most earnest worker. After reading appropriate passages of Scripture, Mr. Schenck asked the privilege of departing from the usual form of ceremony and delivered an impressive eulogy on the deceased. His remarks were a most fitting tribute and contained high encomiums on the character and life of the departed, as a man, as a physician, as a husband, as a father, as a Christian. He was followed by the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, who addressed a brief homily to the living. He drew from the manner of living of the deceased lessons appropriate for those left behind, and closed with a most beautiful and affecting prayer, making touching reference to the daughter unable, on account of illness, to be present, and the aged mother, with stopped ears and sightless eyes, awaiting patiently her call to join her first born and other loved ones with the Master.

When the remains were exposed to view every one made a solemn circuit of the coffin, and gazed for the last time at the features of the departed. There was a sound of great sobbing, and many tears were shed. Among those paying their last respects were many of our first citizens and many brother physicians of the deceased. After the services the remains were taken to Hillside cemetery, where they were interred in the family plot.

The casket was doubly beautiful in its simplicity. The covering was of black cloth, and instead of separate handles a long silver bar ran along each side. The silver plate bore the simple inscription RANDOLPH TITSWORTH.

The only floral emblem laid on the casket was a large cluster of calla lilies—one of the most beautiful, loveliest and purest of symbols.

The pall-bearers—chosen before death by the late Dr. Titsworth—were Messrs B. A. Hegeman, Sr., P. P. VanArsdale, O. W. Dunham, Geo. L. VanEmburgh, W. D. W. Miller and A. L. Force.

The mother of the late Dr. Titsworth is still living, at the age of 88, in Piscataway.

AN ASTROLOGIST DEAD.

A Renowned Fortune Teller of North Plainfield Now Knows Her Own Future.

Mme. Benard, known to all the old residents of the city and borough, died at her home on Harmony street, North Plainfield, Monday, in her 74th year. She is widely renowned as a fortune teller, and scores of the young women, especially, of this vicinity, have had their future revealed by her.

For almost twenty years under her name has appeared an advertisement in the Constitutionalist, thus worded: "Astrologist, residence—Harmony street, North Plainfield, fourth house from Somerset street, left hand side. Information imparted as regards present and future events, likewise marriages, journeys, law suits, etc. Satisfaction guaranteed. She converses in English, German and French. My husband is a first-class Cooper, and repairs tubs, pails, barrels, etc., cheap for cash."

—Ex-Postmaster Ritchie was defeated for Freeholder in Fanwood Township, Tuesday, by over 100 votes.

THE PLAINFIELD AUXILIARY.

Its Work for the McAll Mission During the Past Year.

The Plainfield Auxiliary of the McAll Mission, Paris, held its annual meeting in the Library, on Tuesday morning, March 4. After the regular monthly meeting, the officers retired from their places, and Mrs. G. Terry, Hon. Vice President of the Society, took the chair and conducted the elections, which resulted as follows: President—Mrs. A. Baldwin; Secretary—Mrs. C. S. Munn; Treasurer—Mrs. J. G. Foster; and a representation of 55 ladies as Vice Presidents and managers from the different churches in town.

The retiring Secretary read the annual report. Some items in it may be interesting to our town's people, for this mission work is so largely represented by the churches that we claim for it a warm place in the hearts of the philanthropic workers. A vote was passed to publish the report in toto, but the ex-Secretary takes the liberty of sparing such an imposition both upon publisher and reader. This Auxiliary of the "mission populaire" in Paris, is in its 5th year. It is a "vine" planted by Madame le Gay, in October 1885, and was organized by Mrs. L. Myers, November 2, 1885. The wooden wedding is almost here, and it may be well, thus far in advance, to say, modestly to our patrons, that we have resolved to have all our weddings golden ones. So large gifts will be expected in gold next November.

From a first membership of 75, we have increased to 181. The first year the Society sent $280 to Paris. Last year we sent $461.19 and this year, only just missed of sending over $500. By our own individual effort, we have raised more this year—than any previous one—without any outside assistance—the sum is $364 50, as against $280 last year. The amount sent to Paris last year was greater, owing to a larger balance being on hand from the previous year, and owing to a collection of $142 being received from Crescent Avenue church, which this year we did not get. Taking all this into consideration we feel proud of our effort, and say heartily that progress has been made.

We desire to express our thanks to the daily newspapers for publishing all notices and articles free of charge. Also for making reductions in work ordered by us. We want to thank the managers for the admirable, earnest work they have done during the year. We want to thank all who have encouraged us. As officers, we thank each other for the harmony and cordial feeling that has continually existed between us.

The French need help; the protestant element in France is not strong enough to give its adherents all the nourishment they need. We all must help them. England takes the lead in providing the Helm, which steers the Word of God straight on to victory and glory. We must take an oar, and while we listen to catch the music of all the Auxiliary oars, as they plash in the waters, sometimes calm, sometimes troubled, our aim is to drop them altogether, in unison, making the music that stirs men's souls, for it tells them they have a soul, and they have it to save.

"The greatest servants of humanity are those who by embodying a noble ideal of life, constantly reenforce the faith of those who are feebler in the possibility of such a life; reconcile them to the hard conditions of their own existence and inspire them with a faith which of themselves they could not achieve."

Robert McAll does this. His workers follow on. We, from our distance look with admiration and thankfulness and with our money are the wheel within the wheel which keeps the movements going.

Look longingly, lovingly, helpfully to Paris for the new year beginning today in this Auxiliary. Let this coming year's record be all that is included in service; purity, truth, love in us, to give to others purity, truth, love.

Serve—Woman whom I love 'ere noon be high
'ere the long shadow lengthen at thy feet.
Work—I have many poor, O man, that cry: my little ones do languish in the street.
Love—'Tis a time for love, since I love thee.
Live—'Tis a time to live, man, live in me."

THE POST OFFICE MUST GO.

A Saloon in the Present Location Disqualifies it for Occupancy by the Government.

The United States Attorney General's opinion received by Postmaster Force, recently, is to the effect that as a saloon has been opened in the building now occupied by the Postoffice in this city, the Government will be a tenant no longer. Tuesday Inspector Parham came to Plainfield, looked into the matter and decided at once that another location for the post office must be found.

In THE PRESS appears the Government's advertisement for sealed proposals of buildings properly furnished for the purposes of a postoffice. Blanks on which to make bids may be procured by applying to Postmaster Force. The Government will undoubtedly select the best location and building offered. Better facilities in many ways are now necessary to accommodate the growth of the office since Postmaster Force's term, and especially for the free delivery system established in Plainfield by him.

The 100 Names are Obtained.

The public meeting to organize the Boys Club will be called next week. Arrangements are being made to have an interesting and enthusiastic one. It will be held in Reform Hall, probably on the 21st inst. Keep yourselves disengaged for that evening. We want all.

The Finest Pantaloons Ever Shown in This City.

The handsome new pantaloons that Watson & Co. are now showing are all cut from confined styles of merchant tailoring goods, and cannot be found outside of their concern. Five dollars will give you a wide selection of styles, but they also carry a full stock of the grades that merchant tailors make to order for $10 and $12 a pair, and these they sell for $7 and $8. See them; they are finer goods than are cut by any other concern, and embrace the choicest productions of the best looms in the world and all have sufficient weight to fit perfect, keep their shape and put on now. Whatever you want in the pantaloon line it is safe to buy from Watson & Co., as they have everything that is new and fashionable in every size, and mark down daily all lots in which their sizes are broken to $5, no matter what they cost. See samples in window next to Market street.—Newark Press.

—The story recently published in a New York paper respecting old Sam Perry, flagman at Fanwood cut, and which was copied by Plainfield papers, proves to be without foundation. The old man was reported to have been garroted by a tramp.

—It is told in the Elizabeth Journal that "The Pierson Hardware company, with a capital of $11,000, is a new corporation at Plainfield. The incorporators are James C. Pierson of Newark, James C. Pierson, Jr., and Hattie C. Pierson, of Plainfield."

Blessing of Sleep.

DR. Bound Brook to Have a New Lodge.

It is said that a Council of the Jr. Order of United American Mechanics will soon be instituted at Bound Brook. What is the matter with Westfield and Somerville in letting Bound Brook get ahead of them?

A New Church for Bound Brook.

Ground has been broken for the new Catholic church, which is to be built on the corner of Mountain avenue and Second street, Bound Brook. It is the site of the old church building, which has been removed, and will after a while be used for the school. The church will be a handsome white stone structure. It will cost about $20,000.

Justice Kyte's All Right.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In reply to the article in today's PRESS under the heading "Why Were They Discharged?" I would state simply because the complainant refused to press the charge.

Very respectfully,
GEORGE KYTE,
Justice of the Peace.

Necessary to File Maps.

The plan of a dam at Seely's mills, Scotch Plains, showing flood gates and cross section of dam, has been filed at the Somerset County Clerk's office at Somerville. This is the only plan of this description on file, although, under the law of 1883, all persons building dams in which there are flood gates are required to file a map and specifications of them. No doubt many owners of such property have neglected to do this, and their attention is now called to this law, as it may save future litigation.

A Novel Church Entertainment.

One of the latest novelties in church entertainments says an exchange, is the shoe social. The ladies are all arranged behind a screen so that only their shoes can be seen by the men. The price generally ranges from 15 to 50 cents, and the purchaser has no idea whose shoes he has selected. But when he claims the purchased property he receives the wearer also and conducts her to supper, and supplies her with other delicacies as she will accept them. Of course, the size of the foot is not indicative of the capacity of the owner for storing away the delicacies.

Not That Kind of a Man.

SCOTCH PLAINS, March 7, 1890.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS: I desire through the columns of THE PRESS to deny the statement made in the New York World of March 6, that I was one of a party to assault a Mrs. Buck of New Providence, N. J., on the night of February 26, 1890, which case came up before Justice Kyte of Scotch Plains later. No such assault was made by me, or the parties with me at the time alleged, and no such charge was contained in the warrant issued for assault and disorderly conduct, as published. All I desire in the matter is to set myself right before the public regarding this misstatement of assault upon a woman.

Catarrh

IS a blood disease. Until the poison is expelled from the system, there can be no cure for this loathsome and dangerous malady. Therefore, the only effective treatment is a thorough course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla—the best of all blood purifiers. The sooner you begin the better; delay is dangerous.

"I was troubled with catarrh for over two years. I tried various remedies, and was treated by a number of physicians, but received no benefit until I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles of this medicine cured me of this troublesome complaint and completely restored my health."—Jesse M. Boggs, Holman's Mills, N. C.

"When Ayer's Sarsaparilla was recommended to me for catarrh, I was inclined to doubt its efficacy. Having tried so many remedies, with little benefit, I had no faith that anything would cure me. I became emaciated from loss of appetite and impaired digestion. I had nearly lost the sense of smell, and my system was badly deranged. I was about discouraged, when a friend urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and referred me to persons whom it had cured of catarrh. After taking half a dozen bottles of this medicine, I am convinced that the only sure way of treating this obstinate disease is through the blood."—Charles H. Maloney, 113 River st., Lowell, Mass.

The New Era Washer

Is a simple, easy and practical application of the ONLY principle ever known, discovered or practiced in washing clothes, viz: the forcing of water through the article to be cleansed.

From the old "pounding-barrel" down through all the improvements in Washing Machines, washing boards, etc., to the present day, this one principle is recognized and acted upon as the actual cleansing process. Rubbing on a washboard is not cleansing (else rub them when dry) it is simply one process (and a tiresome one) of forcing the water through just that portion of the article that is subjected to the pressure of the hand; therefore every part of each article must be brought under that pressure to be cleansed; whereas, by the NEW ERA WASHER, every stroke of the piston or plunger forces two quarts of water (suds) through six or eight inches thickness of clothes, laid in the bottom of the tub; and this, too, with no more muscular effort than one rub of the hands from the top to the bottom of the washboard!

But as practical demonstration is more convincing to many than published statements, we leave the acceptance of the foregoing to those who are willing to obtain a correct knowledge before forming a conclusion in this matter. See large circulars for further particulars.

J. M. PICKELL, Esq., No. 111 WEST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J., Local Agent for this section, will respond to inquiries, and also to a limited number of applications per week, to give a practical illustration of the working and merits of the NEW ERA WASHER.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"WOULD YOU LIKE TO LIVE YOUR LIFE OVER AGAIN?"

An Able Discourse from the Text: "All That a Man Hath Will He Give for His Life," Job ii, 4—Don't Look to the Past, but Gaze Forward Into the Future.

BROOKLYN, March 9.—The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., preached in the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, this morning, to an overflowing congregation. After expounding appropriate passages of Scripture he announced his subject to be: "Would You Like to Live Your Life Over Again?" His text was Job ii, 4: "All that a man hath will he give for his life." He said:

That is untrue. The Lord did not say it, but Satan said it to the Lord, when the evil one wanted Job still more afflicted. The record is: "So went Satan forth from the presence of the Lord and smote Job with sore boils." And Satan has been the author of all eruptive disease since then, and he hopes by poisoning the blood to poison the soul. But the result of the diabolical experiment which left Job victor proved the falsity of the Satanic remark: "All that a man hath will he give for his life." Many a captain who has stood on the bridge of the steamer till his passengers got off and he drowned; many an engineer who has kept his hand on the throttle valve or his foot on the brake until the most of the train was saved, while he went down to death through the open drawbridge; many a fireman who plunged into a blazing house to get a sleeping child out, sacrificing his life in the attempt, and thousands of martyrs who submitted to fiery stake and knife of massacre and headsman's ax and guillotine rather than surrender principle, have proved that in many a case my text was not true, when it says: "All that a man hath will he give for his life."

But Satan's falsehood was built on a truth. Life is very precious, and, if we would not give up all, there are many things we would surrender rather than surrender it. We see how precious life is from the fact that we do everything to prolong it. Hence all sanitary regulations, all study of hygiene, all fear of draughts, all waterproofs, all doctors, all medicines, all struggles in crisis of accident. An admiral of the British navy was court-martialed for turning his ship around in time of danger and so damaging the ship. It was proved against him. But when his time came to be heard he said: "Gentlemen, I did turn the ship around and admit it was damaged; but do you want to know why I turned it? There was a man overboard, and I wanted to save him, and I did save him, and I consider the life of one sailor worth all the vessels of the British navy." No wonder he was vindicated. Life is indeed very precious.

[illegible]

[illegible] in November.

Beside that, would you want to risk the temptations of life over again? From the fact that you are here I conclude that though in many respects your life may have been unfortunate and unrewarded, you have got on so far tolerably well, if nothing more than tolerable. As for myself, though my life has been far from being as consecrated as I would like to have had it, I would not want to try it over again, lest next time I would do worse. Why, just look at the temptations we have all passed through, and just look at the multitudes who have gone completely under. Just call over the roll of your schoolmates and college mates, the clerks who were with you in the same store or bank, or the operatives in the same factory with just as good prospects as you, who have come to complete ruin. [illegible]

[illegible]

Beside all this, do you know if you could have your wish and live life over again it would put you so much further from reunion with your friends in heaven? If you are in the noon of life or the evening of life you are not very far from the golden gate at which you are to meet your transported and emparadised loved ones. [illegible] been good. His eyesight for this world has got somewhat dim, but his eyesight for heaven is radiant. His hearing is not so acute as it once was and he must bend clear over to hear what his little grandchild says when she asks him what he has brought for her. But he easily catches the music rolled from supernal spheres. Men passing in the streets take off their hats in reverence and women say: "What a good old man he is." Seventy or eighty years all for God and for making this world happy. Splendid! Glorious! Magnificent! He will have hard work getting into heaven because those whom he helped to get there will fill up and crowd the gates to tell him how glad they are at his coming until he says: "Please to stand back a little till I pass through and cast my crown at the feet of him whom having not seen I love." I do not know what you call that. I call it the harvest of Genesee wheat.

Out yonder is a man very old at forty years of age, at a time when he ought to be buoyant as the morning. He got bad habits on him very early and those habits have become worse. He is a man on fire, on fire with alcoholism, on fire with all evil habits, out with the world and the world out with him. Down and falling deeper. His swollen hands in his threadbare pockets and his eyes fixed on the ground, he passes through the street, and the quick step of an innocent child or the strong step of a young man or the roll of a prosperous carriage maddens him, and he curses society and he curses God. Fallen sick with no resources he is carried to the almshouse. A loathsome spectacle, he lies all day long waiting for dissolution, or in the night rises on his cot and fights apparitions of what he might have been and of what he will be. He started life with as good a prospect as any man on the American continent, but there he is a bloated carcass, waiting for the shovels of public charity to put him five feet under. He has only reaped what he sowed. Harvest of wild oats! "There is a way that seemeth right to a man, but the end thereof is death." Young man, as you cannot live life over again, however you may long to do so, be sure to have your one life right. There is in this august assembly I am sure, for we are made up of all sections of this land and from many lands, some young man who has gone away from home and perhaps under some little spite or evil persuasion of another, and his parents know not where he is. My son, go home! Do not go to sea! Don't go to-night where you may be tempted to go. Go home! Your father will be glad to see you, and your mother, I need not tell you how she feels. How I would like to make your parents a present of their wayward boy, repentant and in his right mind. I would like to write them a letter and you to carry the letter saying: "By the blessing of God on my sermon I introduce to you one whom you have never seen before, for he has become a new creature in Christ Jesus." My boy, go home and put your tired head on the bosom that nursed you so tenderly in your childhood years. A young Scotchman was in battle taken captive by a band of Indians and he learned their language and adopted their habits. Years passed on, but the old Indian chieftain never forgot that he [illegible] tail. If the stems are handled the leaves rustle and move unsteadily for a time. If this queer plant is moved from one pot to another it seems angry, and the leaves stand out in all directions like quills on a porcupine. A most pungent and sickening odor, said to resemble that given off by rattlesnakes when annoyed, fills the air, and it is only after an hour or so that the leaves fold in the natural way.

The recently opened electric tramway connecting Clermont-Ferrand with Royat is only a mile and a half long, but on it are thirteen stations. The generating plant comprises a 150 horse power Farcot engine and a six pole separately excited Thury dynamo, giving 330 amperes and 300 volts at 375 revolutions. The current is taken to the cars by an overhead conductor, the rails acting as return. Each car is driven by a 40 horse power Thury motor. The normal speed is eight miles an hour.

The names of the principal mountains in the world are nearly all suggestive or descriptive of their snow covered summits. The names of Snowdon, Ben Nevis, Mont Blanc, the Sierra Nevada, Snaefell in Iceland and in the Isle of Man, the Sneeuw Bergen at the Cape of Good Hope, the Snehatten in Norway, and the Weissberg, the Weisshorn and the Tete Blanche in Switzerland, White mountains in New Hampshire, as well as the more archaic or more obscure names of Lebanon, of Caucasus, and of the Himalayas, are appellations descriptive, in various languages, of the characteristic snowy covering of their lofty summits.

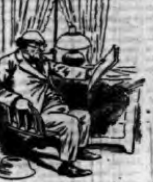
GETTING HIS LEG PULLED.

A Bench-Legged Negro Works Judge Prime for a Silk Hat.

The Judge Got the Best of It at First and the Darkey Made Fun for the Dogs—"He Who Laughs Last Laughs Best."

COPYRIGHT 1890.

A Supreme Judge of one of the Southern States was sitting in his library one morning, pondering over a cow-stealing case that had come up from an obscure county, when a servant entered and announced that a man wished an interview.



IT WAS A COW CASE.

"What sort of a man?" the Judge asked.

"A cullud gen'leman, sah."

"Ask him what he wants."

The servant withdrew, and upon returning, said: "He 'lows, sah, dat his bizness is powerful 'portant. Says er mighty heep 'pens on it."

"Tell him that I can't see him to-day."

That afternoon, while the Judge was penning the heavy sentences of an opinion, the servant entered.

"Judge," said he, "dat same gen'leman is out dar."

"What gentleman?"

"W'y, sah, dat cullud gen'leman dat wuz yere dis mawnin an' 'lowed dat his bizness wuz so 'portant."

"Tell him to go away from here or I'll set the dogs on him."

The next morning the Judge resumed his work. He had but to write a few more saids, aforesaids, whereases and to-wits, and then the opinion would be finished. His plug hat was placed on the floor near his chair and his walking cane hung on a corner of the desk. He was almost ready to hasten to the court with the great document.

The servant entered. "What do you want?" the Judge demanded.

"Dat same cu'l'a gen leman is out dar, sah."

"Well, go right out there now and set the dogs on him."

The servant retired. A moment later there was heard the furious barking of dogs. The Judge, oblivious to the uproar, continued to write; and had, with a bold swipe of his quill pen, declared that the opinion of the court below was sustained, when the servant again entered.

"Jedge, dat man is back yere."

"Confound his impudence! Did you set the dogs on him?"

"Yas, sah, an' da wollered him er right smart."

"Go tell him to come in."

A few moments later an old man, bowing and grinning, appeared at the library door. He belonged to the Guinea "nigger" type, was bench-legged, with a comical "duck" of the head and with lips that stuck out as though engaged in a perpetual whistle.

"Come in," said the Judge.

"Yas, sah, yas, an' thanks you, too, sense all dis trouble. I has yearn 'bout de watch dogs o' de tres'ry, but neber had 'em ter waller me befo'."

The Judge smiled, but thinking that the ray of mirth was in ill-keeping with the great and serious opinion which he had just finished, he turned off the genial light and put up the shutters of deep solemnity.

The old negro continued: "Befo' I goes inter de mericks o' my 'portant bizness I would like ter ax you er few questions. Yo' name is Jedge Prime, ain't it?"

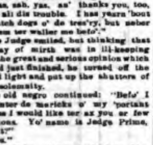
"Yes."

"John Prime, dat wuz raised in Alabam?"

"Yes."

"Yo' dady wuz name Wilson Prime?"

"He was."



"COME IN."

"Wal, sah, doan you recolleck me? I'se Stephen Prime—ole Steve dat played wid you when you wuz er boy an' what wuz sold ter er man in Texas when ole marster got so much in debt."

"My gracious alive!" exclaimed the judge, springing to his feet and grasping the old negro's hand. "I am delighted to see you. Sit right down here and make yourself right at home."

"Thankee Mars John (seating himself) thankee, sah. Oh, I knowd dat since I had dun nominated merse'f you'd han' out er welcome dat would make de ole man's heart jump wid gladness."

"Steve, I never would have known you."

"Wall, I reckon not, sah. Gone through er mighty heep sense we uster play roun' on the grass. Bless yo' soul, Mars John, I'se so happy dat I'se gwine take er chaw tubacker right yere."

"Help yourself, old man. There's a spittoon."

"Yas, sah; bleeged ter yer."

He took out an enormous twist of red-looking tobacco, bit off the "nub-end," and, after chewing reflectively, said: "Time is er makin' tracks down de dirt-road mighty fast, Mars John. Makin' tracks, sah, an' flingin' de sand on de bright flowers o' dis life's we—we—" his mouth was so full that he had to discharge a streak of what is known in the south as "ambier."

"Yes," said the Judge, as a dear, lamented friend of mine once wrote—

"The train of time moves ever by the tomb,
With tearful eyes we see the years recede;
Our station reached, we leap the starless gloom—
The train moves on with undiminished speed!"

"Look yere, Mars John, dat's what you call po'ry, ain't it?"

"Yes, Steve, it is what I call poetry, but the bright pen that wrote it gathered rust from public neglect, and heartsore the author, wearied with knocking at the doors of magazines, lay down alone and died."

"Say; hole on, Jedge; say; hole on. Had er knocked at my do', you bet yo' life I'd er said, 'Come in, sah!' and ef he'd er said, 'I ain't got but one pen, an' dat one has got rust on it,' I'd er 'lowed, 'den gimmy yere an' I'll rub it wid ashes.' Wall, how you gittin' er long, nowhow, Mars John?"

"Fairly well."

"Gre't big Judge now, ain't you?" Steve asked, discharging a mouthful of "ambier."

"I have been honored, Steve."

"Yas, see you has (looking about the room.) Got er good deal o' truck in yere. Man could take all dese yere books an' preach er powerful sermon."

"Yes. Well now, Steve, please state your business, for I must go down to the court room."

"Wall, sah, I wanted some 'vice er bout er p'int, an' I didn' wanter trust no common lawyer. Ain't dar er claw in de consertution dat says er man is 'titled ter 'vorce from his wife on er count o' 'sertion?"

"Yes, desertion is sufficient grounds for divorce."

"Dat's what I thought, an' (he spat again) on dat groun's I wants er 'vorce from my wife Betsy."

"When did she desert you?"

"She ain't done it yit."

"Merely threatened, eh?"

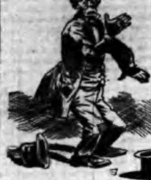
"No, sah, she ain't done dat. She doan wanter go, de lady don't, but I 'lowed ter merse'f dat I'd make her 'sert me an' den git de 'vorce."

"Why, that will never do, Steve. That would be driving her away from home. That won't do at all."

"Den de law 'pear ter be all on de side o' de lady?"

"Yes, so long as she is in the right."

"Why, sah, I'se gib dat 'oman every opportunity ter leave, and still she won't. Neber wuz so tired o' er pusson in my life, an'—"



HE USED IT AS A SPIT-BOX.

"Confound your impudent hide," exclaimed the Judge, springing to his feet, "you are spitting in my hat."

"Bless de Lawd," said the negro, "I thought dat wuz de spit-box."

"Spit-box; thunderation. It's a silk hat that cost eight dollars."

"De Lawd knows I'se mighty sorry. Yere my ole eyes 'ceibe me an' I been spittin' in er fine hat, an' de terbarker wuz raised down in de new groun' an' de juice would singe er cat. Laws er massy, I doan know whut ter do. Hat dun ruint."

"Yes, for I can't wear it again," the Judge answered, becoming calmer.

"Wall, den, Mars John, I'd jest es well take it er long."

"Yes, so far as I am concerned."

"Wall, I'll say good-bye ter yer (taking up the hat. Ricolleck dat ole Steve is allus at yo' sarvice."

When Stephen had reached the street, he said: "Wipe dis hat out er little an' w'ar it ter de fun'l ter mor' an' de pall b'arn will lif' de coffin 'ter one side case da think er s'preme jedge is comin' right dar."

Several days later, the Judge, during a conversation with a friend, remarked: "I had quite a surprise the other day. Old Stephen Prime, a negro who once belonged to my father, called on me."

"I reckon not," the friend answered. "Old Steve Prime used to live near here, but died some time ago. A bench-legged negro married his widow, and was in town the other day, trying to get a divorce from her."

OPIE P. READ.

EVERY lost, broken or worn-out screw or bolt should be replaced with a new one before spring, so that each implement will be ready for work when spring comes.

A MERCHANT of Detroit recently advertised for a snowball, offering ten dollars for a genuine sample. A few days later he received one by express, packed in cotton, all the way from Tilsonburg, Can.

THE collapse of "Carmen Sylvia," the Queen of Roumania, is due to overwork. She has been very ambitious to win fame in literature, and to a certain extent she has accomplished her object, but her constitution was not strong enough to endure the strain to which she subjected it.

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW says he made the great mistake of his life when he delivered his first humorous speech. He didn't see it then, but now he realizes it keenly. Instead of being regarded as a convincing logician or a good lawyer, or even as a serious thinker, he is always taken for a funny man.

NO SLAVERY is so abject and humiliating as that which chains us in servile obedience to our own appetites and passions, and no power on earth can free us from such bonds except the power of self-restraint. This power, like all others, is developed by continual exercise, and he who resists or contemns all external restraints shuts himself out from this development.

A MOUNTAIN of clam shells has been discovered about three miles east of Mount Vernon. It is over six hundred feet high and has a surface of soil nearly a foot thick. Underneath this clam shells abound to the level depth. There are trees growing on the mountain which show an age, judging by the rings about the heart, of from one hundred and fifty to two hundred years.

CARPENTRY was the trade of the American aborigines. The tent-poles of the Sioux Indians even now show pretty specimens of work; and the Moqui Indians, since long before the landing of Columbus, have known how to mortise timber, to make ladders and to swing doors on hinges from the top. The chisel they push rather than hammer and they work the board up and down on a fixed saw, but the results are creditable.

THE Sultan's presents to Emperor William and his wife during their recent visit in Constantinople cost $900,000. They were packed in twenty-four chests, and consisted mostly of shawls, silks, rugs and carpets, made expressly for the royal Prussians. The most expensive gift was the diamond brooch, with a pendant of pearls and diamonds, for the Empress. This ornament cost $110,000. Count Herbert Bismarck also is said to have carried away from Constantinople some $60,000 worth of diplomatic plunder.

THERE are four members of the United States Senate who can never be candidates for the Presidency of this Republic under the constitution because of an alien birth. Senator Jones, of Nevada, was born in Herefordshire, Eng.; General McMillan, of Michigan, in Hamilton, Ont.; Senator Beck, of Kentucky, in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, and Senator Pasco, of Florida, in London, Eng. While it is the exception rather than otherwise that a Senator was born in the State he represents, sectional lines have been closely observed. Of the Northern Senators only two were born in the South—Cullom, of Illinois, and Senator Hawley, of Connecticut, in North Carolina. Not one Southern Senator is of Northern origin.

EDUCATIONAL BREVITIES.

IT is said that the University of Michigan is the only college in the United States in which the principles of dramatic composition are taught.

THE University Extension work of England, inaugurated in 1873 by Prof. Stuart, of Trinity College, Cambridge, Eng., now numbers sixty thousand pupils and is gaining more rapidly than ever.

IT is estimated that there are over 100,000 Chinamen in this country. One-fourth of these have been brought under instruction in the various Sunday-schools provided for them, of which there are now nearly 100 in the United States.

THE WORD-CARRIER is the title of a little paper published at the Santee agency in the interests of schools and missions among the Dakota Indians. We quote its platform, which, as coming directly from and expressing the desire of Indians, is significant: "For Indians we want American education! We want American homes! We want American rights! The result of which is American citizenship! And the Gospel is the power of God for their salvation!"

AT the new woman's college in Baltimore each applicant for a degree will be obliged to exercise in a gymnasium one hour on three days in each week. The students will also attend an elementary course of lectures on human anatomy, physiology and hygiene by Dr. Alice T. Hall, the object being to give a practical knowledge of the structure, functions and relations of the different systems of the body and of the best methods of securing and maintaining sound health.

THE various anniversaries of Count Moltke have come so rapidly of late that it has been difficult for the Emperor to devise means of honoring the hero and showing his continued appreciation of his extraordinary services. The most recent of the "jubilees" was the fiftieth anniversary of his election as Knight of the Order of Merit. The Empress Augusta congratulated him most heartily. The Emperor presented him with a new decoration of the order, adding to the ordinary blue cross a crown and a black eagle, both of which are set with rows of brilliants.

OKLAHOMA seems to have greater attractions for the negro as an emigration field than the banks of the Congo. There are already 22,000 colored people there and more going.

IN Maine spruce gum now brings to the men who gather it from $150 to $180 a barrel, according to quality. A barrel weighs about one hundred and seventy pounds.

ONE of the keepers in Bushey Park, Eng., lately discovered two fine bucks lying dead in a ditch with their horns locked together. Both animals had received severe body wounds.

HOW CAN THE LONG
BE THE SHORT

A line may be a very long one and yet be the shortest between given points. For instance, the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway has over 3,000 miles of road; magnificently equipped and managed, it is one of the greatest railway systems of this country; for the same reasons it is the traveler's favorite to all points in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana. It is the only line to Great Falls, the future manufacturing center of the Northwest; to the fertile free lands of the Milk River Valley; and offers a choice of three routes to the Coast. Still it is the shortest line between St. Paul, Minneapolis, Fargo, Winnipeg, Crookston, Moorhead, Casselton, Glyndon, Grafton, Fergus Falls, Wahpeton, Devils Lake, and Butte City. It is the best route to Alaska, China and Japan; and the journey to the Pacific coast Vancouver, Tacoma, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco will be remembered as the delight of a life-time once made through the wonderful scenery of the Manitoba-Pacific Route. To fish and hunt; to view the magnificence of nature; to revive the spirit; restore the body; to realize the dreams of the home-seeker, the gold-seeker, the toiler, or the capitalist, visit the country reached by the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway. Write to F. I. WHITNEY, G. P. & T. A. St. Paul, Minn., for maps, books and guides. If you want a free farm in a lovely land, write for the "Great Reservation"—read it and resolve to accept the golden

POETIC BRILLIANTS.

Philosophy vs. Human Nature.

When things run smoothly and my mental sky
Is clear of clouds, and there's no cause for sighs,
That is, when all is lovely and serene, then I Philosophize.

But when the little ills of life appear,
To pester, worry and pile care on care;
When mere existence is sandpapered, as it were,
Why, then, I swear.

When on the right side is my bank account,
And great good luck my efforts seem to crown,
Then upward towards the sky my spirits mount;
I own the town.

But when misfortune never seems to let
Up on me, and each move appears a blunder
And life seems one "demnition grind," I get
As mad as thunder.

'Tis so with most; we all can smile at strife,
At cares and trials from which we are free;
And calmly reason o'er the ills of life
We never see.

But when the clouds obscure our daily skies,
And evils from Pandora's box fly thick,
Instead of stopping to philosophize,
We mostly kick.
—Chicago Herald.

In Haste.

I used to love her dainty notes,
That always ended: "Yours in haste."
I clung with rapture to each word
In violet ink so deftly traced.

Each note I'd read and read again,
Until I knew them quite by heart;
They seemed, as I perused them o'er,
Of her sweet self a very part!

How eagerly I kissed her when
At last she named our wedding-day!
I told her she should be my queen,
And in my heart should reign alway!

We're married now—but, saints defend!
Look at her slip-shod shoes unlaced!
Her tousled hair! But when I chide
She always says: "Tom, I'm in haste."

Disorder reigns in every room;
There's not one hint of cultured taste!
Alas! I realize—too late—
I married Ethelind in haste!
—Katharine H. Terry, in the Housekeeper.

Gray Hair.

Watch her unobserved and see
Her scissors managed carefully,
Adroitly clipping here and there
A harmless wee gray hair.

Mingled here and there with brown
Forerunners of a silvery crown;
She welcomes not their timely spread,
And seeks to crush each tell-tale thread.

For are they not a proof too clear
That age is creeping all too near?
And O, such volumes they suggest;
To bury them she deems it best.

Her rank is not with girls in 'teens;
Ay, more, this gray hair means;
Grim thirty's near they indicate—
Each one she will obliterate.

Despairingly she clings to youth,
And by deceit she covers truth;
But truth will speak, and speaking, tell
The follies of this matured belle.

For every white hair put to death
Ten more will come in the self-same breath
To chide her for her time ill-spent
And motives foolishly ill-meant.

Best it would be to prepare
The mind to merit this gray hair,
With stores of knowledge keeping pace,
As intellect white hair will grace.
—Louise Grey Stitt, in Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Dude.

He is a man of many charms,
The largest is a locket;
Huge checks he has upon his clothes,
But rarely in his pocket.

His collar often rises high,
Though mild his disposition;
He screws a glass into his eye
Although he's no magician.

His voice is low, his scarf-pin loud,
His cane his greatest passion;
All tailor-made is he, and yet—
A man—after a fashion.
—Addie Funk, in Puck.

[illegible]

If fortune, with a smiling face
Strew roses on our way
When shall we stoop to pick them up?
To-day, my friend, to-day.
But should we frown with face of care
And talk of coming sorrow
When shall we grieve, if grieve we must?
To-morrow, friend, to-morrow.

If those who've wronged us own their fault
And for our pity pray
When shall we listen and forgive?
To-day, my friend, to-day.
But if stern justice urge rebuke
And warmth from memory borrow
When shall we chide, if chide we dare?
To-morrow, friend, to-morrow.

If those to whom we owe a debt
Are harmed unless we pay
When shall we struggle to be just?
To-day, my friend, to-day.
But if our debtor fail our hope
And plead his ruin thorough
When shall we weigh his breach of trust?
To-morrow, friend, to-morrow.

For virtuous deeds and harmless joys
The minutes will not stay;
We're always bound to welcome them
To-day, my friend, to-day.
But care, resentment, angry words
And unavailing sorrow
Come soon enough if they appear
To-morrow, friend, to-morrow.
Charles Mackay.

Her Age.

But twenty she, and forty I,
And yet some years ago
That difference did not exist—
At least my friends say so.

I sought her out the other night,
And said I'd fain be told
The secret of her lasting youth,
While I was growing old.

"Arithmetic so plain as this
Should cause you no surprise:
When you were twenty, I was ten,"
She said with downcast eyes.

"In point of years you doubled me
Not very long ago,
I'm still just half as old as you—
At least my friends say so!"
—The Jury.

Pegasus as a Pot-Boiler.

O the vigils I've outwatched!
O the strings I have strung!
When a ballad
Meant a salad,
O the many I have botched!
When a sonnet
Meant a bonnet,
O the many I have sung!

When a lyric meant a lunch,
How I've twanged the battered lyre!
When the inner
Man for dinner
Called with ne'er a crust to crunch,
What could poet
Do but "go it,"
Reckless of the critics' ire?

Tho' it vex the carper's brain
That my poor Muse soars no higher,
Tho' full oft she Sings no lofty
Note is struck, I don't complain
While she gayly
Earns my daily
Bread and butter, roof and fire!

He can read a paper four years before it is printed, and he can penetrate the future to such an extent as to learn that his death won't occur until the middle of next century. He didn't tell where he lived, but they all took it for granted that it was in a hospital for the insane.

THE GOSSIP OF GOTHAM.

Paul Gibier, the American Pasteur, and His New Institute.

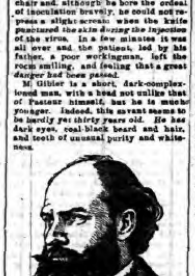
The Sporting Brigade of Wall Street and Some of Its Exploits—Father Ducey, a Noted Catholic Priest, and His Millionaire Congregation.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

Americans who are so unfortunate as to be bitten by rabid dogs need no longer go to Paris to escape the terrors of hydrophobia. A long-time pupil and associate of M. Pasteur, Dr. Paul Gibier, who has been signally honored by the French government on various occasions, has just founded a Pasteur Institute in New York, where the victims of rabies can be treated on the same principles and with the same virus as in Pasteur's own laboratory.

I called at the American Branch of the Pasteur Institute yesterday, the day of its formal opening. Dr. Gibier, assisted by his two associates, Dr. G. Van Schaick, of the New York Medical School and Dr. A. Liautard, Director of the American Veterinary College, was treating a patient, a boy of about ten years of age, who two days before had been bitten by a stray dog, that afterward proved to be rabid. The little fellow was placed in the operating chair and, although he bore the ordeal of inoculation bravely, he could not repress a slight scream when the knife punctured the skin during the injection of the virus. In a few minutes it was all over and the patient, led by his father, a poor workingman, left the room smiling, and feeling that a great danger had been passed.

M. Gibier is a short, dark-complexioned man, with a head not unlike that of Pasteur himself, but he is much younger. Indeed, this savant seems to be hardly yet thirty years old. He has dark eyes, coal-black beard and hair, and teeth of unusual purity and whiteness.



DR. PAUL GIBIER.

"To-day is the first active day of the Institute," he explained. "Yesterday we had a number of members of the medical faculty here, inspecting the building and the apparatus, including the cults of virus which have been two months in preparation."

"Is the virus the same as that employed by Pasteur?"

"It is identical. I was with him for several years and am familiar with all his methods and especially with the preparation and application of the virus. When a patient comes here, after being bitten by a rabid animal, I wait two days after the day of the bite, and has no specially severe features, I inoculate him fifteen times during fifteen successive days. In the event of the wounds being sore, I inoculate eighteen days with stronger virus. I always begin with the weaker virus.

"The philosophy of the treatment is this: You accustom the body to the poison by degrees, and then, when the rabies ultimately reaches the brain, that organ is proof against it and is prepared to resist it. It is like the old story of King Mithridates, who accustomed his body to poisons, so that the machinations of his enemies to kill him by that means might fail. We take the virus from a rabid animal, and, after dissection, inoculate a rabbit with it. That is the first generation and is the starting point in the series of gradations that runs through [illegible] generations of rabbits. Thus: We take the virus from the first rabbit after inoculation, when the disease has reached its maximum and terminated fatally, and with it we inoculate another rabbit which is generation number two, and so on. Meanwhile the virus is gradually growing weaker, till after the [illegible] passage it is in a proper state for use on the human system.

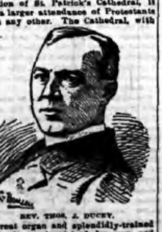
"This institute I founded with my own money. The first patient, as you saw, was a workingman's child. While the institute is not designed as a charity, it accepts nothing from those who are unable to pay. It has many friends among the medical fraternity here and in other large American cities, who give us their moral support."

It is proposed in the near future to erect an edifice that will be to this country what the Pasteur Institute is to France. M. Gibier is probably less of an enthusiast than a calm, deliberate scientist, who cares little for the applause of the world if he be only allowed to push forward his bacteriological investigations.

A Unique Clerical Figure.

One of the most unique figures in New York City is Rev. Father Ducey of St. Leo's Roman Catholic Church, the swell church of that faith in that town. Father Ducey presides over an aristocratic congregation where wealth is reckoned by the hundred millions. It was this priest who was the particular friend of John C. Eno, the well-known financier, now an exile from New York, but a social leader in Montreal, having succeeded in carrying enough of money across the border with him to keep him from want, even had he not since hugely increased the amount by successful speculations. At the time that Eno was in hiding in New York from the police, it is said that he was in the house of his friend, Father Ducey. The truth of this statement has never been clearly established.

Dr. Ducey's parish was formerly a part of the parish ruled over by the even more famous priest, Dr. McGlynn, and is sometimes known as the "fashionable" Catholic Church of New York City; but this is owing to the marked peculiarities of its rector rather than to any other cause. With the exception of St. Patrick's Cathedral, it has a larger attendance of Protestants than any other. The Cathedral, with its great organ and splendidly-trained choir, is much visited by men and women of all denominations who love good music.



REV. THOS. J. DUCEY.

The daily round of Father Ducey's life is in many respects unlike that of any other priest in New York, aside from pastoral work, of course. At 9 o'clock every morning you may by calling at his rectory see him as he is when he is at work. Frequently the cassock he wears is frayed and dingy of color. His manner is that of the hard-working priest absorbed in the affairs of his parish. Rich and poor are received with the same courtesy and consideration and there is nothing of the fashionable priest about him. That is Dr. Ducey at work.

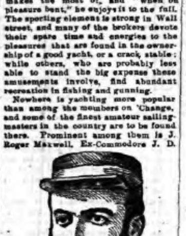
Some hours later in the day if you happen in Delmonico's you may see a man rather above medium height, clean shaven with a clear cut, intellectual face, and the air of a cultured man of the world, and then you may be somewhat surprised to note that while his clothes are well made and perfect in fit, they are of clerical cut, while he wears the Roman collar affected by Catholic priests. This is Dr. Ducey again. He usually takes his meals at Delmonico's. He holds that a priest has the same right to have his food properly cooked and well served that other men have.

Any afternoon you may see Father Ducey whirling up Fifth Avenue in company with some of his wealthy friends for a spin through Central Park and up the road. Of course it is his wealthy friend that owns the horse.

Wall Street Sportsmen.

The life of a stock broker is full of wear and tear and excitement. So incessant are the demands of the Street upon his time and attention, that he has but little leisure to devote to anything else. But what little he has he makes the most of, and "when on pleasure bent," he enjoys it to the full. The sporting element is strong in Wall street, and many of the brokers devote their spare time and energies to the pleasures that are found in the ownership of a good yacht, or a crack stable; while others, who are probably less able to stand the big expense these amusements involve, find abundant recreation in fishing and gunning.

Nowhere is yachting more popular than among the members on 'Change, and some of the finest amateur sailing-masters in the country are to be found there. Prominent among them is J. Roger Maxwell, Ex-Commodore J. D. Smith, owner of the "Estelle" for many years, and now commander of the historical sloop, "Pocohontas," one of whose partners, Mr. Douglass, achieved a highly romantic marriage with Mrs. McCrea the other day, is recognized as [illegible] much to popularize steam yachting is Mr. Washington E. Conner. It was his zeal and energetic efforts that were the means of founding the American Yacht Club, and establishing it upon a permanent basis. He built the prize-winning "Utowana," and many of his friends have pleasant memories of the halcyon days spent on that fine vessel; for Mr. Connor is a capital host, and never fails to afford his guests all the recreation and enjoyment they anticipate in accepting his invitations.



WASHINGTON CONNER.

One of the institutions in which Wall street sportsmen take especial delight is the Cuttyhunk Fishing Club. Situated in a romantic and sufficiently secluded locality, on the Rhode Island coast, about fourteen miles across from New Bedford, on Buzzard Bay, it is just the ideal spot for a few days relaxation and piscatorial amusement.

Nearly all who go to Cuttyhunk from Wall street own fine boats, in which, when bass and other fish are scarce, they enjoy sailing in Buzzard's Bay and fishing for black fish, sea bass and cod.

There is no class of men who need relaxation more, or who appreciate it more keenly than the Wall street sportsmen.
DAVID WECHSLER.

THE HOUSE GALLERIES.

Funny Things Heard on Congressional Show Days.

Malapropos Criticisms of Representatives By Thoughtless Visitors Resented By the Congressmen's Wives—Mrs. Bynum's Rebuke.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

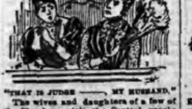
During the exciting events in the House in the last two months there has been an unprecedented demand upon Representatives for cards of admission to the Visitors' gallery. It is a courtesy which nearly every visiting constituent expects.

There are five reserved galleries in the House—the Press, the Diplomatic Corps, the Executive, the Members' and the Visitors' galleries. The Members' gallery is above the Democratic side of the House, to the right of the Speaker. The Visitors' gallery is a similar one above the Republican side of the House and to the left of the Speaker. Each Representative, upon application to the Speaker, will receive a slate-colored card with the Speaker's signature attached, admitting to the Member's gallery.

The first of the passes entitles the holder to admission to the Visitors' gallery only. But it is frequently presented at the door of the Members' gallery and is usually honored. Elevators bear visitors to the upper corridors. The entrances to the galleries are guarded by old soldiers who hold their places without regard to political affiliation. A central aisle divides the five banks of seats in each gallery. The seats are uncushioned. They are painted in a slate-color. A front bench in the Members' gallery is reserved for the family and friends of the Speaker. It is more of a pew than a bench, for it has a little door adorned with a silver plate bearing the words:

THE SPEAKER'S FAMILY.

It is a strictly reserved pew. The Speaker's family and their guests are alone admitted. When the gallery is packed almost to suffocation the pew is frequently empty.



"THAT IS JUDGE ——, MY HUSBAND."

The wives and daughters of a few of the Members visit the Capitol nearly every day. Others go there only when some exceedingly interesting debate is anticipated.

The exciting scenes preceding the fights over the rules attracted many visitors to the Member's gallery. The wives, daughters and guests of both Democratic and Republican Representatives were there, and the political excitement on the floor spread to the gallery. It was intensified by the presence of many strangers who had cards to the Visitors gallery but who had been admitted to the Members gallery. They gave vent to their feelings, apparently unaware that they were on neutral ground.

The debate below was long and bitter. One day the discussion lasted over eight hours. Some of the families of the Representatives remained in the gallery all this time, witnessing the scenes of confusion on the floor. Little lunches were sent to them, which they shared with their friends. All enjoyed the excitement, the eloquent outbursts and cutting repartee that marked the contest. Individual pleasure, however, was at times marred by remarks from those of opposite political belief. Strangers used their tongues quite freely. The wives of prominent Members heard comments upon their husbands that brought the flush of indignation to their cheeks. It was certainly not pleasant for the daughter of an eminent Kentuckian to hear her father termed "the worst old rebel on the floor." A stranger turned to a lady at her side and said:

"Who's that funny little man down there, with a bald head?" pointing to a Member.

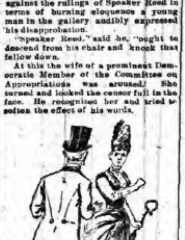
"That," replied the lady addressed, with freezing dignity, "is Judge ——, my husband."

Her questioner blushed, but made no apology.

When Mr. Bynum was protesting against the rulings of Speaker Reed in terms of burning eloquence a young man in the gallery audibly expressed his disapprobation.

"Speaker Reed," said he, "ought to descend from his chair and knock that fellow down."

At this the wife of a prominent Democratic Member of the Committee on Appropriations was aroused. She turned and looked the censor full in the face. He recognized her and tried to soften the effect of his words.



"KEEP HIM IN LIMBO 'TILL HE STARVES."

"I am sure," he said, "that you can not approve of Bynum's action."

"I heartily approve of it," she replied. "I think his conduct is superb. He bears himself magnificently and I am proud of him."

The young man wilted. A moment afterward he rose and left the gallery.

Sometimes the families of the Members take seats in the Visitors' gallery. Here they are even more likely to have [illegible] gallery.

A good story is told of Marcus Aurelius Smith, Delegate from Arizona. He had taken a friend into the gallery and was pointing out the distinguished men upon the floor below. An Illinois Member was speaking upon a bill reported from the Committee on Military Affairs.

"Who is that addressing the House?" Mr. Smith's friend inquired.

"That is ——, of Illinois," Delegate Smith replied. "He makes me sick. He can talk longer and say less than any other man in the House. He has talked away all the influence he ever possessed in Congress. My feet ache!"

The Delegate suddenly became aware that a lady in an adjoining seat had turned and was gazing steadily upon him. He recognized her in an instant. She was the wife of the Representative who was addressing the House. The Delegate knew her, but she did not know him. Turning to his companion he explained the situation in a whisper and said:

"I want you to get me out of this scrape. When I rise to go, call me Mr. Kilgore."

His comrade assented. A moment afterward Marcus shook hands and excused himself.

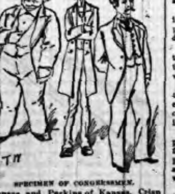
"Good bye, Mr. Kilgore," his friend replied, "I am much obliged to you for your kindness and I appreciate your courtesy."

The lady bit her lips and looked daggers at the supposed Texan as he passed through the door. On the next day she met the Sergeant-at-arms whom she knew very well.

"Mr. Leedom," she said, "if you ever have occasion to arrest Kilgore, I hope you will keep him in limbo till he starves."

She recounted the scene in the gallery, to the evident astonishment of Leedom. Her husband and Kilgore were warm friends. For months he never passed the compliments of the day with Buck Kilgore, whose politeness is proverbial. The story, however, was too good to keep. Marcus told it first to one Member and then to another. Finally it reached the ears of the lady's husband. The "entente cordiale" between Kilgore and himself was resumed. Marcus also was taken into the combination after offering a handsome apology.

Perhaps the greatest annoyance in the Members and Visitors galleries is the young man who knows it all. Mayhap his father is a Member. He has been in Washington a few weeks, has heard a little and seen less, and has become filled with an undue sense of his own importance. His mistakes are ludicrous. At times he points out Judge Barnes of Georgia, as Tom Reed of Maine. He confounds Mr. Adams of Illinois, with Gen. Tom Bayne of Pennsylvania. He mistakes Judge Chipman of Detroit, for Ashbel P. Fitch of New York. He says that the Rev. Mr. Owens of Indiana, is the Hon. Charles McComas of Maryland. He calls Crisp of Georgia, Perkins of Kansas, and Perkins of Kansas, Crisp of Georgia. The worst mistake he ever made was in the last Congress. It was when he pointed out to an enquirer in the gallery Robert Smalls, the colored contestant of Colonel Elliott's seat, as George West of Saratoga. When George was told of it he had a hearty laugh.



SPECIMEN OF CONGRESSMEN.

It is an exciting night session that the Member's gallery is in its glory. The ladies are then out in force. Diamonds sparkle, and plumed fans wave to and fro. The bright hues of their hats and dresses give the gallery a warmth of color truly inspiriting. While the late fight was at its height some of the ladies in the Members' gallery appeared with crocheting and needle work. It was the tricoteuse element of Tom Reed's parliamentary Reign of Terror. At night, however, no one ever thinks of sewing or knitting. All eyes are fastened upon the orators below and all ears are strained to hear what they are saying. If the discussion becomes dull the galleries are enlivened with gossip and smiles. They thin out as midnight approaches.

In an all-night session last winter there was a magical transformation at two o'clock in the morning. A bevy of fairies glided into the Members' gallery arrayed in soft furs and opera-cloaks. As the wraps were removed an iridescence of silks and satins was revealed. Snowy necks, ivory shoulders and gleaming arms were revealed. A large party returning from a fashionable soiree had taken in the House in the morning hours. It was chaperoned by Mr. Springer of Illinois. For once the Members kept their eyes upon the galleries. The Speaker pro tem seemed entranced, and failed to keep a correct account of the time allotted for debate. For an hour or more the fairies remained. Then they gathered up their robes and disappeared, their dresses rustling through the aisle like the wings of a flock of swans in full flight.

LITERARY DRIFT.

HENRY M. STANLEY has sold his forthcoming book for $200,000.

LEWIS MORRIS is regarded in England as the heir apparent to the laureateship.

LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON is said to receive higher prices for her poetry than any writer of equal reputation.

MR. GILBERT said to a friend recently: "I dare say I might write an opera in a week, but it would be a precious bad one."

MR. GLADSTONE is at work upon six important articles for magazines, one of them being a critical review of Lord Tennyson's poems.

MR. HOWELLS said at a dinner recently that when he was editor of the Atlantic Monthly he rejected one of his own contributions.

MARGARET DELAND's correspondence has so largely increased that she has been forced to the typewriter, and all her letters are now answered with the machine.

CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, the historical writer, has written and published exactly one hundred books. She is now engaged upon her one hundred and first work, to be published shortly.

HUBBARD T. SMITH, of the War Department in Washington, sold his song, "Listen to My Tale of Woe," to a Washington publisher for fifteen dollars. A short time ago a British house offered him ten thousand dollars for the exclusive right to publish the song in Europe.

ENGLISH newspapers maintain that Robert Browning was of Jewish descent. His father was a clerk in the Rothschilds house, when few or none but Jews were employed there. Browning is said to be a common name among [illegible] which certainly suggests Israelitish extraction.

M. S. LANGLEY, who was Thackeray's private secretary, kept a diary in 1860, which has been offered for sale. The record of daily events is a full one. Notes of the great author's conversation and remarks have been jotted down day by day, and his opinion on all sorts and conditions of men and events are in the chronicle, and his personal peculiarities have also been noted.

ROBERT BROWNING did not think his last illness a serious one, and insisted almost to the end that he was getting better. It is stated that just before he died he turned to his son and asked for news from his publisher. The son read a telegram, saying that the edition of his last volume of poems was almost exhausted. The poet, upon hearing this, smiled and murmured: "How gratifying!" These were his last words.

"AN Unknown Poem in Imitation of Dante" is the title of a publication edited by Sig. M. Cornacchia and F. Pellegrini, says the Transatlantic. The poem in question is preserved in two MSS., one in the Biblioteca Universitaria of Bologna, the other in the Magliabecchiana of Florence. It certainly dates from the fourteenth century, and treats of vices and virtues. It is composed of 101 chapters in terza rima, divided into three canticles and is an interesting addition to the series of Dantesque imitations in Italian literature.

STRAY STATISTICS.

THE United States Government has paid out in round figures $1,000,000,000 in pensions since the beginning of the civil war.

THE negro has gained seventy-five per cent. in property during the last decade, while the average gain has been only fifty per cent.

A STATISTICIAN calculates that the total tonnage of the world, steam and sail, is in round numbers 21,000,000, of which 50 per cent. is British.

BLINDNESS seems to be steadily on the decrease. In the last four decades the number of the blind in each million of the people were respectively 1,021, 964, 951 and 819.

EXPERTS now place the actual wealth of the United States at $61,459,000,000. Its property assessed for taxation upon the duplicates is $23,719,000,000. Some idea of this amount can be had by remembering the fact that it is greater than the wealth of the entire world 150 years ago.

IN the year 1700 there was but one newspaper in the United States. In 1870 there were 5,871; this year there are 16,319, the total for the United States and Canada being 17,107. In 1870 there were but 14,000 periodicals printed in the whole world. Now, however, there are in the United States alone 12,791 weeklies, 1,998 monthlies and 1,584 dailies.

ORACULAR OBSERVATIONS.

THOSE people are best to us who never expect us to say they are good.

THE man who is too busy to attend to his business will find plenty of leisure later on.

MORAL defects are as often the cause as they are the effects of physical faults.

IF a man could be conscious of all that is said of him in his absence he would probably become a very modest man indeed.

You can not order remembrance out of the mind, said Thackeray, and a wrong that was a wrong yesterday must be a wrong to-morrow.

WHAT we need is a point of concentration toward which to direct all our efforts. We may not reach the goal, but our work will be all the better for having been wisely directed.

THERE is no way to compass any great purpose but by fulfilling with honor and fidelity all the lesser ones, by filling present life so full of earnest endeavor and energetic action, that the future will call us to still higher spheres.

THE world is wider than ever before for honest effort, says Erastus Wiman. Men must be had upon whom reliance can be placed, men of character, of training, of industry and of brains, and even yet there is no royal road to fortune except that which the humblest, the poorest and [illegible] the highest can attain.

KILL THE SNAKE.

The sovereignty of the people, not a privileged class, but of all the people, legally expressed and justly observed, is a fundamental principle of the party of Democracy.

That was gravely maintained by Jefferson, in the face of violent denunciation and misrepresentation, when battling against the aristocratic designs of Federalism, as championed by Hamilton and other prominent men of the early days of our Government.

And, furthermore, Jefferson in advocating popular sovereignty clearly voiced the meaning of the Constitution of the United States.

Upon that solid rock was the Democratic party founded, the rock of defined principles, and loyalty thereto is why, and only why, it has for a hundred years successfully braved cyclones of political enmity, and survived to recount the shipwreck of organized partisan opponents.

We expect that popular sovereignty ever has been and remains to be a cardinal principle of Democracy, and every true Democrat should antagonize whatever tends, either directly or disguised, to weaken or destroy its legitimate exercise.

To be sovereign, the people must be free to act according to their own free will and convictions of right and duty. Otherwise freedom will become a mere sham.

The mercenary sway of political bosses, the corrupt manipulation of professional politicians, the dastardly espionage of employers, bribe-giving, false registration and counting, and the villainous stuffing of ballot boxes with fraudulent tickets, bear no more relationship to popular freedom than a crawling snake does to a lordly lion.

Political corruption abounds in this boasted land of freedom and it is rank [illegible], a[illegible] menace to free institutions.

We have abundant proof of its noxious existence in the State of New Jersey.

It may be sport and gain for mercenary politicians, Democratic and others, but if not effectually destroyed, it will eventually be death to the sovereignty of the people.

Let the poisonous snake be killed.

The petition and memorial will be prepared by Mr. Cox.

The Political Complexion of the Somerset Board.

The new Board of Freeholders of Somerset county will stand 6 Democrats to 4 Republicans, elected as follows:

Bernards—Aaron Dilly, D.
Bedminster—Geo. W. Ballantine, D.
Branchburg—John N. Yawger, D.
Bridgewater—Hiram Rockafellow, R.
Franklin—J. C. Staats, D.
Hillsborough—Jno. S. Everett, D.
Montgomery—Jacob M. Vreeland, R., re-elected.
North Plainfield—W. E. Jones, R., re-elected.
Borough of North Plainfield—George Bolman, R.
Warren—Israel Adams, D.

Doubted the Fidelity of the Model.

"Impasto," a Plainfield correspondent of The Suburban, a New Jersey society paper, closes as follows his review of the recent loan exhibition at the Job Mal Art Gallery: "From the studio of George Wharton Edwards comes 'A Holland Fisher-Woman,' a full-length study. A basket of fish is balanced on the head, the bosom is half bared; and beneath the skirt, which reaches quite to the ankles, a pair of Dutch canal-boat shoes thrust themselves obtrusively into view. The background is the bay; with a fleet of fishing-smacks, and a sandy shore with here and there an anchor buried in the sand. I drank my fill of the pleasure which this picture gives to every one who sees it, but when I turned away, and the spell was broken, I doubted whether Mr. Edwards found among the Holland fisherwomen the beauty whom he has painted."

Republican Success in Union.

The election for Freeholders in Union county, March 11, as already stated in THE PRESS, resulted in favor of the Republicans, who carried Cranford, Clark, Linden, Westfield and Springfield townships by increased majorities.

The new Board of Freeholders will stand—Republicans, 10; Democrats, 7. Freeholder West, against whom a bitter fight was made in Linden, was elected by 61 majority. Littell (Rep.) carried Cranford by 40 majority, defeating Freeholder Van Sant (Dem.).

The board for 1890-91 will be as follows:

Elizabeth—Bonnie, D., O'Sullivan, D., Trabold, D., Roesch, D.
Rahway—Wright, R., Howard, R.
Plainfield—Hubbard, R., Vanderbeek, R.
Westfield—Pierson, R.
Fanwood—Kyte, R.
Cranford—Littell, R.
Linden—West, R.
Union—Roby, D.
Springfield—Bell, R.
Clark—Thompson, R.
Summit—Brant, D.
New Providence—Jones, D.
Republicans, 10; Democrats, 7.

COUNCILMAN ROBERTS DESERTS "THE BIG 6."

He Was Open to Conviction, and Mr. Hering Wins the Fight

A MEMORABLE MIDNIGHT COMMON COUNCIL MEETING.

Public Spirit, Personal Sincerity and Partisan Zeal Contrasted—An Earnest Discussion as to the Sacredness of Business Obligations—A New Scheme to Oust the Democratic Water Committee Appointed by the Chair and to Put in Power a Water Board of Republican Complexion.

Engineer Rudolph Hering will continue to supervise the construction of Plainfield's water works. The proposition to cancel his contract with the city was defeated by a vote of one majority. The ballot revealed Councilman Roberts back in the Grand Old Party traces, and the sudden pronounced Republicanism of his wavering vote prevented the victory which had been predicted to Councilman Hetfield's resolution to oust Mr. Hering from his position.

Those who voted for the resolution were five—Councilmen Gallup, Hetfield, Moffett, Smith and Spangenberg. Against the resolution there were six—Councilmen Dunham, Jenkins, Johnson, Newhall, Roberts and Rushmore.

The meeting of the Council lasted till nearly midnight. It was attended by a large number of as representative citizens as have ever assembled in the Council chamber. Not a member of the Councilmanic Board was absent. From the outset very interesting proceedings were expected, and after City Clerk Coward had read the minutes of the last meeting and Mr. Newhall had introduced a resolution that the rules be suspended, that the resolution having for its object Mr. Hering's removal be taken up, and that after the Councilmen had spoken on the subject the citizens be given a chance to have their say, the interesting proceedings began.

Mr. Hetfield thought that the citizens should be heard before the Councilmen. The citizens were present to give their views, that the Councilmen might vote in accordance with them.

Mr. Newhall held that the citizens ought not to be put to the embarrassment of speaking on the subject before the Councilmen had fully ventilated and explained the matter.

Mr. Hetfield urged that the citizens were to enlighten the Councilmen. Discussion was prolonged, but Mr. Hetfield failed to secure the passage of an amendment that the citizens speak first, and the original resolution prevailed.

When Mr. Hetfield's famous resolution was again before the Council there was a span of silence; then Mr. Newhall arose and opened the debate.

He had expected—he said—that the movers of such a resolution as this would take the floor and explain their reasons for offering it for passage. The Council and the citizens ought to be fully informed as to the nature of the charges brought against the engineer whose contract was to be cancelled. Going into the history of the entire water works question, Mr. Newhall showed that Mr. Hering had not been chosen to take charge of the construction until after most rigid examination the old Water Committee had satisfied itself that no better man, no better engineer, could be procured. The new Water Committee had come into power evidently prepared to block from its conception the Hering contract. A resolution similar to the present one had been prepared by Mr. Hetfield at a former meeting. When it was learned that the Mayor had signed the contract the resolution was laid aside. The resolution under discussion had been offered at the last meeting with the statement of Mr. Hering's incompetency, because of his lack of the experience necessary to fit him for being a competent supervising engineer, because of Mr. Hering's having neglected his duty in not being present in Plainfield so much as he ought, attending to the work of which he had charge, because of his incorrect statements to Council in his last report, because of extravagance and exorbitant fees. The burden of proof was on the introducers of the resolution; they must prove the truth of their claims; they must prove the existence of every claim.

Mr. Newhall believed that the charges made against Mr. Hering were entirely unwarranted, and he was prepared to contradict anything which might be presented in support of them, but at present he would content himself with one or two brief explanations concerning matters which seemed to have been misunderstood. Regarding the alleged extravagancy of the contract with Mr Hering, he would say that the impression which had obtained in some quarters that Mr. Hering first made a proposition charging from $10,000 to $15,000 and that he subsequently reduced this price to $5,500 was without foundation in fact. The first and only proposition made by Mr. Hering was that he should receive three per cent of the actual cost of the water works, this to include all preliminary work, or $5,500 for the works completed, with extra compensation for the preliminary work. The last Council chose between these two plans and agreed to pay $500 for the preliminary work. It was possible that this error had arisen because of confusion with figures brought prominently forward early last year, when something like $17,000 was estimated as the probable cost of water works and sewerage. He himself did not consider $5,500 an extravagant price for a man competent to fill the position to which Mr. Hering had been appointed. For this sum Mr. Hering agreed to give his personal services so far as necessary for the best interests of the city, in carrying out the contract with the water company. He agreed also to keep on the ground all the time a resident engineer and agreed when the work was pushed to place other engineers on the ground at his own expense if necessary. The compensation of $5,500 covered the entire time from the signing of the contract between the city and the water company to the completion and acceptance by the city of the works, whether it took one year, two years or three years. No other proposition made to the committee or Council last year had been so economical as this.

All through the contract, in section after section, matters of the most vital importance were left entirely subject to the final approval of the supervising engineer for the city. It was highly essential that so responsible a position as this should be filled by a man who could be trusted, one in every way competent to do the work, one beyond the possibility of fraud—and that was the kind of a man who held the position today. The contract was a solemn covenant, and that covenant it was proposed to cancel without any cause whatever.

Mr. Smith did not understand that Mr. Hering was bound to supervise the works beyond one year for $5,500, and the contract being read he insisted that the present appearance of things indicated that the building of the works would take more than one year and that at the end of that period Mr. Hering would come forward and demand additional compensation for future work. Because Mr. Hering would probably ultimately receive more than the price set was why he favored cancelling the contract.

The first outside citizen to take part in the discussion was ex-Councilman Alexander Gilbert, who made a forcible address, supplementing it with a long list of Plainfield's most honored citizens and taxpayers who wished Engineer Hering retained.

It is with reluctance—said Mr. Gilbert—that I appear to take part in the discussion on this pending resolution. I come in response to the general call of Council to represent a large number of citizens and taxpayers who have asked me to present their views.

I come to present my views as a business man, to look at this thing from a business outlook, to enter this discussion in a plain, practical, business-like manner, in opposition to the adoption of the resolution.

To a man who has a keen appreciation of the sacredness of a contract and of the good faith which animates both parties, this proposition is strange and startling. The contract is scarcely three months old. Its ink is hardly dry. No important work has been begun. Nothing has transpired to change the relations of the contracting parties. The same condition of things exists today that existed at the date of signing. Neither party gives proof of any violation, and why should the contract for no good and sufficient reason be abruptly and violently set aside? It is alleged that Mr. Hering is incompetent. I must say that the gentlemen making this charge must have been misinformed. I never met Mr. Hering. I have no personal interest in him, either direct or indirect; but when my attention was brought to this matter I inquired among business men and water works authorities, to ascertain his standing and reputation. I received but one answer—he is a leading authority in his profession; he is acknowledged to be a skillful and reputable hydraulic engineer of long experience; drainage and water supply are so closely allied that in becoming master of one he has become master of the other. He is thoroughly competent. He has considered all the important questions involved. That is the kind of a man we want. He stands between the water company and the city and sees that the city gets all to which it is entitled. His skill and knowledge fit him to perform exactly this kind of work. If human testimony is of any value he is preeminently qualified to continue in this position.

Again, it is claimed that the compensation is exorbitant. Mr. Hering at his own expense provides a resident engineer, a man of no mean capacity, who has himself occupied an official position such as this, a man who has all the experience necessary to see that the works are properly constructed and completed. The sum is not very exorbitant. At every step of progress skill, ability, experience, have to be utilized. The contract calls for a careful inspection of all specifications and plans; everything is subject to his approval. He must be familiar with the source and quality of the water, the quality of the materials, the machinery, the steam pumps, the boilers, the wells, the pipes, the grade of pipes—all call for experience, knowledge and skill. And here is the man of skill and ability you want.

Professional men are not paid for their manual labor, but for their knowledge, ability, skill, brain power. You don't hire a lawyer and compensate him for the pages of foolscap he has written or the number of law points he has hunted up, but for representing you properly before the courts. You call your physician in to attend a critical case. It is an hour of danger. He carries the patient safely through the crisis. When you settle his bill you don't pay for the number of miles ridden, or the number of hours spent at the bedside, or the number of grains of medicine. The professional skill has wrought a saving work; you pay for that. The architect is not paid for the number of sheets of paper used or the number of plans drawn. He is paid because he had the knowledge and ability to see that your work was properly done. So your supervising engineer is not to be paid for the hours he has spent in police duty, one day after another, inspecting every minute detail. He is to be paid for the professional skill and knowledge which shall enable him in the end to say gentlemen, your works are properly constructed, and I accept them on behalf of the city.

There is an element of danger in the costly litigation that might arise were the contract cancelled. The city may seem to have the option to cancel, but there may be a legal obstacle. The contract is to be judged by its letter. It was made in good faith by both parties. They solemnly pledge themselves to act honorably. The city has no more right to violate the contract than has Mr. Hering. The option of revocation clearly explains itself. If the works were abandoned by the company, or further work was refused, and it seemed that the city had no longer any need of an engineer, the contract might be terminated, but don't think that you can terminate it without good and sufficient cause. Mr. Hering has his rights under the contract.

When two men make a contract what is meant? That they will act in good faith. Good faith underlies all important positions in society. What higher term of praise than "His word is as good as his bond!" And when you say a man's contract is not worth the paper it's written on you consign him to everlasting infamy. The honor of the city is at stake. Its word is solemnly pledged. Is it not nobler and better faithfully to carry out the terms of the contract than to have this Council leave a record which would tarnish the fair name of the city?

At the close of his speech Mr. Gilbert read the citizens' petition, which set forth that the contract had been given most thoughtful consideration by the former Council, that after careful investigation Mr. Hering had been chosen as the most competent person to take charge of the supervision, that he had been identified with the work from the outset, that it was "a bad time to swap horses when crossing the stream," that the contract ought not to be terminated save for the strongest reasons, that Mr. Hering had as high a reputation as any hydraulic engineer in the United States, that he had drawn plans for and constructed many large works, that he had engineered Chicago's $25,000,000 water works and sewerage system; Philadelphia's $20,000,000 system; Atlanta's $500,000 system; and the systems at Ashville, N. C.; Toronto, Canada; and other places; that he was at present one of the Board of Engineers appointed by the President to improve the sewerage system of Washington, D. C.; that his work in the leading cities made him rank foremost at the head of his profession; that he is a man of faithfulness and integrity; that it would not be good economy to depose the best engineer in the United States for an inferior man when the best man's figure was as low as $5,500; that it would be a breach of faith and an unfair dealing to terminate the contract on a mere quibble over a loophole which was meant to provide for honest contingencies.

Mr. Joseph W. Yates thought that the supervising engineer should be a man of sterling integrity. If Mr. Hering was such a man why should he be removed?

Mr. W. P. Williams, who himself has had twenty-five years' experience with contracts, thought that the matter ought to be speedily settled so that the company should not feel a hesitancy and imperil their time-limit. Why was there this constant fault-finding? What meant this insulting proposition of inviting citizens to a meeting to consider a proposition to throw slurs on the good name and the financial status of the city? The indorsers of the resolution had no business to threaten the contract. It was a most inappropriate thing to clog the work whose speedy completion the people desired.

Ex-Councilman Lemuel W Serrell had three questions in his mind: Whether Mr. Hering was competent; whether the amount of salary was too much; who desired the change? Astonished at the idea of cancelling the contract without cause, he had made careful inquiries. He had ascertained to his own satisfaction that Mr. Hering was eminently competent, and that the usual charges were from 2½ to 5 per cent. on the entire cost of the work. Who wanted the change? He couldn't find out. There was considerable outcry; what was the object? They were trying to get Hering out for no apparent purpose. What was under the surface?

You handle the first public works in Plainfield. You have an opportunity to make yourselves illustrious. I remember the feelings with which I read on a commemorative slab the names of the members of the Council who built the Croton works in New York. I hope to see the names of this Council carved on a tablet more lasting than stone because of duty done, the city protected, a lasting credit brought to the place. A contract plainly, honestly, judiciously drawn, as this is, ought not to be set aside till broken.

Editor Frost of The Engineering News paid Mr. Hering high encomium. Mr. Frost has dealings with all the engineers in the United States, and considered himself qualified to pass accurate judgment. In his opinion Mr Hering was the leading hydraulic engineer in the United States. He didn't know where the city could go to find as good a man for so small a salary. Mr. Frost kept a record of all the water works in the United States and published such record yearly. He kept a record of contractors. His knowledge of the building of expensive works to sell again told him that it was a very easy matter to make a loss of $5,500. Mr. Hering took all the responsibility, and asked small compensation. The rebuilding of water works was a larger business today than the construction of new works. Mr. Hering would build works which would not have to be altered—only enlarged—to accommodate growth of the town. Plainfield could never make a better bargain than she had made with Mr. Hering.

Ex-Councilman Rowland Cox was glad to hear Mr. Frost's testimony of experience. Mr. Cox had inquired of other engineering editors and contractors and had been told repeatedly that the city had secured a bargain. The more carefully the matter was investigated the more resplendent appeared Mr. Hering's position.

Gen. VanBuren wanted to know what was the object of having the citizens attend the meeting. He had heard nothing but speeches all on one side. It was about time to hear from those favoring the resolution.

"If there's a nigger in the fence"—he said—"trot him out!"

Ex-Councilman J. W. Murray endorsed Mr. Gilbert's full and fair presentation of the case. He wanted no procrastination. Now was the time to act, settle this matter and let the work of construction go on unhampered by suspense. He was Frost's evidence was positive. The people wanted water at this end of the line. Let there be speed!

Finding all others through speaking, Councilman Hetfield broke his long silence. The citizens—he said—were here to tell the Council what they wanted done. It was not a question of $5,500. It was a question of finances beyond that—to what limit who could tell? Besides the $5,500 being paid by monthly salary, Mr. Hering had already received $500 for preparatory work and $300 for revising the work which he had not satisfactorily prepared. When the present Council had organized, Mr. Hetfield had made inquiries in New York, Philadelphia and other places as to Mr. Hering's competency to engineer water works, to judge whether or not he thoroughly understood his business and would honestly and fully protect the interests of the city. It was an important matter. The water works construction was entirely in the hands of the engineer. His duty was not a matter of being here occasionally. It was a matter of being here constantly, inspecting every pipe, every coupling. The engineer ought to have personal knowledge of and exercise personal supervision over every detail. Mr. Hetfield was not aware that any resident engineer was here at all. He understood that Mr. Hering's assistant was an aqueduct inspector from New York. He didn't know what an aqueduct inspector's duties were, but the New York World said that clerks, merchants, and what-not could become such an inspector if he had "pull" enough. He didn't understand even yet that Mr. Hering had ever constructed water works. He had made recommendations, but he had yet to hear that his plans had even been carried out. Parties of whom he had inquired had recommended Mr. Hering as thoroughly honest and honorable; there was no better sanitary or sewerage engineer in the United States, but regarding water works he didn't rate with some other engineers.

Mr. Hering has not to my knowledge—Mr. Hetfield continued—ever exercised personal supervision over any waterworks. As a gentleman his integrity is doubtless unimpeachable, but do we want him to work through some one else? The only motive the Water Committee had in introducing the resolution was to have the contract go to a man who would give the matter his personal supervision, who would see that no inferior lead, pipes, couplings, hydrants, were used. Mr. Hering, he was informed, had made two visits to the works since the contract was granted.

He had greatly enjoyed the eloquent address of Mr. Gilbert. He had no doubt that the signers to Mr. Gilbert's petition signed it in good faith, but if they all had read it over before signing, it must have been out a good while.

As regarded Mr. Hering's salary, he had made investigation, and had found that an engineer of the highest recommendation would contract to do the work of personal supervision for $250 per month. Another engineer of high standing would do it for $200.

Concluding, Mr. Hetfield said he wished only to protect the interests of the city. If the Council could get a man to do the work for $3,000 it was their duty to save the difference. The contract distinctly stated that should the city so elect at any time it might cancel the contract by paying for the engineer's services already performed. Mr Hering evidently could not give personal supervision. Others could. In his opinion $5,500 was too much. Better service could be procured for less money.

Mr. Rushmore said that until the last gentleman had spoken he had been waiting patiently for good, honest, square reasons for the cancelling of the contract, and he must say that what he had said two weeks ago about being out in the vague still held true. His ideas of his opponents' reasons were no clearer than before. The gentleman's arguments were so full of error there were useless to try to make all corrections. As to water works construction, the Chicago works were completed satisfactorily under Mr. Hering's plans. One trouble with the water committee seemed to be that it had started this thing going before proper investigation had been made, before actual proofs had been obtained. It ought to have taken the same trouble that some of the citizens had set the example of. It had been aptly asked why the call to citizens had been issued. The evidence of the Water Committee was insufficient. They had gone off "half-cocked." As to personal visits, he had seen Mr. Hering's commutation ticket to Plainfield. It was sorely punched, and he had made a number of trips on collected tickets when his commutation ticket had been forgotten.

Mr. Dunham said that he had thought all along that this meeting of citizens with Council was uncalled for. For himself individually and for the majority of the Council he could say that the rescinding of the contract ought not to be. In behalf of the Council of 1889, which had spent night after night exercising its think-tank over the question, he thought he ought to say something, and he would say that the work ought to be let proceed without further hindrance or additional opposition.

In reply to Mr. Rushmore's statement concerning lack of preparation, Mr. Hetfield said that he thought the Water Committee had investigated the question as carefully as anyone in Plainfield. The gentleman was not treating the Committee justly. The Committee was acting in good faith, regardless of personality.

Mr. Hetfield presented a petition signed by a number of business men and others asking that the Hering contract be annulled because of the exorbitant salary demanded and because of Mr. Hering's lack of practical experience in constructing water works. The petition further asked that the Council get an engineer who would give personal supervision at a less expense.

When the roll was called and it was found that the resolution was lost and that Mr. Hering was retained the lobby applauded with considerable vigor.

After the transaction of routine business relating mainly to the introduction of minor petitions and other matters which will receive attention at future meetings, Mr. Rushmore made an attempt to take the control of the erection of the water works entirely from the Water Committee and presented a resolution providing for the election by ballot of a Water Board consisting of 3 members of Council.

Mr. Hetfield was on his feet in an instant. "It is now very evident indeed"—he said—"that there is a colored person in sight. If anyone has any objection to my serving on the Water Committee I'd like to know it. This is a most unusual proceeding. The appointment of a committee by ballot! And yet these gentlemen proclaim that there is no politics in their opposition! They propose to take away the prerogative of the chair! If they don't like the Water Committee let them make a Board and make it all Republicans! Make it solidly Republican!"

Mr. Rushmore said that the ordinary rules of order and the provisions of the water contract legitimatized his present resolution. The object was not politics. The gentleman was always crying politics; was it because of the politics which he put into things himself? The water works question was the most important ever before Council. All the great work was yet to come. The matter deserved to be treated by a Board specially appointed for the purpose by the entire voice of Council. This was no reflection on the Water Committee.

"I take it as a reflection"—responded special committee of three were appointed by the chair to confer with the Water Committee, but this present is a most unusual proceeding." Mr. Hetfield incorporated his suggestion in an amendment, which was lost by the set vote of the evening—6 to 5. Mr. Rushmore urging that a joint committee of six would be too bulky and would be a majority of Council.

The original motion being carried, Mr. Rushmore moved to proceed to ballot, those securing the three highest votes to be considered elected.

"Another unusual proceeding!"—interjected Mr. Hetfield—"No nominations either? No candidates? How are we to know for whom we are to vote?"

Mr. Rushmore said he was disgusted at having the question of politics continually brought up. If nominations were insisted on he should nominate every Councilman.

"Oh, no! You cannot nominate me!"—said Mr. Hetfield. Because I am already on the Water Committee.

President Moffett said that in all his experience he had never heard of such an election which ought properly to be an appointment by the chair.

Mr. Rushmore retorted that if he were in the chair he should feel relieved of the responsibility. Mr. Rushmore also insisted that no nominations were necessary, but after Mr. Newhall made a speech favoring nominations he said he wouldn't object if they were made.

Mr. Hetfield thought it peculiar that Mr. Rushmore should coincide with Mr. Newhall on a proposition which he had rejected when coming from Mr. Hetfield.

Various nominations were made, but as most of the Councilmen declined to serve the matter was tabled, but not until after Mr. Hetfield had again scored Mr. Rushmore for seeking to make highest votes win and not majorities.

The people's sewerage bill, prepared carefully to meet Plainfield's exigencies, was presented by Mr. Hetfield for the special committee which had prepared it. The committee wished Council's unanimous endorsement of the bill, but as one or two amendments and delays were suggested, and as the bill was to come up at Trenton today, the bill was withdrawn from consideration.

Councilmen Newhall, Hetfield and Spangenberg were appointed a committee to confer with a citizens' committee to present to the Central Railroad reasons why the freight house should be removed and replaced by driveways and sidewalks. Messrs Hetfield and Spangenberg declined to serve. Mr. Rushmore declined. Mr. Newhall said that he should be glad to be relieved from serving, but when the President said he must work he would. President Moffett insisted that the committee originally named serve. To Mr. Hetfield the citizens are indebted for bringing up the freight house matter for this action. The petitions in circulation for the removal have been signed by citizens representing seven-eighths of the city's taxable valuation.

The street railway matter was brought up by Mr. Smith for the Committee on Streets and discussed, but was referred back to the Committee for presentation in proper shape preparatory to the granting of a franchise. The probable route was announced as follows:

No. 1.—From North avenue railroad station through North avenue to Park ave., to Sixth st., to Plainfield ave, to Fourth st; to Monroe ave.

No. 2.—Fourth st., to Grant ave., to Front st., to Park ave., to North ave., to station.

No. 3—Somerset street from Front street to the city limits.

No. 4—North avenue to Peace street, to Broadway, to Woodland avenue, to La Grande avenue, to Broadway.

Necessary right of way has been secured all along the line.

THE MARKET NEVER BROKE.

YET IT WAS THE BIGGEST SALE OF ITS KIND EVER HELD IN THE CITY.

Over $35,000 Paid for Sarah Latimer's Stock in the Plainfield Banks, Yet It Was Only a Drop in the Bucket of $900,000 She Left in Bonds and Securities.

The largest sale of Plainfield bank stock ever known in this city, took place Thursday, in Laing's hall, but the big block of stock disposed of was a very small part of the assortment of gilt-edged certificates, first-class bonds and prime stock left by Sarah Mitchell Latimer when she died at her home on East Front street, a few months ago, worth over $900,000.

The executors had advertised the sale of 209 shares of First National stock and 68 shares of City stock, and some thought that throwing so much on the market at once by auction, would break the price. Yet, although it seemed so much and netted about $35,000, there was one simple little certificate left behind by the dead woman among a lot of others, that represented $140 000 worth of stock in the New York & New Haven railroad.

The sale attracted a gathering of old residents and investors, who owned collectively quite a heap of money themselves. There were present Abraham Dunlap, John Ross, Levi Hetfield, L. L. Martin, J. Frank Hubbard, Walter Scott, John Simpson, E. R. Pope, S. C. Peck, Wm. M. Stillman, R. M. Stelle, W. L. Gavett, Clayton Ryder, O R. Stelle, A. B. Darby, Geo. F. Opdyke, H F. Stites, W. K. McClure, A. G. Conant, C. K. Compton, Frank S. Runyon, J. F. MacDonald, Wm. H. Shotwell, Frank H. Gardner, J. B. Miller, Nelson Runyon, Chas. A. Reed, W. L. Hetfield, Frank M. Bacon, Wallace Vail, William S. Campbell and a hundred others.

The result of the sale was that the City stock showed an advance in price, and the First National a very slight fall. If THE PRESS is not mistaken, the last of the former sold brought 110, and when the Cora O. Meeker stock in the First National was sold it brought 135. But there was so large an amount of the latter sold that day, and so much less of the City, the natural consequence was a light drop in the First National. Worth had not so much to do with the price as is generally the case. Buyers bought what they wanted only, and if it ran a half-point over what they pleased, they simply stopped bidding and waited for another lot to be put up and knocked down at their own price.

Messrs E. R. Pope and F. H. Gardner watched the interests of the City National bank, and Messrs John Simpson and F. S. Runyon looked after the First National. The facile and fluent Gillies was the auctioneer, Executors J. F. MacDonald and Nelson Runyon were the bookkeepers, and Executor Wm. H. Shotwell was general manager. The terms of the sale were, ten per cent cash and the balance before noon of next Tuesday.

The first share put up was of First National stock, and the auctioneer inquired, "What am I bid for this one share with the privilege of taking ten at the same price?" Mr. E. R. Pope facetiously said "110," and Mr. George F. Opdyke in surprise raised it to 115. But it did not stay long there, being rapidly coaxed along one point at a time by Cashier Runyon. He could not get anyone to give more than 134, however, and had to take it at that figure himself. Nobody gave more during the whole sale, while Mr. Charles A. Reed bought some of it as low as 130½.

The first lot of City National was started by Mr. Pope at the same price as he offered for First National, and he, too, had to take it himself at his last bid, 116. Mr Henry F. Stites, however, gave 117 for the next lot, but no one else did. The sale resulted thus:

The First National stock was bought by the following: F. S. Runyon, 6 shares at 134; Clayton Ryder, 30 at 134, 20 at 131½, 5 at 132½; A. B. Darby, 10 at 134, 10 at 132½, 10 at 131, 11 at 131½; John C. Welsh, 10 at 134; Henry F. Stites, 5 at 132½, 5 at 131½; O. R. Stelle, 6 at 134, 5 at 133; Charles N. Cole, 10 at 133½; P. P. VanArsdale, 5 at 132; Charles A. Reed, 10 at 132½, 11 at 132, 10 at 130½; C. K. Compton, 5 at 132½; W. L. Gavett, 5 at 132; A. G. Conant, 10 at 132; E. R. Pope, 10 at 131.

The City National stock was bought by the following: E. R. Pope, 30 shares at 116, 21 at 116½; Henry F. Stites, 10 at 117; F. S. Runyon, 7 at 116.

OFFICERS OF THE FRATERNAL CIRCLE.

Their Election and Installation.

A regular meeting of the Fraternal Circle was held in the Sons of Temperance rooms on Monday evening. Supreme Deputy McKenzie of Newark, called the meeting to order, and Mr. Geo. Carpenter was elected President pro tem. Mr. Wm. Mills was the Secretary. The following officers were elected, and later in the evening they were installed by Supreme Deputy McKenzie assisted by Chas. Haywood of Newark, as Supreme Marshal:

F. W. P.—George Rockafellow.
W. P.—George Carpenter.
W. V. P.—Mr. Sack.
W. S.—Wm. W. Mills.
W. M. E.—Dr. Andrew Manning.
W. C.—Mrs. S. A. Mattox.
W. M.—Mrs. P. Manchester.
W. G.—W. J. Mattox.

After the election and installation services, the meeting adjourned until Wednesday evening next, when new applications for membership will be received.

Banquet of the Sons of St. Patrick.

The first annual banquet of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, which was held in St. Mary's Hall Monday night, was the most thorough success in every way that could be imagined, and even surpassed the great expectations of the association. There were 94 members and invited guests assembled at the table at 8:30 o'clock, when an eloquent address of welcome was delivered by Mr. Andrew E. Kenney, President of the Friendly Sons. A divine blessing was invoked by the Rev. Father Smyth, after which an elaborate and bountiful menu was enjoyed. Then toast-master Kenney told of the object of the association, and began announcing the toasts.

The first was, "The Day We Celebrate," to which the Rev. Mr. Smyth responded in a most entertaining manner. The other toasts were as follows, each of which called forth an eloquent, interesting and humorous speech: "The State of New Jersey," Hon. John Ulrich; "THE PRESS," Editor W. J. Leonard; "The United States," Mr. J. L. Anderson; "The Ladies," Hon. J. R. Martine Music was interspersed, and the vocalists were the Rev. J. A Stafford, John O'Rourke, E. J. Harding, John Trainor and Wm. Brown. The Rev. Mr. Stafford's songs were great successes, and called forth many encores.

The Rev. Father Freeman's address closed the evening's enjoyment. He thanked the Committee of Arrangements, of which Secretary T. A. McCarthy was the Chairman, for the enjoyable affair, and proposed three cheers for all who had a hand in the entertainment, which were heartily given.

—In answer to a correspondent THE PRESS would say that Freeholders Bulman and Jones of North Plainfield are only elected to serve a one year term.

TO START AS THE CITY DECIDES.

The 106 Who Have Subscribed the Money for the "Boys' Club"—A Meeting to be Held Friday Evening.

The public meeting to organize the Boy's Club will be held on Friday evening at 8 o'clock. The Rev. J. C. Collins of New Haven, Conn., so widely known as the successful organizer of Boys' Clubs, has accepted the invitation to address the meeting. Superintendent Randall Spaulding, of Montclair, New Jersey, has also kindly consented to come and speak upon Manual Training. With such an array of talent, the meeting ought to be a most interesting one.

All subscribers and all interested in this movement are earnestly requested to be present, and not only use their influence to make the meeting a large one, but also to give the visiting speakers a welcome worthy of Plainfield. A special invitation is extended to the City Council and the Board of Education to be present. It is desired that the city form this new society which seems to have aroused much warm interest. The meeting will elect all officers and managers. Keep in mind that this Boys' Club will start, as the city decides.

NORTH PLAINFIELD SCHOOL MEETING.

Reports of the Trustees Received—Mr. E. L. Bonney Elected Trustee in Place of Mr. Geo. F. Brown.

The voters of North Plainfield met in the school house on Tuesday, for the purpose of electing one trustee, receiving the annual reports, and ordering a district tax to pay the school expenses and the salaries of the teachers for the coming year. Hon. Chas. Place was elected Chairman. The Secretary read the call, after which Mr. Geo. F. Brown, the District Clerk made his annual report of the receipts and disbursements in substance as follows:

Total receipts	$19,420.90
Total expenditures	13,609.05
Balance on hand	$ 5,811.85

Teachers' salaries	$ 8,300
Janitor	550
School supplies	250
Building supplies	300
Repairs, etc	300
Fuel	300
Incidentals	200
	$10,200

The report stated that $6,200 was expected from the State, and that $4,000 was necessary in the District for the coming year. The report was received and filed.

President H. K. Carroll of the Board of Trustees, made a supplementary report in which he stated that the average attendance since the school opened in September has been 550. The total enrollment is 669. Of the latter number 461 belong to classes which occupy the first floor, thus indicating an excess over the normal capacity of the floor of 161 scholars. These 161 scholars have been provided for by over-crowding some of the rooms and placing a class in the basement. One class of 132 scholars was also divided into morning and afternoon sessions. The report went on to urge the necessity for increased school facilities. There has been but one change in the corps of teachers. Miss McCoy has been placed in charge of the sixth grade, to fill a vacancy caused by resignation. "Our teachers," says the report, "are a faithful and competent body of instructors, and are steadily increasing the efficiency of the school." The report was filed.

Mr. E. L. Bonney was elected a trustee to succeed Mr. Geo. F. Brown who refused to accept a reelection.

A recommendation of the trustees to raise $4,000 for school purposes was adopted.

A long discussion followed on the matter of increasing the number of school trustees from three to five, but a motion to increase the number was lost.

MRS. THOROUGHGOOD'S THOROUGH BAD HUSBAND.

She's Hunting Him, But Claims the Yellow Widow Brown Has Him Hid.

A Mrs. Thoroughgood, who claims to be the mother of four children and a resident of Newark, was in this city Tuesday hunting for her husband said to be a former barber at the Hotel Netherwood. She wants him to contribute to the support of her children, at least.

Mrs Thoroughgood claims she has positive proof that her husband has been living with Mrs. Brown, a yellow-skinned widow of Plainfield who is quite a belle among her race here. The recreant husband has been sought for before, but it is said that Mrs. Brown always "had him hid." All the parties concerned are colored.

North Plainfield's New Committee.

The North Plainfield Township Committee will meet in Spencer's Hall, on Friday evening at eight o'clock, at which time the new board will meet and organize for the ensuing year. The board consists of Messrs H. R. Fairchild, A. P. Voorhis and Elias Allen.

—Mr. Frank Smith, the courteous and efficient clerk at the City Hotel, yesterday severed his connection with the hotel, to accept a more remunerative position in the city.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Our New Salesroom.

In our basement on the Broadway side, we have fitted up a new, commodious, well-appointed salesroom. It was opened last week and has been even more successful than we had hoped, greatly increasing our facilities for accommodating customers.

We call attention to the peculiar advantages in price and quality of goods which will always be afforded in this department; it may be reached from either floor of the old store or directly from Broadway.

We are now selling there large lines of Silks, Dress Goods and Cloths, of thoroughly reliable make, at lower prices than we have ever quoted before.

We invite a visit of inspection in this new department; it will surely be followed by a second.

BOUGHT BY THE LEHIGH VALLEY R. R.

A $13,000 Real Estate Transaction at New Market.

The Mahlon Vail farm of 141 acres at New Market has been sold to a party named Schenck—the price is said to be about $13,000. It is learned upon good authority that the purchase is made in the interest of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company, whose necessities upon the completion of their new line to Jersey City will require more room for rolling stock to be used in building up a new suburban route. The balance of the property will be placed in the market as building lots

This is the farm which was assessed at $45 per acre and which was declared a 50 per cent. valuation. The recent sale proves the correctness of the claim that the assessment was unjust to the taxpayers.

MAKE A MOVE!

Veterans Want the Monument Hurried.

The matter of erecting a soldiers monument in Plainfield is still in the hands of a committee and sub-committee of the G. A. R. Veterans speaking of the matter this morning expressed the hope that the project would soon be taken up for final action, as thorough success depended greatly on prompt measures. Several plans are still under consideration by the committees, who await the return of a leading officer to town before making final report to the Post. It is considered important that the ultimate plans be definitely announced, that subscriptions may be secured for the amount necessary for completion of the work. The time is drawing nigh when begins the egress of wealthy citizens for their Summer pleasure trips, and it is desired by those interested that final agitation of the matter soon be made. One point seems already to be determined, the monument—a handsome and costly structure—is not to be doomed to ornament some unseen spot, but will occupy the commanding site in the triangle in front of the Crescent Avenue church. For this result a measure of thanks is due to THE PRESS.

A FALSE ALARM AT MIDNIGHT.

Make an Example of the Man Who Dragged the Firemen From Their Beds.

At half-past 12 o'clock of Friday night, somebody in either the engine or truck house on West Second street, rang up the central office and said that John W. Murray's house, at Eighth street and Central avenue, was on fire. Chief Doane was telephoned to and a general alarm was rung.

The entire department turned out with great promptness. The Chief had no sooner reached the house reported, and examined it and the stable from the outside, when his men and apparatus were there too. But there were no signs of fire anywhere. Mr. Murray was awakened, but he could not even find a breath of smoke.

Effort should be made to discover who telephoned the false alarm, and an example made of the guilty one. It was fun for him, possibly, but not for the faithful firemen who were called out of their beds.

Tried to Wreck a Grocery.

Alex. Wilson came from Newark yesterday and found himself unable to stand the influence of Plainfield rum. On Fourth street he tried to wreck a grocery store, and was in the midst of his depredations when arrested.

The evidence showed that he had set the grocer's wooden water-pails floating about in the mud and that he had demolished various stores exhibited on the sidewalk. Judge Codington sent him to jail for 30 days.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION

A. DEMAREST, - - City Editor.

—Oh, for a Y. M. C. A. building.

—After-Lenten weddings will be numerous.

—Building booms have somewhat depleted the lumber and brick yards.

—Ice machines are to be made and placed in the market for family use.

—THE PRESS is now regularly on sale at Mr. Jos. M. Harper's stationery store on Park avenue.

—Mr. Chas. Hand expects to have his new "Amphion Hall" ready for occupancy on or before April 1.

—Nova Scotia seed potatoes are advertised for sale by E. R. & W. A. C. Earle, Elizabeth, N. J. See advertisement in another column.

—Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank, K. of P., met in regular business session, Monday evening, but only matters pertaining to the order were considered.

—Richard Stockton, on Tuesday, dislocated his right shoulder wrestling. The unfortunate lad was taken to Dr. Endicott's office, where the bones were set.

—As soon as the weather becomes settled, a series of trotting events will take place on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park association on Park avenue.

—It is understood that an examination was made yesterday to ascertain the cause of the death of the late J. N. Jenkins, but the result of the examination is not stated.

—There is no truth in the report that Mr. Cleaver's congregation have rented meeting rooms in the Chautauqua building. Anything that you don't see in THE PRESS, isn't so.

—At a regular meeting of Alpha Lodge, No. 4, I. O. of G. T., held in their hall, corner of Park and North avenues, Monday evening, two new members were enrolled on the list.

—A little lad wheeling a baby in its carriage on Park avenue, yesterday, ran off the curb and dumped the child into the gutter. It fortunately escaped a severe bruising or worse.

—The business meeting and sociable of the "Women's Society for Christian Work" of the Seventh Day Baptist church, appointed for yesterday, has been postponed until further notice.

—The bonded indebtedness of the township of North Plainfield for Johnston drive, will be wiped out this year with the payment of $1,500 and interest, the last of the series of bonds.

—The Plainfield Camera Club having given up their intention of leasing the hall in the Chautauqua building, it has just been rented to the congregation of Mr. Cleaver's First Church of Christ.

—It is reported that while Officer Lynch was attending to some duties "up stairs," at the station house, at noon, Monday, a prisoner scaled the board fence surrounding the yard, and made good his escape.

—Street Commissioner Meeker proposes that the ordinance relating to sidewalk encumbrances, shall be enforced. So if you have a sign, or samples of stoves, boxes or anything of the sort in front of your shop, take them in.

—Mr. Orie White of the Olympia bowling team, has surpassed his former record of 238, which has long been the highest in the city. Friday night in practice with others, he scored 261, making nine strikes, a spare in his fourth frame and a spare to wind up the strike in the tenth frame.

—The case of Thos. Thompson vs. Walter Runyon to recover a claim alleged to be due for carpenter work on some houses in North Plainfield, came up before Justice Nash and a jury Tuesday afternoon. Testimony was taken on both sides and the jury awarded the plaintiff $45.

—At the auction sale of the real estate of L. A. Rheaume, on Tuesday, the coal yard on Broadway and four dwelling houses on East Fourth street were sold to Mr. Nelson Runyon for $1,500 above the mortgage of $12,000, now on the property, and over the widow's dower right in the equity.

Her Sanity in Question.

Louisa Moore, aged thirty-eight, was committed to the Union County Jail Saturday, from Summit for a medical examination as to her sanity. The woman seems to have developed a violent form of lunacy, and will probably be removed soon to the Morris Plains Asylum. She has a husband and three children.

A Verdict for Mr. Smith.

A suit to recover $145 was tried before Justice Nodyne and a Plainfield Jury of twelve men Thursday afternoon. The principal of the amount involved was $105, and the balance was back interest. The plaintiff was J. Smith of White House, who sued Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Pickle of The Bridges, near Westfield, for the rental of a farm in 1882. An offset for more than the entire amount was presented by the defendants, but the Court ruled it out. The jury was out half an hour and returned a verdict of $105 for Mr. Smith.

A Baby-Carriage Runs Away.

Thumping noisily from step to step, and bounding from side to side of the narrow passageway, a baby-carriage whizzed down two continuous flights of stairs in a Park avenue dwelling this morning. The street-door was wide open and the carriage skated across the sidewalk and street and wrecked itself against a hitching post on the opposite side. The horses, though unused to such antics by perambulators, did not resent the intrusion on their section of the thoroughfare, but the pedestrians, in spite of their being accustomed to dodging baby-carriages at all times, hopped wildly about and behaved in a manner most frantic till it was ascertained that the runaway vehicle was unoccupied. The handle of the carriage had slipped from the clutch of the little girl who had been hauling the carriage up-stairs.

Officers of Trinity Commandery.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., met in their asylum, Monday evening, and worked the order of the Red Cross on two candidates. Following were the officers installed for this year:

Commander—E. M., S. K., Wm. H. Sebring.

The officers were installed by E. M., S. K., Wm. H. Sebring, assisted by Sir J. Kirkner as Marshal.

That tired, debilitated feeling, so prevalent in Spring, indicates depraved blood. Now is the time to prove the beneficial effects of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It cleanses the system, restores physical energy, and infuses new life and vigor into every fibre of the body.

—Church choirs are practicing Easter music.

Don't hawk, and blow, and spit, but use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Of druggists, 50 cents.

PERSONALIA.

A little boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. E. Harvey Doane Thursday night.

Mr. Fred Knowland of this city has resigned as general agent of the New York and New England railroad.

Messrs Jackson and Codington of this city have been re-appointed township counsel for Piscataway township.

Mr. Fred Loomis of Poughkeepsie gladdened the hearts of his many friends in this city Monday, by a flying visit.

James J. Dolliver and wife of South Branch, N. J., are visiting at Mr. G. Q. Dolliver's, 17 Manning avenue, North Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Abram Lufkins of Oradel, N. J., are visiting their son, Mr. Andrew Lufkins of Somerset street, in the Borough.

Mrs. J. M. Whitfield and family of Tenth street, will reside in New York for the future. They will probably leave for their New York home next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Norris of No. 88 Arlington avenue, celebrated the tenth anniversary of their marriage by holding a tin wedding at their residence, Monday night.

The Rev. W. E. Honeyman of North Plainfield, returned from Washington, D. C., on Saturday, where he has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Dr. Hawes, for a few days past.

Elkanah Drake of Newark, and W. D. Murray of this city, delegates to the Y. M. C. A. State Convention, addressed the congregation of the Methodist church at Millville, Sunday.

The only Democrat elected in Bernard Township was Dr. W. W. Dorland, Overseer of the Poor, and he is expected to take care of the rest of the Democrats left out in the cold.

Dr. C. A. Gregory's health which was so improved by a recent stay at Lakewood, is not so good since, and he has returned to that Winter resort among the pines of New Jersey.

Mme. Bernard, the North Plainfield astrologist, who died recently, is reported to have left all her property to Mrs. Ross, who lived in the rear of her lot on Harmony street.

Mr. William H Drayton, who spent the last four years in business West, has returned to Plainfield and will enter into partnership with his brother-in-law, Mr. Pope, as insurance brokers.

Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Vail of West Fourth street, are receiving the congratulations of their friends over the arrival of a daughter. The little one first saw the light of day on Saturday morning last.

At the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. David Clark of East Fourth street, at five o'clock, March 12, Miss Lizzie Sutton was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Daniel Schenck of East Front street.

Hon. E. R. Pope has received his commission as Postmaster of Plainfield, N. J. Postmaster Force personally delivered the official document. The new Postmaster will take possession of the office at any time he wills.

Counselor McClure received on Saturday his appointment as Supreme Court Commissioner. It is a well merited promotion and deserved honor. The appointment was signed by every judge on the Supreme bench at Trenton.

In celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of her birth, a surprise party was given Mrs. Wm. R. Mattox on Thursday. A large number of friends were present, and all thoroughly enjoyed the occasion. Numerous useful and ornamental gifts were bestowed.

At the morning service in the M. E. church, on Sunday, the Rev. C. B. Mitchell in alluding to the death of the late J. Newton Jenkins, a member of the church, stated that since his pastorate here, Mr Jenkin's pew had never before been vacant on a Sunday.

Margaret, daughter of Dairyman McIntosh, was married Tuesday evening at Gen'l Schwenk's Holly Grove farm, to Mr. Herman Pulver, of Lyons, N. Y. A South Plainfield clergyman officiated. The groom's wedding present was an elegant gold watch and chain.

Friends of Somerset's "Silver Tongued Orator," Peter S. Bergen, will be distressed to learn that he has become almost blind, and that he is now under treatment by a specialist. He expected to be in Somerville, however, on March 5, to celebrate his birthday.

Cards are out announcing the approaching marriage of Miss Lillie Voorhis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Cole of North Plainfield to Mr. William E. Cadmus of Brooklyn. The ceremony will take place at the bride's home, No. 23 Emily street, on Wednesday, March 26 at four P. M.

An out-of-town paper refers to Julian Scott's portrait of Mayor Male, recently presented to the Art Gallery, in these words: "The coloring is subdued in tone, and there is a dignified strength and beauty in the painting, which is probably the best of Mr. Scott's portraits. It is the portrait of a friend by a friend, and full justice is done to the subject."

Ex-Councilman Wilton Fitz Randolph, formerly of this city, has been exonerated by the Southern Club, while Major William Hancock Clark has been expelled. Clark is the man who created a sensation on the evening of January 16, by firing his revolver four or five times, without effect, at Randolph, a fellow-member of the Club, in front of the club house in Twenty-sixth street, New York.

The Y. M. C. A., State Convention was called to order at Morristown, Friday, by Vice President W. D. Murray, of this city, who returned to the citizens of that place the thanks of the delegates for so kindly receiving them, and he hoped the Convention would leave its mark of good upon them. The delegates were urged to get all the good they could, and to carry it home to their local associations.

A Methodist sociable was held in Vincent chapel Friday night. There was a good attendance, though the evening was stormy, Mrs. F. Mintern Smith presided. The programme was very pleasing. Miss Edna Parks rendered several piano selections, and the Misses VanVliet and Morrison gave recitations. Solos were sung by Messrs W. B. Martin and Samuel Mitchell. Abundant refreshments were provided.

Mrs. Isaac Dunn, of 24 West Third street, who would have been 70 years old on the 21st inst., passed quietly away, Sunday night, after an illness of several years although only confined to her bed for one week. Bronchial trouble was the cause of death. She leaves a husband and three sons. The funeral services took place at her late residence on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment at New Market.

—The Elizabeth Herald, March 12, republished accounts of two attempts at highway robbery in this city. One account which was true, is taken from these columns but without credit and printed as the Herald's own. The other, which was a fake, is credited to the irresponsible paper in this city that printed it. The Herald has learned that "If it's in THE PRESS, its so;" but if it be in any other paper, don't accept the responsibility of it.

—With the thermometer at 70 degrees above zero, the thirteenth day of March, a woman in a sealskin cloak passed on Front street, greeted a woman with no wrap and a sunshade, and chatted about the horrid heat, and the blizzard anniversary, and the robins' early arrival, and the singing of the North American Summer insects now heard in the land. And on the one side of the street crocuses nodded gaily, while on the other a bank of snow chillily oozed its frostiness away. Such is life in these degenerate seasons.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm Bloodgood of Netherwood Heights, sailed today for Europe on the "City of Paris."

The latest advices regarding the health of Cashier Carmon Parse, who is still at Knoxville, Tenn., is to the effect that he is somewhat better, and is now able to be up and out of doors.

Mr. Edwin G. Bachman, the Gents' Furnisher, 119 Market street, Newark, was in our city on Tuesday. He is making money in Newark and investing it in Plainfield real estate.

Mr. Curtis G. Reynolds, a friend of Mrs. Hale at whose home in Los Angeles, Mrs. Burlingham died, volunteered to accompany the remains to this city. The journey, because of his personal care and interest, was accomplished in the remarkably speedy time of 5½ days.

An orchestra, composed of society ladies, greatly improved by practice during the last year, will give a concert just after Easter at Chickering Hall, New York. Among well-known ladies who are members of this orchestra, and who give much time to practising on instruments which a few years ago were thought to require a man to master them, are Miss Margaret Johnston, Miss Wotherspoon and Miss Fanny Johnston of this city; Miss Whitney, Miss Sherman, Miss Hewitt, Miss Turnure and Mrs. Gebhard, of New York, all of whom are violin and 'cello players. Miss Lucy Drexel, who is an accomplished harpist, is also a member of the orchestra, and Mrs. Henry Janin, whose favorite instrument is the kettle drum.

A HOUSEHOLD SAVED FROM DEATH.

Suffocation and Fire Averted by Prompt Action of Night Guardians.

Smoke was pouring from every nook and cranny of the building at Nos. 5 and 7 Somerset street when Nightwatchman Ben. Wright drew near the place at twenty minutes past three, March 13. Rapping on the pavement with his long night stick, and shouting that a house was afire, Wright promptly summoned policeman Eugene Laine, and together the twain thumped away on the entrance doors till the inmates of the building were aroused. A lively scene verging on a panic followed, but the coolness of the two guardians of the city's safety soon restored presence of mind. Investigation showed that a large panful of clothes had been left to soak in hot water on a kitchen stove, that the water had all boiled away, that the top of the stove had become red-hot, and that in consequence the clothes had caught fire and smoldered and filled the place with smoke. The garments were just bursting into a blaze when Laine and Wright arrived with extinguishing buckets of water. The entire household must have been smothered in a short time, and a serious fire would have followed, as the flames could easily have communicated with woodwork.

PLAINFIELD'S WATER SUPPLY.

The Tremendous Test That the "Underground Lake" Will be Put to.

Work has already been begun on the permanent plant of the Water Works company of Plainfield, at the location just North of Netherwood station. Six-inch wells are being driven, of which there are to be twenty.

As soon as five are completed, centrifugal engines will be put at work on them capable of pumping one million gallons in twenty-four hours. The pumps will be kept working night and day, and when all the wells are in use, four million gallons will be drawn from them every twenty-four hours.

Test tubes have been driven all over a territory of four square miles about the works. These will show if any lowering of the level of the water in them results from the continuous draft upon the wells. Contractor Moore is certain that in spite of the millions of gallons of water that will be pumped out, the supply below will not be affected in the least. The test tubes are expected to prove this.

Unfortunate George Staples.

George Staples, brakeman on drill engine No. 30, fell in front of the engine at Dunellen, 12th instant, and had part of his left foot badly injured. Dr. Fritts was summoned, dressed the wound and cared for the man.

Bound to Skip Rope Though the Heavens Fall.

A Franklin school girl was skipping rope merrily along West Sixth street recently, when she caught her foot, fell and struck her head on the pavement. She was stunned and remained insensible several minutes, but after resting at her home all the morning was able to slip out of doors and skip rope again.

They Were All Handsome, and Under 20.

The Crescent alleys were crowded with ladies on Monday evening, which has been set apart for them. About thirty ladies made scores ranging from 19 to 119.—Central Times.

It is more than unkind in the Central Times to intimate that the ladies at the Crescent alleys "made scores;" and it is wicked to state that these same ladies, whose appearance does not suit our fastidious contemporary, "ranged from 19 to 119."

This is Merely a Rumor Yet.

For some time there have been murmurings of dissatisfaction within the membership of Mr. Cleaver's church, at the encroachment of the management of the Reform Hall property upon their leasehold rights. An indifferent regard for the evenings set apart for church worship, have done much to impair the practical work of the congregation, and at last they have determined to look about for other accommodation.

In all probability this congregation will secure the hall in the Chautauqua Building, where they will have full control.

Thirteen at Dinner With Contractor Moore.

Mr. Charles K. Moore, the contractor for the Water Works of Plainfield, gave a complimentary dinner at his home in Fanwood, Tuesday, March 11, after the votes were counted, to Freeholder Kyte and the other Republican candidates whom he had worked so strenuously and successfully to elect in the Township.

There were present thirteen, including the two "Mascots" of the day—Miss Madeline Robinson and Master James Moore II—and all the elected. Mr. Kyte and others responded in great shape to the toasts proposed for each by the generous hostess.

The New Broom Sweeping Cleanly.

Street Commissioner Meeker has begun in a way to gratify the people, and he seems made of the stuff to keep it up. You can now cross North avenue for the first time in many weeks, without walking a block or so to a corner walk. The Commissioner tells THE PRESS that he will clean the principal business streets whenever they need it, if it is twice a week.

The late Street Commissioner was opposed to taking the mud off the streets—he said if he did the macadam would get worn out. The present Commissioner proposes to keep the streets free from mud and dust, and if the macadam is worn out he says he'll repair it. Instead of half-a-dozen at work on a job, Commissioner Meeker puts two at it and if they can't do it he will discharge them and give it to two others.

Children Cry for It.

If a child will take a medicine with pleasure, you may know that it is not in any way offensive to the taste. Children like HAMBURG FIGS, and it is no longer necessary to disgust them with castor-oil, 25 cents. Dose, one fig. Mack Drug Co., N. Y. For sale by J. G. Miller.

A WELL-KNOWN PLAINFIELDER GONE.

Mr. J. Newton Jenkins Suddenly Expires About Half-past Three O'clock Sunday Morning.

At his home, corner of Sixth and Washington streets, about half-past three o'clock Sunday morning, occurred the death of Mr. J. Newton Jenkins, a highly respected and universally esteemed resident of this city. Mr Jenkins was forty-nine years of age, and leaves a wife and four children to mourn his loss, besides a host of friends and acquaintances who will sympathize with the bereaved family in this their sad affliction.

Mr. Jenkin's death was sudden and unexpected, even to those most intimately associated with him. On Saturday night he was in town making some necessary purchases and returning home he retired for the night apparently enjoying moderately good health. His death followed about half-past three o'clock, as above stated. The cause of death is thought to have resulted directly from an accident to Mr. Jenkins, while the latter was at work at Allentown a few days ago.

As a business man, Mr. Jenkins will long be remembered by those who knew him. He was perhaps the first man in this locality who attempted to remove brick buildings, and in this as in other respects, he was eminently successful. He was at the time of his death a member of the M. E. church in this city. He was also a member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum.

HOW THEY'LL BE ENTERTAINED.

The Arrangements Already Made to Give the Wheelmen of the State a Big Time in Plainfield.

President Rushmore of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, appointed the following committee on the State Division League of American Wheelmen "Meet," to be held in this city on May 30 and 31:

Hotel and Reception—Dr. J. H. Cooley, chairman; Thos. S. Burr, R. Pound, Geo. S. Beebe, E L. Waiz, Jr., W. Lee Simmonds, D. C. Adams, Howard L. Emerson, Harold Serrell, D. H. Lenox, J. Frank Martin, Geo. W Morrison.

Banquet—Townsend Rushmore, F. L. Kirchoff, G. W. V. Moy, J. H. Hallock, Roger F. Murray.

Parade—F. L. C. Martin, chairman; J. E. Erickson, Stanton M. Smith, A. L. C. Marsh, Geo. C. Martin, Jr.

Runs—F. L. C. Martin, chairman; J. E. Erickson, Stanton M. Smith.

Several alterations were made in the programme laid out at the meeting held on February 15; the programme as amended being as follows:

May 29—Division Officers' and Local Consuls' meeting at 8 P. M., at Plainfield Bicycle Club.

May 30—General business meeting at 10 A. M.; lunch at hotel, 12 o'clock; runs to return at 3:30 P. M; banquet at 4:30 P. M; theatre party at 8 P. M.

May 31—Day parade, 9 A. M.; photograph taken at 11; lunch at 11:30; races at 2 P. M.

A Remarkable Showing.

By the death of the late J. Newton Jenkins, Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum of this city loses its first member by death. The Council has been in existence for over seven years, and this fact alone is considered something remarkable, when it is remembered that the Council includes over one hundred members.

A Small Fire.

Mrs. Thos. Fahy, who resides next to Gazelle Engine house on West Second street, went to bed Sunday night leaving a fire burning on a hearthstone. When she awoke early next morning the house was found to be filled with smoke. She immediately gave an alarm, and Mr. Emil Scheidecker, who was passing at the time rushed in and extinguished the fire which was fast burning away the beams under the hearthstone. No general alarm was sent out.

The Bi Club Enjoys a "Spread."

The handsome club house and "gym" of the Plainfield Bicycle club, was crowded on Saturday night with the members, who had assembled to partake of the "spread" supplied by the newly elected officers. The evening was spent in a very enjoyable manner. Dr. J. H. Cooley put the "boys" through a half-hour's course of instruction in calisthenics. The Messrs Hallock rendered several excellent selections on the banjo and they were warmly applauded.

A Deserved Compliment.

Councilman Hetfield of this city went to Elizabeth on Saturday and proved the will of the late Amy L. Moore, who died on March 3, leaving an estate valued at from $25,000 to $30,000. The will will now be offered for probate, and Mr. Hetfield is named as the sole executor. The entire estate, according to the provisions of the will, goes to two nephews and two nieces.

Mr. Hetfield is to be congratulated upon his appointment as sole executor of the estate.

Funeral of the Late J. Newton Jenkins.

The funeral of the late J. Newton Jenkins, who died early on Sunday morning, took place from his late home, corner of Sixth and Washington streets at eleven o'clock yesterday, the house being densely filled with the relatives and friends of the family, including delegates from Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum and from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73 G. A. R., both of which organizations Mr. Jenkins was a member of.

Beautiful and appropriate music was rendered by Mrs. C. B. Mitchell and Mrs. N. Hull. The floral display included a handsome crown from the Royal Arcanum, a floral badge from Post, No. 73, a bunch of lilies from the Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, and several other smaller designs from friends.

The Rev. C. B. Mitchell conducted the services, and spoke eulogistically of Mr. Jenkins, as a true Christian, and a kind and loving husband and father. He also offered prayer. The remains were interred in the Methodist cemetery.

In Memoriam.

The following was adopted at a special meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital:

In consideration of the interest manifested and efficient service rendered towards Muhlenberg Hospital, by our co-laborer and departed friend, Mrs. Burlingham; we, the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary Board, do hereby express our sincere appreciation of her intrinsic worth and faithfulness through these many years as Treasurer of our organization. We shall miss her genial presence and kindly greeting, for she has been (with only a short interruption) a constant attendant at our meetings. But we would remember that our loss is her great gain, and while we mourn her absence we cannot but rejoice that her wish has been granted, in that she is no longer separated from the dear ones gone before. We also realize that the Hospital has lost a valuable friend, inasmuch as Dr. Burlingham, being one of its founders, had evinced such devotion to its needs, she desired to assist in carrying on this charitable enterprise from which he had been removed; and her good works will necessarily follow her, for "she hath done what she could." May her example of faithfulness and loyalty to the Heavenly Father stimulate us to nobler purposes, that we, like her, shall be ready when the Master calls; whether it be in the morning, at noon or at night. We would also remember the friends bereft of a loving sister and relative. May they find comfort in the memory of a life fraught with beneficent labor, and may the abiding spirit rest upon them and us all, guiding us into pertinence and preparing us for whatever He, in His wisdom, is preparing for us.

AT REST.

The Remains of the Late Mrs. Burlingham Tenderly Laid in Evergreen Cemetery.

A scene of sadness was enacted at the First Baptist church, at three o'clock Tuesday afternoon, where many people had gathered to pay their last tribute to the memory of the late Mrs. Dr. Burlingham, who died at Los Angeles, Cal., on the 6th instant. The body of the church was filled with relatives and friends of the family, and among the mourners were noticed many colored people, with whom Mrs. Burlingham had labored in a spiritual and christian way. Besides there were present many members of the W. C. T. U., the Board of Managers of Muhlenberg Hospital, of which Mrs. Burlingham was treasurer of the Auxiliary Board, members of the city clergy, a large delegation from Mt. Olive Baptist church, and representatives of other religious bodies. The physicians of the city were also largely represented.

The service at the house consisted wholly of a prayer by the Rev. Dr. Yerkes, but when the funeral cortege arrived at the church, the services were of an impressive nature. The Rev. Drs. Yerkes, Lewis and Ketcham, led the funeral march to the foot of the altar, followed by the casket, borne on the shoulders of six of the undertaker's assistants, young colored men from the Mount Olive Sunday school, in whose company Mrs. Burlingham had labored and worked with earnest zeal for years. While the casket—laden with a beautiful wreath of flowers from the Hospital, a handsome bunch of calla lilies from Mt Olive Baptist Sunday school and another beautiful bunch of callas, the gift of Miss Schipper, a near and dear friend—was being carried in and out of the church, the mourners and friends remained standing.

A quartette, consisting of Mrs. J. K. Myers, Miss Alice Holmes, Messrs E. R. Runyon and Arthur Freeman, with Mr. Gaylord as accompanist, sang some beautiful and appropriate selections during the service.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis read the scripture, and the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes preached the sermon. The latter told of Mrs. Burlingham's confession of Christ, and of her joining the Baptist church many years ago. Her early years, he said, were passed in Illinois; part of her life she lived in New York State, but for many years she resided here. Dr. Yerkes characterized Mrs. Burlingham as a woman of intellectual ability, great strength of character and with the gentleness of childhood. She was not a woman of society, he said, but one who walked in the paths of happiness and contentment; she was known by her works. Dr. Yerkes told how Mrs. Burlingham had extended her christianity beyond the Relief Association, in which Association she was elected one of the first in an official way, and how her acts of charity had co-operated with other charitable institutions. Mrs. Burlingham also organized a night school among the colored people for the cultivation and elevation of the race.

He paid other fitting tributes to the deceased, alluding to the husband and four children who have gone before, adding, that she had now gone to join them in the Father's mansion. The choir sang beautifully, "Beyond the Smiling and the Weeping," after which the Rev. Dr. Ketcham made the closing prayer.

At the grave in Evergreen cemetery the Rev. Dr. Yerkes conducted the usual committal service, and the Rev. Dr. Lewis pronounced the benediction.

Good Music Devotionally Rendered.

The evening praise services in Dr. Ketcham's church, are creating a great deal of interest not only among the congregation but in the way of attracting visitors. It is proposed to hold them once a month, and they are intended as an effort to have both congregational and choir singing which is intelligent and yet worshipful—good music devotionally rendered.

The Bank Brings Suit.

The First National bank of Plainfield has instituted a suit against Aaron Allen, Elias Allen and William E. Jones, executors of the Spencer estate, and others for amounts ranging from $1,500 to $6,000. These amounts the bank is seeking to recover on notes which bear the forged indorsements of the victim of John L. Spencer's rascality. Spencer disappeared from Plainfield about a week ago and it is alleged that he manipulated forged notes to the extent of $25,000.—Press-Register.

A Young Woman Who Has Four Grandchildren.

Mrs. Gray of Spooner avenue, not yet thirty-five years old, and looking as young as a woman of ten years less, is the mother of eleven children, nine of whom are living. Two of her daughters are married and she is the grandmother of their four children.

Mrs Gray's mother, who is also living with her, is a young woman of 56, but a great grandmother. Mrs. Gray was married just as she entered her teens. She is a Scotchwoman by birth.

Presentation to the Rev. Mr. Dilts.

At the close of the Sunday school session in the Park Avenue Baptist church, Sunday afternoon, an interesting and impressive presentation was made to the Rev. A. E. Dilts, the pastor, by the scholars in Miss Clara Whitfield's primary department. The scholars marched into the school room, and the Rev. Mr. Dilts was called to the platform, when Miss Eva Moore, a six-year-old pupil, presented him with a handsome umbrella, on behalf of the primary department.

The Rev. Mr. Dilts was visibly affected by the proceedings. He responded in a touching manner.

Another Pledge Signer Gained.

Captain George D. Morrison preached a sermon at Hope chapel, Friday night, in which he congratulated himself that he was not a politician and expressed his condemnation of the license Councilmen of Plainfield. Owing to the weather and the roads, the attendance was small.

The speaker had three subjects—the sea, the sailor and the Saviour. He related how he had been led to go to sea by the reading of a novel; how he had sailed round Cape Horn when only a lad of 17; and how through it all his faith in the Lord had been his comfort and his companion. The curse of strong drink he had seen in its most terrible aspects, and his warnings against it were most effective.

The meeting was closed, and the pledge offered and signed by a young lad in the audience.

A Covering Bee.

Students of the Stillman High school had a merry time at a "Covering Bee" in the school building, on Thursday, when scores of nimble fingers clothed the new song books in stout paper covers. When the work was ended festivities were held, and the frolic was continued to a reasonably late hour.

—According to the township report just published, there is but one delinquent taxpayer in Fanwood Township for the year 1882, and the amount of tax due for that year is but 45 cents.

Mellin's Food is not the bulky, indigestible product of the miller or baker, but is the result of skillful manipulation, by careful and uniform chemical processes based upon scientific principles; it is a soluble dry powder, made from wheat and malted barley, and is the concentration of nourishing properties.

LANDLORD MILLER'S LICENSE IN DANGER.

But If the Place Was "Open," Why Did Chief Carey Go Round Through the Office?

Joseph B. Miller, one of the proprietors of Laing's Hotel, and the person in whose name the license to sell liquor therein is granted, was arraigned by Chief of Police Carey, Tuesday afternoon, before Judge Codington on the charge of having his barroom open after eleven o'clock at night, and permitting persons to congregate therein. The witnesses summoned and mentioned in the complaint as being present, were Messrs Elmore D. Moffett, Walter L. Hetfield and Arthur T. Gallup.

The accused was present in court, and in the absence of any counsel pleaded for himself, "not guilty." An examination was set down for Wednesday afternoon of next week, and he was discharged on his own recognizance. The story of the case as told by the unprejudiced, is as follows:

At the close of Monday evening's meeting, Councilmen Moffett, Hetfield and Gallup walked down to Laing's hotel on their way home. They found the barroom closed, and went into the office. Landlord Joe Miller taking pity on the thirsty trio who had been talking water, water everywhere without a drop to drink, for three hours, opened the door leading from the office to the barroom, lighted the latter, and "accomodated his guests" with what they wanted.

Chief Carey and Officer Giesse had followed the Councilmen, and standing on a chair on the porch outside the barroom, they peeped through the window and over the curtain. As the barroom doors were none of them open, the Chief was compelled to go round through the office and "catch them in the act," as his mouth-organ terms it. Three disinterested witnesses, however, are said to be ready to swear that the Chief forced open the office door to get in.

A complaint has been drawn up making the more serious charge against Landlord Miller, of "selling liquor" after eleven o'clock. The same witnesses are cited. But up to the time of going to press, Chief Carey had not sworn to this complaint.

TWO LOST AND TWO WON.

The Crescent League Team Rolling Big Scores in the Tournament.

The Crescent bowling team went to Elizabeth, Monday evening, and rolled two games in the tournament series with the team of that place. Although the Plainfielders put up high scores for their class, they were unable, of course, to defeat those who train among the State champions.

Thiers and VanEmburgh had the excellent averages of 168 and 169, and the work of all the Crescent five gave entire satisfaction to their many supporters present. The scores were:

CRESCENT.	1st	2d	ELIZABETH.	1ST	2D
VanEmburgh	170	167	Meliner	175	164
Haven	144	138	Tutt	148	153

C. Teel	164	143	Turnbull	156	179
	807	740		854	860

The same evening the Somersets, of Somerville, met the Mondays, of Westfield, on the latter's alleys with the following result:

MONDAYS	1ST	2D	SOMERSETS	1ST	2D
Cousen	134	135	Goodwin	134	138
Dilts	198	189	Schoonmaker	144	133

Seely	163	154	Conklin	119	125
	[illegible]	757		[illegible]	612

Tuesday evening, however, the Crescents jumped on the Fanwoods and took two games. The match was rolled on the Crescent League alleys. There were a number of ladies present. For the third contest in succession the Plainfield team put up over 800. VanEmburgh scored 214 in the second game, and his average was 197. Rogers scored 193 in the first game, making three strikes on his wind-up. The score was:

CRESCENT.	1ST	2D	FANWOOD	1ST	2D
VanEmburgh	180	214	Force	171	130
VanWinkle	148	145	Kyte	126	186

DEATH OF EBENEZER L. ROBERTS.

He Was the Architect of Music Hall, the Crescent Avenue Church, and Other Plainfield Buildings.

Ebenezer L. Roberts, a well-known architect, died Thursday from nervous exhaustion, at his home, No. 364 Carlton avenue, Brooklyn. He was a native of Middletown, Conn., and was born in 1825. He served his apprenticeship as a carpenter, and then passed through the building trade into architecture. In 1850 he went to Brooklyn and established himself in his new profession. Mr. Roberts soon became favorably known among a large circle and his business rapidly increased.

He was the architect of the residence at Park avenue and Seventh street, now the property of A. C. Baldwin, which Mr Roberts occupied as his home for many years. He also drew the plans of Music Hall and the Crescent Avenue church, both of which being fitted with the "exhaust" system of ventilation which he invented.

His wife died last November and he leaves one daughter. The funeral took place at 4 o'clock on Sunday afternoon at his home. The burial was at Lyme, Conn.

A Social Time at Warren Mission.

About 250 invited friends were present Thursday at the sociable held in Warren Mission chapel by its members. The programme was a great success throughout, and Miss Apgar deserves special praise. Refreshments were served at the close of the programme, and the orchestra composed of Messrs Wheeler, Frazee, Lewis, Carpenter, Mooney, and the organist, continued its musical selections.

The programme was:

It's Bad Enough

To fool away one's precious time in experimenting with uncertain medicines, when one is afflicted, without being out of pocket as well. The only medicine of its class, sold by druggists, possessed of positive curative properties as to warrant its manufacturers in guaranteeing it to cure, or money paid for it returned, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. For all liver, blood and lung diseases it is specific.

Park Avenue Church Anniversary.

The seventeenth anniversary of the Park Avenue Baptist church, was celebrated in the chapel of the same, on Tuesday. Reports of various branches of church work were read as follows:

Treasurer's report—A. W. Day.
Ladies' Aid Society—Mrs. W. S. Lowry.
Sunday School—Jos. M. Hawkins.
King's Daughters—Miss Adela Runyon.
Young People's Society, C. E.—Mr. Skaden.
Boys' League—Miss Alice Spangenberg.

During the evening the Misses Coard rendered some piano solos, and the Rev A. E. Dilts, the pastor, delivered an address.

The anniversary really occurred on Saturday, March 15, but was postponed until the following Tuesday.

Professional Courtesy Gets Hackmen in Trouble.

Five hackmen appeared before City Judge Codington, on Saturday, charged with refusing to convey a passenger from the North avenue station to his home. The City Ordinance makes such refusal punishable by a fine of two dollars for the first offense, and five dollars for the second.

John Murray pleaded guilty. James Farley said that he was not one of the refusing number, and Policeman Grant made no charge against him. Patrick Lynch, George Belcher and Wm. Callahan pleaded not guilty and had a hearing Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

The accused say that the man was the regular customer of another hackman, who at the time was absent, and that professional courtesy forbade them trespassing on the trade of fellow-jehus.

"Ayer's Medicines have been satisfactory to me throughout my practice especially Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has been used by many of my patients, one of whom says he knows it saved his life."—F. L. Morris, M. D.

IT has been stated that Miss Amelia B. Edwards was the first woman to receive the title of LL.D. She received it about four years ago. But Maria Mitchell was made an LL.D. in 1853, and Mrs. C. W. Dall in 1877.

JULES VERNE can travel no more, prevented by the accident which befell him four years ago when a favorite nephew went mad suddenly and shot at the novelist. One of the bullets hit him in the leg, and the wound has never healed.

MR. ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON has found the climate of Samoa to be so much better for his health than any other place he has visited that he has bought a plantation of four or five hundred acres near Apia, and intends to make this his future home.

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW says: "For the first legal paper I ever drew I charged $1.50. A farmer was my client, and he beat me down to $1. Twenty years afterward I wrote a paper precisely similar and received for it $500, with many thanks."

SENATOR TURPIE, of Indiana, is said to be a perfect master of no less than seven languages besides the English. He reads Latin, Greek and Hebrew almost as fluently as he does English, and can speak French, Spanish, German and Italian. He has also pursued studies in Indian, Celtic and other tongues.

MR. HERBERT SPENCER lives all the year round in boarding-houses. Sometimes the clatter and chatter grows unbearable, but the philosopher rises to the occasion. He has two little buttons designed by an artist and made exactly to fit his ears. When the noise grows too great he thrusts them in. No noise can pass those buttons.

JAY GOULD has a sharp way of calling people to account. A newspaper man, a neophyte, by the way, went to interview him the other day and took some Western Union blanks out of his pocket to make notes on. Mr. Gould looked at him rather sternly and said with some show of asperity: "Young man, you not only want my ideas for nothing, but you purloin my property to take them down on. You should have your employer furnish you with a note-book."

A LATE pen-picture of Gladstone describes him as comparatively small physically, with a head of enormous size, measuring over twenty-four inches in circumference at the longest point. His dress is rather old-fashioned; for fifty years he has worn the same style of collar, this article being very high and attached to the shirt. The style of his necktie has not been changed since he was a young man. His coat, of an ancient cut, is made of the finest black cloth and is very long. The shoes are low, heavy and filled with nails. Mr. Gladstone has always been fond of dining out.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she was a Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

PERHAPS no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most distressing and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the multitude of modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.

CONSUMPTION,

IN its first stages, can be successfully checked by the prompt use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Even in the later periods of that disease, the cough is wonderfully relieved by this medicine.

"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with the best effect in my practice. This wonderful preparation once saved my life. I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and given up by my physician. One bottle and a half of the Pectoral cured me."—A. J. Eidson, M. D., Middleton, Tennessee.

"Several years ago I was severely ill. The doctors said I was in consumption, and that they could do nothing for me, but advised me, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine two or three months I was cured, and my health remains good to the present day."—James Birchard, Darien, Conn.

"Several years ago, on a passage home from California, by water, I contracted so severe a cold that for some days I was confined to my state-room, and a physician on board considered my life in danger. Happening to have a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, I used it freely, and my lungs were soon restored to a healthy condition. Since then I have invariably recommended this preparation."—J. B. Chandler, Junction, Va.

SHE—"Let us sit under the grand old oak and chat." HE—"Beautiful tree! And did you plant it yourself?"

GLASS shingles may do well enough for the roofs of houses, but they will not take the place of wooden ones in the nursery department of household economy.

THERE are [illegible] practicing physicians in Illinois, as is shown by the revised list just prepared by the State Board of Health, and yet the State is gaining in population.

MYRTLE—"Doctor, if I were to lose my mind, do you suppose I would be aware of it myself?" Dr. Bolus—"You would not. And very likely none of your acquaintances would notice it either."

A GENTLEMAN from the country says that he has no objection to a decent cottage, but that he has a strong antipathy to houses which are Queen Anne in front and Mary Anne at the back.

"SEE here," he said to his clerk, "I don't mind letting you off for a day now and then to attend your grandmother's funeral; but I think you ought to have the courtesy to send a few of the [illegible] around to my house."

MRS. CITIMAN to Mrs. Meeting House—"I did so want to go to the whist club to-night, but it is Lent, you know, and we have to give up things we want most to do and do the things we dislike, so I concluded I'd run in and spend the evening with you."

"I NEVER like that idea," said Henry, gazing at a man who was playing a drum, cymbals, clarionet and four other instruments at one time. "Why not?" asked William. "You have only to kill one man to wipe out the entire band," was the sanguinary reply.

"STRANGE," remarked Mrs. Brown, "I have rung at Mrs. Smith's door three times this week, and I didn't succeed in raising any one. I suppose the family is out of town?" "Possibly," replied Mrs. Jones, "but Mrs. Smith told me just now she could tell your ring among a thousand."

BASHFUL—"Only a little party, my dear boy. Mrs. Bagley insists upon your coming." Possibly—"With pleasure." "That's right. And—a—by the way—you play the flute, I believe?" "Yes. Shall I—" "Leave it at home? Yes; you have anticipated my very words. Do, by all means."

FOREIGN POWER (narratively)—"Back me out, I see." Uncle Sam (carelessly)—"You do as you please, I won't make any resistance." Foreign Power (proudly)—"I knew you wouldn't dare fight me." Uncle Sam (hotly)—"It ain't you I'm afraid of, you old fool. I wouldn't mind a war. What I'm afraid of is the pensions."

NERVOUS GENTLEMAN—"Now, be careful how you drive, cabby, and go slowly over the stones, for I hate to be shaken. And mind you pull up at the right house, and look out for those dreadful street cars." Cabby—"Never fear, sir. I'll do my best. And which 'ospital would you wish to be taken to, sir, in case of an accident?"

"MY hands are awfully cold," said the pretty girl, suggestively, on the last quarter of a winter sleighride. "Why didn't you bring a muff with you?" asked the practical young man, pertinently. "I did," she snapped; but she wouldn't explain where the muff had gone to, and he has been wondering ever since just what she meant.

REV. DR. SEWELL once said to the late Mr. Peach, a veterinary surgeon: "Mr. Peach, how is it that you have not called upon me for your account?" "Oh," said Mr. Peach, "I never ask a gentleman for money." "Indeed!" said the vicar; "then how do you get on if he doesn't pay?" "Why," replied Mr. Peach, "after a certain time I conclude that he is not a gentleman, and then I ask him."

ODD OCCURRENCES.

MILK from a cow which had been bitten by a mad dog is supposed to have poisoned a whole family near [illegible] Bend, Mo., and it is thought they will all die.

IT is said that for four years after the fight at Chickamauga, the battlefield shone like bright moonlight, even in the darkest nights. The light came from the phosphorescent exhalation of the decaying bones of the heaped-up dead.

A "LION" that had been ravaging the barn-yards around Nevada City, Nev., causing great fright among the farmers, on being traced to its lair by a party of hunters, proved to be a large Newfoundland dog, whose headquarters were in an old, abandoned cabin.

AN old lady in New Haven, Conn., died recently and left [illegible] "to Jerome Brown, of Wilmington," and when [illegible] was notified five of them appeared to claim the cash. As she didn't particularize the Jerome she wanted to make happy they will have to divide the money between them.

A RECENT decision of the Supreme Court in California will give new trouble to at least [illegible] murderers, as the decision places the burden of proof, even in murder, on the State, whereas the old decision, which has been followed for thirty years, [illegible] upon the defendant rebutting the charge of malice.

OFFENDED lawyers in Selma, Cal., who bet ten dollars in court and made the judge stakeholder, afterwards repented their action, for as soon as quiet was restored the judge picked up the coin and ordered his clerk to enter a fine of ten dollars each against the attorneys for contempt of court, and to give a receipt for the money.

A FRENCH official returning to his home in the suburbs a few days ago, his wife and family being absent, found a burglar asleep on the sofa in the parlor with his jimmy and skeleton keys by his side and a lot of jewelry and other valuables packed up to take away. He was unable to arouse the man even by shaking him, and when he had sent for the police they had to throw cold water in the man's face to bring him to. It turned out that he had found a bottle which contained something that looked like wine and had taken a drink. It was really a powerful narcotic and put him to sleep.

GERMANY last year produced [illegible] tons of beet sugar, leading all other nations in that industry. The total production of all European countries was [illegible], an increase of [illegible] tons over the year 1888.

CHICAGO seems likely to become a ship-building center. Her new shipyard has just received a contract for two iron vessels, each to cost nearly a quarter of a million dollars. Other contracts on hand are for six boats for the iron trade.

THE American Iron and Steel Association has ascertained that the total quantity of Bessemer steel rails made in the United States in 1889 by works producing their own ingots was [illegible] net tons, or [illegible] gross tons, a gain of only [illegible] gross tons over the production of [illegible] gross tons in 1888.

IT is estimated that to produce sufficient tin plate for home consumption will require the employment directly of at least [illegible], and indirectly of [illegible] men. Last year we paid [illegible] to Great Britain for tinned plate. Protection will build up the industry and keep this money at home, and it will also cheapen the product.

NEW YORK receives more than one-third of the merchandise exported from Bahia, Brazil, but it returns in merchandise only a million and a half out of a total importation of thirteen and a half millions. England, France and Germany supply the rest. From this country flour, kerosene, lard and [illegible] drillings are shipped; from Europe every thing [illegible] is shipped, down to Christmas toys.

THE following account from Berlin is given of the artificial digestion of variously-cooked meats. Lean beef, veal and [illegible] were digested in artificial gastric juice. The amount of flesh thus peptonized was in all cases greater than that of cooked meats similarly treated. The flesh was [illegible] and heated by steam to 100 degrees C. The result was the same for beef as for fish. [illegible] compared with each other, beef [illegible] the whole, the most digestible, but the amount of fish food which was peptonized was sufficiently great to do away with the evil repute which fish still has in Germany as a peculiar food. [illegible] meat differed in the essential [illegible] from raw meat as regards its digestibility.

THE sun will be eclipsed twice during the year 1890, but neither of the eclipses will be of much importance. The first will be on June 17, and will be visible to a certain extent in all the continents of the Eastern Hemisphere except Australia. The next solar eclipse will be on December 12, and will partake of the same nature at the beginning and end, but will be total for a small region. It will be visible in the Indian and Antarctic oceans and the southern part of Australia.

SERMON BY DR. TALMAGE.

TREATMENT OF PARENTS THE SUBJECT OF HIS DISCOURSE.

"A Foolish Son Is the Heaviness of His Mother" the Text—Children Cannot Do Too Much to Honor Godly, Upright Parents.

BROOKLYN, March 16.—The following sermon was preached this morning by Dr. Talmage in the Academy of Music, in which his church is worshiping during the rebuilding of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, and which will continue to be so occupied until that edifice is completed. After expounding a chapter describing Absalom's carriage toward his father David, and the singing of an appropriate hymn, Dr. Talmage announced as his text the words, "A foolish son is the heaviness of his mother."—Prov. x, 1. He said:

PARENTS' SOLICITUDE FOR THEIR CHILDREN.

All parents want their children to turn out well. However poorly father and mother may have done themselves, they want their sons and daughters to do splendidly. Up to forty years of age parents may have ambitions for themselves, after that their chief ambitions are for their children. Some of the old time names indicate this. The name of Abner means "his father's lamp." The name Abigail means "her father's joy." And what a parental delight was Solomon to David, and Samuel to Hannah, and Joseph to Jacob! And the best earthly staff that a father has to lean on is a good son, and the strongest arm a mother has to help her down the steep of years is that of a grateful child. But it is not a rare thing to find people unfilial, and often the parents are themselves to blame. Aged persons sometimes become querulous and snappy, and the children have their hands full with the old folks.

Before entering my profession I was for three months what is called a colporteur. One day in the country districts I stopped at the house of a good, intelligent, genial farmer. The hospitality of such a country house is especially pleasing to me, for I was born in the country. This farmer and his wife were hard-working people, but tried to make their home agreeable and attractive. The farmer's father, about sixty-five years of age, and his grandfather, about ninety, were yet alive and with him. Indeed, there were four generations in the house, for the farmer had little children playing about the room.

We gathered at the dining table. After the blessing was asked the farmer put some of the meat upon his plate and courteously passed it to me, when his father of sixty-five years of age cried out to his son, who was at least thirty years of age: "Why do you not pass the meat as you always do, and let us take it off the plate ourselves? you are trying to show off because we have company." Meanwhile the grandfather of ninety sat with his hat on at the table, his face sullen, and his apparel untidy. Still the farmer kept his patience and equipoise, and I never think of him without admiration. He must have had more grace than I ever had.

Because people are old they have no right to be either impertinent or tyrannical. There are old people so disagreeable that they have nearly broken up some homes. The young married man with whom the aged one lives endures it because he has been used to it all his life, but the young wife, coming in from another household, can hardly endure it, and sometimes almost cries her eyes out. And when little children gather in the home they are afraid of the venerable patriarch, who has forgotten that he ever was a child himself, and cannot understand why children should ever want to play "hide and seek," or roll hoop, or fly kite, and he becomes impatient at the noise from the nursery, and shouts with an exasperation of voice that keeps him coughing fifteen minutes afterwards, "Boys! stop that racket!" as though any boy that ever amounted to anything in the world did not begin life by making a racket!

SOME PARENTS ARE NOT WORTHY.

Indeed, there are children who owe nothing to their parents, for those parents have been profligates. My lamented friend, good and Christian and lovely Henry Wilson, vice president of the United States, in early life changed his name. Henry Wilson was not his original name. He dropped his father's name because that father was a drunkard and a disgrace, and the son did not feel called upon to carry such a curse all his life. While children must always be dutiful, I sympathize with all young people who have disagreeable or unprincipled old folks around the house. None of us, [illegible] at sixty or seventy or eighty or ninety years of age, for the old to be kind and genial; and the grandest adornment of a house is an aged father and an aged mother, if the process of years has mellowed them.

Besides that, if your old parents are hard to get along with now, you must remember there was a time when they had hard work to get along with you. When you were about five or seven or ten, or twelve years of age what a time they had with you! If they had kept a written account of your early pranks and mishaps, it would make a whole volume. That time when you gave your little sister a [illegible]; that time when you explored the depth of a jar of sweet things for which you had no permission; that [illegible] with your jack knife; that plucking from the orchard of unripe fruit; that day when, instead of being at school, as your parents supposed, you went skating; and many a time did you imperil your young life in places where you had no business to climb or swim or venture. To get you through your first fifteen years with your life and your good morals was a fearful draft upon parental fidelity and endurance.

Indeed, it may be that much of the present physical and mental weakness in your parents may have been a result of your early waywardness. You made such large and sudden drafts upon the bank of their patience that you broke the bank. They were injured in being thrown while trying to break the colt. It is a matter of only common honesty that you pay back to them some of the long suffering which they paid to you. A father said to his son: "Surely no father ever had as bad a boy as I have." "Yes," said the son, "my grandfather had." It is about the same from generation to generation, and parents need to be patient with children, and children dutiful to their parents. Taking it for granted that those who hear me to-day have had a good parentage, I want to urge upon all the young the fact that the happiness and longevity of parents much depend upon the right behavior of their children, and I can do this no more effectually than by demonstrating the truth of my text, "A foolish son is the heaviness of his mother."

SOME THINGS ARE BEST.

Perhaps some young man astray may be brought back by a thought of how they feel about him at home. A French soldier lay wounded and dying in the hospital at Geneva, Switzerland. His father, at home, seventy years of age, heard of his son's suffering, and started, and took the long journey and found the hospital; and as he entered the son cried: "O father, I am so glad you have come to see me die!" "No," said the father, "you are not going to die; your mother is waiting for you, and I am going to take you home; I have brought you money and everything you need." "No," said the soldier, "they give me here everything that is nice to eat, but I have no appetite, and I must die." Then the father took from his knapsack a loaf of rye bread, [illegible] of his country air, and said, "Here is a loaf of bread your mother made, and I am sure you can eat this; she sent it to you." Then the soldier brightened up, and took the bread and ate it, and said, "It is so good, the bread from home, the bread that my mother made!" No wonder that in a few days he had recovered. O young man, wounded in the battle of life and discouraged, given up by yourself, and given up by others, the old folks at the country fireside have not given you up. I bring you bread from home. It may be plain bread, but it is that bread of which if a man eat he never again shall hunger. Bread from home! Bread from home!

DO NOT STAIN THE FAMILY NAME.

Carrying out the idea of my text, I remark that a reckless or dissipated son makes a heavy hearted parent because it hurts the family pride. It is not the given name or the name which you received at the christening that is injured by your prodigality. That name, be it your name of John or George or Henry or Mary or Frances or Rachel, is common—there have been thousands of people, good and bad, having those names, and you cannot improve or depreciate the respectability of those given names. But it is your last name, your family name, that is at your mercy. All who bear that name are bound, before God and man, not to damage its happy significance. You are charged, by all the generations of the past and all the generations to come, to be true to the honor and the integrity of that name. You have no right, my young friend, by a bad life to blot the old family Bible containing the story of the marriages and births and deaths of the years gone by, or to stain a line [illegible] records are yet to be opened.

There are in my [illegible] city directories names that always suggest commercial dishonesty or libertinism or cruelty or meanness, not because the [illegible] that name cursed it forever by misconduct. Look out how you stab the family name! It is especially dear to your mother. She was not born under that name. She was born under another name, but the years passed on and she came to young womanhood, and she saw some one with whom she could trust her happiness, her life and her immortal destiny; and she took his name, took it while the orange blossoms were filling the air with fragrance, took it with joined hands, took it while the heavens witnessed. She chose it out of all the family names since the world stood, chose it for better or worse, through sickness and through health, by cradles and by graves.

Yes, she put off her old family name to take the family name you now wear, and she has done her part to make it an honorable name. How heavy a trouble you put upon her when, by misdeeds, you wrench that name from its high significance! To haul it down from your mother's forehead and trample it in the dust would be criminal. Your father's name may not be a distinguished name, but I hope it stands for something good. It may not be famous, like that of Homer, the father of epic poetry, or Izaak Walton, the father of angling, or Æschylus, the father of tragedy, or Ethelwold, the father of monks, or Herodotus, the father of history, or Thomas Aquinas, the father of moral philosophy, or Abraham, the father of the faithful, but your father has a name in a small circle as precious to him as theirs in a larger circle. Look out how you tarnish it!

Further, the recklessness and dissipation of a young man are a cause of parental distress at a time when the parent is less able to bear it. The vicissitudes of life have left their impression upon those parents. The eye is not as clear as once, nor the hearing as acute, nor the nerves as steady, nor the step as strong, and with the tide of incoming years comes the weight of unfilial behavior. You take your parents at a great disadvantage, for they cannot stand as much as they once could. They have not the elasticity of feeling with which once they could throw off trouble. That shoulder, now somewhat bent, cannot bear as heavy a burden as once it could. At the time when the machinery is getting worn out you put upon it the most terrific strain.

At sixty and seventy years the vitality is not so strong as at thirty or forty. Surely they are descending the down grade of life swiftly enough without your increasing the momentum. They will be gone soon enough without your pushing them away. Call in all the doctors who ever lived since Hippocrates raised medicine from a superstition to a science, and they could not cure the heartbreak of a mother over her ruined boy. There may be, as some suppose, enough herbs on earth, if discovered, to cure all the ailments of the body; but nothing save a leaf from the tree of the heavenly Paradise can cure a wound made by a foolish son who is the heaviness of his mother.

FURTHER SUFFERING SAVED BY DEATH.

Perhaps it is a good thing that cruel treatment by a child abbreviates a parent's life; for what is there desirable in a father's life or a mother's life if its peace is gone? Do you not think death is something beneficent if it stops the mother's heart from aching and her eyes from weeping, and says: "You need not bear the excruciation any longer. Go and sleep. I will put the defense of a marble slab between you and that boy's outrages. Go over where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest!" At the departure of such mothers let the music be an anthem instead of a dirge. While you and I hear no sound, yet there are at this moment tens of thousands of parental hearts breaking. All care was taken with the boy's schooling, all good counsels given, and the equipment for a sober and earnest and useful life was provided, but it has all gone, and the foolish son has become the heaviness of his mother.

Much of the poignancy of the parental grief arises from the ingratitude of such behavior. What an undertaking it is to conduct a family through the ailments and exposures of early life! Talk about the skill demanded of a sea captain commanding a ship across the ocean! That requires less skill than to navigate a young soul in safety across the infantile and boyhood years. The sicknesses that assault, the temptations that entrap, the anxieties that are excited! Young man, you will never know what your mother has suffered for you. You will never know how your father has toiled for you. You have been in all their thoughts, in all their plans, in all their prayers, from the time your first breath was drawn to this moment's respiration. What they could do for your health, what they could do for your happiness, what they could do for your mind, what they could do for your soul, have been absorbing questions. To earn a livelihood for you has not always been an easy thing for your father. By what fatigues of body and what disturbances of mind, and long years of struggle, in which sometimes the losses were greater than the gains, he got bread for you, paying for it in the sweat of his own brow and the red drops of his own heart's blood! He looks older than he ought to look at his years, for it has been work, work, work. Many a time he felt like giving up the battle, but then he looked at your helplessness and the helplessness of the household, and then he nerved himself up anew and said: "By the help of God I will not stop; my children must have home and education and advantages, and a comfortable starting in the world, and I must get a little something ahead, so that if I am taken away these helpless ones will not be turned out on the cold charities of the world." Yes, your father has been a good friend to you. He has never told any one, and he never will tell any one, of the sacrifices he has made for you. And he is ready to keep right on until unto that hand that has been toiling for you all these years shall come the very numbness of death. You cannot afford to break his heart. But you are doing it. Yes, you are. You have driven the dagger clear in up to the hilt.

And your mother—I warrant she has never told you much about the nights when you were down with scarlet fever, or diphtheria, and she slept not a wink, or, falling into drowsiness, your first cry awakened her, and brought the words, "What is it, my dear?" Oh, if the old rocking chair could speak! Oh, if the cradle could only tell its story of years! And when you got better, and were fretful and hard to please, as is usual in convalescence, she kept her patience so well, and was so kind as you were unreasonable and cross. Oh, midnights of motherly watching, how can you keep silence! Speak out and tell that wandering young man the story that he so much needs to hear.

WHAT HAS BECOME OF THE OLD CRADLE?

By the bye, I wonder what has become of our old cradle in which all of us children were rocked! I must ask my sister when I see her next time. We were a large family, and that old cradle was going a good many years. I remember just how it looked. It was old fashioned and had no tapestry. Its two sides and canopy all of plain wood, but there was a great deal of sound sleeping in that cradle, and many aches and pains were soothed by it as it moved to and fro by day and night. Most vividly I remember that the rockers, which came out from under the cradle, were on the top and side very smooth, so smooth that they actually glistened. They must have been worn smooth by a foot that long ago ceased its journey. How tired the foot that pressed it must sometimes have got! But it did not stop for that. It went right on and rocked for Phebe the first, and for De Witt the last. And it was a cradle like that, or perhaps of modern make and richly upholstered, in which your mother rocked you. Can it be that for all that care and devotion you are paying her back with harsh words or neglects or a wicked life? Then I must tell you that you are the "foolish son who is the heaviness of his mother." Better go home and kiss her, and ask her forgiveness. Kiss her on the lips that have so often prayed for you. Kiss her on the forehead that so often ached for you. Kiss her on the eyes that have so often wept over you. Better go right away, for she will be dead before long. And how will you feel then after you realize it is your waywardness that killed her? Romulus made no law against parricide, or the slaying of a father; matricide, or the slaying of a mother, because he considered such crimes impossible, and for six hundred years there was not a crime of that sort in Rome. But there came Lucius Ostius and slew his father, proving the crime possible. Now do you not think that the child who by wrong behavior sends his father to a premature grave is a patricide, or who by misconduct hastens a mother into the tomb is a matricide?

The heaviness of parents over a son's depravity is all the greater because it means spiritual disaster and overthrow. That is the worst thing about it. In the pension regulations a soldier receives for loss of both hands or feet $72. For loss of one hand and one foot $36. For loss of a hand or foot $30. For loss of both eyes $72. But who can calculate the value of a whole man ruined body, mind and soul? How can parents have any happiness about your future destiny, oh young man gone astray? Can such opposite lives as you and they are living come out at the same place? Can holiness and dissipation enter the same gate? Where is the little prayer that was taught you at your mother's knee? Is the God they loved and worshiped your God? It is your soul about which they are most anxious, your soul that shall live after the earth itself shall be girdled with flames, and the flames, dying down, will leave the planet only a live coal, and the live coal shall have become ashes, and then the ashes shall be scattered by the whirlwinds of the Almighty.

RESPECT YOUR PARENTS, THOUGH THEY BE DEAD.

"But," says some young man, "my mother is gone; my behavior will not trouble her any more."

Oh that those lips had language! Life has passed
With me but roughly since I heard thee last.

What! Is she dead? Now you startle me! Is she dead? Then perhaps you have her picture. Hang it up in your room in the place where you oftenest look. Go and study her features, and while you are looking the past will come back, and you may hear her voice, which is now so still, speak again, saying: "From my heavenly home, my dear boy, I solicit your reformation and salvation. Go to the Christ who pardoned me, and he will pardon you. My heaven will not be complete till I hear of your changing. But I will hear of it right away, for there is joy up here when one sinner repenteth; and oh, if the next news of that kind that comes up here might come up regarding you, oh my child of many tears and anxieties and prayers!

Come, my boy, do you not hear your mother's voice? O my son, my son, would God that I could die for thee! O my son, my son! Young man! what news for heaven would be your conversion. Swifter than telegraphic wire ever carried congratulations to a wedding or a coronation would fly heavenward the news of your deliverance; and whether the one most interested in your salvation were on river bank, or in the temple, or on the battlements, or in the great tower, the message would be instantly received, and before this service is closed angel would cry to angel: "Have you heard the news? Out yonder is a mother who has just heard of her wayward boy's redemption. Another prodigal has got home. The dead is alive again, and the lost is found. Hallelujah! Amen!"

The Daily Life of an Actress.

Girls who long for the adulation, flattery and amusement commonly supposed to be inseparable from life upon the stage can profitably study the words of an actress who has succeeded in making a name for herself. "My life is very uneventful," she says. "It is full of hard and monotonous work. Excitement—yes, at night, when I am before the public; but for the rest of the day—no. At 9 o'clock in the morning I ring for my bouillon. After I have finished it I take a cold bath and then my breakfast. Unless I am due at the theatre for a long, tedious rehearsal of four or five hours, I attend to my correspondence, sorting and answering various letters. After that is finished and my household duties are looked after, I go for my constitutional walk of two or three hours. I eat no luncheon, and when I return from my exercise it is nearly time for my dinner, for I dine at 4:30 o'clock. After this meal is over I have just a little time to rest before the real business of the twenty-four hours begins. I must be at the theatre at 7:30 o'clock sharp. At midnight I am home again, and after supper I go to bed. Now, this is a fair sample of my life. Every hour has its duties."—Toronto Empire.

The Digestion of Women.

Are women fonder of eating than men? At the reception of the Goethe club at the Brunswick, only two women in all the large number that attended denied themselves the lobster and ice and various other good things that were provided to be consumed in the name of Goethe and of culture. And these were buds, whose mammas sat by to enforce the abstinence. Of the men, three in five made no attempt whatever at reduction, but contented themselves with filling the plates of the women with indigestibles.

"Are women fonder of eating than men?" was asked of a physician who sat looking at the scene with speculative and, perhaps, professional eyes.

"Yes, of unseasonable food, and at unseasonable hours," he answered, promptly. "And the strange part of it is that it doesn't hurt them as it would men. These men here don't eat these things because they know if they do they would be dyspeptic and ill-tempered enough in the morning to strike their grandmothers, but each and every one of these women (bless their sweet souls and strong stomachs) will rise to-morrow without an added wrinkle in her face or ruffle in her temper, and be a comfort to herself and to others."

"Heaven only knows how they do it. The doctors don't."—New York Evening Sun.

Cheap Canaries May Be Good.

"The demand for canary birds has increased enormously of late," said a well known New York bird fancier. "But the regular dealers do not find much profit in handling the ordinary yellow singers; they sell comparatively few of them, and it does not pay to keep them long in stock. The street competition is too great. We must charge at least $2.50 for any bird that can sing at all, while a canary that at all events looks as though he might warble if he tried, may be purchased at a street corner, from a man who raises his own birds in a tenement house, for about seventy-five cents.

"Sometimes a dealer who has too large a stock on hand employs a peddler to offer the poorest of the lot for sale on the sidewalk. Birds bought from such persons are pretty certain to be dear at any price, but if you are a good judge of a canary a bargain may often be picked up on the street. Your best plan, if you are buying from a peddler and are doubtful of your own ability to make a good selection, is to stand before the little wooden cages until you see a bird singing strongly and well. Then choose him; but keep your eye on the dealer, for many of them are as adept as card sharpers at changing a good bird for a bad one during the process of wrapping up the cage."—New York Sun.

Water as a Figure of Speech.

Probably there is nothing under the sun which is the basis of so large a number of figures of speech as water. A poor argument "won't hold water;" a babbler is a "leaky vessel;" "fishing in troubled waters" is another name for getting into difficulty; "still water runs deep" is a hint that your quiet and demure person has more in him than the world supposes; strong dislikes are compared to his satanic majesty's antipathy to "holy water;" if a man is in a bad predicament he is in "hot water;" disappointment is "a wet blanket;" when a lover gets "the mitten" "cold water is thrown on his hopes;" the hungry man's "mouth waters;" the strengthless are "weak as water;" sometimes it "rains" blessings; when an orator begins to be tedious we say he has "run dry;" news is always "afloat;" speculators are often "swamped;" many people find it impossible to "keep their heads above water," and very often, in the absence of data for conjecture, we are "all at sea."—New York Ledger.

Burial Reform in England.

After a period of incubation which has been spent in educating public opinion in the matter of the hygienic iniquity of the present system of interment, the group of sanitary philanthropists, with the Duke of Westminster at the head, who have taken up the ungrateful task of bringing the necessary reforms to pass, have at last decided to seek the indorsement of their contentions by the legislature. The object sought is, failing the effective embalming of the body, the prohibition of leaden and other solidly constructed coffins, the effect of which is to indefinitely retard complete decomposition, and so prolong the period during which the dead are not only æsthetically objectionable, but are an indisputable source of danger to the living, wickerwork or papier mache receptacles alone being used. This is merely a sanitary precaution of an elementary kind; and whatever the immediate fate of the movement may be, it must sooner or later impose itself. The idea of cremation is daily being received with more favor in England, and the suggestion of Sir Spencer Wells that in future only properly cremated remains should be admitted to funeral honors in Westminster Abbey and other national mausoleums, has met with general approbation.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Torpedo Manœuvres.

An interesting experiment in jumping a torpedo over a boom has been carried out in Portchester creek by the officers of the Vernon. The boom, which was twenty feet in length, differed from the usual spars which are used for the defense of harbors against torpedo attacks, in that it was six feet broad and surmounted by a number of spikes, which it was supposed would receive the boat and hold it a prisoner. A first class torpedo boat, which had been strengthened for the purpose, was selected to attack the boom. Having worked her engines up to full speed, she made a dash at the boom at the rate of about twenty knots. At this speed her stem was lifted out of the water almost as high as the boom itself, which sank on impact, and before it could rise to the surface the momentum of the craft had carried her over. It was subsequently found that neither her cutwater nor propeller had suffered in the least, nor had a single plate been bulged or started. The result of the experiment points to the fact that either the booms must be duplicated or that they must be supplemented with nets, with the object of entangling the screws of the attacking enemy.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Throwing the Slipper.

The present custom of throwing a shoe or a slipper after a newly-married couple no doubt takes its rise from a peculiarity of the mediæval marriage ceremony, in pursuance to which the groom set his foot upon the bride's as a token of his future empire in the household. It will be noticed that the significance of this ancient custom has been completely reversed. The slipper is now the symbol of man's subjection to woman in all things pertaining to the household. In fact "under the slipper" has passed into a proverb. The strength of this superstition is such that in some parts of Germany the bride, immediately after the marriage ceremony, and before the party has left the altar, sets her foot upon her husband's, confident that this act will give her the whip-hand during their married life.

SUNDAY IN WASHINGTON.

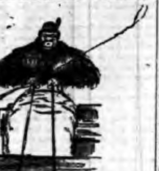
The Sabbath Social Life of the Nation's Capital.

No Drinking or Gambling, but Plenty of Excitement—The Fashionable Parade—the Military Funerals and the Stylish Barbies.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

Sunday is a peculiar day in Washington. When bright and sunny, it is charming. When wet and cloudy it is very disagreeable. There are few church bells. Two or three churches have chimes. The music is as sweet as that of the bells of Shandon, but the notes are not so vibratory.

No man can get shaved in Washington on Sunday. The drinking saloons are all closed, and it is difficult for even a native to secure a dram on the Lord's Day. There are no side doors at this season of the year, as the proprietors are seeking a renewal of their licenses. The click of billiard balls is stilled, and the gambling saloons over the bridge are closed. The only places in which a dram can be secured are the fashionable club-houses. Even here, poker chips remain untouched, and games of cards are unknown on Sunday.



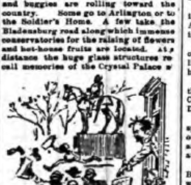
A SONOROUS COLORED JEHU.

The man who awakes at daylight hears strange music. It comes from the throats of thousands of crows sailing over the city. They roost in the pine groves beyond ex-President Cleveland's mansion at Red Top, and feed along the East Potomac and its tributaries. Every morning they hie to their feeding grounds and at night return to their roosts. They stream around the dome of the Capitol after sundown in long lines, but in silence. In the morning, however, as they dash past Washington Monument and over the city, they fill the air with hungry cries. They usually reach their destination before sunrise.

The birds have hardly disappeared and the sun has hardly risen before troops of little beings nearly as black as crows appear in the streets. They are the Washington newsboys. Along the avenues and up the side streets the little darkies run shouting the names of the Washington Sunday papers. An hour later they change their tunes. The Philadelphia papers have the call. Within another hour the uproar increases. The New York papers have arrived. The boys then penetrate to every part of the city. Windows are raised, and men half dressed tap upon the casements in efforts to attract their attention. Hundreds read Washington, Philadelphia and New York papers in their beds.

As the hour of ten approaches, there are signs of life in the White House. A colored coachman, wearing a top hat with a cocade, and a huge cape of monkey fur, enters the grounds, and reins his team in front of the presidential portion. His huge silver buttons glisten in the morning sunlight. The horses are combed till they are as sleek as kittens, and the carriage shines like polished ebony. Ere long the President, Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. McKee, and possibly some other member of the family, enter the coach. They are driven to the Church of the Covenant. As the carriage rolls through the streets it attracts the attention of everybody. A crowd of persons surrounds the entrance to the Church to gaze upon the President and his wife as they alight. Frequently General Harrison avoids the sightseers by entering a side door.

The Harrison family is hardly seated before there are more signs of life upon the avenue. Scores of landaus and buggies are rolling toward the country. Some go to Arlington or to the Soldier's Home. A few take the Bladensburg road along which immense conservatories for the raising of flowers and hot-house fruits are located. At a distance the huge glass structures recall memories of the Crystal Palace at



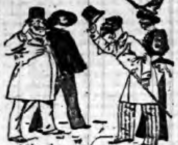
THE SUNDAY MORNING NEWSBOYS.

Sydenham. Some of the vehicles go to Oak Hill Cemetery. Many a party goes out to Cabin John's, a famous hostelry. It is seven miles away. The drive is along the Potomac. One attraction at Cabin John's is the stone bridge built under the direction of Jefferson Davis when Secretary of War. It is said to have the longest stone span in the world. It is over a hundred feet high. During the war the name of Jefferson Davis was chiseled from the slab commemorating the erection of the bridge. The coping is about eighteen inches wide and nearly 300 feet long. A daring bicycler rode over it two years ago chilling the blood of 100 spectators. He had previously driven his velocipede adown the steps of the Capitol.

In the early afternoon strains of sad martial music are occasionally heard. They come from brass bands heading funeral processions. The stranger wonders what military or naval hero is dead. From the number of negroes in the column, he may think that an officer of a colored regiment is being buried. The deceased is usually a black citizen who has been engaged in some peaceful avocation, and is a member of some colored political or social organization. It may be the Sons of Ham, the Perry Carson Rangers or the colored Union League Club. If a member of a society dies on Monday they keep his body until Sunday, so as to bury it with military honors. Nearly every negro owning a house and lot in Washington belongs to some colored society. When such a man is buried, the "Dead March in Saul" is heard, and either a colored military company or civic society follows the hearse, with reversed arms or reversed batons.

After lunch the scene is further enlivened. Fashionable gentlemen and ladies appear upon the fashionable promenades arrayed in their finest raiment. These promenades are Connecticut avenue and K street. On a sunny afternoon they resemble Fifth avenue on Easter Sunday. Cabinet officers, Senators, Representatives, army and navy officers, department clerks and the "creme de la creme" of colored society are on parade. The department clerk doffs his hat to the wife of a Senator and the colored gentleman salutes the Cabinet officer. Everything is aristocratically democratic and democratically aristocratic. Some of the promenaders carry canes with huge silver heads, while others swing the light rattan. A few ladies appear with poodles, pugs and tiny terriers. Pugs, terriers, poodles and ladies are all arrayed in costly garments. Occasionally a Senator or a theatrical performer will appear with a huge mastiff or a gigantic Siberian blood-hound at his side. The collars of these dogs frequently cost more than the clothing of their masters.

As the sun goes down and the dinner hour approaches, fashionable promenaders disappear. Carriages and buggies roll in from the suburbs and are followed by a stream of pedestrians, who have been wandering among the hills for health and exercise. Crowds of crows fill the air, returning to their roosts with full stomachs. Before they have wafted themselves over the city, the street lamps are lighted and electric arcs begin to glow. After dinner the corridors and ladies' parlors of the hotels are thronged, and club-houses filled. Gossip reigns supreme until the arrival of the trains from the North. These are usually freighted with Congressmen returning from their weekly visits home.



ON THE PROMENADE.

Huge trucks loaded with baggage and hotel vans filled with passengers roll over the smooth asphalt pavements. There is a demand for cabs and other conveyances, but it lasts for no more than half an hour.

After that, the city seems perfectly dead. The only sign of life is found in Newspaper Row. There correspondents are making up their dispatches and the passer-by hears the clicking of type-writers and telegraph sounders. The glow of the electric light, however, still covers all. The facade of the White House shines like marble, and the yellow crocuses upon the sward in its front glow like molten gold. The wonderful equestrian statue of Jackson looms above the shrubbery in Lafayette Square.

The brightness of the electric carbons at the Executive Mansion, however, is surpassed by the effulgence of the lights around the great Treasury building. The hundreds of millions stored in the vaults are guarded more closely than the bed of the official who represents a nation of 65,000,000 of people. He sleeps upon the second floor of the White House in a room overlooking the green fields that stretch to the Potomac. From the windows of his bedroom he has a magnificent moonlight view of the Washington monument. It pierces the sky behind the White House like a shaft of pure alabaster. At times the moonbeams play upon the aluminium point of its apex, giving it an opalescent color. There are carp ponds near the base of the monument, which glow in the moonlight like great plates of burnished silver. On the left are the crystal roofs of the conservatories of the Agricultural department. On the right the Long Bridge stretches across the Potomac's sheen, and Robert E. Lee's old Arlington homestead stands in the soft light on the heights above, like the Acropolis above Athens.

It is a view that would have charmed old Haroun-al Raschid. And the Caliph of Bagdad, it is said, has an imitator in the Caliph at Washington. The latter occasionally strolls the streets in the evening with his Grand Vizier and undoubtedly hears many a tale equal to any told in the Arabian Nights. His Sunday evenings, however, are spent at home within the family circle, and he is usually sound asleep long before the town clock tolls the hour of midnight.

IN THE WORLD OF LETTERS.

THE Russian Nihilist Stepniak writes all his works in English and they are revised by William Westall, the novelist.

WILLIAM D. HOWELLS has a poor opinion of Dr. Samuel Johnson, and declares that he was "no poet, no critic and no philosopher."

CHARLOTTE M. YONGE is one of the most prolific of book-makers. She has written and compiled a hundred historical works and novels.

DR. EDWARD EGGLESTON affirms that in his opinion there is not a single American author who really makes an income out of his books.

MR. GLADSTONE has again refused an offer made by a firm of American publishers of £5,000 yearly for every thing he writes for the public.

AMONG the more important books of the coming year will be Stanley's on Congo, Dr. Talmage's Life of Christ and Dr. Schliemann's new work.

THE day after Browning's death a speculator bought up the entire edition of his last book, then just from the press, and made a large sum by sales of copies at extravagant prices.

"THE Biography and Letters of Sarah Bernhardt, 1884-1889," by an old and well-known military officer, is soon to appear in Paris. The book is to contain a preface written by a man now dead.

MRS. JEFFERSON DAVIS is making an effort to secure copies of letters her late husband wrote on public topics, and which may have been preserved, in order to use them in a biography that she is to undertake.

MR. SPURGEON has just issued the thirty-fifth volume of his sermons, and from this it appears that he has put into print no fewer than twenty-one hundred of these discourses. The weekly sermon has been published continuously since 1855.

IN Wilkie Collins' copy of Forster's "Life of Dickens" are found some very interesting memoranda about Dickens' work. "Oliver Twist," Wilkie Collins thinks, is hopelessly bad in construction; yet Nancy is one of the very best characters that he ever created.

CLINTON SCOLLARD, the poet, is professor of English literature at Hamilton College. He has a very pleasant position. His lectures are so arranged this year that he can spend the next few weeks in Florida. Mr. Scollard is a young man, rather handsome and extremely genial.

LAURA JEAN LIBBEY, she whom a critic recently called "the modest violet of American literature," has entered into a contract with a New York story paper, from which she will draw a weekly salary of one hundred and fifty dollars in return for the exclusive serial rights to her future stories.

COUNT GLEICHEN, of London, has been writing his impressions of New York. He found only one thing which London could copy to advantage, and that is the cab driver's fashion of blanketing his horse when the animal is standing in the cold. In other things he thinks New York much behind European cities.

THE MS. of the Laureate's first book, the "Poems of Two Brothers," written by him and Charles Tennyson, has been carefully preserved, and is estimated to be worth five thousand dollars. Alfred and Charles Tennyson received one hundred dollars for it. Some of the pages, says Mr. Walters, who saw it lately, are "backed," and others disfigured by rude school-boy sketches, there are many clumsy erasures, and a few of the verses are written crosswise and downward. The printer's directions are written in red ink. Some day, of course, it will be put up for sale, and doubtless will fetch a big price.

A VARIED ASSORTMENT.

MESSENGER boys are given free rides upon public vehicles in New York.

THE city of Boston has four women in her School Board and two colored men in the Common Council.

AT Sonora, Cal., a few days ago there was seen the novel spectacle of a rose bush loaded down with snow and ice, and a red rose in full bloom.

THE Niagara Falls commission claims that it has wiped out the swindling hackmen who so long made much merchandise of nature's great wonder.

THE latest English fancy is to wear with a tailor-made gown a small fancy watch of iron, or oxidized to resemble iron, with elaborate gold initials, fastened by a brooch on the left front of the basque, as a medal or other decoration would be worn.

THE New York courts are a little puzzled as to what to do with the Italians, who commit murders on the smallest provocation. Generally these murders are for some trivial matter—such as a harsh word spoken—and they are almost always murders of fellow countrymen or women.

"THE Brazilians," says a correspondent of the New York Tribune, "are old-fashioned, and do not take kindly to new ideas and Yankee notions. The locks on the doors, the fastenings of windows, the hinges on the gates, and all iron and steel fixtures to be found in the houses are clumsy and antiquated. This hardware comes mainly from England and Germany, and is of the cheapest grades."

A CORRESPONDENT in Glenellen, Tenn., sends to Garden and Forest the following memorandum with regard to a large tulip tree recently cut down near that place: "The smallest diameter across the stump, three feet from the ground, was seventy-eight inches inside the bark, which showed 604 layers of annual growth with only thirty-eight layers of sap wood occupying a width of an inch and a half."

HOW CAN THE LONG BE THE SHORT ?

A line may be a very long one and yet be the shortest between given points. For instance, the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway has over 3,000 miles of road, magnificently equipped and managed, it is one of the greatest railway systems of this country; for the same reasons it is the traveler's favorite to all points in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana. It is the only line to Great Falls, the future manufacturing center of the Northwest; to the fertile free lands of the Milk River Valley; and offers a choice of three routes to the Coast. Still it is the shortest line between St. Paul, Minneapolis, Fargo, Winnipeg, Crookston, Moorhead, Casselton, Glyndon, Grafton, Fergus Falls, Wahpeton, Devils Lake, and Butte City. It is the best route to Alaska, China and Japan; and the journey to the Pacific coast Vancouver, Tacoma, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco will be remembered as the delight of a life-time once made through the wonderful scenery of the Manitoba-Pacific Route. To fish and hunt; to view the magnificence of nature; to revive the spirit; restore the body; to realize the dream of the home-seeker, the gold-seeker, the toiler, or the capitalist, visit the country reached by the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway. Write to F. I. WHITNEY, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn., for maps, books and guides. If you want a free farm in a lovely land, write for the "Great Reservation" read it and resolve to accept the golden

Why, Mary, how your baby cries!
Yes, he has colic again.
Why don't you give him Dr. Taylor's Best Soothing Syrup?"
Is that good?
Yes, for Pain, Colds, Cough, &c., it is excellent for either young or old. Of the many kinds of medicine I have used in my family I have found none to equal it.
Thank you, Jane, I will try it. Margaret Ann, go as soon as you can to either REYNOLDS', or SHAW'S Drug Store, and get a bottle of Dr. Taylor's Soothing Syrup.

Life Pictures.

A glow at morn,
The rose half tempted into blooming red;
Bright hopes just born,
That ere the eve must shed
Their petals, though we never dream them shed.

A warmth at noon,
Full-souled and sincere; and life all fair
As summer moon,
When stars face became as rare
As laughter which hath not behind some care.

At rest at eve;
The ardor and the heat of day are o'er;
Hope can deceive
No longer; life no more
Can weave [illegible] from a poet's lore.

A hush at night;
We fold our wings as birds that seek the nest
Earth is delight
With rose no more. The soft
Of light sinks with the sunlight in the west.

* * * * *

It is no dream.
No castle-building time that we call life:
To catch the gleam
Of Heaven in the strife
Our toil must tend to reach the better life.

There is much room
For gratitude, much room for tenderness,
In all the gloom
Of sorrow, much to bless
If we will labor more and murmur less.

Let us not turn
To seek in clouds our happiness, but try
Each day to learn
That near home blessings lie:
Those die to live who first have lived to die.
—The Quiver.

An Exercise for Stammerers.

There was a beetle bought a bottle,
A bottle full of beer.
Now said the beetle to the bottle:
"Forthwith we'll have some cheer."

Thereon the beetle took the bottle
And tipped it up full high,
And from the bottle to the beetle
There gurgled melody.

The thirsty beetle drained the bottle
And into it did crawl;
The same it was his purpose to
Imbibe the liquor all.

Inside the bottle the drunken beetle
Completely lost his way,
And in that bottle the buzzing beetle
Buzzes to this day.

Lost in the Shroud.

Here's a song for the world—for the many who toil
From the morn till the close of the day,
With the hard, horny hands begrimed with the soil,
In the delving for bread in the clay—
A song that will tell of a day with its rest,
When hearts loudly 'round us are bow'd,
And the hands that are horny and crossed on the breast
Will be lost in the folds of the shroud.

A song for the rich man, who rolls in his wealth
And the hero, with fame at his feet;
From the mighty and happy with comfort and health
To the lost, wandering wretch on the street—
To tell o'er bright gold will be faithless to all,
As the fame that will fade like the cloud,
When little and great to one level shall fall
And be lost in the folds of the shroud.

When the humble shall lie in the same stately way
As the millions in merit and worth—
When casket and coffin both find 'neath the clay
Ample room in but six feet of earth—
When the echo is gone from the highway and street,
That song of one mighty and proud,
To prove, though the wide world be laid at thy feet,
'Twill be lost in the folds of the shroud.
—George E. Powell, in Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Bell-Buoy.

Sail ho! sail hither, white ships so fair,
Winged dreams of a summer sea!
The skies are amethyst; laugh at care,
The waves laugh merrily!
But list! from their bosom a tremulous knell:
"Ling a long!"
A death song.
If the mariner heedless be.

Voice of the waves, whate'er betide,
Night mentor of the sea!
Nearer—how near!—now close, alongside,
We pass, from danger free.
A tinkle tossed on the ocean's swell:
"Ling a long!"
A life song.
For the voyagers heeding thee.
—Celeste M. A. Winslow, in Advance.

Bills.

Old letters are a fav'rite theme
For poet's quills.
About them love lorn suitors dream;
The bardlet trills.
Old letters these, or so they seem,
Yet of romance they have no gleam,
They're commonplace in the extreme;
They speak of bills.

Here's one from Snip. He prates of law,
And storms away
As if he thought to overawe
And make me pay
While here is an insensate dun
For joys lost in oblivion.
Here's one for Phoebe's phaeton
And Maud's coupe.

Here's one from Smilax, sordid elf
With soul of clay
Who barters blossoms off for pelf
In vulgar way
No sympathy for me he shows;
But he wants pay for—I suppose—
That daily dozen Jacqueminots
For Mab's bouquet.

Here's one for gems that sparkling shine
On Laura's hands;
A couple for cigars and wine,
Expensive brands.
But shall I mope and pine and sigh?
No, let them do all that—not I
Because it haps I can't comply
With their demands.
—America.

Two Ways.

Oh, how does the rain come down?
With rattle and riot and rush!
With flutter and sputter,
And gurgle and mutter,
And clatter and spatter and gush!
With a mad outbursting and roaring,
With flaring and splashing and pouring!
And noise to deafen a town,
The turbulent rain comes down!
But after 'tis over an hour or more,
The world looks much as it did before;
And there's nothing to show for the fuss and roar
The rain made coming down.

But how does the snow come down?
With a touch like a soft wing's brush!
With glancing and gliding,
And stealing and sliding,
With whiteness and lightness and hush!
With airy floating and swimming,
With fairy floating and skimming!
And no one in all the town
Would know when the snow comes down
If he looked not out on the changed white day
And the cushioned earth that seems to say,
How much can be done in a quiet way.
The way the snow comes down.
—Mrs. Cora W. Bronson, in N. Y. Independent.

AT last there is a perfected plan, backed by money already subscribed, to utilize the power of Niagara—not of Niagara falls, but of the waterhead of the river above the falls. The Niagara River Hydraulic Tunnel Power & Sewer Company will soon begin the digging and blasting necessary for the building of its main tunnel, which will be about two and one-half miles long.

SINCE a recent earthquake at Santa Ana, in Orange County, Cal., the well of Mr. Huntington, in Los Bolsas district, which for years has never flowed to any considerable extent, has given forth large quantities of mud, stones and other materials, the eruptions being volcanic in character. The supply of water is now far in excess of the means provided at the surface for its care, and it has been found necessary to ditch from the well to the river to carry it away. The pipes are at all times in danger of bursting—the sudden blasts of air and foreign substances rendering it more or less dangerous to go near the opening.

WOES OF A COMIC EDITOR

Felicitously Set Forth in a Very Distinguished Symposium.

Editor Bunner of "Puck," Mr. Gregory of "Judge," and Mr. Metcalfe of "Life" Give Inside Facts About Humorous Journals.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

Up to 1876 no humorous journal had managed to establish itself in this country for what may be called a "genteel permanence." This was not for want of trying—the list of failures up to 1871 was well over a hundred. Thousands of dollars—hundreds of thousands, indeed—had been spent in the endeavor to bestow a "Punch" upon America. All that had been accomplished was the establishment of the facts that America did not want a "Punch," and it cost money to learn this simple truth.

No doubt their imitation of a foreign model told against the founders of the hundred and odd humorous journals that died prior to 1871, and for this and other reasons it came about that craft after craft was launched upon the sea of popularity, only to sink into the depths of oblivion. Some of them were well manned; some were not. All shared the same fate. "Punchinello," "Vanity Fair," and "Mrs. Grundy" left something of a ripple behind them as they went down; but that was all. The ripple was unremunerative.

But in 1877 a paper came out, which was not a copy of a foreign model, and the originality of its appearance attracted popular attention, and held it long enough to make good its claims to favor. That was enough. When the conservative public once accepted the new idea, it became conscious of that "long felt want" of which it had never before been sentient. There was room for the humorous journal—and that room has been pretty well occupied by "Puck" from that day to this. During these twelve years four or five other journals of a similar character have won success in the city of New York alone, and but one humorous journal—that was really worthy of the name—has failed. And that one failed only because the capital of its founders was more in brains than in cold cash—and in their case, brains could not pay the printer.

"Puck" has grown with the times. It began its existence at a time when Americans were earnestly asking each other what in thunder a dado was. At that time the literary and artistic material it had to draw on was meager in the extreme. Outside of the artistic staff of that first paper, (which at one time consisted of one solitary man,) there were but five or six artists in New York City who devoted themselves to the business of drawing "comics." As to literary matter, there was a certain supply from the professional paragraphers and "funny men"; but these mainly chronicled acrobatic mishaps—too often their highest flight of humor was a sketch of a gentleman who, returning home during a period of house-cleaning and general devastation, stepped upon a cake of soap at the top of a flight of stairs, and descended humorously to the bottom upon his spine, settling down eventually in a pail of water. The gentleman's name was generally Hoopenhammer, or the like.

But all that is changed to-day. A host of bright young men and women make their living out of the papers whose unhappy predecessors could not even make a living for themselves. The literary and artistic quality of their work is graduated by a far higher standard than the humorists of the cake-of-soap-pail-of-water variety ever dreamed of. They draw on human nature for their inspiration, and they seek for humor in the actual life about us. In this growth and change lies the promise of their performance
H. C. BUNNER.

Editor Gregory's Experiences.

The "Judge" reaches an average of thirty contributors a day. Those envelopes which have a batch of jokes or suggestions, anywhere from five to fifty, I count as one. Perhaps two-thirds of these favors are in verse. The other third is made up of manuscript from three pages to a hundred pages long. The contributions come probably half from New Yorkers, city and State. The other half originates with every other State, the territories and Canada, with frequent matter from various parts of England, France and Ireland, and a small amount from New and Old Mexico, and from the more Southern portion of the Continent. The regular army sends in its army joke at intervals; and the dialect fever has broken out all over, though especially in the South, often to the relief of the sufferer and the benefit of the reading public.

I suppose we have on our books at least fifty contributors of reading matter with as many postoffice addresses—and this estimate leaves out the staff writers and the contributors to the art department. Of course, no writer draws a large sum, the paper being necessarily made up of briefs—the most wit or humor in the smallest space—so far as the reading matter is concerned; so that the "Judge" offers small encouragement, especially to writers of prose; but on the other hand very considerable sums are paid for special articles, as those for the Christmas number, and the aggregate for the regular number of the "Judge" occasionally startles the counting-room.

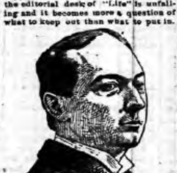
The trials of the editor of a satirical weekly? Well, there was formerly the man who insisted on reading his matter, with proper oratorical effect; but he merely leaves his manuscript now. The man of the funny story, who thinks it is the larger part of your business to listen to him and laugh when you want to cry; but he's dead. The habitual peddler of jokes who makes the same a business, at intervals of sobriety forced upon him by beggarly impecuniosity. The unfortunate man, sore with rheumatism, who wants to go to his family in New Jersey; I give this man a dollar for a joke that is torn up, and, behold! he has a supply next day of a hundred more, and is never relieved of rheumatism and never goes to New Jersey.

The genuine trial is the necessity of returning matter that is worth printing—some of it that is far too good to warrant the necessity. It is a compliment to "The Judge," as well as to its contributors, to say that ninety per cent. of the matter received bears evidence of judgment and thought and has felicity of expression, speaking of both prose and verse. Once in a while an article comes that is abominable in its ignorance and whose humor is commensurately injudicious, but with two exceptions in five years "The Judge" has received nothing so coarse or with such a double meaning that the most fastidious might not read it. Why is so much good matter returned? Because there is no place to put it in. At the most, the paper will hold only a certain amount, and if all the good matter were accepted and used we should have to print a weekly paper of hundreds instead of sixteen pages. Because it is not exactly suitable in all cases. Because we have previously accepted matter of the same kind. A dozen reasons, any one of which ought to be sufficient, even to the sensitive writer, but, I am afraid, none of which is. A very bright young lady writes me: "If you return the poem, please do not put in that nasty little slip. It makes me mad." The little slip reads: "The 'Judge' is obliged to return much excellent matter, because it is impossible to find room for it." It is kind, and it indicates a compliment, but it makes others mad as well. "If you get so much good matter," says a Brooklyn critic, with good-natured spitefulness, "why don't you put some of it in your paper?"

A trial of momentous woe is the great amount of accepted matter on hand. I look at it with a shudder.
I. M. GREGORY.

Joke Waves and Fond Parents.

Every American is to a greater or less extent a humorist. Therefore the supply of humorous matter coming to the editorial desk of "Life" is unfailing and it becomes more a question of what to keep out than what to put in.



JAS. E. METCALFE.

Against a certain class of jokes—such as those applying to the mother-in-law, the boarding-house keeper and other unfortunate people, the taboo is rigid.

The worst evils against which the editor of "Life" has to contend are joke waves and the fond parent. Whenever a topic of general interest comes up a joke wave sets in. The most recent instance of this is a certain malady which has recently afflicted the country and which was unfortunately known as "la grippe" and "influenza." These names were responsible for a joke wave of huge dimensions. Imagination would pale before the statistics of the plays upon "la grippe"—"masonic grip" "the cable-car grip" and "death grip" which were offered for a reasonable compensation to the editor of "Life." Next in number were the puns on influenza. A favorite form was to the effect that "some one left the window open and in flew Enza." "I would like your influence, sir," was second in the race, and there were a number of very bad thirds. The prevailing joke wave deals with Nellie Bly's trip around the world, and bids fair to be almost as severe as the grip epidemic.

The fond parent is rather trying to a bachelor editor. If the editor of "Life" were a married man he might exhibit a fonder interest in the sayings of "our little Willie," or dwell longer over the manuscript of the admiring mother who starts with "this morning at breakfast, while grace was being said, my little daughter May, aged 4," etc. A peculiar characteristic of the fond parent is that the more sacrilegious the utterance of the child—and children's clever sayings are usually based on the sacrilege which comes from ignorance—the funnier it seems to them. If "Life" printed half the matter sent in by fond parents it would soon achieve the reputation of being the most blasphemous sheet in the world.

There is one thing though that can not escape the notice of the editor of any American humorous publication and that is that American humor is almost without exception kindly and chivalrous. Quick as the American is in his appreciation of the weakness and vulnerability of his kind, a natural or an unavoidable misfortune or weakness disarms him completely. In the enormous mail that comes to me there is little that is spiteful, envious or ill-natured.
JAMES S. METCALFE.

BITS FROM ABROAD.

AN English railway company has set apart a special fund from which to reward acts of bravery on the part of its employes.

FIVE years ago there were five girls' schools in Yokohama and Tokio. To-day there are more than thirty, and all well patronized.

IN one day last summer 195 Americans visited Burns' birthplace. The pilgrims during the year numbered 90,000 to the cottage and 30,000 to the monument.

IN the British navy in 1888 the sick list included 987 men out of every 1,000 in the service, and that was the best showing the navy had made since 1856. The death rate was 5.71 to 1,000.

THERE is no taxation upon either real or personal property at Para, but when a piece of real estate is sold the purchaser is required to pay a fee to the Government of five per cent. on the selling price.

THE Minister of the Interior at Rome recently ordered a committee to investigate and compare the police uniforms of all nations, preliminary to a choice for the municipal and rural police throughout Italy.

IT is proposed both in Vienna and in Paris to water the streets with a disinfectant mixture—with water having powerful antiseptic matters dissolved in it. They are tired waiting upon the microscopists to discover the influenza microbe and mean to get rid of the disorder as best they may.

THE French papers are filled with sensational telegrams concerning the war of races in the United States, representing the condition of affairs in the Southern States as most critical. "Poor America!" says one paper; "fighting over the question of color for a hundred years—and not settled yet."

AN English bride received a great shock of surprise the other day when Queen Victoria actually sent her for a wedding present a diamond pendant containing a lock of her Majesty's hair. The Queen has rarely given any thing for many years but India shawls (which are given to her by hundreds), so that her wedding presents do not cost her much.

THE recently-published statistics of the Imperial German Post-Office Department show that in 1888 there were 18,508 post-offices in Germany, with 16,916 telegraph offices and 92,360 officials of all grades; 2,990,307,600 pieces of mail were handled, 22,125,167 telegrams were sent. The money orders of all offices in the country amounted to 17,088,948,416 marks.

THERE is a movement on foot in Russia to give married women personal passports. Hitherto they could only be inscribed on those of their husbands. They could not leave the country without their husbands' consent. This reform, if carried out, will put an end to the intolerable sufferings of those poor women to whom divorce is impossible because of its expense.

THE Pall Mall Gazette states that there lately arrived from Alexandria at Liverpool, a consignment of nearly twenty tons of cats, numbering some 180,000, taken out of an ancient subterranean cats' cemetery discovered about one hundred miles from Cairo by an Egyptian fellah, who accidentally fell into this cats' cemetery, which he found completely filled with cats, every one of which had been separately embalmed and dressed in cloth, after the manner of Egyptian mummies, and all laid out in rows. In ancient times the Egyptian cat was buried with all honors, but those shipped to Liverpool will be used as fertilizing material.

STATESMEN'S DAUGHTERS

How the Young Ladies of Washington Amuse Themselves.

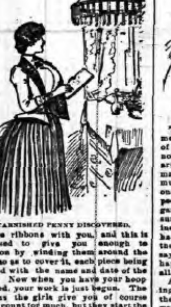
The Craze for Fads—How "Memory Hoops" are Made and Manipulated. The "Mother Book"—Violets Eagerly Sought.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

EVERY girl in Washington is hunting for a fad. She has no particular idea as to what sort of a fad she wants so long as it is a fad and its possession enables her to say to her three or four dozen intimate friends: "Oh, I've just got the loveliest fad you ever heard of." And then she goes on to tell how she got the idea "from something Jack said."

Well, the Washington girl with not much to do has invented and taken up with the vigor of idle enthusiasm a substitute for the old-fashioned "memory buttons," and calls the new departure "memory hoops." I do not wish to be understood as casting any unkind reflection upon the disposed bustle, for the new fad is not that kind of a hoop. The following discription was given me by an enthusiastic votary of the "memory hoops:"

"You see you take a hoop. Any kind of a hoop. Some of the girls have old barrel hoops and some of them have the hoops made out of the loveliest kinds of wood. Why, I know one girl who has a hoop made of gentlemen's walking sticks which she first begged from the possessors and then had steamed and bent into circular form, connecting them with silver bands. Oh, yes: you asked where the memory parts comes in. Well, it's just this way: You take the hoop and hang it up anywhere, in the parlor or in your own room. Some of the girls hang them so that when standing before their dressing tables the hoops are just over their heads. Well, of course, there is nothing in just the hoops about memory. You see, after you get a hoop you ask all your girl friends for a piece of ribbon. Mind, it must be a piece that has been worn, else the charm will not work. Well, of course the girls will exchange ribbons with you, and this is supposed to give you enough to start on by winding them around the hoop so as to cover it, each piece being worked with the name and date of the giver. Now when you have your hoop covered, your work is just begun. The ribbons the girls give you of course don't count for much, but they start the thing. Then you are to get from all the men you know one of the old-fashioned copper two cent pieces, polished on each side so that it just looks like a piece of plain copper and, on one side must be engraved the initials of the giver with the date, and on the other side a line of poetry. These must all be paid for by the young lady receiving them at the rate of ten cents each, not to defray their cost, but so that you may have given silver for copper and you know you couldn't well give less than ten cents in silver. Then these copper pieces are to be tied all around the hoop with ribbon matching the dress worn by the young lady when receiving the piece of copper. I think that is where the best part of the memory comes in, for a girl never forgets her dresses. Now when you have filled your hoop you hang it up and whenever any one of the copper pieces grows black it means that the giver is in trouble or sickness and the girl must write to him at once. See the idea now? Oh, it's just splendid if it doesn't always work about the sickness."



A TARNISHED PENNY DISCOVERED.

The young girls are not alone in their fads, although what is a fad in a young girl becomes a charming idea when put in practice by a woman of more mature age. One of these charming ideas is also being practiced by the mothers of Washington. In this case it is a charming idea and if carried out faithfully will result in some valuable additions to children's reading.

For a Christmas present, Mrs. Harrison received a rather large and beautifully bound book, the pages of which were of parchment, perfectly blank. On the corner in silver scroll work were the words "Mother's Book." Quaintly wise sayings of the little ones," and the slip of paper between the leaves stated that the book was to be used in recording the sayings of the McKee babies.

These "Mother's Books," of which Mrs. Harrison has received one of the first, are taking fast hold in Washington and promise to spread into other cities with equal vigor, so that in the political campaigns of the future it will be possible to show the honest voter the bias of the candidate's mind even in infancy.

The ancient order of the garter was recalled to nineteenth century prominence here the other day by an incident that is being discussed very delightedly by the heavy social set. The actors in the drama are well known in Washington society. The lady is one of the prettiest girls in Washington and lives not a mile from the White House. Her father has drawn a great deal of money from the U. S. Treasury in his lifetime and is by no means unknown to fame.

It was at the Garfield Hospital ball. The gentleman was an army officer of more than ordinary rank. In appearance they are well matched. She is a dazzling blonde with a figure that can discount any one-armed Venus de Milo I ever saw. The names of the two have been coupled together not a little, but it is safe to predict that such remarks will cease from now on.

It happened this way. They had just danced a quadrille and returned to their seats in a palm-decorated corner quite out of the way of the madding crowd. What he was saying when another man came to claim her for the next dance is immaterial, but when his following gaze lost the lovely form in the crowd, he glanced manlike at his boots and a minute later his eyes were riveted on a dainty light blue gold claspedarticle that lay on the floor not a yard from where his fair partner of the previous minute had been seated. As he recognized its character all the be-ruffled courtiers of the court of the English king seemed to troop before him and honi soit qui maly pense trembled on his tongue as he thrust the pretty thing into an inner pocket.

Poor fellow, he could not stand prosperity. During the rest of the evening he was so idiotically happy that he failed to notice the disturbed and furtively searching glances that the pretty woman, cognizant of her loss, every now and then cast into odd corners where a loose article might have been brushed.

On the way home a confession of his newly-found treasure rose to his lips a dozen times, only to be postponed. When at last he stood in the hall of her house she looked so pretty that he could resist no longer. He held one of her gloves in his hand. It required no juggling skill to take his blue and gold treasure and slip it into the glove. It was better he thought to give it to her than tell her. He didn't know how much the poor girl had gone through since he had picked up the dainty bauble. Just as he was beginning to tell her good night he handed back her glove. In a moment the form that had been full of yielding grace grew rigid. One pretty hand clasped the glove so closely that it didn't take all the keen intuition of the girl to understand that the long lost and much-needed article was within. No sooner had she realized that during all her suffering this man had possessed the article, than her spirit rose in arms, sentiment vanished and with the ejaculation, "Oh, you horrid brute," she fled up the stairway, leaving him to his reflections and a large chunk of mortification.

THE VIOLET FAD.

The little married woman who told me of the incident explains the action of the young lady by saying that it was not mortification at the nature of the article that had been in the young man's possession that vexed the girl so much as it was fear lest she had lost one of the articles that had been especially purchased to match the dainty garments by which it was immediately surrounded, and that anyhow the heroine didn't love the hero or she would have knighted him then and there with the precious article. But then women say odd things of one another and perhaps the poor girl was mortified after all.

Apropos of women's adornment Washington is in a violet rage. The chrysanthemum fever lasted quite a while, but was not near so strong or so pronounced as the violet fever now at its height. Every girl has a bunch of violets pinned on somewhere, the preferred places being on the shoulder of the cape or on the top of the muff, if furs be worn. If not, why anywhere on the front of the dress will do, but for a girl in the swim to wear anything but violets during the day is looked upon as a display of the most complete ignorance as to what is correct. One of the big florists told me that it was difficult to supply the demand for violets, although the southern crop was unusually large this year.

HISTORICAL HINTS.

IN 1616 there were only 350 English people in all North America.

THE true elephant first made his appearance in the epoch just preceding the "Great Ice Age" in Europe and America.

IN Scotland a similar functionary to the English Christmas Lord of Misrule used to be appointed under the title of the Abbot of Unreason till the year 1555, when the office was abolished by act of Parliament.

SEATTLE was founded thirty-eight years ago by some thirty or forty men who went there in the schooner Exact, which had been chartered by a party of California miners to go to Alaska. These young men were landed at Alki Point, and went to the site of Seattle, which was then an Indian settlement and mainly a dense forest.

GENERAL SHERMAN says that Russians were the first settlers of California. His authority is a Russian officer who gave him facts to substantiate the statement. The Russian said his countrymen had settled on the present site of San Francisco twenty years before the gold fever. At that time they were engaged in hunting furs in Alaska, and the San Francisco village was a supply depot for the Arctic hunters.

IT was the goddess Strenna (strength) who gave her name to strenna, the Italian for New Year's gift, whence came the French word etrenne, which means the same thing. On the first day of the year, in the earliest Roman times, champion wrestlers used to be conducted amid music and dancing to her temple, and there crowned with verbena—a plant which had the reputation of giving strength to those who inhaled it. For that it was planted all round Strenna's temple, and also in court-yards and gardens.

PHILOSOPHICAL FRAGMENTS.

THE truest sign of a broad man is a cheerful toleration of narrow men.

NATURE has wisely arranged matters so that a man can neither pat his back nor kick himself.

EVEN in politics selfishness sometimes so overreaches itself that defeat is the result of it.

WHAT good was ever done in the world without agitation? We can not even make butter without it.

JEFFERSONIAN DEMOCRACY.

To say that the Democratic party never committed errors [illegible] action, or that individual Democrats never strayed from the pathway of political and official integrity, would be absurd and untrue.

But to assert that the party of Democracy was founded upon sound and well-defined principles and that its loyalty to those principles is the reason why a hundred years denote its continued existence, is to state a historical fact.

The Democratic party was born amid a conflict for the supremacy of right over wrong, of popular freedom against aristocratic designs.

Its [illegible] during the formation of the Government of the United States earnestly strove to establish the old English dogma that the rich and well born should alone be vested with ruling power.

Which was in effect to ignore the real purpose of the American Revolution, and to plant upon these shores, under the hypocritical name of a Republic, the worst offensive features of monarchy.

The illustrious author of the Declaration of Independence, and the founder of the party of Democracy, unsheathed his cutting blade and warred for the overthrow of such proposed treason to popular rights as the eternal enthronement of privileged classes.

Jefferson, afterward battling, was victorious, and the Democratic party entered upon its glorious mission as the champion of free institutions and of equal and exact justice to all men.

It trampled under foot as political infamy the [illegible] of [illegible] that [illegible] and wealth should be ordained superior to virtue and ability.

It boldly maintained the equality of all men before justly enacted laws, and that worthy deeds alone conferred upon the individual citizen dignity and honor.

That was Democracy before the present century dawned, and it remains to be Democracy now the century is drawing to a close.

And history affords another important fact, that the political principles organized by Thomas Jefferson have done more to advance the prosperity and renown of the United States and to invigorate freedom throughout the world, than all other agencies combined.

Democrats! Preserve their vitality!

COUNCILMAN NEWHALL MISTAKEN.

The Corporation Attorney Provided for the Very Thing Needed.

The objections made by Mr. Newhall at the Council meeting to the City's sewerage bill as published exclusively in THE PRESS, holding there was no provision permitting the City to fix the rate of charge for use, were anticipated by the Corporation Counsel, who inserted in the act a section that is believed to meet those objections in the most satisfactory manner. Section [illegible] is the section referred to, and by its terms gives the City the power to say, in advance of the incorporation of the company, upon what conditions the City consents to the company's incorporation. The act requires these conditions to be annexed to the certificate of incorporation of the company, and makes them obligatory upon the company, its successors and assigns.

The conditions contemplated relate to the manner of constructing the sewerage system, the schedule of maximum rates that may be charged property owners, the methods of repairing streets, and so on, ad libitum. Of course, if these conditions were made unreasonable no company would be likely to accept the franchise, but reasonable restrictions, such as those imposed upon the electric light company, the telephone company and the water company, while completely protecting the City and its taxpayers, would probably not deter practical business men from applying for and accepting the franchise.

Mr. Cleaver's [illegible] Mind.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The advertised discourse on the "Presbyterian Dilemma" at the First Church of Christ, has [illegible] increased the congregation to hear Mr. Cleaver upon this subject. It would seem that the gifted divine must have a thoroughly [illegible] mind upon the law of truth to discuss it against the [illegible] of Presbyterians.

[illegible] Women Make [illegible] Fight.

At the school meeting of Westfield voters, the other evening, quite a number of women were present and cast their ballots for the successful candidates. They made no fight, however, as was feared, to capture a school trusteeship for one of their own sex.

George H. Brown was elected, in place of E. L. Embree, for three years, and two additional trustees were also elected—James T. Pierson, three years, and Marlow V. Clark, two years. The sum of $6,375 was voted to be raised by special tax, for school purposes.

[illegible] Visit.

(From the [illegible] of Somerville.)

Our representative at Trenton, W. S. Potter, in company with some 30 or 40 of the members of Legislature, including Hon. Jacob [illegible], visited Atlantic City last week, at the invitation of Hon. James Beckwith the [illegible] Clerk of the House. The party were quartered at the Ocean, a large and beautiful hotel, of which Mr. Beckwith is part owner, and were furnished with a special car by the West Jersey RR. All enjoyed themselves. Only a few had been to Atlantic City before. Great was the surprise to find a large city of nearly 13,000 people. An elevated railway, the light house and life saving station, new board walk about three miles long, 20 feet wide, are among the many objects of interest. Any person visiting the beautiful seaside resort will certainly stop at the Ocean House (J. A. Reid, proprietor.) It is large, comfortable and homelike; the rooms are large and the furniture new. The table is excellent. It is situated near the [illegible] corner of Pacific and Connecticut avenues.

It Will Be a Close Fight.

A New York paper said recently in commenting upon the State politics:

"Next year the House will miss Fred Marsh, the able young leader of the majority, and Fred Voorhees, the brilliant spokesman of the minority. They are to be pitted against each other in the Senatorial district [illegible] Union next Fall. Won't it be a warm battle! They are warm personal friends and each is almost his party's [illegible] as Senator Miller's successor. The contest will probably attract more attention than any other in the State. Mr. Marsh has an up-hill road to travel, and the result of last Tuesday's elections in the county does not offer much encouragement, but it will not be his fault if he does not win. Hundreds of people would be pleased if both could be elected."

QUALITY'S CHARITY BALL.

Plainfield's "400" Will Dance at The Crescent, to the Music of Elliot's Orchestra, and Marsh Will be the Caterer.

The first charity ball of the Plainfield's higher society, to be held at The Crescent on Tuesday evening, April 8, will not be a case of ninety-nine dollars for the dance and one dollar for Muhlenberg Hospital. Enough tickets have already been issued to more than pay the cost of the affair although it will be an expensive one.

New York decorators have measured the spacious and beautiful building that will be draped and adorned in good taste. The ladies' dressing room and the cosy corner at the open fire place, will be furnished with rich portieres and rugs. Besides the 400 gas jets, the electric lights will be also burning, and the picture that all this will richly frame, will be the most brilliant one this city has ever known.

Emil Elliot, who is Dodworth's leader, and who furnished also the music for the recent sociables at the Seminary, will direct the full orchestra selected for the occasion. The dance programme includes a new polka entitled "Plainfield Assembly," composed for the event. Lanciers arranged from Offenbach's "Brigands," Sullivan's "Gondoliers" and Suppe's "Clover," waltzes by Waldteufel, Strauss and others, and a score more of the most beautiful selections, will make up a grand concert that even those who do not dance can thoroughly enjoy.

Mazetti, of New York, will furnish everything for everybody's comfort not otherwise provided for, from the sidewalk canopy to the supper. The tickets are three dollars for each person, but they are not on public sale. They may be obtained if you are deemed worthy, by application to any of the following.

The patronesses are: Mrs. William Bloodgood, Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, Mrs. Pliny Fisk, Mrs. Frederick J. Kuhne, Mrs. Robert L. Burnett, Mrs. Harry G. Runkle, Mrs. William T. Kaufman, Mrs. DeWitt C. Ivins and Mrs. Charles J. Fisk.

The Floor Committee will include: Messrs William Bloodgood, Harry G. Runkle, William T. Kaufman, Charles J. Fisk, Frederick J. Kuhne, Lewis G. Timpson, Andrew McKinney, Fred W. Walz, Edward M. VanBuren, Edward Bloodgood, John N. Moore, John P. Munn, Charles E. Brooks, Robert L. Burnett, Pliny Fisk, Dewitt C. Ivins, Harry V. Borden, James W. DeGraff, Harry G. Squires, Herbert W. [illegible], Clarence L. Murphy, Thomas VanBoskerck, Percy Kuhne and Howard W. [illegible].

WHITE CAPS IN WESTFIELD.

They Call at a House at Night, and Order a Visitor Out of Town.

A body of masked men went to the house of a well-known and highly respected citizen of Westfield, just before eleven o'clock of Thursday and demanded that a certain New Yorker, who was a guest in the house at the time, should "git up and git."

The owner of the house was told that his visitor—who the "White Caps" called by name—might have time to dress himself and pack his valise, and that if he left town on the first train he would not be molested. The man got to the station as quickly as possible, and as there was no train at that time for New York, he took the 11:22 train West. Where he got off is not known, but a PRESS reporter is of the opinion that he saw the man in Plainfield on Friday looking for a justice of the peace.

The Century Bicycle Run.

Delegates from all of the prominent New York, New Jersey and Brooklyn bicycle clubs met Monday night at the club house of the Brooklyn Bicycle Club to perfect arrangements for the great century run of this year. The Plainfield Bicycle Club was represented by Captain V. L. C. Martin.

Assemblyman Ulrich Will Work for the Bill.

All personal feeling has been pacified, all animosity [illegible], all pride purged of offence and all wounded dignity salved with a just confession of proper respect, by the committee having in hand the good health and prosperity of Plainfield's sewer bill.

The steps that should have been taken in the beginning, have been taken now, and Assemblyman Ulrich, with the best interests of the people only at heart, will move the bill on towards final passage.

In the Valley.

Mr Peter [illegible] of Brooklyn, is visiting friends in the Valley.

Mr. John Jimerson, a well-known resident of Washington Valley, met with a serious accident some time ago. While "booming" down a load of hay the boom suddenly snapped in two, throwing Mr. Jimerson to the ground. The accident resulted in fracturing the small bones of his left foot, which is extremely painful, and to one of his age is very slow in getting better. He is compelled to use a cane in getting around the house.

North Plainfield Real Estate Transfers.

The following changes in real estate have recently been made in North Plainfield township:

March 6—John H. VanWinkle and Mahlon T. Mulford, executors of Margaret A. Mulford, to Moses H. French, property in North Plainfield, $2,500.

March 11—William White et ux, to James McGee, property in North Plainfield, $2,500. William White et ux, to George F. White, lot in North Plainfield, $1. William White et al, to George F. White, property in North Plainfield, $1,000.

Would Adorn the Position of Surgeon-General.

(From the [illegible] Weekly Mirror.)

Dr. J. B. Probasco has been elected one of the Board of Education in Plainfield, N. J., where he resides. Of course, that means he is a popular man and a good physician. Dr. Probasco is about as tall as Gen. Wm. T. Sherman, and has a soldierly look. He would adorn the position of Surgeon General of the United States Army, a thing that may happen one of these days. The doctor is a hard worker and attends closely to his practice. When in college he would give an analysis of two hundred pages of Frey's Physiology and never fret. He never frets now; if he does nobody knows it but himself.

Concerning the Dunellen School.

Some of the more progressive residents of Dunellen are anxious to have a new public school built there and a larger and hence more efficient corps of teachers provided. The best results secured by the present hampered state of affairs are considered very unsatisfactory, but the remedy lies with the citizens themselves. Every schoolday morning a large number of children from the district board the early trains with books and lunches in hand on their way to Plainfield. Most of these are of a grade of scholarship which is nominally prepared for in the Dunellen school, and an investigation shows that many citizens who are ready to complain [illegible] their tax bill [illegible] are really adding to their tax by paying money annually into the treasury of the Plainfield School Board. An effort is being made to have the use of this money turned to the development of the home school.

As THE PRESS has stated, $2,300 was the amount appropriated for the support of the Dunellen school this year. Many of the residents favored an increase in the appropriation, but the majority of the [illegible] present at the annual school meeting voted against it.

BUILDING LOAN MEETING.

How the "Plainfield" Association Has Prospered—A New Board of Directors.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association shareholders was held in Cutter's Hall, on Monday, Vice President Barkalow presiding.

After the transaction of routine business, the Secretary submitted statements showing in detail all cash transactions of both series for the year ending February 28, last, and also their exact condition on that date, as follows:

The meeting then proceeded to the election of twelve Directors to serve for the ensuing year, Messrs E W Titsworth and V. L. Frazee being appointed tellers.

The following gentlemen were unanimously chosen to constitute the new Board of Directors: L. E. Barkalow, Joseph Bird, Joseph S. Cutter, B. F. Corriell, W. R. Codington, John Chandler, John Rickey, Nathan Harper, H. Liefke, J. F. Sheppard, E. W. Titsworth, Wm. A. Woodruff.

TWO DOCUMENTS OF BYGONE DAYS.

English as She Was Rote in Ye olden Tyme, Lovingly and Legally.

William Colthar, of North Plainfield, has had in his possession for so many years as to be sure of its genuineness, a letter addressed to "Miss Sally Stelle, New Market, near New Brunswick." It is yellow with age, postmarked "New York, October 15," stamped PAID, and dated inside, 1806.

The contents of the letter which begins "My Dear Girl," are of the same style as the contents of such letters today. He says: "I am this day like a lost sheep as it represents company, for if I was to associate with the ladies their company would be insipid if compared with the happy moments spent with you." Verily, there is hardly a man who reads this, who has not written those very words under similar circumstances, four score years afterwards. Then follows something else that will strike you familiarly. "You that are disposed to judge me hard, perhaps think that was I so anxious as I express myself of seeing you, I would certainly visit New Market oftener. So I should, my Dear Girl, was I to consult my immediate happiness, but our business at this season demands my closest attention," etc.

Another and an older document yet, is the property of Agustus Frazee. It is dated "The twenty second day of the sixth month called June one thousand seven hundred and fifty-six"—twenty years before the revolutionary war. It is a deed whereby "William Webster, for and in consideration of the love good will and affection which I have and do bare towards my loving son Hugh," gives him a tract of land "lying in the Burrough of Elizabeth, containing by estimation one hundred and fifty acres, beginning by the cedar brook."

The witness of the deed, it is stated, "being one of the people called Quakers, and duly affirmed, saith that he saw the within named William Webster and Susannah Webster seal and deliver the said deed as their and each of their act and deed for the uses therein mentioned." The deed was executed when the King ruled this country, and designated property now within this city's limits.

He Was Only Half Shot.

A boozy Italian with mud covered boots, made his way into town, Sunday evening, between 6 and 7 o'clock, on the hunt for the police. He found Officer Grant at his post of duty and poured into his ear a string of broken Italian laden with beer, to the effect that he had been shot.

His story as translated by Officer Grant was to the effect that the keeper of an unlicensed beer saloon in the midst of the Italian colony in Fanwood township, had shot at the complainant twice and at his brother three times, just as the Sunday school bells were ringing in the Scotch Plains Methodist church a few hundred yards distant. The officer told the Italian he must apply for a warrant of arrest, to a Justice of the Peace in whose jurisdiction the deed was committed; and told him also that he was drunk and unless he left Plainfield at once, would be locked up. He left.

Reminds Him of Burnside's Mud March.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—As the water works question has been thoroughly exploded, as a humorous writer says—I think it would now be a good time for the city to mend its ways, i. e., its highways, and I would most respectfully call the attention of Street Commissioner Meeker to the deplorable condition of South avenue, between Leland avenue and the Terrel road. As I frequently walk over that thoroughfare it forcibly calls to mind Burnside's celebrated mud march. In some places it would require a microscopical examination to discover where the macadam was.

The several Councils have made abortive attempts to put it in order but have most signally failed, and I trust the present Council will try and improve on the old order of repairing streets, and give us good roads, especially South avenue, which is the county road, or rather was, as I understand, until it was taken out of the control of the county board, for what reason I cannot ascertain. Perhaps some of the learned Councilmen of the old Council might be able to explain as I understand from Mr. Johnson that the new members had no hand in it. If the city does not intend to put it in thorough repair they should have left it in the hands of the county, who are making such a splendid driveway from the city limits to Elizabeth.

I would like to see a bill passed by the N. J. Legislature making it a criminal offence to repair macadamized roads with dirt, and also a law compelling all who use wagons for business purposes to have all vehicles that carry 1,000 pounds or over, use a tire not less than four inches in width. After all these mentioned acts become laws, this State would be at the head of the list in regard to good roads.

OF INTEREST TO THE "OLDEST INHABITANT."

Mr. Thos. T. Laing of Rochester, N. Y., Writes to Plainfield for Information Concerning Some of the Pioneer Families of this City.

Mr John W. Laing, or "Uncle John" as he is familiarly called, received a letter from Mr. Thos. T. Laing of Rochester, N. Y., recently, in which the writer of the letter asks for information concerning some of the early settlers here. The letter reads:

"JOHN W. LAING,

"DEAR SIR:—I received a report of the Friends Centennial Celebration at Plainfield, and saw the names of Catherine B Laing of Philadelphia, Caroline H. Vail and John Shotwell. My name is Thomas T. Laing, son of David Laing and a half-brother of the late Augustus Laing

"David Laing was a brother of Hugh Laing the latter at one time doing business in Pearl street, New York. He was also a brother of Wm. Laing formerly a Rahway hatter, and later of Philadelphia, and of Isaac Laing, the farmer."

The letter goes on to state: "I take the liberty to address you, finding your name among those who took part in the anniversary exercises, to inquire: First, was Catherine B. Laing the wife of William Laing referred to; is Caroline H. Vail a relative of James Vail; and was John Shotwell any relation to the Shotwell family that lived on a farm near Plainfield?

"Second, Is Rebecca Laing, my father's own sister, with her half-sister, living in Plainfield as yet, or are they both deceased?

"I am in my 83d year; in our family there were five boys, namely; Hugh, William, Abraham, Isaac and myself. Abraham and Isaac are both dead.

* * * * * * * *

"I was born at Milton, near Rahway, and in early life I went to Buffalo, N. Y. During the Fall of 1830 I located at Newark, N. J., and seven years later I went to Canandaigua, N. Y., where I remained until 1845. Since then I have resided in Rochester. I have buried my wife and eldest daughter, and at present I am living with my other daughters."

The letter concludes: "Can you inform me if Augustus Laing's widow is living, and if so, where?

"Yours, etc.,
"THOS. T. LAING."

MONDAY'S SHOOTING CONTESTS.

Some Excellent Scores Made on the Grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club at Dunellen.

There was a large attendance at the Middlesex Gun Club grounds at Dunellen, Monday, many of the crack shots in this city and vicinity being present. The shooting was at both live and clay birds, and some good scores were made.

The first event was a sweepstake, ten blue rocks each, 50 cents entrance fee, with eleven entries. Apgar broke nine; C. Smith, E. Miller and Manning each broke eight; Brantingham and Soper tied on seven.

Event No. 2, was the same as the preceding one, with fourteen entries. Miller and C. Smith broke ten straight; Derby broke nine, and Manning, Robinson, Vanaice and Nelson tied on eight.

Next came a special event between Messrs "Dick Lester" and W. Terry, both local shooters. The conditions were for $150 a side, 25 live birds each. "Lester" shot out on the 21st bird. Following is the score in detail, the figure two (2) indicating that the second barrel was used:

Terry—2 2 2 2 1 0 2 2 0 2 2 2 2 2 1 0 1 1 0 1 2
Lester—0 1 2 0 1 0 1 2 0 1 0 0 2 1 0 1 2 0 1 2 0

Event No. 3, was a live bird sweepstake $3 entrance fee, four birds each, with five entries. W. Terry killed four straight and took first money; C. Smith killed three and took second money.

Event No. 4 was the same as the preceding one with five entries. Smith killed four straight taking first money. Miller and Apgar tied on three and divided second money.

Two other events, sweepstakes, ten birds each, were shot off during the day in which the ties divided three moneys.

Other matches will be arranged from time to time, during the Spring and Summer months, in which many of the local sportsmen will participate.

And It Wasn't a Good Egg Day, Either.

Mr. Wm. Grattan of this city says that he can completely overshadow the act of a German named Albert Glass, hostler at the Commercial Hotel of Somerville, who recently, while employed at Wooden's Hotel at White House Station, ate three dozen eggs, raw, shells and all.

Mr. Grattan says that at one sitting, he ate four dozen eggs, two mince pies and drank a quart of cider, and it wasn't a good egg day, either.

"Der Fadder of Der Shingle."

At Somerset Hall, Somerville, on Thursday evening last, Damon Association of the Pythian sisterhood, gave an interesting entertainment, and among those who took part was Mr. J. H. Carney of this city. In speaking of Plainfield's German delineator a Somerville paper remarks:

"Mr. Carney gave Dutch pieces, and although down on the programme for only one piece, had to give six before the entertainment was through."

Looks Like a Bargain for Some One.

The Assignee's sale of the three houses and lots, situated on the Easterly corner of Grove street and Green Brook road, North Plainfield, N. J., (which premises were assigned by Louis A. Rheaume for the equal benefit of his creditors,) advertised to take place Monday, was again postponed. There were some people present but no bidders.

The sale is now adjourned until Saturday of this week, at two o'clock, on the premises. They are good houses as well as good investments at the low price it seems probable they will bring.

Sisters Meeting in a Brotherly Way.

Mizpah Lodge, U. O. of I. O. L., held their regular meeting on Monday, and nearly all the members were present.

The Right Worthy Vice Lady Governess, Sister A. M. Maxwell, of Boston, was present to have the work exemplified. This was very finely done by the Senior and Junior representatives, Sisters Morse and Westphal. After the lodge closed the ladies entertained the government officer in a very handsome manner with a fine collation and social entertainment. Mizpah Lodge is doing a good work. At a late hour the ladies repaired to their homes all feeling the evening was well spent, and hoping for a return of the same soon.

THE VOICE OF THE VISITOR.

Items Culled From the Monthly Journal that the Rev. C. E. Mitchell Sends His Congregation.

"What will Mrs. Grundy say?" Next Thursday evening.

Mrs. John McNaughton recently visited Washington, D. C.

Miss Nettie Beeching is doing an excellent work in the Washingtonville Sunday school.

If we are not mistaken the pastor of our church is the only pastor in the city who has escaped La Grippe. He has not been seriously ill for ten years. Do not waste any sympathy on him because he does not look like a rusher in a foot-ball team.

If our choir could hear all the kind things said of the excellent work it is doing, the chorister and members would be greatly encouraged.

The officers of the Ladies' Aid Society were elected for the coming year at the last meeting. It is the same list of officers with the exception of Miss Mary Brown as Treasurer. They are as follows: President—Mrs. L. M. French. Vice President—Mrs. D. E. Davis. Secretary—Mrs. R. R. Fairchild. Ass't Secretary—Mrs. Samuel Mitchel. Treasurer—Miss Mary Brown. Ass't Treasurer—Mrs. Lorenza J. Spicer.

Mr. and Mrs. John Waterson, of Summit avenue, will remove soon to Cranford.

Dr. Carroll ably filled the pulpit of the large and influential St. John's M. E. church, Brooklyn, Sunday, March 16

Mr. John Weir will soon begin the erection of a fine residence on Rockview avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Weir will have some excellent Methodist neighbors.

Sunday evening, February 23, the pastor baptized Raymond Sperry, the infant son of E. P. and Hattie L. Stevens, at the family residence, 65 Grand View avenue. The four grandparents were present at the ceremony.

Mr. Frank French, with several other boys of Mr J. Newton Jenkins' Sunday school class, presented a beautiful floral offering for the funeral of their beloved teacher. It was an appropriate tribute of love for a most faithful friend.

During the past quarter sixty-five have united with our church; ten by letter, and fifty-five on probation.

Mr. Edwin Loomis recently entertained the Rev. Chas. Parsons, D. D., and wife, of St. Paul's church, Newark. Dr. Parsons and Mrs. Loomis were classmates in college.

March 16, Mr. Geo. C. Martin, President of the S. S. Missionary Society, presented to Flossie Loomis, Harry McGee and Frank French, three Chinese coins, each over 1600 years old, as a prize for the largest sums of missionary money collected during the past year. The coins were a gift from the Rev. Marcus Taft, a returned missionary.

The pastor will deliver a lecture Thursday night March 27, in Vincent chapel, on "What Will Mrs. Grundy Say?"

THE CRESCENTS MOVING UP.

They Win Two Games From the Somersets of Somerville, and are Now on the Heels of the [illegible] of Westfield.

There was a notice posted in the club house of the Crescent League Tuesday, in these words: "Attention Crescents! THE DAILY PRESS of this evening, says: that if you win both of to-night's games you will pass the Olympics and the Fanwoods on the record. Will you do it? The League and the Ladies expect you to."

They did it, and the Crescent League team is now fourth in the Central Bowling Tournament. Again they put up a game of over 800 by winding up with 114 pins in the last frame of the second game. VanEmburgh, however, deserves all the credit of winning the first, and Haven helped greatly in the second.

The Crescents and the Elizabeths are the only teams who have been "bowling" for the past few weeks, and with the team they now have there is no reason that the former should not win first place, barring the latter.

Mr. Charles MacQuoid was umpire again Tuesday night. The Somersets were never ahead a pin. The Crescents took the lead at the start of each game and were never passed. The scores were:

CRESCENTS.	1st	2d	SOMERSETS.	1st	2d
VanEmburgh	211	172	Gulick	149	139
Haven	144	176	Schoonmaker	138	155
Thiers	128	136	Conklin	139	131
Rogers	131	189	Major	150	151
C. Teel	129	169	Goodman	115	137
	743	842		671	713

The record of the Central Bowling Tournament, now stands:

	WON.	LOST.	PERCENT.
Elizabeth Athletic Club	13	1	929
Nameless of Westfield	8	4	667
Monday of Westfield	8	6	571
Crescents of Plainfield	6	6	500

FIRE IN WASHINGTON VALLEY.

A Handsome Summer Boarding House Burned to the Ground Sunday Afternoon—Loss About $5,000.

About three o'clock Sunday afternoon, fire was discovered in the large Summer boarding house, owned by the Meyer estate and situated on the main road leading from Mt. Bethel to Smalleytown, about two-and-a-half miles Northwest of this city. The building was of frame, three stories high, and was completely destroyed, together with most of the contents.

The house was occupied by a man named Stangle, a son-in-law of the late Mrs. Mayer, the latter named being a sister of Mrs Geo. Lisignolo of this city. When discovered, the fire had gained such headway that it was impossible to extinguish it. The only furniture saved was a few articles on the first floor.

The total loss will probably not exceed $6,000, on which there is said to be a small insurance. The fire originated from a defective flue.

Fish for Plainfield Fishermen.

For years Messrs E. P. Thorn and W. L. Force of this city, have been active in stocking the waters of Union, Somerset and Middlesex counties with game fish, and had succeeded to such an extent that many ponds and streams were replete with black bass and other fish, which afforded pleasure to the angler in their capture. It has always been a theory with them that the land-locked salmon would thrive in certain waters in which they have fished, and they have endeavored to secure a sufficient number of the fry of said fish with which to stock these waters. At last their efforts have been successful as the following letter shows:

U. S. COMMISSION OF FISH AND FISHERIES,
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 18, 1890.

[illegible] E. Paterson, Esq., 1[illegible] Broad street, New York.

DEAR SIR:—I have directed to be sent, by express, to Mr. E. P. Thorn, Plainfield, N. J., from our Station at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., when ready for shipment, 10,000 land-locked salmon fry, for the purpose of stocking the pond of the fishermen of Plainfield, N. J., in the Orange mountains.

Very respectfully,
M. McDONALD,
Commissioner.

Upon arrival the fry will be deposited in waters suitable for them and the public notified of the fact, so that the fish may be protected.

—The Winter of 1890 will be chiefly remembered as the Winter that came in the Spring.

A NOVEL MOTTO FOR A FAIR.

"Give People the Worth of Their Money."

Now that housecleaning and moving time has come, you will want to throw out all your old pans, dishes, washtubs, brooms, irons, etc. But they can be replaced with new at reasonable prices, at the Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday booths of the Bazaar of Days' at the Crescent Avenue chapel, this week. You can also obtain new pincushions, work-baskets, needle-books, doilies, lamp screens, and fancy articles of every description.

You should come on Thursday to the New England supper, which you can have after five o'clock, and then you will want to see everything while it is fresh, and before articles are sold; but you will also want to hear Mr. Camancho's amusing entertainment on Friday night.

An effort has been made to mark everything at a reasonable price, and the general motto of the affair is "Give people the worth of their money."

The bazaar will open at five o'clock on Thursday and will continue through Friday and Saturday afternoons and evenings. Admission, fifteen cents.

The Miller Trial.

The case of Tunis J. Carey vs. Mr. Jos. B. Miller, proprietor of Laing's Hotel for an alleged violation of the liquor ordinance in keeping his barroom open after eleven o'clock at night, was tried before City Judge Codington and a jury in the City Court room yesterday afternoon. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh appeared for the prosecution, and Counsellor Samuel Kalisch, of Newark, represented the defence.

The case was called soon after two o'clock, when Counsel for the defendant moved to dismiss the complaint on the ground that it was defective. He made an able argument to which Corporation Counsel Marsh responded.

Judge Codington over-ruled the motion, and at three o'clock the jury was sworn in, and the examination of witnesses begun.

The jury disagreed.

Election of Officers.

The Directors of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association met last evening, all the members being present, and organized for the ensuing year by electing officers as follows:

President—Joseph S. Cutter.
Vice President—Lewis E. Barkalow.
Treasurer—Wm. R. Codington.
Secretary—Nathan Harper
Solicitor—John H. Jackson.
Finance Committee—John Chandler, B. F. Corriell, Wm. R. Codington.

To Secure a Means to Sewer Plainfield.

The Common Council held a special meeting Saturday evening, and added Mr. Newhall to the committee consisting of Messrs Hetfield, Rushmore and Spangenburg who have in charge the bill now before the legislature providing for the building of sewers in Plainfield by a private corporation.

The committee was instructed to consult with Assemblymen Ulrich and Marsh, and with the City Attorney, as to the best steps to be taken to secure speedy and favorable legislation for the bill.

A Birthday Sociable.

A pleasant time was had at No. 32 West 2d street Tuesday evening, the occasion being the anniversary of the nineteenth birthday of Mr. Edgar V. R. Sofield. Notwithstanding the inclement weather, a large number of "Ed's" friends were present and seemingly enjoyed themselves until the "wee sma' hours o' morn." Music, both vocal and instrumental, games, etc., were the features of the evening's enjoyment. Refreshments were also served. The presents were numerous and appropriate.

Arrested for Grand Larceny.

Constable Amos Moffett on Monday evening arrested a clerk in a Front street store, on a warrant issued in Mercer county, and endorsed by Justice Nash of this city. The charge was for grand larceny, the accused, it is alleged, having absconded with furniture valued at $60. The defendant furnished $200 bail for his appearance before the Mercer County Court of Quarter Sessions, which convenes at Trenton in May.

Those who are acquainted with the facts in the case, say that the accused will have no difficulty in establishing his innocence.

The Town Clock Being Repaired Abroad.

The Plainfield town clock has been removed to the mountains for a change of air.

Mr. Bartels, who is an expert on clocks of this kind, promises that when he returns it to its place in the steeple of the Methodist Episcopal church again, it will not gang a glee. The residents of this State may thereafter set their chronometers by it. Mr. Bartels reports the works of the clock in a good state of preservation, but he says that the men who formerly had it in charge did not understand that sort of a clock.

—A series of protracted meetings are being held in Mt. Olive Baptist church, under the leadership of a Brooklyn divine.

—Has anyone of THE PRESS' readers a bookcase that has been discarded? Send it to the Children's Home. Kind friends have given that institution over a hundred books, but there is no place to put them.

When Macbeth ironically asked, "Canst thou minister to a mind diseased?" he little knew that mankind would one day be blessed with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In purifying the blood, this powerful alterative gives tone and strength to every function and faculty of the system.

A PARADISE FOR STREET GAMINS.

The Boys' Club Organized With a Handsome List of Officers and Starts Out on a Great Field of Labor.

An enthusiastic meeting of the subscribers to the Boys' Club Association of Plainfield was held in Reform Hall Friday night and permanent organization was effected by the election of the following officers:

Executive Committee — Mrs. D. W. Pond, Mrs. W. L. Patton, Mrs. C. W. Opdyke, Mr. W. B. Wadsworth, Mr. George Wharton Edwards.

President—Mr Aaron M. Powell.
Secretary—Miss Nettie Haviland.
Treasurer—Dr. W. H. Murray.

Vice Presidents—Mayor Job Male, ex-Judge Nathan Harper, and Messrs Wm Miller, A. D. Shepard, Geo. H. Babcock, James T. Closson, W. L. Patton, D. W. Pond, F. F. Beals, F. Wood, Wm. Bloodgood.

Advisory Board—Messrs Isaac Miller, Howard Fleming, S. A. Crinkshank, H. A. Oestermoor, Alex. Gilbert, C. B. Corwin, R. F. M. Chase, F. C. Langhorne, J. C. Pierson, Jr., H. P. Reynolds Leo Daft, George Wharton Edwards, Dr. O. L. Jenkins, and Mrs. E. L. Goddard, Mrs. M. E. Edgerton, Mrs. Dexter Tiffany, Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy, Mrs. W. J. Leonard, Mrs. A. C. Baldwin, Mrs. W. P. Smith, Miss Adeline P. Newton

The object of the Plainfield Boys' Club is to reclaim gamins from the streets. It is estimated that at least five hundred boys in this city are not reached by any humanitarian influence, and to prevent these youngsters from becoming worthless and wicked men the management of this Club intend surrounding them with ameliorating attractions.

The method to be followed in this new and important work is that pursued by the Rev Mr. Collins, the pioneer of the Boys' Club movement, who spoke at last night's meeting. Mr. Collins entered on the gamin mission field while a senior with the Rev. W. R. Richards at Yale College in 1872 He has been very successful among the wayward youth whom he has reached, and the number of Boys' Clubs organized under his direction is very large. Plainfield's is a pioneer club for New Jersey. Mr. Collins asserts that in two years 8,000 Connecticut boys have been snatched from useless and criminal lives by his Clubs, and the average cost has been only eight-tenths of one cent each night for each boy.

In the Club rooms the boys are accorded every privilege. Even the library is at their disposal. When you trust these boys—Mr. Collins claims—they show themselves worthy of being trusted. Among all the boys, who in his first year's experience had unlimited access to his store of books, none ever exhibited any signs of a desire to smuggle away any of the things, which to their newly-awakened minds were such treasures. Indeed, during the entire twelve months, he lost only four books, while the College library lost ninety-six

The room is always in charge of the Superintendent, and whatever religious instruction is attempted is through his personal efforts. The rooms are open only between seven and nine o'clock at night. In the daytime the Superintendent visits the homes of the boys. Jews, Roman Catholics and Protestants all are welcomed, and the benefits to all are such that when the boys reach manhood they are prepared and willing to be graduated into the Y. M. C. A., the churches, business and good citizenship, instead of continuing evil lives.

Various interesting stories connected with the work were told by Mr. Collins, and Mr. Spaulding, of Montclair spoke at considerable length on manual training work, of which he has charge in his town. This manual training is to be made a very especial feature of the local Club. The public schools, as Mr. Opdyke announced, had refused to add it to the regular course; but the Club will develop it thoroughly. A fund of $500 to be devoted to this branch of the work was started last night, and by voluntary subscriptions the sum of $265 was promptly raised. Mr. Wadsworth started with $100; Mr. Pond gave $50; Mr. Rockfellow, $5 and Messrs. Opdyke, Patton, Field and Cruikshank contributed $25 each.

Brief speeches were made by Mr. Powell, who presided during the evening, the Rev. Mr. Richards, the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, Editor W. J. Leonard and ex-Judge Nathan Harper. Votes of thanks were extended to Messrs Collins and Spaulding, to the Reform Club, and to Mrs Patton and Mrs. Pond.

A bevy of bootblacks straggled early into the meeting, frolicked a little, quieted down, became interested and were chosen as a nucleus around which to build a constant large attendance at the club's rooms.

The constitution and by-laws adopted by the Association are brief and contain no unnecessary provisions. The Executive Committee has supreme control of affairs, and in consequence for at least the coming year Mrs. Pond and Mrs. Patton, the founders of the club, will be most prominently identified with the work. Annual meetings of the Association will be held the third Friday of every April.

Concerning the Post Office Removal.

Post Office Inspector Henry D. Parham, visited this city Friday to receive proposals for the lease of a new site for the Post office, in accordance with the advertisement in THE PRESS. There were three bids for a location: one from Wm. B. Clarkson, 17 East Front street; Jacob Voehl, 17 West Front street, and Mr. J. P. Taylor, corner Park and North avenues. Inspector Parham took the proposals and reserved his decision.

She Denies the Statement.

Mrs. Ramsberger, whose husband was arrested on Thursday on a charge of embezzling from Abram C. Cadmus, wishes THE PRESS to deny a statement published in another paper that evening to the effect that her husband accumulated considerable real estate while in Mr. Cadmus' employ. She says that the entire property, valued at about $1,400, belongs to her, and not to her husband. She says that her husband is a hard working man and was very attentive to his business.

The Usual Answer Fits the Case.

A correspondent today asks: "Which of the Councilmen did landlord Miller sell the liquor to?" and adds, "I saw nothing in your columns relating to the charge of liquor selling." The usual answer will do for this questioner, and will fully cover the ground—If you don't see it in THE PRESS, it isn't so. Not even "Chief Carey says" upon his oath, that a drop of liquor was had by anybody. The reports of irresponsible newspapers are the only foundations of such a charge.

Still Another Will Contest.

The latest will contest is that of the will of Henry Regan who recently died in this city. He left all of his property to his brother-in-law, Mr. Andrew McCardell, foreman at the Pond tool works. The will is being contested by two sisters of the deceased. The Court referred the case to the Surrogate to take the testimony, and the first session was held on Thursday. The ground of contest has not yet been declared.

Craig A. Marsh is counsel for the executor. Counsel for the others interested in the case are Messrs Walter L. Hetfield, B. V. Lindabury and Chas. A. Reed.

For the cure of colds, coughs, and all derangements of the respiratory organs, no other medicine is so reliable as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It relieves the asthmatic and consumptive, even in advanced stages of disease, and has saved innumerable lives.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Our New Salesroom.

In our basement on the Broadway side, we have fitted up a new, commodious, well-appointed salesroom. It was opened last week and has been even more successful than we had hoped, greatly increasing our facilities for accommodating customers.

We call attention to the peculiar advantages in price and quality of goods which will always be afforded in this department; it may be reached from either floor of the old store or directly from Broadway.

We are now selling there large lines of Silks, Dress Goods and Cloths, of thoroughly reliable make, at lower prices than we have ever quoted before.

We invite a visit of inspection in this new department; it will surely be followed by a second.

TOWNSHIP OFFICERS ORGANIZE.

The North Plainfield Township Committee Elect Officers for the Ensuing Year, and Transact Other Business.

The North Plainfield Township Committee met Friday night and organized for the ensuing year by electing Mr. A. P. Voorhees, Chairman; and Mr. R. R. Fairchild Treasurer. The committee accepted the bonds of the several officers as follows:

Collector H. N. Spencer, $15,000; Treasurer, R. R. Fairchild, $7,000; Constables, J. A. Bauersachs and Job Coddington, $500. The officers, including the Commissioners of Appeal and Pound Keepers, were all sworn in by the Clerk.

Reports of the election for road overseer in the several districts were received as follows:

District No. 1—A. Tunison.
District No. 2—Geo. Stewart.
District No. 3—Jacob Kline.
District No. 4—T. Smalley.

The meeting adjourned subject to a call by the chair.

Greatly Exaggerated but Somerville Wins.

(From the Somerville Gazette.)

We recently published an account of how a man at Plainfield ate two dozen eggs at one sitting, upon a wager. This feat has been completely overshadowed by the act of a German named Albert Glass, hostler at the Commercial Hotel of Somerville, who recently, while employed at Wooden's Hotel at White House Station ate three dozen eggs, raw, shells and all. The feat was performed in the presence of Station Agent Dankel and others, who purchased the eggs. Glass had previously often eaten a single egg in that manner merely to show that it could be done.

An Item For the Top of Your Hat.

In this season of bad traveling the best medium for vendue sales is the newspaper. Bills are only of use in the immediate neighborhood of the sale, and general publicity can only be obtained through the newspaper which circulates in the whole county, and draws a larger attendance.

If there is an article that a buyer would like, the newspaper is the source from which he receives the information. The Plainfield CONSTITUTIONALIST goes out every week and pauses not until it enters every household in the county—nearly. No matter how bad the traveling is, it gets there. Plant an advertisement in its columns if you want people to know what you are doing

PERHAPS no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most distressing and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the multitude of modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising.

—Among the new patents recently granted were two to Mr. John Brooks of this city, for cut-off [illegible] for printing presses.

—[illegible] advises people to live on the top floors, and that he expects a wet, [illegible] Summer. That settles it, prepare for a drouth.

—The ladies of Friendship Rebecca Degree Lodge, No. 4, I. O. O. F., will hold a fair and bazaar in Dunlap's Hall, from April 7 to 12 inclusive.

—The members of Stelle Square Lodge, No. [illegible], of this city, are arranging for a grand reception at "Assembly Hall," on Thursday evening, May 1.

—Vice Chancellor Bird has decided that a lady witness must unveil her face in order that she may be fully identified as a witness by every spectator.

—One of the contemplated improvements in this city the coming Summer will be the introduction of a street railway system and the removal of the [illegible] lamps.

—The Home News of New Brunswick says: "Our pastors might profitably imitate the example of the Plainfield evangelical churches by holding union services on Good Friday."

—Easter Sunday falls this year on the sixth of April. The Easter season is usually the last of the cold season, and as Easter comes early this year an early Spring may be looked for.

—Messrs August Trust and E. Weller, will tender their friends an evening sociable at Spencer's Hall, North Plainfield on the evening of Friday, March 28. Prof Fraser will furnish the music.

—At the meeting of the Crescent League, March 19, Mr. Howard Emerson, chairman of the minstrel committee, handed in his check for $[illegible] as the net proceeds of the recent entertainment.

—An extension 200 feet long is being added to one department of the Pond Machine Tool company's works, to provide the necessary facilities for carrying out the extensive Government contracts recently awarded.

—The Summit Lyceum [illegible] team are making arrangements to shoot for the silver cup, with the Park Avenue [illegible] Club of Plainfield. No date has as yet been arranged. The match will take place in Plainfield.

—The trustees of the Crescent League have been empowered by a vote of the members, to begin at once proposed alterations to the club house providing for a spacious billiard room, dining hall and reading and smoking rooms.

—"Jim," the faithful [illegible] man employed by Messrs Kline & [illegible] of West Front street, declares that he saw two men prowling about the office at an early hour on Sunday morning. The men were evidently looking for a place to sleep.

—Now that the moving season is upon us, many will change their place of residence. In order that your paper may be received regularly it is necessary that you give notice of the change promptly, giving both the old and new address.

—There is cause for much encouragement to those principally interested, in the spirit and readiness with which the members of the Choral Society have taken hold of the choruses of the "Messiah." It will be rendered in a manner unexcelled.

—An official notice has been issued to the effect that the Delaware and Raritan canal, which runs through Bound Brook, will be reopened for navigation at 7 o'clock A. M., on Thursday, March 27. Navigation usually opens about the second Monday in March.

—Mr. Edward Rushmore, M. D., of Park avenue, was the recent purchaser of the [illegible] property on Broadway and Fourth street.—Mr. Nelson Runyon acting as agent. The friends of Mr. [illegible] will be glad to learn that he will personally continue the business at the old stand.

—For the first time in two years the day after a snow storm, Street Commissioner Meeker had all the crosswalks cleaned, the gutters opened and everybody's sidewalk shoveled off by Thursday night. He even made the railroad company clean off the sidewalk on Park avenue East of the railroad crossing, and that's something the Council, or Chief Carey, or the Mayor or anyone else, never accomplished.

Death of Margaret Lewis.

Mr. Israel Lewis of North Plainfield, on Tuesday received a telegram from Basking Ridge, N. J., announcing the death at that place Monday night, of his mother, from old age. Mrs. Lewis was the widow of the late Alvah Lewis. She was [illegible] years of age, and had been ailing for some time past.

The Holy Cross Will Also Have the Finest.

The contract for the new organ to be placed in Holy Cross church, has been given to Messrs Lebagh & [illegible], builders of some of the best instruments in the metropolis, and work will be begun in the church immediately after Easter. The new organ will be one of the finest in the city and it is confidently expected that it will be completed by June 1.

The New Seventh Day Baptist Church.

As already told in THE [illegible], the Seventh Day Baptist church in this city will soon begin the erection of a new stone chapel in the rear of the church building at the corner of Central avenue and Fifth street. The building will face on Fifth street and will be [illegible] feet in dimensions. It will be lined with brick, tiled roof, and fitted up with all the modern conveniences. The total cost will be about $20,000.

The contract for the stone work has been awarded to Mr. Martin Carey, of Jersey City. Mr. O. S. Teale of North Plainfield is the architect. Work on the new building will begin as soon as the weather will permit.

A Regulator.

A few HAMBURG FIGS, will cure the worst cases of indigestion, etc., and their occasional use will prevent the recurrence of these troubles. 25 cents a box, one fig. Mack Drug Co., N. Y. For sale by J. G. Miller.

—There is a bill before the Legislature that requires all dogs in the State to be registered on pain of extermination.

Smoker's Heart.

DR. FLINT'S REMEDY wards off death from those who have developed "smoker's heart" through the use of tobacco, rendering that organ liable to rupture at any time. Descriptive treatise with each bottle; or address Mack Drug Co., N. Y. For sale by J. G. Miller.

PERSONALIA.

Miss Marion A. Taggart of Broadway, has returned from her visit at Sewaren.

Councilman Wm. K. McClure's mother died on Friday last, in Baltimore, at the home of her other son.

Mr. and Mrs Charles Potter have returned from a most interesting month's trip through New York State.

Dr. T. B. J. Bird and Mrs. Bird of Flemington, are today visiting Mr. and Mrs. Wilson F. Fulper of North Avenue.

Miss Nettie Athy, daughter of Alderman Athy of Worcester, Mass., is visiting Mrs Walter L. Hatfield of East Second street.

Mr. C. J. Feytel formerly of North Plainfield, has become a resident of this city, having removed to No. 145 West Front street.

The Rev. George Angleman of this city, who has been admitted to the ministry by the Kansas Conference, is at home for a brief vacation.

Mrs. George Wharton Edwards read before the Monday Afternoon club, in the rooms of the Unitarian Society, Second place, last evening.

Mr. Wm. Sandford of West Seventh street, Thursday sold to his niece, Miss Sandford, a desirable new dwelling house on Sandford avenue, for $6,000.

Mr. James Evans of the Potter Press Works, who went to Colorado a few weeks ago, suffering from throat troubles, is reported as much improved.

The engagement is announced of Miss Hettie Bennett, of Central avenue, and Mr. Lincoln B. Goodrich, brother of the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, and acting Principal of the public schools.

Mr. Minor C. Smith, for a long time past employed as bookkeeper by Mr. W. F. Adams, has accepted a position as traveling salesman for a wholesale painters' supply firm in Jersey City.

A cablegram just received from Mrs. Jacob Kirkner, dated at Dresden, contains the sad news that Miss Carrie Kirkner has had another relapse and is so much worse that recovery is almost despaired of.

At the annual meeting of the Newark M. E. Conference, which is to be held in Newark early in April, the Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut of this city will speak at the anniversary exercises of the Sunday School Union and Tract Societies.

The Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry's new service of Scripture and Song for Eastertide is entitled "King Forever." It contains hymns, anthems, Scripture reading, offertory, choruses, etc., and will undoubtedly meet a large demand.

Mr. W. R. Babcock and family, of Brooklyn, have rented the house on Webster place formerly occupied by ex-Councilman Stover. Mr. Babcock is Asst. Passenger Agent of the Providence & Stonington line, at New York.

At 7:30 o'clock on Thursday, another star was added to the Raffner family at Dunellen. This harbinger shows that the removal of the Phillips family to this city, will not reduce the population of Dunellen as much as was anticipated.

Mr. Thos. H. Keller returned home from his Western tour on Saturday. The combination viz: East vs. West, which he represents, will shoot in Harrisburg on Monday, and in Philadelphia on Tuesday. The shoot at Trenton has been cancelled.

An evening sociable was given at the residence of Mr. J H. Fosher, corner of Grand avenue and Fourth street, Thursday evening last. The committee of arrangements consisted of Messrs F. B. and H. L. Randolph. Prof. Fraser furnished the music.

Mr. J. L. VanNeste and family, deeply to the regret of the extensive circle of friends he has drawn around him in Plainfield, will remove from their present home at East Second street, about the first of April, and permanently locate in Brooklyn.

The death of Floyd, the little girl baby, seven days old, of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney R. Cady, occurred at her parents' home, 374 West Front street, afternoon of March 13. Interment next day was private. Mr. Cady is the representative here of Supervising Engineer, Rudolph Hering.

One of the seven pages of an elaborately engrossed testimonial of sympathy and esteem, from the people of Brooklyn to Secretary Tracy, is the work of Mr. Wm. M. Smith of this city, and it is not the least original and elegant page, either. The entire cost of the work was $1,000.

There will be some changes in the Crescent Avenue church choir when the new organ gallery is completed. The principal cause of regret will be the resignation of Mrs. J. K. Myers, which regret will be somewhat tempered by the appointment of Miss Holmes as soprano soloist.

A number of changes in appointments will be made at the coming session of the Newark M. E. Conference. The Rev. Joseph Owen will probably go from the Westfield church to Montclair, and the Rev. Dr. Atkinson of the Halsey Street church, Newark, may succeed him in Westfield.

The Rev. Joseph. H. Bailey, pastor of the Shiloh Baptist church (colored) of Elizabeth, again preached in Mt. Olive Baptist church this city, Sunday evening. Every pew was occupied, as well as chairs in the aisles, and the interest was very great. There were ten on the mourner's bench, and four converts.

The evening of March 19, at residence of the groom's father, Mr. Gideon A. Barnes, Washington avenue and Prospect place, the marriage took place of Miss Anna R. Smith and Milton J. Barnes. Only the families and most intimate friends of the contracting parties, were present. Mr. J. R. Cleaver was the officiating clergyman.

The firm of Plummer & Co., which failed one day last week, contains two well known Plainfielders in its make up—ex-Councilman Wm. S. Darling, and Mr. John F. Plummer. The mention of their names, will call to the minds of builders, plumbers and painters of this city, the thousands of dollars they lost when Messrs Darling and Plummer failed to pay for work that was contracted for in building Hotel Netherwood.

It was thought probable that the sudden death of J. Newton Jenkins was directly caused by a severe fall on his side about two weeks ago. Consequently the accident insurance company in which he had a policy of $5,000 was concerned, and a post mortem was necessary to decide the company's liability. The result releases the company from any claim upon it, as it was found that Mr. Jenkins died of congestion of the lungs.

Probably the finest specimen of crayon portraiture ever seen in this city, is that just now exhibited in Reynolds' pharmacy. The subject is a woman's head and shoulders, and besides its excellence as a picture, the treatment of the flesh tints and the texture of the lace and fabric in the hat and dress, are most remarkable and unusual. It is the work of Mr. O. Vezino, a New York artist. He is a brother of Mr. A. Vezino, the pianist, who would receive applications for similar portraits.

Orvis E. Runyon, son of the late J. Calvin Runyon, who was one of the owners of the Central Thane of this city, and a brother to Manager Charles Runyon of the Telephone company here, is acting at present as the representative of an English syndicate in negotiating for the purchase of the property of Wilkinson, Gaddis & Co., the wholesale grocery and produce dealers of Newark. Wilkinson, Gaddis & Co., ask $800,000 in cash and $900,000 in debenture bonds for their business. The Englishmen have offered a total of $1,700,000. The negotiations are still pending.

Mr. Robert Gorton of Liberty street, is recovering from a severe attack of rheumatism.

Mr. S. R. Struthers, with his family, has just moved into the new home he has leased at 121 Madison avenue.

Miss Florence L. Young and W. Gilbert Strong, both of Fanwood, were married at Newburgh, N. Y., Saturday.

The Hon. John R. McPherson, has the thanks of this office for a copy of map of the United States, a valuable acquisition to the sanctum.

The will of Dr. Randolph Titsworth has been admitted to probate today. The executors are Mrs. Titsworth and ex-Mayor John H. VanWinkle.

The funeral of the late Margaret Wooden, who died on Sunday, took place from the house at eleven o'clock today, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes officiating.

Mr. James H Sangston, the courteous and obliging clerk in the City Pharmacy, will hereafter compound prescriptions for the Moy Pharmacy Co., at Park avenue and Fourth street.

The funeral of the late Margaret Lewis who died on Monday night, will take place from her late home at Basking Ridge, this afternoon at 1 o'clock. Interment will be made at Basking Ridge.

A reception will be tendered to Mr. Edward Schenck and bride, at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Geo. Smith, in Dog Watch Hollow, on Tuesday evening next, upon the return of the newly married couple from Illinois, where they have been spending a two weeks honeymoon.

Mr. Carmon Parse, cashier of the First National bank, who has been so ill at the home of his brother-in-law, Mr. John H. Honeyman, at Knoxville, Tenn., is now so much better that he expects to start back for Plainfield next week. He attributes his recovery entirely to the care and treatment of Dr. Edward Rushmore, of this city, who has had sole charge of the case for the past month.

WINFIELD SCOTT POST MEETING.

Mr. Charles B. Stephens Elected Commander to Succeed the Late Isaac Brokaw.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., held a special meeting in the post room, Tuesday, for the purpose of electing a Commander to succeed the late Isaac Brokaw, and to fill any and all vacancies which may exist in the board of officers.

For the office of Commander there were two candidates, namely, Chas. B. Stephens, the Senior Vice Commander and Frank Whitely. The result was as follows:

Stephens	24
Whitely	20

Comrade Wm. C. Smith was elected Senior Vice Commander.

Messrs James M. Atwood, John E. Stewart and Geo. W. Moore, were appointed a committee to draft suitable resolutions on the death of the late J. Newton Jenkins.

During the meeting Mr. Geo. W Moore, on behalf of Mr. Henry C. Drake, presented a handsome sword to the post.

A $250,000 JOB.

Councilman Smith Proposes to Burn New York City's Garbage.

Councilman Seymour G. Smith of this city, and several other officers of the Seaboard Sanitary Garbage Cremating and Refuse Utilizing company called on Mayor Grant the other day and suggested the advisability of New York city giving the company a five years' contract for disposing of all the garbage and other refuse of the city by cremation instead of having it towed out to sea.

The company claims to have adequate facilities for consuming all the street sweepings and other refuse at its works foot of East Seventeenth str et, and it agrees to do all the work at a price not exceeding what it costs the city now for disposing of the garbage alone, which they estimate at $250.000 a year. The Mayor promised to lay the matter before Street Cleaning Commissioner Loomis on his return and to communicate the result to the company.

A Plainfielder (?) Elected Superintendent.

Saturday's New York Herald says: "The Union Ferry Company directors met yesterday and named Charles E. Smith, of Plainfield, N. J., as the successor of Superintendent Edgerton.

"Mr. Smith is a brother of Director Bryan M. Smith and has had no previous experience in the ferry business."

Death of a Promising Youth.

The death is announced of Frederick W. Zeiss, the bright and promising twelve-year-old son of Mrs. Elizabeth Zeiss, which occurred at his home on Chatham street, North Plainfield, Sunday morning from membranous croup. The child was just branching out into young manhood, and would soon become a great help to his widowed mother, when his life was thus cut off, leaving her without a protector.

Raising the Ackerman Flag.

The unfurling of the flag recently presented to the High School by Mr. Ernest Ackerman, will take place at the High School hall, on Friday afternoon, at 2:15. The exercises will consist of patriotic recitations by some of the pupils. The singing of national songs by the school, and speeches by Mr. Ackerman, Dr. Hurlbut and Dr. Lewis. All friends of the school are cordially invited to be present.

A Quiet Wedding.

At the residence of the bride, corner of Washington and Fourth streets, March 19, at eight o'clock, occurred the marriage of Mr. Wm. W. Schenck of New Market, and Miss Alice Wood, the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes officiating. Miss Josie Wood, a sister of the bride, performed the honors of bridesmaid, while Mr. Wm. VanCleve of Brooklyn, was "best man."

The usual wedding feast followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Schenck left town next day for a brief wedding tour.

Courtesies Extended to Mr. Pliny Fisk.

Through the courtesy of Supt. Olhausen of the New Jersey Central Railroad, train No 512, which passes through this city about 11:50 o'clock A. M., on the way to Philadelphia and Washington, was stopped at the Plainfield station on Saturday to take on board Mr. Pliny Fisk and family of West Seventh street, who were on their way to Washington.

Mrs. Fisk is just recovering from a siege of illness, and it was on this account that the courtesies of the road were extended to Mr. Fisk.

Reform Club Tribute.

At a regular meeting of the above-named Club, held on Thursday, the following tribute was paid to the late Isaac Brokaw:

WHEREAS, It having pleased Almighty God in His inscrutable wisdom to remove from life our late fellow member and an ex-officer of the Reform Club of Plainfield, ISAAC BROKAW, whose personal interest in and advocacy of the saving and prospering cause of Temperance was zealously maintained; and

WHEREAS, Bowing as we do in humble resignation to the fiat of death, a sense of duty prompts us to make record of sorrow for departed worth, therefore, as a brief but sincere memorial, it is hereby

Resolved, That this action be entered at length upon the minutes of the Club, and a certified copy thereof be transmitted to the family of our deceased friend and colaborer.

NATHAN HARPER,
ALEX. TITSWORTH,
J. D. SPICER,
Committee.

A "BAZAAR OF DAYS."

In the Hands of Over One Hundred and Fifty Young Women.

The "Bazaar of Days," which is to be held in the Crescent Avenue chapel on Thursday evening, March 27, and Friday and Saturday afternoons and evenings, March 28 and 29, is expected to be even more attractive than the "Bazaar of Nations," which was so successful under the same management, six years ago

Each booth will represent a day of the week, will be appropriately decorated, and will have for sale, as far as possible, articles appropriate to Washing, Ironing, Mending and Sweeping, Visiting, Baking and Cleaning, and Shopping days.

A great deal of interest is shown throughout the church. Each booth is under the management of a different committee, each of which is exerting itself to excel, and, including the refreshment department, those on duty at different times will number about one hundred and fifty of the ladies and young girls of the church.

A programme of some kind will be arranged for each evening. Those who attended the minstrel entertainment given by the Crescent League, will be pleased to learn that Mr. A. F. Camancho has volunteered his services for one evening, which date will be given in these columns later.

A pamphlet, called the Household Bulletin, and containing items of interest concerning the bazaar, besides many valuable recipes tried and proved by ladies in this vicinity, will be distributed, as far as possible, over the city in a few days.

Kicked a Buggy to Pieces.

Mr. Geo. Ball of North Plainfield was exercising a new horse on East Front street, Thursday afternoon when the animal began kicking. The result was that the buggy to which the horse was attached was reduced into kindling wood, and Mr Ball narrowly escaped serious injury.

A Plainfielder Married at Newark.

At the residence of the bride, corner of Desbrosses and James street, Newark, at eight o'clock Thursday, occurred the marriage of Mr. James H. Huntington of this city and Mrs. Johanna Meeker, the Rev. J. H. Polhemus officiating. The bride is a sister of Mr. W. R. Mattox of this city. A reception followed the ceremony.

The Rev. Dr. Hurlbut Robbed.

The New York Sun of Thursday said: "While the Rev. Dr. Hurlbut of the Christian Advocate, was lecturing before the Epworth League, in St. James' Methodist church, last evening, a sneak thief entered the side door and made away with the reverend gentleman's overcoat and satchel. The thief has not been apprehended."

Interesting Exercises at Reform Hall.

Reform Hall was well filled Thursday night with an appreciative audience, notwithstanding the inclement weather. President Harper was in the chair. The exercises were somewhat varied from the usual custom, including addresses by several of those in the audience, and a duett by Mrs. King and Miss Hawkins. Mr. J. D. Spicer also read an article on temperance. Next Thursday evening the exercises will be on a more elaborate scale.

Death of Mrs. Peter Wooden.

At her home on Somerset street, North Plainfield, about four o'clock Sunday morning, occurred the death of Margaret, the estimable wife of Mr. Peter Wooden, from general debility. Mrs. Wooden, had she lived until Saturday next, would have been 91 years of age. Her death occurred on the fiftieth anniversary of her marriage.

"Aunt Margaret" as she was familiarly called has been a resident of North Plainfield for half a century past, most of which time she has lived with her husband in the plain and unostentatious looking structure on Somerset street where her death occurred yesterday morning, as above stated.

Mrs. Wooden was a member of the Rev. Dr. Yerkes' church. She leaves a husband but no children.

An Evening's Entertainment.

The ladies of the Christian Work Society of the Trinity Reformed church gave a reception to the members and congregation of the church in the lecture room Thursday. The time, 8 to 10 o'clock, passed quickly and pleasantly to the large number present.

During the evening the Misses Quinn and Smith rendered a piano duett in a highly pleasing style and were compelled to play another selection in response to prolonged encore. Master Johnny Voehl being present, was prevailed upon to recite the laughable experience of "Hoffenstein and his bugle," and so well did he do it that he was heartily encored, to which he responded by telling the experience of an Irish "gentleman" in a crowded horse-car. Refreshments were served and general sociability was the order for the remainder of the evening.

A Tribute to a Sexton's Faithful Service.

At the meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Crescent Avenue church held on Saturday evening, March 22, 1890, the following resolution was adopted, and the Secretary was authorized to have the same published. The Trustees deem it fitting to recognize the services of Henry Kline, deceased, late sexton of this church, and desire to express in memory of him what they believe to be proper and consistent with the feelings of the congregation.

That for nearly twenty-five years he faithfully and conscientiously performed the duties of sexton according to the best of his ability, and very satisfactorily to the church, looking well after its interests, and when in health was always found at his post of duty. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we regret his death, and express our sympathy with his family, who have lost a good husband and father, and the church, which he served so long, a useful and faithful sexton.

By order of the Board of Trustees,
CHAS. PLACE, President.
W. F. ARNOLD Sec'y and Treas.

Resolutions of Condolence

At a special meeting of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, held on the 18th instant, to take action with reference to the death of the late J. Newton Jenkins, a committee was appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the loss which has been sustained by the Council. To this end the committee offers the following:

WHEREAS, In the removal by death of our brother from our midst, we feel that we have lost a member who was highly esteemed in this community as a true and honest man, one who was a good example in all the relations of life, as a citizen, as a business man, as well as in the tenderest relations of his family.

Resolved, That we put on record this minute of the regard in which he was held.

Resolved, That his family be assured of our sympathy in this their severe trial and affliction.

At the same meeting a committee of the members of the Council was appointed to attend the funeral.

And it was ordered that the Charter of the Council be draped in mourning for thirty days in memory of our brother.

REV. E. M. RODMAN,
R. M. STOVER,
E. E. ANTHONY,
} Committee.

—The various church choirs are rehearsing special Easter music.

A PARADISE BY THE SEA.

The Second Season of a Famous Southern Resort.

"THE PRINCESS ANNE,"
VIRGINIA BEACH, VIRGINIA.

To the Editor of the Constitutionalist—I left New York on the 20th of February last on a visit to this lovely seaside resort, per S. S. "Roanoke," of the Old Dominion Line, Captain John G. Hucliphers. It gives me great pleasure to state that the trip to Norfolk was most enjoyable. Nothing is left undone on the part of the gallant Captain and his efficient officers to render the voyage one ever to be remembered. Your correspondent believing that the good people of Plainfield and throughout your State would be gratified to learn through the medium of your two excellent papers, something about one of the most charming Winter resorts on the Atlantic Ocean, I will briefly relate my impressions and some matters of interest to those contemplating a visit to that locality.

The Princess Anne is located within a stone's throw of the Atlantic Ocean. This superb Hotel will accommodate about 300 guests, and contains all the modern appliances for the comfort and convenience of its patrons. When I state that all the appointments and equipment of the Hotel are first-class, with a cuisine unsurpassed in excellence, I think your readers will require no further endorsement, save one more important fact—Mr. S. E. Crittenden is the manager of this famous hostelry. He will be remembered by the traveling public as manager of the "Hygeia," at Old Point Comfort, for several Winter seasons, as well as owner and proprietor of the famous "Cooper House," at Cooperstown, N. Y., one of the loveliest mountain Summer resorts in the land.

Virginia Beach is 18 miles due East of Norfolk, and forms a part of the most beautiful beach on the Atlantic Ocean. The trip from Norfolk to the Princess Anne, is made over the Norfolk and Virginia Beach R. R., in 55 minutes. The Norfolk and Virginia Beach R. R. Co., own this magnificent Hotel and the property surrounding it, consisting of about 1,600 acres, 1,000 acres of which is a grand pine forest. The charming drive through this noble forest and thence homeward on the beach, is a revelation ever to be remembered.

At Broad Bay, a few miles away, hunters will find excellent duck shooting grounds, and game abundant in the forest. The lovers of rowing, sailing and fishing, are made happy at Lake Holly, Linkhorn and Lynnhaven Bays, the latter famous for its delicious oysters. Bowling, billiards, tennis, horseback riding, and drives through the pines and on the beach, are a few of the pleasures indulged in by the guests. In the evening Prof. Verdier's Naval Post Band from Portsmouth, delight the music-loving guests with charming selections from favorite operas, as well as other music for the votaries of Terpsichore, so that it will be observed that nothing is left undone by our worthy manager to render his patrons supremely happy.

Grand improvements are under advisement—extension of the Hotel, railway changes, etc., that will render this grand resort by the sea second to none in the country. Many prominent guests from New York and other Northern and Southern cities, are now sojourning there. How to reach Virginia Beach is a very important matter to the visitor. Such information can be obtained at any of the offices of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., or at the Old Dominion Steamship Co's office in N. Y city.

Among the many pleasant incidents happening during my visit at the Princess Anne, I will record the following: I remarked to my good friend, Mr. Cyrus W. Field, "I have named this charming resort the 'Paradise by the Sea.'" "Oh! no," replied Mr. Field, "permit me to correct you. It is the 'Garden of Eden.'" May I be pardoned if my impressions of this lovely Paradise by the Sea, have carried me too far, but that the subject is so fruitful and challenges such warm admiration, must be my apology.

J. AUG. H.

On His Way to the World's Fair.

Patrick Kearns, a resident of this city was found lying on the sidewalk on East Second street at 9 o'clock, night Mch. 19, drunk and asleep. Officer Giesse arrested him and this morning Judge Codington fined him five dollars.

When the officer arrested Kearns, the man had enough clothing with him such as it was, to fill a Saratoga trunk, and it is presumed that he was about to start out for Chicago to attend the World's Fair in 1892.

Arrested for Embezzlement.

Two of the employes in a grist mill located near Grant avenue whose names we withhold out of consideration for their family relations, were arrested at one o'clock on Thursday by Officers Lynch and McCue, on charges of embezzlement. There were two charges against the accused—one lodged by Chief Carey and the other by the owner of the mill. The alleged embezzlement dates back since January 28, and for the past seven weeks detectives have been working on the case.

The two prisoners were arraigned before Judge Codington at the station house that afternoon, when they waived an examination and were held in the sum of $200 each to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Jr. O. U. A. M. Notes.

State Councilor Winfield S. Hill, of the State Council, Jr O. U. A. M., was a guest at the meeting of Franklin Council, Thursday. A large number of members were present to greet Brother Hill. After the regular routine business and the nominations of the officers for the next quarter were transacted, speeches for the good and welfare of the Order were made by State Councilor Hill, Past Councilors Bennett, Dunavan, Sthal and others. A bountiful repast was enjoyed after the meeting by the members at McVey's restaurant on North avenue.

At the meeting of Franklin Council held Thursday, a check of $250 was received from the Funeral Benefit Association on the death of the late Brother John A. Laible, which was forwarded to the family to defray funeral and other expenses.

The Council has also leased the Knights of Pythias rooms and have also purchased the furniture etc., which is now being used by the Knights. They will take possession of the rooms the first week in April.

About the first of April Franklin Council will have the honor, assisted by Councils from Newark, Elizabeth and Rahway, of instituting a Council at Bound Brook.

Never Bets On His Own Horse.

They tell a good story of a man who has a fondness for fast horses. A year or two ago he had one that was said to be a "flyer," and marvelous stories were told about what she had done, and was capable of doing. But an intimate friend noticed that the owner of the wonderful horse never staked any money on her.

"Why don't you back her for a good, round sum if she can do what you claim she can?" he asked. "That would prove that you had confidence in her, but as it is——"

"See here, my friend," said the other, with a twinkle in his eye, "don't you know me well enough to know that I'm too modest to bet on my own nag, especially when I feel sure that she can't come out ahead?"

When a man knows he can accomplish what he undertakes he doesn't feel too modest to say so. When Dr. Pierce put his Favorite Prescription before the public as a certain remedy for all diseases, with "satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded" on every bottle of it, it proved that he had entire confidence in the preparation. He felt sure of its merits, and the testimony of thousands of women who have been cured, proves that his faith was well founded.

FREEHOLDERS' PROCEEDINGS.

[OFFICIAL.]

ELIZABETH, N. J., March 6, 1890.

Regular meeting of the board of chosen freeholders of the county of Union held on Thursday, March 6, 1890, at 2.30 o'clock p. m.

Present—Director Hubbard, and Freeholders Doty, Donahue, Howard, Houston, Jones, Kyte, Kleinhans, Pierson, Roll, Thompson, Van Saun, Wright, Vanderbeek, West, Whaley—16.

Absent—Freeholder Briant,—1.

The minutes of last meeting (omitting list of bills ordered paid) were read and on motion approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication from non-resident property owners of Linden township petition for a bridge on Mitchel-ave, was received and referred to the following committee:

Freeholders West, Wright, Van Saun.

From street commissioner city of Elizabeth.

To the board of chosen freeholders of Union county:

GENTLEMEN—Your attention is called to condition of walks over South Broad-st, West Jersey-st and Westfield-ave bridges.

City Attorney Frank Bergen informs me that it is your duty to keep the same in repair and not the city's. Hoping that this will receive prompt attention, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
HENRY J. STRATEMEYER, JR.,
Street Commissioner.

On motion of Freeholder West received and referred to legal committee and county attorney.

From county engineer:

To the board of chosen freeholders of the county of Union:

GENTLEMEN—I hereby submit a general report of the present condition of county roads as follows:

St. George's-ave is in fairly good condition on each end, that is from Elizabeth city line to within 300 feet of Wood-ave a distance of about 10,800 lineal feet The telford and two courses of macadam are on and the grading is partially done, and from the centre of Grand-st, Rahway, out to the 40-acre road, a distance of about 5,700 lineal feet, it is in about the same condition. There is still about 4,000 lineal feet between the 40 acre road and Wood-ave that is not touched.

We cannot expect to have the connection made until the weather gets so tha the contractors can have the material hauled from Linden, without we can induce them to haul from Rahway and Elizabeth, which makes a very long haul. While the work has been carried on very slowly, still I consider we are getting a first-class road.

In regard to Morris-ave, I would say the telford and part of the crushed stone is on as far out as 8,300 feet from the Elizabeth city line, and also about 3,700 feet from the Springfield line the telford is on and two courses of crushed stone nearly the whole distance. The contractors on Morris-ave have been carrying on the work very slowly, and it has caused a great complaint from the residents along the road, which to a certain extent has been warranted.

I have pushed the contractor to the utmost, and it does not seem to make any difference. The trouble is that he does not get the stone fast enough for use, and the road has to suffer. As far as the quality of the road goes it is first-class. I do not see how it can be improved on.

On South-ave, Westfield, we are having the same trouble with the same contractors.

At Fanwood the work is well done as far as it goes, but there is being hardly anything done at present and I consider the work, especially at Fanwood, should be pushed more than it is being done at present, and there should be some measures taken by the board to bring about said result. Mr. Wood, the contractor, does not attend to the work and there is no likelihood of his doing so.

Upon the whole the work has been well done as far as the quality goes, but it has not been pushed by the different contractors as it should have been; but my inspectors and myself are doing everything we can to further the work and get it finished.

The above is a genuine report of the condition of the roads at the present time, and I shall do my utmost to have them completed at the earliest possible moment. Of course we have had the weather against us, but we could not control that.

Very respectfully,
F. A. DUNHAM,
County Engineer.

On motion of Freeholder Vanderbeek received and placed on file.

REPORT OF COMMITTEES.

From committee on county collector:

To the board of chosen freeholders of Union county:

GENTLEMEN—Your committee to settle with the county collector respectfully report that we have examined his books showing his receipts and disbursements, together with his vouchers, bonds and coupons paid and bank books, and find that the same agree and are correct to this date. His receipts and disbursements together with his vouchers, bonds and coupons paid and bank books, and find that the same agree and are correct to this date, His receipts and disbursements to this date:

Receipts	$495,098.30
Disbursements	319,556.27
Balance in his hands	$175,542.03

J. MARTIN ROLL,
JAMES T. PIERSON,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Howard, received and placed on file.

From committee on lunacy:

To the committee on lunacy of the board of freeholders of Union county:

The undersigned who signed a bond to said board conditioned for the payment of three dollars per week for the support of Maggie Evans in the asylum at Morristown, N. J., respectfully request that we be relieved from further liability on said bond, on the ground that John Evans, husband of Maggie Evans, is unable to pay anything further, on the ground he is out of work part of the time and all his property has been used toward her support and the support of his three children.

JOHN F. EVANS.

The committee on lunacy, after hearing the parties named on the bond above referred to, including the bondsman, and making inquiries into the matter, came to the conclusion that the representations made in above application were true and that the said John F. Evans was unable to contribute anything further toward the support of his wife at the asylum, and had used up all his property in providing for her and his children, and that the wages he now makes are barely sufficient to support himself and his children.

The committee would therefore recommend that the said John F. Evans and his bondsmen be relieved from further liability after the amount now due the county is paid and satisfied, and that the county assume the charge and expense of maintenance at the asylum of said Maggie Evans from that time, February 15, 1890.

Dated March 5, 1890.

JAMES T. PIERSON,
J. MARTIN ROLL,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Doty received and recommendation adopted unanimously.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Director Hubbard:

Resolved, That $1,500 from the public buildings account; $700 from the coroners' account; $1,000 from jail account, and $1,000 from miscellaneous account, be transferred to the account of bridges and culverts, and that $150 be transferred from coroners' account to stationery account.

Freeholder Roll moved its adoption.

On roll call adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Vanderbeek:

Resolved, That the bill of the Wrought Iron Bridge Co., Canton, Ohio, amounting to $1,889 50; one-half contract for Richmond and Water street bridges, Plainfield, be paid when properly audited by committee, and charged to special deficiency account.

Freeholder Donahue moved its adoption.

On roll call adoptedd unanimously.

By Freeholder West:

WHEREAS, The exact amount properly chargeable to special deficiency fund, and for which bonds are to be issued, cannot be accurately determined at this meeting; therefore be it

Reform Hall.

There was a fair sized audience in Reform Hall Sunday night. President Harper presided, the Rev. Mr. Honeyman conducted the devotional services and the Club's full choir, under the leadership of Mr. King, with Miss Alice Smith as accompanist, supplied the music. The speakers were Messrs Amos Andrews, Benjamin Hand and Nickolson, and their remarks were emphatically practical and delivered in a pleasing manner. They all bore testimony to the happy results attending total abstinence from the drink habit, portrayed the terrible evil of intoxicating liquor, and in bold and uncompromising language denounced the license system. A religious sentiment pervaded each discourse, and all the speakers were listened to with marked attention.

President Harper read the usual notices and asked for an increased attendance at the Thursday evening meeting. He stated that the speaker for next Sunday evening would be Mr. S. A. Haines of Netherwood.

A Firm of Enterprising Builders.

Two of the most enterprising and successful builders in this city at the present time are Messrs Jeremiah Manning and William M. Sandford. These gentlemen secured the title in November last to a tract of land on the Southwest side of what is known as Sandford avenue, extending from East Front street clear through to Green Brook, a distance of about 1,200 feet. Since then they have improved the property by laying out 24 lots of fifty feet frontage and erected a number of handsome dwelling houses. The land was purchased for $10,000, and already about $12,000 has been realized for one-half of it, and there yet remains about $12,000 worth of the tract to be disposed of.

Only Thursday Mr. Fred Dunn, the enterprising grocer of North avenue, purchased one of the new houses on Sandford avenue for $5,000, and another $8,000 residence is in course of erection for Mr. E. D. Murphy, the wholesale cloak manufacturer of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has purchased the house and will take up his residence here about April 15

Messrs Manning and Sandford have done much toward improving property both in this city and North Plainfield within the past few years, and to them much credit is due for the growth of the city.

—The petit jurors drawn from North Plainfield, Tuesday, to serve at the April term of the Somerset County Court, are Wm. A. Sperry, William L. Brown, William S. Campbell, George Lewis.

Rheumatism,

BEING due to the presence of uric acid in the blood, is most effectually cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Be sure you get Ayer's and no other, and take it till the poisonous acid is thoroughly expelled from the system. We challenge attention to this testimony:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months, and am pleased to state that it has effected a complete cure. I have since had no return of the disease."—Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th st., New York.

"One year ago I was taken ill with inflammatory rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."—Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H.

ENGLISH stoats and weasels are being exported to New Zealand from England in large numbers to kill off the rabbits, and the rats, which have been food for the stoats and weasels in England, are increasing enormously in some districts. A NEW swindle has appeared in Europe. Prominent persons receive letters dated at the military prison in Madrid, purporting to come from the late secretary of the Egyptian Mahdi, who knows where 4,000,000 of francs are concealed. TALMAGE ON ANGELS.

FAMILIAR RENDITION OF SCRIPTURE TEACHING THEREON.

They Are a Separate Class from Glorified Saints—Christians Will Not Be Angels. This World Is Their Field of Battle with Infernal Powers.

BROOKLYN, March 23.—The Academy of Music was filled to overflowing this morning by the Tabernacle congregation, and a large number of strangers anxious to hear the famous preacher. After the opening exercises, which commenced with the singing of the hymn,

Heaven is my fatherland,
Heaven is my home,

Dr. Talmage announced as his text Judges xiii, 19: "And the angel did wondrously." Following is a verbatim report of his sermon:

Fire built on a rock. Manoah and his wife had there kindled the flames for sacrifice in praise of God and in honor of a guest whom they supposed to be a man. But as the flame rose higher and higher their stranger guest stepped into the flame and by one red leap ascended into the skies. Then they knew that he was an Angel of the Lord. "The angel did wondrously."

Two hundred and forty-eight times does the Bible refer to the angels, yet I never heard or read a sermon on Angelology. The whole subject is relegated to the realm mythical, weird, spectral and unknown. Such adjournment is unscriptural and wicked. Of their life, their character, their habits, their actions, their exploits, the Bible gives us full length portraits, and why this prolonged and absolute silence concerning them? Angelology is our theme.

THE CELESTIAL-INFERNAL WAR.

There are two nations of angels, and they are hostile to each other; the nation of good angels and the nation of bad angels. Of the former I chiefly speak today. Their capital, their headquarters, their grand rendezvous, is heaven, but their empire is the universe. They are a distinct race of creatures. No human being has ever join their confraternity. The little child who in the Sabbath school sings, "I want to be an angel," will never have her wish gratified. They are superhuman, but they are of different grades and ranks, not all on the same level, or the same height. They have their superiors and inferiors and equals. I propose no guessing on this subject, but take the Bible for my only authority. Plato, the philosopher, guessed, and divided angels into super-celestial, celestial and sub-celestial. Dionysius, the Areopagite, guessed, and divided them into three classes—the supreme, the middle and the last—and each of these into three other classes, dividing nine in all.

Philo said that the angels were related to God, as the rays to the sun. Fulgentius said that they were composed of body and spirit. Clement said they were incorporeal. Augustine said that they had been in danger of falling, but now are beyond being tempted. But the only authority on this subject that I respect says they are divided into Cherubim, Seraphim, Thrones, Dominations, Principalities, Powers. Their commander-in-chief is Michael. Daniel called him Michael, St. John called him Michael. These supernal beings are more thoroughly organized than any army that ever marched. They are swifter than any cyclone that ever swept the sea. They are more radiant than any morning that ever came down the sky. They have more to do with your destiny and mine than any being in the universe except God. May the Angel of the New Covenant, who is the Lord Jesus, open our eyes, and touch our tongue, and rouse our soul, while we speak of their distinctness, their intelligence, their numbers, their strength, their achievements.

Yes, deathless. They had a cradle, but will never have a grave. The Lord remembers when they were born, but no one shall ever see their eye extinguished, or their momentum slow up, or their existence terminate. The oldest of them has not a wrinkle, or a decrepitude, or a hindrance; as young after six thousand years as at the close of their first hour. Christ said of the good in heaven, "Neither can they die any more, for they are equal unto the angels." Yes, deathless are these wonderful creatures of whom I speak. They will see world after world go out, but there will be no fading of their own brilliance. Yea, after the last world has taken its last flight they will be ready for the widest circuit through immensity, taking a quadrillion of miles in one sweep as easy as a pigeon circles a dovecot. They are never sick. They are never exhausted. They need no sleep, for they are never tired. At God's command they came with death, in one night, one hundred and eighty-five thousand of Sennacherib's host, but no fatality can touch them. Awake, agile, multipotent, deathless, immortal!

THE ANGELIC INTELLIGENCE.

A further characteristic of these radiant folk is intelligence. The woman of Tekoah was right when she spoke to King David of the wisdom of an angel. We take in what little we know through eye and ear and nostril and touch; but these beings have no physical encasement and hence they are all senses. A wall five feet thick is not solid to them. Through it they go without disturbing flake of marble or crystal of sand. Knowledge! It flames on them. They take it in at all points. They absorb it. They gather it up without any hindrance. No need of literature for them! The letters of their books are stars. The dashes of their books are meteors. The words of their books are constellations. The paragraphs of their books are galaxies. The pictures of their books are sunrises and sunsets, and midnight auroras, and the Conqueror on the white horse with the moon under his feet, and seas of glass mingled with fire. Their library is an open universe. No need of telescope to see something millions of miles away, for instantly they are there to inspect and explore it. All astronomies, all geologies, all botanies, all philosophies at their feet. What an opportunity for intelligence is theirs! What facilities for knowing everything and knowing it right away!

There is only one thing that puts them to their wit's end, and the Bible says they have to study that. They have been studying it all through the ages, and yet I warrant they have not fully grasped it—the wonders of Redemption. These wonders are so high, so deep, so grand, so stupendous, so magnificent that even the intelligence of angelhood is confounded before it. The apostle says, "Which things the angels desire to look into." That is a subject that excites inquisitiveness on their part. That is a theme that strains their faculties to their utmost. That is higher than they can climb, and deeper than they can dive. They have a desire for something too big for their comprehension. "Which things the angels desire to look into." But that does not discredit their intelligence. No one but God himself can fully understand the wonders of Redemption. If all heaven should study it [illegible] they would get no further than the A B C of that inexhaustible subject. But nearly all other realms of knowledge they have ransacked and explored and conquered. No one but God can tell them anything they do not know. They have read to the last word of the last line of the last page of the last volume of investigation. And what delights me most is that all their intelligence is to be at our disposal, and, coming into their presence, they will tell us in five minutes more than we can learn by one hundred years of earthly surmising.

THEY ABOLISH TIME AND SPACE.

A further characteristic of these immortals is their velocity. This the Bible puts sometimes under the figure of wings, sometimes under the figure of a flowing garment, sometimes under the figure of naked feet. As those supernal beings are without bodies these expressions are of course figurative, and mean swiftness. The Bible tells us that Daniel was praying, and Gabriel flew from heaven and touched him before he got up from his knees. How fast, then, did the angel Gabriel have to fly in those moments of Daniel's prayer? Heaven is thought to be the center of the universe. Our sun and its planets only the rim of the wheel of worlds. In a moment the angel Gabriel flew from that center to this periphery. Jesus told Peter he could instantly have sixty thousand angels present if he called for them. What foot of antelope or wing of albatross could equal that velocity? Law of gravitation, which grips all things else, has no influence upon angelic movement. Immensities before them open and shut like a fan. That they are here is no reason why they should not be a quadrillion of miles hence the next minute. Our bodies hinder us, but our minds can circle the earth in a minute. Angelic beings are bodiless and hence unhindered. God may with his finger point down to some world in trouble on the outmost limits of creation, and instantly an angelic convoy are there to help it. Or some soul may be standing on the furthermost outpost of immensity, and God may say "Come!" and instantly it is in his bosom. Abraham, Elijah, Hagar, Joshua, Gideon, Manoah, Paul, St. John, could tell of their unhindered locomotion. The [illegible] of summer lightning are slow compared with their [illegible]. This doctrine [illegible] and compresses infinitudes into infinitesimals. This puts all the astronomical heavens into a space like the balls of a child's rattle. This mingles into one the Here and the There, the Now and the Then, the Beyond and the Yonder.

Another remark I have to make concerning these illustrious immortals is that they are multitudinous. Their census has never been taken, and no one but God knows how many they are, but all the Bible accounts suggest their immense numbers. Companies of them, regiments of them, armies of them, mountain tops haloed by them, skies populous with them. John speaks of angels and other beings round the throne as ten thousand times ten thousand. Now, according to my calculation, ten thousand times ten thousand are one hundred million. But these are only the angels in one place. David counted twenty thousand of them rolling down the sky in chariots. When God came away from the riven rocks of Mount Sinai, the Bible says he had the companionship of ten thousand angels. I think they are in every battle, in every exigency, at every birth, at every pillow, at every hour, at every moment. The earth full of them. The heavens full of them. They outnumber the human race in this world. They outnumber ransomed spirits in glory. When Abraham had his knife uplifted to slay Isaac, it was an angel who arrested the stroke, crying, "Abraham! Abraham!" It was a stairway of angels that Jacob saw while pillowed in the wilderness. We are told an angel led the hosts of Israelites out of Egyptian serfdom. It was an angel that showed Hagar the fountain where she filled the bottle for the lad. It was an angel that took Lot out of doomed Sodom. It was an angel that shut up the mouths of the hungry monsters when Daniel was thrown into the cavern. It was an angel that fed Elijah under the juniper tree. It was an angel that announced to Mary the approaching nativity. They were angels that chanted when Christ was born. It was an angel that strengthened our Saviour in his agony. It was an angel that encouraged Paul in the Mediterranean shipwreck. It was an angel that burst open the prison, gate after gate, until Peter was liberated. It was an angel that stirred the Pool of Siloam where the sick were healed. It was an angel that John saw flying through the midst of heaven, and an angel with foot planted on the sea, and an angel that opened the book, and an angel that sounded the trumpet, and an angel that thrust in the sickle, and an angel that poured out the vials, and an angel standing in the sun. It will be an angel with uplifted hand, swearing that Time shall be no longer. In the great final harvest of the world, the reapers are the angels. Yea, the Lord shall be revealed from heaven with mighty angels. Oh, the numbers and the might and the glory of these supernals! Fleets of them! Squadrons of them! Host beyond host! Rank above rank! Millions on millions! And all on our side if we will have them.

THEY ARE MINISTERING SPIRITS.

This leads me to speak of the offices of these supernals. To defend, to cheer, to rescue, to escort, to give victory to the right, and overthrow the wrong; that is their business. Just as alert today and efficient as when in Bible times they spread wing, or unsheathed sword, or rocked down penitentiaries, or filled the mountains with horses of fire hitched to chariots of fire and driven by reinsmen of fire. They have turned your steps a hundred times, and you knew it not. You were on the way to do some wrong thing, and they changed your course. They brought some thought of Christian parentage, or of loyalty to your own home, and that arrested you. They arranged that some one should meet you at that crisis, and propose something honorable and elevating, or they took from your pocket some ticket to evil amusement, a ticket that you never found. It was an angel of God, and perhaps the very one that guided you to this service, and that now waits to report some holy impression to be this morning made upon your soul, tarrying with one foot upon the doorstep of your immortal spirit, and the other foot lifted for ascent into the skies. By some prayer detain him until he can tell of a repentant and ransomed soul! Or you were some time borne down with trouble, bereavement, persecution, bankruptcy, sickness, and all manner of troubles beating their discords in your heart and life. You gave up, you said: "I cannot stand it any longer. I believe I will take my life. Where is the rail train, or the deep wave, or the precipice that will end this torment of earthly existence?" But suddenly your mind brightened. Courage came surging into your heart like oceanic tides. You said: "God is on my side, and all these adversities he can make turn out for my good." Suddenly you felt a peace, a deep peace, the peace of God that passeth all understanding. What made the change? A sweet, and mighty, and comforting angel of the Lord met you. That was all.

What an incentive to purity and righteousness is this doctrine that we are continually under angelic observation! Eyes ever on you, so that the most secret misdeed is committed in the midst of an audience of immortals. No door so bolted, no darkness so Cimmerian as to hinder that supernal eyesight. Not critical eyesight, not jealous eyesight, not baleful eyesight, but friendly eyesight, sympathetic eyesight, helpful eyesight. Confidential clerk of store, with great responsibility on your shoulder, and no one to applaud your work when you do it well, and sick with the world's ingratitude, think of the angels in the counting room rapturous at your fidelity! Mother of household, stitching, mending, cooking, dusting, planning, up half the night or all night with the sick child, day in and day out, year in and year out, worn with the monotony of a life that no one seems to care for, think of the angels in the nursery, angels in all the rooms of your toiling, angels about the sick cradle, and all in sympathy!

FEAR NOT! ANGELS GUARD YOU.

Railroad engineer, with hundreds of lives hanging on your wrist, standing amid the cinders and the smoke, round the sharp curve and by appalling declivity, discharged and disgraced if you make a mistake, but not one word of approval if you take all the trains in safety for ten years, think of the angels by the throttle valve, angels by the roaring furnace of the engine, angels looking from the overhanging crag, angels bracing the swung wheels of the precipice, angels when you mount the thunderbolt of a train and angels when you dismount! Can you not hear them, louder than the jamming of the car coupling, louder than the bell at the crossing, louder than the whistle that sounds like the scream of a flying fiend, the angelic voices saying, "You did it well. You did it well!" If I often speak of engineers it is because I ride so much with them. I always accept their invitation to join them on their locomotive, because I not only get to my destination sooner, but because they are about the grandest men alive.

Men and women of all circumstances, only partly appreciated, or not appreciated at all, never feel lonely again, or unregarded again! Angels all around; angels to approve, angels to help, angels to remember. Yea, while all the good angels are friends of the good, there is one special angel your body guard. This idea, until this present study of angelology, I supposed to be fanciful, but I find it clearly stated in the Bible. When the disciples were praying for Peter's deliverance from prison, and he appeared at the door of the prayer meeting, they could not believe it was Peter. They said: "It is his angel." So those disciples, in special nearness to Christ, evidently believed that every worthy soul has an angel. Jesus said of his followers: "Their angels behold the face of my Father." Elsewhere it is said: "He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways." Angel shielded, angel protected, angel guarded, angel canopied, art thou. No wonder that Charles Wesley hymned these words:

Which of the petty kings of earth
Can boast a guard like ours,
Encircled from our second birth
With all the heavenly powers?

Valerian and Rufinus were put to death for Christ's sake in the year 287, and, after the day when their bodies had been whipped, and pounded into a jelly, in the night in prison, and before the next day when they were to be executed, they both thought they saw angels standing with two glittering crowns saying, "Be of good cheer, valiant soldiers of Jesus Christ! a little more of battle and then these crowns are yours." And I am glad to know that before many of those who have passed through great sufferings in this life, some angel of God has held a blazing coronet of eternal reward.

THE DEAD SHALL RISE WITH THEM.

Yes; we are to have such a guardian angel to take us upward when our work is done. You know we are told an angel conducted Lazarus to Abraham's bosom. That shows that none shall be so poor in dying he cannot afford angelic escort. It would be a long way to go alone, and up paths we have never trod, and amid blazing worlds swinging in unimaginable tumult, and on through such distances and across such infinitudes of space, we should shudder at the thought of going alone. But the angelic escort will come to your languishing pillow, or the place of your fatal accident, and say: "Hail, immortal one! All is well; God hath sent me to take you home!" and without tremor or slightest sense of peril you will away and upward, further on and further on, until after awhile heaven looms in sight, and the rumble of chariot wheels, and the roll of mighty harmonies are heard in the distance, and nearer you come, and nearer still, until the brightness is like many mornings suffused into one, and the gates lift and you are inside the amethystine walls, and on the banks of the jasper sea, forever safe, forever free, forever well, forever rested, forever united, forever happy. Mothers, don't think your little children go alone when they quit this world. Out of your arms into angelic arms. Out of sickness into health. Out of the cradle into a Saviour's bosom. Not an instant will the darlings be alone between the two kisses, the last kiss of earth and the first kiss of heaven. "Now, angels, do your work!" cried an expiring Christian.

Yes, a guardian angel for each one of you. Put yourself now in accord with him. When he suggests the right, follow it. When he warns you against the wrong, shun it. Sent forth from God to help you do this great battle against sin and death, accept his deliverance. When tempted to a feeling of loneliness and disheartenment appropriate the promise: "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them." Oh, I am so glad that the spaces between here and heaven are thronged with these supernaturals taking tidings home, bringing messages here, rolling back obstacles from our path and giving us defense, for terrific are the forces who dispute our way, and if the nation of the good angels is on our side, the nation of bad angels is on the other side. Paul had it right when he said: "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against Principalities, against Powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." In that awful fight may God send us mighty angelic re-enforcement! We want all their wings on our side, all their swords on our side, all their chariots on our side.

THIS WORLD THEIR BATTLE GROUND.

Thank God that those who are for us are mightier than those who are against us! And that thought makes me jubilant as to the final triumph. Belgium, you know, was the battle ground of England and France. Yes, Belgium more than once was the battle ground of opposing nations. It so happens that this world is the Belgium or battle ground between the angelic nations, good and bad. Michael, the commander-in-chief on one side; Lucifer, as Byron calls him, or Mephistopheles, as Goethe calls him, or Satan, as the Bible calls him, the commander-in-chief on the other side. All pure angelhood under the one leadership, and all abandoned angelhood under the other leadership.

Many a skirmish have the two armies had, but the great and decisive battle is yet to be fought. Either from our earthly homes or down from our supernal residences, may we come in on the right side; for on that side are God and heaven and victory. Meanwhile the battle is being set in array, and the forces celestial and demoniacal are confronting each other. Hear the boom of the great cannonade already opened! Cherubim, Seraphim, Thrones, Dominations, Principalities and Powers are beginning to ride down their foes, and until the work is completed, "Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon, and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon!"

"VOUDOO JACK."

The Very Queer Doings of an Old Negro Doctor in Alabama.

In Tuscaloosa county, about two weeks ago, a negro known as Jack Moore, "Old Jack," "The Voodoo" and the "Black Doctor," was arrested on complaint of half a dozen colored people who claimed that he had been "kunjerin'" them. The laws of Alabama do not provide for the punishment of voodoo doctors, so old Jack could only be charged with disturbing the peace. When his trial came off his alleged victims were fraid to testify against the old man, and he was discharged.

I found Jack at his home on a big cotton plantation ten miles down the Warrior river. He was a house servant when he was a slave and there is little of the negro dialect in his conversation.

"I was born in South Carolina about eighty years ago," he said to me. "My mother was nurse for my master's family and I grew up in the big house with the white children. They taught me to read and write, and one of my young masters was a doctor. I read some of his books and learned something about medicine when I was only a boy. When my mother became too old to nurse she made medicine for the negroes on the plantation. My master moved to Alabama a good many years before the war. I was an overseer over the other slaves for a while, and after my mother died I made the same medicines she had used and cured the slaves on the plantation when they were sick."

"But tell me something about your voodoo art?" I asked.

Old Jack laughed and said: "There is not much to tell. I have studied the moon and stars, and my mother taught me all about roots and herbs. I can cure any kind of disease, and then I can make people sick when I want to."

"What is the effect of a rabbit's foot or a dry snake skin?"

"A rabbit's foot will keep off fits and the snake skin cure rheumatism."

"Can you really bring good or bad luck to people?"

"I would be a poor doctor if I couldn't. I have a charm which will keep the evil spirits away, and one which will bring them to my aid. I fear no man, and if any one tries to harm me I can always get even with them. Some of the negroes that caused my arrest would not pay me for my medicines and sent off for a white doctor when they were sick. I put my spell on one of them and they all got afraid and had me arrested. They will be sorry for it when I am done with them. There'll be more sick niggers on this plantation than a dozen doctors can cure."

"How do you make your medicine, Jack?"

"That is a secret I will tell no one. There are plenty of negroes calling themselves doctors, but they don't know anything; they don't know how to make the medicine.

"I don't know anything about voodoo dances. The colored people here on the plantation have dances sometimes, and they come to me for love powders. They make folks love you when they are under the spell, but what are you asking me all these questions for? I have told you too much now, more than I ever told any other white man. You'll have the newspapers printing more lies about me if I tell you any more."

Among Jack's neighbors I found a feeling of awe of the old man. Many of them hated him because they believe he had "kunjered" them, but they dared not say anything disrespectful of him for fear he would hear of it and put a "bad spell" on them.

Aaron Perry had bought love powders from old Jack; he had attended one of the voodoo dances and had also been put under a spell by the old doctor. He consented to tell me something about the voodoo dance.

"Dem was love powders what ole Jack blow outen 'is hand, an' da make eb'rybody feel sort 'er funny like. An' dem women folks! Da jis' sing an' dance an' laugh like da jes' tickled mos' ter deth. Now an' den ole Jack 'e lay down de fiddle an' 'e sprinkle more dem love powders an' den de dancin' go on orgin'.

"Da all jes' stay right dar an' da dance 'til plum daylight, an' den da go home, an' fust thing eb'rybody knows da 'gin ter feel sick. Ole Jack 'e done put some sort er spell on 'em."

Green Weaver and his wife Matilda, who lived on a plantation lower down the river, had been "kunjered" by old Jack I was told, and I went to see them. I secured a picture of the couple as they looked before the spell had been put on them, and between that and their present appearance the contrast is greater than in the average patent-medicine pictures of before and after taking.

Green and his wife did not believe in his alleged powers and openly denounced him as a fraud. In time this was reported to the voodoo doctor, and one morning Green and Matilda found a snake skin and a lock of red hair on their front step. There was also a very small bag made of red flannel and filled with a dark powder. They were taken sick that day with chills and their backs ached.

They went for a doctor, and he pronounced it malaria, and prescribed quinine, but all the negroes in the neighborhood insisted that old Jack had put a spell on Green and his wife and a doctor's medicine would be fatal, so the quinine remained untasted and the chills and back aches grew worse. At last they were persuaded by friends to send for old Jack and acknowledge their belief in his power. He accepted their apology, gave them some medicine and in time they recovered, but were wrecks of their former selves, so severe had been the "spell."

Among the white people old Jack is regarded as a worthless old rascal, who lives by working on the superstitious fear of less intelligent negroes. A few of the negroes have no faith in his alleged powers, but they have little to say, because his following is so strong.—Birmingham Special to New York Herald.

Reporters in Russia.

The St. Petersburg journalists, Russian and otherwise, who are admitted to court festivities have just sent a curious petition to the czar. They ask to be allowed to wear on their dress coats some small ornament with the name of the paper they represent inscribed on it, by which they might be recognized as representatives of the press. The czar has at once granted the request, and at the next court ball all the bona fide journalists will appear adorned with their new badge. No one but an accredited representative of a paper will be allowed to wear the badge, the raison d'etre for which appears to be the fact that not unfrequently a number of gentlemen had gained admittance as pressmen who were much better acquainted with the art of blacking boots than with that of furnishing newspaper reports.—Montreal [illegible]

AT one of the recent viceregal balls in Dublin a young "detrimental" came up to where a young lady was sitting and asked her in her mother's hearing whether he might have the pleasure of a dance. But before the daughter could reply the fond parent hastily broke in: "Dead an' ye can't, then! Sure she's keeping herself cool for the Earl of Clanlardy!"

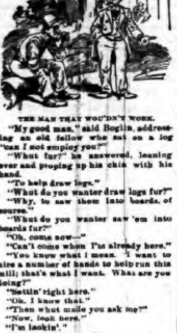
WHY HE WOULDN'T WORK

He Remembered the Advice Given to Brother Zebby.

His Family Had Been Washed Down the Creek, But He Didn't Worry—Tells How Zeb Went Up the Hill "Bookety, Bookety."

COPYRIGHT 1890.

W. J. Boglin, an adventurous Eastern capitalist, recently bought a large tract of timber land lying near the Indian Territory. Mr. Boglin set up a saw-mill, which was easy enough, but when he attempted to operate the mill he was confronted by a difficulty which he had not anticipated. He could not secure the necessary help. The neighboring people, either squatters in the original or very close imitations, exhibited no interest in the enterprise. They would sit about, lazily watching the work, but when asked to help load logs or in any way assist the head sawyer, they would silently slouch away or drawlingly make excuses.



THE MAN THAT WOULDN'T WORK.

"My good man," said Boglin, addressing an old fellow who sat on a log "can I not employ you?"

"What fur?" he answered, leaning over and propping up his chin with his hand.

"To help draw logs."

"What do you wanter draw logs fur?"

"Why, to saw them into boards, of course."

"What do you wanter saw 'em into boards fur?"

"Oh, come now—"

"Can't come when I'm already here."

"You know what I mean. I want to hire a number of hands to help run this mill; that's what I want. What are you doing?"

"Settin' right here."

"Oh, I know that."

"Then what made you ask me?"

"Now, look here."

"I'm lookin'."

"I want to hire you."

"Still lookin'."

"And will give you a dollar and a half per day. What do you say?"

"Say to what?"

"To the offer, of course."

"Nothin'."

"You don't want to work, then?"

"No, b'lieve not."

"Why?"

"Wall, old Billy has had me, for one reason."

"Who is old Billy?"

"Old Billy Rheumatiz."

"But he hasn't got you now, has he?"

"No; not exactly, but he's got a mortgage on me."

"Where do you live?"

"Fust one place an' then another. Livin' right here now."

"I mean, where is your house?"

"It was about a mile frum here this mornin', but I reckon its about twenty miles frum here now."

"Why, how is that?"

"Putty bad, that's how. Creek riz last night and washed it away."

"What! and you sitting here doing nothing to repair the loss."

"Yes, I reckon its what."

"Well, well," said the Eastern man "this is indeed extraordinary."

"Yes, so is a crow."

"If your house is washed away, what has become of your family?"

"Wall, I reckon they air scattered along through the woods somewhar."

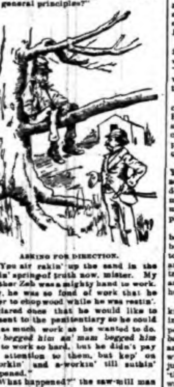
"Why don't you look for them?"

"Wall, don't reckon they'll spile before mornin'."

"Look here, you are not only lazy but you are the completest fool I ever saw."

"Yas, an' that's what the June bug said to the duck."

"I suppose you are opposed to work on general principles?"



ASKING FOR DIRECTION.

"You air rakin' up the sand in the b'ilin' spring of truth now, mister. My brother Zeb was a mighty hand to work. W'y, he was so fond of work that he uster to chop wood while he was restin'. Declared once that he would like to be sent to the penitentiary so he could get as much work as he wanted to do. Pap begged him an' mam begged him not to work so hard, but he didn't pay not attention to them, but kep' on a-workin' and a-workin' till suthin' happened."

"What happened?" the saw-mill man asked.

"Wall, he got up one mornin' feelin' putty brash an' went out to chop down a six-foot tree befo' breakfast. Pap begged him an' mam begged him not to go, but he went."

"But what happened to him?"

"Wall, he went up to the tree, he did, an' cut down the bushes so his axe would have a fair swing, an' then he lit into the tree, an' about the time the chips commenced to fly, here com pap an' mam, an' pap begged him an' mam begged him, but the chips kep on flyin', an' pap an' mam went back to the house. After while suthin' come down the hill, bookety, bookety, but the chips flew so fast that brother Zeb didn't hear the thing that come down the hill, bookety, bookety, till all at once—"

Here the narrator ceased speaking. He stroked his thin, yellow whiskers, took a fresh chew of "long green" tobacco, "walloped" it about in his mouth, and then fixed his gaze on some thing far down in the valley.

"Well," said the Eastern man.

"Yes, very well; I'm blessed to you. Felt a leetle sorter stretchy yistidy, but I'm pearter to-day."

"But what about your brother?"

"Who, brother Zeb?"

"Yes, of course."

"Wall, thing come down the hill, bookety, bookety, an' the fust thing Zeb thought of was how big a mistake he made in not payin' attention when pap begged him an' mam begged him."

"But what was the thing that came down the hill?"

"The thing that come down bookety, bookety?"

"Yes."

"A wild hog."

"What did it do?"

"Went back up the hill, bookety, bookety."

"What became of your brother?"

"Went up the hill with him, bookety, bookety, an' we never have seed him sence. That showed me that it won't do for a man to be so fond of work. Wall, I reckon I'd better spatter on now and look arter my family. Good bye." He slouched away, with his hands deep in the pockets of his brown jeans, whistling a tune of lazy contentment.

Several days later, Mr. Boglin, while riding through the wilderness of his extensive domain, lost his bearings and while wandering around aimlessly in the woods, came upon an old fellow sitting astride the fork of a low tree.

"Why, how are you?" called the mill man.

"Sorter slow."

"I had quite a talk with you the other day, I believe?"

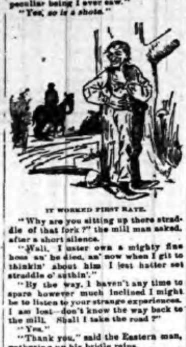
"So do I."

"Have you found your family?"

"Yes, most of 'em. Bill an' Sam an' Jake an' Matt an' Patsy an' Sue, an' Bob an' Lize an' Tobe air still missin', but I reckon ther'll turn up all right."

"I must say that you are the most peculiar being I ever saw."

"Yes, so is a shoat."



IT WORKED FIRST RATE.

"Why are you sitting up there straddle of that fork?" the mill man asked, after a short silence.

"Wall, I uster own a mighty fine hoss an' he died, an' now when I git to thinkin' about him I jest hatter set straddle o' suthin'."

"By the way, I haven't any time to spare however much inclined I might be to listen to your strange experiences. I am lost—don't know the way back to the mill. Shall I take the road?"

"Yes."

"Thank you," said the Eastern man, gathering up his bridle reins.

"Not a' tall," the squatter answered.

The mill man rode away, and about two hours later he came upon an old fellow sitting under a tree.

"Why, here you are again," said Mr. Boglin. "How did you get away over here?"

"Didn't. Ain't stirred sense you left 'cept to climb down outen this tree."

"Look here, you told me to take this road and—"

"Didn't tell you to take it. You asked if you mout an' I said yes. Allus like to be comerdating, you know."

"I do not thank you for your accommodation, I assure you. I have ridden many miles to no purpose. I tell you that I am looking for my mill and—"

"Whar did you lose it?"

"Look here, I'm losing patience with you."

"That's bad. Fust you lost yo' mill an' now you air losin' yo' patience. W'y you kaint keep nothin', ken you?"

"I do not wish to bandy words with you. Where is that mill?"

"Right down thar in the holler about two hundred yards from here."

"Why didn't you tell me at first, you—"

"W'y didn't you ask me. Come along an' asked me if you mout take that road, an' as I didn't have no use fur it I said you mout."

When Boglin had ridden a short distance he looked back and saw the old fellow leaning against the tree, laughing.

WHEN a woman docks herself of a few years of time she merely looks upon it as shortage

WHAT is known as Pessimism, or asking: "Is life worth living," should properly be called a sort of liver complaint.

IT is said that Japanese people never kiss. Come to think of it, when they look at each other they ought not to want to kiss.

THE church trustees wanted the amateur choir suppressed on the ground that their uncertain efforts were nothing more than a "game of chants."

SHE rang "Take Back the Heart that Thou Gavest," very sweetly and effectively, but he said he was a newspaper man and never took any thing back.

"DO YOU know what I am thinking of?" she remarked in a burst of confidence. He had seen her reading the bonnet advertisements and for all that he had the heart to answer: "No; do you?"

THERE is a new name for the all-around-the-table billiard shot. It is now known as the "Nellie Bly," and in every billiard-room may be heard the expression: "Here goes for a Nellie Bly."

AT a recent woman's rights meeting in New York, three new oratoresses were introduced as women who had "never spoken before." Their husbands, who were on the stage, nearly went through it in petrified astonishment.

THIS sign, seen over a Brooklyn store, can be construed as you please. "Angel Feathers dyed and cleaned at the shortest possible notice." The ordinary citizen recognizes the fact that the sign painter didn't divide Mr. Angel from his occupation.

THE number of millionaires in New York is continually increasing. They seem to turn them out there like students from a college. A recent advertisement in the Tribune says: "A young man just landed would like to learn the plumbing trade."

A KIND-HEARTED woman at La Crosse bought five cords of wood and three buck-saws, and gave all tramps a chance to earn a meal. They stole the saws and boys stole the wood, and one day a tramp entered the house of the k. h. w. and scared her almost to death and stole her watch.

FROM Judge Cunningham, a well-known Anglo-Indian, came the following story in illustration of Indian politeness: "A judge, who was a very bad shot, had been out for a day's sport and on his return the man who went with him was asked: 'Well, how did the judge shoot to-day?' 'Oh,' he replied, 'the judge shoot beautifully, but heaven was very merciful to the birds!'"

INDUSTRIAL INTELLIGENCE.

NATURAL GAS is now used in 104 steel works in this country, but the supply shows signs of failing and companies are thinking of returning to the old fuel.

THE engineering industries of Great Britain are in such a flourishing condition as to cause a scarcity of men, the unions being unable to satisfy the requirements of employers.

IT is found in South Carolina, as it has so often been found in other States, that the chief opposition to the bill before the Legislature for reducing the hours of child labor in the cotton-mills comes not from the employers, but from the parents.

LONDON INDUSTRIES in its annual review for 1889 says: "It is to the Americans that we owe almost all the most recent developments in the steam-engine. Novel boilers, valve-gears and framings are all of American origin."

IT is estimated by a correspondent in the Chicago Tribune that at least 60 per cent. of the multitude of type-writers in the city are women, as are 25 per cent. of the type-setters, 50 per cent. of the telegraph operators and about 70 per cent. of the employes in dry-goods stores.

A NEW white pitch for ship-builders has been introduced, which, it is claimed, supersedes the present laborious, expensive and inefficient method of white deck seams by working putty into the seams with a knife. The peculiarity of the white pitch is that it is the only material hitherto introduced of a white color that can be run into deck seams in a hot state like ordinary pitch.

THE mining industry continues to be one of the most important sources of prosperity in the State of Colorado, the estimated production of gold, silver, lead and copper during the year 1889 aggregating about $30,000,000 in value. Leadville is still the largest producer, the output of that district being valued at $13,000,000, while the more recently-developed Aspen district comes next, the production being valued at $6,000,000.

POINTS ABOUT PHOTOGRAPHS.

PROMPTNESS is of the greatest importance to enable the artist to do justice to his patrons.

MAKE your appointment, and select style and size of picture, get your ideas about toilet, etc.

IF your complexion is very light, you should wear lighter colored clothing, and vice versa.

ALL colors pertaining to blue, purple, lavender, plum, magenta and pink photograph very light.

THE hair low upon the forehead makes a broad face look broader; so arrange it high for a broad face and low for a long face.

ALWAYS feel well and pleasant and take plenty of time ("photographers are not machines, but artists") for sittings, and you are sure to get a good picture.

GENTLEMEN should never oil or wet the hair, and should have good fitting drapery; and ladies should always have the hair loose, dry and full and arranged to suit style of face.

CLARET, garnet, green, light bismarck and stone color all take still darker, and are excellent colors to photograph. Wine color, metternich green, orange, golden brown, dark bismarck and snuff brown take very dark. Silks and satins take lighter than woolen goods, or goods without luster.

HOW CAN THE LONG BE THE SHORT

A line may be a very long one and yet be the shortest between given points. For instance, the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway has over 3,000 miles of road; magnificently equipped and managed, it is one of the greatest railway systems of this country; for the same reasons is the traveler's favorite to all points in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana. It is the only line to Great Falls, the future manufacturing center of the Northwest; to the fertile free lands of the Milk River Valley; and offers a choice of three routes to the Coast. Still it is the shortest line between St. Paul, Minneapolis, Fargo, Winnipeg, Crookston, Moorhead, Casselton, Glyndon, Grafton, Fergus Falls, Wahpeton, Devils Lake and Butte City. It is the best route to Alaska, China and Japan; and the journey to the Pacific coast Vancouver, Tacoma, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco will be remembered as the delight of a life-time once made through the wonderful scenery of the Manitoba-Pacific Route. To fish and hunt; to view the magnificence of nature; to revive the spirit; restore the body; to realize the dream of the home seeker, the gold-seeker, the toiler, or the capitalist, visit the country reached by the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway. Write to F. I. WHITNEY, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn., for maps, books and guides. If you want a free farm in a lovely land, write for the "Great Reservation"; read it and resolve to accept the golden

Why, Mary, how your baby cries!
Yes, he has colic again.
Why don't you give him Dr. Taylor's Best Soothing Syrup?
Is that good?
Yes, for Pain, Colds, Cough, &c., it is excellent for either young or old. Of the many kinds of medicines I have used in my family I have found none to equal it.
Thank you, Jane, I will try it. Margaret Ann, go as soon as you can to either REYNOLDS', or SHAW'S Drug Store, and get a bottle of Dr. Taylor's Soothing Syrup.

Birthdays.

I am content
To let the added years
That come to me,
Steal back into the past so far
That memory
Can only find along the shore
Some [illegible] and nothing more.

I am content
That seaweed, bits of wreck,
And pebbles gray,
Drift out of sight into the sea.
For these to stay
Would be to cherish grief and pain
I would not, must not, feel again.

I am content
That some of life
Cast over [illegible]
Lived o'er with welcome throb and thrills
No more to [illegible]
Will [illegible] song, or book, or toy,
Fill the measure of my joy.

I am content
To live all of to-day;
And when I dream,
Let fancy revel in the light
That hope had seen
Beyond the present, and afar,
A steadfast, proudly-beck'ning star.

I am content
For age upon the heart
Can never creep;
And when, at last, in stillest night,
I seem to sleep,
A birthday comes to me in truth;
The gift it brings—immortal youth.

In Arcady.

A little breath from spray to spray
That wanders with a purposed quiet,
As tho' it were so calm a day
To shock it were unholy riot;

A little cloud-wreath in the sky
That melts, and then its shape renewing
Then melts again, as tho' on high
'Twere holiday, and nothing doing;

A hum of bee, a little song
Of bird in praise of endless summer,
That will not break the stillness long,
But leaves it to a chance new-comer;

A little sound of rippling stream,
Now heard, now hushed, in deep leaves under;
Like murmurs of an infant's dream
That barely put sweet lips asunder;

An ocean's face for many a mile
In calm, with scarce a wavelet breaking,
As sleeping eyelids ope awhile,
Then close again without awaking;—

All say 'Tis noon, and Silence sleeps
With Beauty. Hence, and leave her sleeping,
Lulled by the tiny fall that leaps
Beside her there in silver leaping.

Noon in the South! A pasture thing
Of love, and light, and warmth, and color,
That, drowsy as a vampire's wing,
Fans round the soul to lock to lull her.

Noon in the South! Then haste away,
Dear soul, away, we may not tarry!
Enough, if hence for many a day
Some sunshine of the heart we carry.

Enough, if 'mid our mist and snow
We may in darker hours remember
The bliss, the warmth, the southern glow,
That mingled August with December.

But now a lay of loftier taste
I hear attuned to Dorian measure.
Say, Arcady is rest alone,
But toil is wrong to nobler pleasure;

Say, Arcady is fair and fine,
Where Pan is lord of Man and Nature;
But 'neath his face and form divine
Lurks cloven hoof of Faun and Satyr.

And sadness sits in every eye,
And cynic youth is old at twenty;
Who looks for aught in Arcady
But languid ease and far niente?

Then hence away, and Northward ho!
Where souls and limbs of men are stronger;
But, ah! ye powers of frost and snow,
Would holidays were somewhat longer.

Compensation.

Here's some little compensation [illegible] all for being "broke,"
On the principle that hunger finds a feast in crumbs;
For improvidence is gifted like a joke,
And you grow refreshed and vigorous when
Pay
Day
Comes.

'Tis time that brings a subtle satisfaction to the heart,
When a portion is subtracted from our week's good sums,
A dainty balm you find that eases many a grievous smart—
You really feel a man again when
Pay
Day
Comes.

At Evening Time.

That hour, how full of sweet repose,
When leaden sky to golden grows,
And all the western evening glows
With sunset's glorious light.

When storms arise and cloud my day
With what of care, or pain, they may,
What matter, if I still may say:
"At evening 'twill be light"?

My Father's hand amends will make,
For darkness in the way we take,
I'll sleep it, and at evening's break
Walk with him in the light.

O! struggling one, by troubles pressed,
Strive not to see thy promised rest;
But follow, sure thou shalt be blessed
In evening's gracious light.

When that shall come, thy toils shall seem
Less than the sorrows of a dream;
And, glad, thy soul shall greet the beam
Of evening's sacred light.

A Woman's Way.

They sat together, side by side,
Absorbed in Cupid's mission;
"Dear John, please tell," she softly cried,
"What was my pa's decision?"

"Alas!" said he, "I greatly fear"
(His voice began to quiver),
"My suit is not regarded, dear"
(He heaved a sigh), "with favor.
"Your pa says he can't see at all"
(He sadly smoothed her tresses),
"How I with such an income small,
Can even buy your dresses."

"I think," she answered (and her eye
To his in trust was turned),
"I might lay in a good supply
Before" (she blushed) "we're married."

Some Simple Says.

Susanna Snooks sings sad, sweet songs, she sees soft summer skies;
Strange sunset shades sift silently—she somewhat sadly sighs.
Soliloquizingly she strays, sweet songsters shyly sing.
She sees slim spruces' slanting shades surround some sparkling spring.
Still southward silently she strays. She spies shy Simon Slade,
"Stop, Simon!" says Susanna Snooks. Still sits sweet Susan's shade.
Shy Simon sits, sung satisfying [illegible] shyly state.
Susanna snickered. Simon stayed. Sick, silly, speechy soul.
Susanna's sire saw some shy, suspicious stranger stray,
Saw Susan shy: "Stop, Simon Slade," Saw simple Simon stay.
Stern sire sought some solid stick—serenely, slyly slipped.
Susanna saw. She shrilly shrieked: "Stop, Simon!" Simon skipped.

HOW DEAF MUTES TALK.

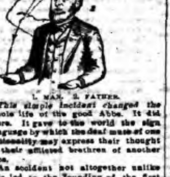
Father Gallaudet's Son Tells of a Wonderful Invention.

Signs That Opened Up the World and the Emotions to a Silent People—The System Transplanted to America—Sign Language.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

The founding of the first school for deaf mutes in France, and one of the first in the world, was the result of an accident. The story is as follows: The good Abbe de L'Epee, who lived in Paris in the Eighteenth century, called one day upon one of his parishioners. The lady kept him waiting for a few minutes in her drawing room. At the farther end of the apartment the Abbe noticed two young ladies who were apparently greatly engrossed in some fancy work.

He spoke to them, and, to his surprise, received no reply. When his parishioner appeared he asked who the young ladies were. She said that they were her daughters. Thereupon he mildly reproached her for their rudeness in not answering his greeting. Then the mother, with tears in her eyes, told him that they were deaf and dumb, and beyond such few accomplishments as they had acquired, were totally ignorant of everything regarding the world. They could neither read or write.

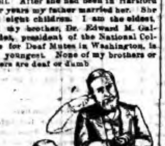


1. MAN. 2. FATHER.

This simple incident changed the whole life of the good Abbe. It did more. It gave to the world the sign language by which the deaf mutes of one nationality may express their thought to their afflicted brethren of another race.

An accident not altogether unlike this led to the founding of the first deaf mutes' school in America and the transplanting of this sign language in our own soil. In 1815, my father, the Rev. Thomas H. Gallaudet, who was a young Congregational clergyman in Hartford, Ct., became interested in the sad case of Alice Cogswell, the infant daughter of a wealthy physician. She was two years old at that time and could neither hear nor speak. Several wealthy gentlemen agree to pay my father's expenses if he would go abroad and learn the different methods of educating deaf mutes with a view of founding a school for these unfortunates in Hartford. One year later my father was in France. He had already spent some time in Great Britain examining the systems in vogue there. When he saw the beauty of the French sign language, he decided to adopt that plan in his work. He devoted six months to hard study in the school founded by Abbe de L'Epee and then conducted by his successor, Abbe Sicard, and when he started for America, he brought back with him M. Lawrent Clerc, a deaf mute, who had wonderful skill in the sign language. He was my father's first assistant in the school which he founded in Hartford in 1817. During their long sea voyage my father taught his companion English and perfected his own education in the sign language.

A few years after the school was started Miss Sophia Fowler, a young deaf mute of Guilford, Conn., became a pupil. After she had been in Hartford four years my father married her. She had eight children. I am the eldest, and my brother, Dr. Edward M. Gallaudet, president of the National College for Deaf Mutes in Washington, is the youngest. None of my brothers or sisters are deaf or dumb

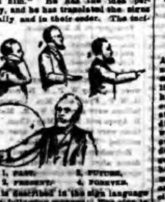


1. WIFE. 2. BETROTHED WOMAN.

Words to a deaf mute child mean nothing. He has never heard them, and he must learn to read before he knows their significance. Even then his education is necessarily long and requires infinite patience to impart. Signs are to the deaf mute what sounds are to those who hear. By them the child learns to express his thoughts in gestures. The sign for love (pressing the heart, kissing the fingers with the right hand), means more to him than can be expressed in a page of words. It means, gratitude, goodness, welcome, and a score of other words. This one sign we may call the verb of a sentence. The adjectives and qualifying phrases are expressed by the countenance and manner in which the sign is made.

By the sign language a deaf mute, who may have no knowledge of English as it is written and spoken, can express himself fluently, with dignity and even with true eloquence. His thought, untrammeled by words and sentences find utterance in his signs.

If you were to visit the Deaf and Dumb Institute you would learn how very different the sign is from the manual or labial language. One of the day's drills of the more advanced pupils is to translate a story or an exercise from the sign to the written language. For instance one boy translates the account of one man knocking another man down as follows: "He struck fell down him." He has the idea perfectly, and he has translated the signs literally and in their order. The incident is described in the sign language in the following manner: The sign for the man who delivers the blow; the sign for striking; the sign for falling and the sign for the object of the attack.



1. PAST. 3. FUTURE.
2. PRESENT. 4. FOREVER.

The opening sentence in the Episcopal Church service is "The Lord is in His holy temple, let all the earth keep silence before Him."

This is the way I sign it to my deaf congregation:

First, the sign for name of the Lord, which is drawing the right hand across the breast diagonally from left to right. This is the original sign for "king," but we use it for the name of the Lord by making with the fingers of the right hand the initial L.

Next, I make the sign of a temple. This is done by imitating with both hands the building up of a wall.

Third, the sign for "holy," which is bowing the head reverently and rubbing the palms of both hands together.

Fourth, the sign for "His," touching the forehead, with the right hand as if lifting a hat by the brim.

Fifth, the sign for "in."

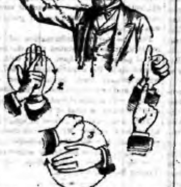
Sixth, the sign for "let."

Seventh, the sign for "men and women."

Eighth, the sign for silence, which is touching the lips with the finger of the right hand and bowing the head.

The sentence then reads in signs "Lord, Temple, His, in, Let men and women, silence."

To my congregation this is, as plain as spoken words are to those who hear.



1. DAY. 2. MOUTH. 3. YEAR. 4. MONTH.

Now let us analyze some of the signs that I have just described. The first part of the sign for a male person is the lifting of an imaginary hat brim. This, joined to a sign of possession, denotes the word "his." If I wanted to sign "man," I would make the first part of this sign, and then I would raise my hand about the height of a man's head. For "boy" I would lower the height of my hand, according to the stature of the object I was describing. In each of the following the male signs forms the chief part or root of the sign. "Father" is the male sign, followed by holding an imaginary child in the outstretched arms. "Son" is the male sign, followed by hugging an imaginary child to the breast. The signs for females differ and their root sign which is made by passing the right thumb from the ear to the chin.

The divisions of time are very neatly denoted. "Present" is made by holding out the palm of the hand; "past," by throwing the hand back over the shoulder and "future," by extending the hand forward.

"To-day" is made by tracing with the forefinger of the right hand a half circle over the head, following the course of the sun through the heavens. "Yesterday" is expressed by touching the cheek with the thumb and extending the hand back over the shoulder. "To-morrow" I express by extending the outstretched thumb forward as I extend the hand in expressing future time.

A year is expressed by making the right clinched fist revolve around the left hand as the sun revolved around the earth. A month is expressed by running the right forefinger down the left hand as though it were running down the length of a calendar page. To denote an hour I make a circle with my right forefinger around an imaginary clock dial on my left hand. A minute is described by making a small fraction of the complete revolution.

"Night" is expressed by covering the face with the hands as though a veil were being drawn over it.

To express "husband" I make the male sign and then clasp my hands. "Wife" is made similarly save in using the female root sign. Betrothed persons, according to their sexes, are denoted by placing one wrist over the other as though bound together.

In my experience as a teacher I have found that my young pupils, who have had no previous knowledge of our sign language, can make themselves readily understood by their more fortunate comrades through their own signs.

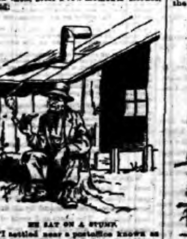
THE SQUIRE WAS SHREWD

How He Became Rich by the Tooting of a Steam Whistle.

His Fat Daughters Would Marry Slim Men, and Vice Versa—He Celebrates the Arrival of a Male Heir, and Makes Day and Night Hideous

COPYRIGHT 1890.

The other day I met Col. Beverly Summers, who, some time ago, went to Alabama for the purpose of spending the remainder of his life in peace and profound quietude. When I bade him good-bye he had seemed to be so hopeful, his eyes had been so bright with the emotional ooze of anticipated happiness, that upon meeting him again I was astonished to see that his countenance had grown dull under a presumable disappointment. When I had asked the cause of his apparent dejection, he conducted me to a quiet corner and then, after a few moments' silence, said:



HE SAT ON A STUMP.

"I settled near a postoffice known as Antrobus. There were but few houses near us; the neighborhood is picturesque, and my wife and I were delighted. From the top of our graceful hill we would see the sun coming up out of a beautiful valley, far away, and at evening we could see the brow of a distant mountain, encircled with a wreath of blazing glory. In an evil hour, a shaving fellow, a despoiler, a man who would turn the sweet blush of dewy nature into the hard frown of enterprise, started a saw mill not far from our house. This was annoying, but we soon became reconciled, especially as the mill was compelled to shut down for want of patronage; and we were about to congratulate ourselves, when, one morning at five o'clock, the mill began to whistle. Well, sir, at ten o'clock that mill was still whistling. By this time I was almost wild. I sent a negro boy down to investigate the tantalizing situation. He came back about an hour later and reported that the mill was not running and had not been, but that the boilers were under a full head-way of steam. The thing whistled all night and the next morning, as the situation instead of showing signs of improvement seemed to be growing worse, I went over to expostulate with the proprietor of the mill. I found him sitting on a stump, complacently smoking. He was an easily recognized type of a Georgia 'cracker,' of the improved breed. His hair was long and there were pieces of bark clinging to his grizzly beard. He paid no attention to me as I approached, but appeared to be lost in the contemplation of a distant hill-top. I had never met him before, but I knew his name.

"'This is Mr. Squires?' said I.

"'Yep, b'leve it is,' he answered, still looking far away.

"'My name, sir, is Beverly Summers.'

"'Yep, wouldn't be surprised.'

"'I have called on you, Mr. Squires, to find out what is the matter with that mill whistle.'

"'Nothin' the matter with it now. Didn't start off so mighty well at first—sorter wheezed a little—but I can't complain at the present outlook.'

"'But why do you keep the infernal thing blowing?'

"He removed his gaze from the distant hill-top, and looking at me, said:

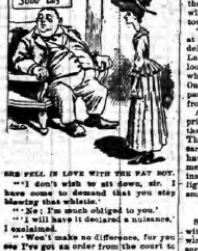
"'Boy down at my house.'

"'What!' I exclaimed.

"'Boy at my house—born yesterday mornin'.'

"'But is that any reason why you should make day and night hideous?'

"'Don't know anything about makin' nothin' hideous, but it's a reason why I should blow that whistle. I promised myself that if fortune smiled on me this time, and sent me [illegible], I would raise merry how are you and fortune did her work—kept her promise, as it were, and I'm goin' to keep mine. Look around, find a stump some whar, and sit down a while.'



SHE FELL IN LOVE WITH THE FAT BOY.

"'I don't wish to sit down, sir. I have come to demand that you stop blowing that whistle.'

"'No; I'm much obliged to you.'

"'I will have it declared a nuisance,' I exclaimed.

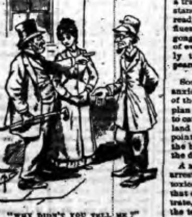
"'Won't make no difference, fur you see I've got an order from the court to blow that thing as long as I want to. So, when fortune proved that, after so many years of girls and hard luck, she had decided to favor me, why, I hired two fellers, one for day time and the other for night, and told them to tie back the rope of that whistle and keep up the pucker all the time. Hired them for a year.'

"'You don't mean to say that you are going to keep that thing blowing for a whole year!'

"'That's what the contract says, Mister, you don't understand the situation. I've got ten gals, but not until the other mornin' was the voice of a boy ever heard in my house. Now, you may sneeze at a good many folks, but let me advise you not to sneeze at the pore feller that has raised ten of the oneryest lookin' gals in the country. Now thar was Moll. I do reckon Moll was the fattest gal you ever seed. Waddled when she walked—waddled like a 'possom. Wall, what did Moll do? Disgraced me by marrin' the slimmest man in the world. That feller was so slim that he could stand in a double-barrel shot-gun and reach down and take hold of his boot straps. An' thar was Liz. I reckon she was the slimmest gal that ever destroyed shoe leather. What did she do? Tuck her ter town one day an' she fell in love with the fat boy that they had in a show, and she married him shortly afterwards. Then there was Kitty. The palest critter, I reckon, you ever seed in your life. One day she got nervous and anxious, an' I knowed right then an' thar that she was lookin' round fur some monstrosity to marry. Wall she found him. She found a feller with a nose so red that he could hold up a newspaper the darkest night that ever come and read it. That's about the way all of them married, and when they come to live with me they turned my home into a regular asylum for physical extremes, as old Dr. Miles 'lowed, and now that nature has given me a boy instead of another gal an' I want to show my 'preciation w'y you—you'—

"He bowed his head and wept—yes. I would have sworn that he wept. I could say nothing more. I actually sympathized with him, but the mill continued to whistle.

"I returned home and reported to my wife. She felt sorry for the fellow, but declared that we must leave the neighborhood. I sold out at a sacrifice, and just as we had reached the railway station, some ten miles distant from the home I had learned to love, I learned that an iron mine, worth probably a million dollars, had been discovered on the land that I had sold for a mere song.



"WHY DIDN'T YOU TELL ME?"

"'But why didn't you tell me,' I demanded.

"'Well,' the fellow replied, 'the saw mill man made me swar ter keep my mouth shet till atter he had made a trade. He got a feller to buy yo' place fur him. Mighty smart man, 'Squire is. Goin' ter marry my sister.'

"You know, now, why I left," Col. Summer's added. "That story about all those girls and the new boy was a lie. The scoundrel had never been married, and he built the mill in the first place to drive me away." OPIE P. READ.

SENATOR TURPIE, of Indiana, is said to be a perfect master of no less than seven languages besides the English. He reads Latin, Greek and Hebrew almost as fluently as he does English, and can speak French, Spanish, German and Italian. He has also pursued studies in Indian, Celtic and other tongues.

The magistrate, on demanding an explanation of the term, was informed that the man was employed by a firm of London antique manufacturers to fire shot at the furniture to give it a worm-eaten appearance.

THE Sturgis (Dak.) Record reports a novel lawsuit. A man from Bare Butte Valley lost his pocketbook containing $250, which was found by a man of Elk Creek. A month later, upon learning who was the owner, he returned the same, and the owner was very thankful—but demanded interest for the use of the money for that time. Judgment was given for $1.45 and costs.

A WASHINGTON electrician is at work on some important improvements in the direction of electric cooking. There is every reason to believe that investigations in this field will well repay inventors. Electricity when laid in the house has only to be tapped to be immediately useful. The great advantage of the gas fire over the coal or coke is its almost instantaneous applicability.

STUPIDITY.

A few years ago hides and skins were placed on the free list of imported articles into the United States.

The practical benefits resulting from such wise action have been great.

It has vastly increased the demand for labor, and enabled the manufacturers of American leather and morocco and their products to such an extent, as to create for them an export demand.

It has made manifest the reality of protection—not its counterfeit.

Yet, what do we find proposed by the present Congress?

The levying of a high duty on hides and skins, in effect to injure and destroy an important and growing branch of manufacturing industry, in order to gratify some special mercenary interest.

The silly proposition of the Committee of Ways and Means may be defeated by the powerful protests it has stirred up from various sections of the country, but the fact of its being for a moment entertained, clearly evidences Congressional stupidity.

Free hides and skins have been a boon to both labor and invested capital.

To a far greater extent would be free wool and a host of other free raw materials.

Common sense and common honesty may some day become the motive powers of legislation.

DUST.

Early vegetables from Bermuda, a few eggs from Canada, and occasionally potatoes from Nova Scotia, are about all the productions of farming industry, excepting the fruit products of Florida and California, imported into the United States.

The marvelous statesmen now in session at Washington intend piling up a lofty tariff duty on potatoes, [illegible] and eggs, and what for, so they can go to the farmers of the West, who are clamoring loudly for tariff reform, and say to them, "Gentlemen keep still, don't you see the grand protection we have voted you in your behalf. What more can you ask or expect?"

Dust! Dust!

The farmers may possibly see through the clouds of dust crafty politicians would raise, and rubbing their inflamed eyes respond:

"Yes, yes, Honorable Humbugs, but how about the intolerable and useless taxation you continue on all the implements we work with, the clothing we wear, and the tin we use, give us something more healthy than political dust."

PROTECTION.

In speaking of the recent strike of English coal miners for higher wages, and asserting that the condition of such laborers is in reality better than those of America, a journal published at Scranton, Pennsylvania, goes on to say:

"The time of Congress is so much taken up with giving protection to capital that there is none left to listen to the needs of labor."

"Were these white miners negro workers in the South, Congress would devote hours of weary speeches to them, and propositions of varying degrees of folly relating to them would be introduced."

"But they are white and live in the North."

"They are protected."

"They may not realize how blessed they are when sitting down to a meal of potato parings boiled with crushed oats."

"But it is not the fault of Congress that they are devoid of imagination."

"Protection fills the dinner pail with boiled potato parings."

"Then leaves the lid of the dinner pail itself."

"It leads one of the great political parties of the country to fight such a desperate battle for the rich that the poor are ground up in the fray."

"In the wealthy State of Pennsylvania, made rich by protection and still greedy for more, is to be found as wretched poverty as can be found anywhere on the globe."

"A vote for protection is a vote for higher wages—'tis said."

"How many of the laboring class have found this true?"

NOTHING TO DO WITH THE MILLER CASE.

Carey Suspended on Charges Dating Some Months Back.

A few mistaken impressions regarding the case of ex-Captain Carey—held by those unacquainted with the truth of the matter through entire ignorance, or because of [illegible] their information from dishonest and mendacious sources—may demand the following in explanation:

The suspended officer is not suspended because of his action in the Miller case, nor by the action of the Council [illegible] therein. He was suspended by the unanimous vote of the Police Board of which a minority only have anything to do with the case of Miller. [illegible] the Mayor, did not come out in a [illegible] storm to "protest" against the action, but to cast his vote with the whole Board in favor of the suspension. There was no person present except the five members of the Board.

The charge was: "conduct unbecoming a policeman, by using obscene, profane and indecent language to members of the Common Council; and also using vile, obscene and profane language about members of said Council, at different times since the sixth day of January, 1890." It's plain there is no "Miller case" in that. It dates back three months before.

It is said that the members of the Board have evidence that Carey has called Councilman Roberts a "[illegible]," City Clerk Coward a "[illegible]," Councilman Gallup a "liar," and President Moffett the most degrading and obscene names in the English language. Any of all this being so, nobody will believe but that the Mayor [illegible] hand in hand with every decent and respecting citizen, in endorsing the [illegible] of suspension.

To-morrow evening Carey is to be given an opportunity to answer and refute the charge, and until Monday evening the Council as a whole will decide by resolution whether the action of the Board shall be sustained. So nothing can be done that [illegible].

Therefore reserve your judgment until the final action of the Council, and in the meantime read your PRESS carefully every evening, meanwhile, you can then give an honest and proper opinion of the matter.

THE TEN YEARS OF PROSPERITY.

Trinity Reformed Church Celebrates the Tenth Anniversary of its Organization With Appropriate Exercises—Historical Data in Connection With the Church.

Sunday was the tenth anniversary of the organization of Trinity Reformed church, and the morning service was devoted exclusively to a proper and appropriate observance of the event. On account of the unsettled condition of the weather the attendance was not unusually large, but there was nevertheless a fair representation of the members and friends of the church present. After the usual congregational opening exercises, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor, announced that his text would be found in 1st Thess., V. 11-13, adding that on the occasion of the organization of the church ten years ago, the sermon was preached by that cultivated and Christian minister, the Rev. W. J. R. Taylor, D. D., of Newark, who took the same text as that just read. Incidental to presenting an historical sketch of the church, the Rev. Mr. Schenck read the following interesting account of the church, previous to the organization of Trinity Reformed church:

In 1864 the Rev. D. V. MacLean resigned as pastor of the First Presbyterian church and with several families withdrew and organized a new church. For a time they worshiped in the Seventh Day Baptist church, at that time located on the Westerly side of Centre street (now Central avenue) corner of Third street, until Dr. MacLean resigned in 1865. They then organized the Central Reformed (Dutch) church and called the Rev. John Simonson to be the pastor, and purchased of the Union Baptist Society the building erected by them in 1861 on Second street near Cherry street now (Park avenue.) In 1869 Mr. Simonson resigned and the Rev. N. E. Smith was called to succeed him. In 1872 the building was enlarged to the present dimensions by extending the sides and adding about 40 feet to the rear. In the year 1873 the Central Reformed church was changed to the First Congregational church. In 1877 Dr. Smith resigned and William Manchee was chosen as his successor.

In the Spring of 1880 foreclosure proceedings were commenced by the Mutual Life Insurance company, and as the church was otherwise indebted beyond the ability of the Society to pay, the church was abandoned and a portion of the members organized the present Congregational church with Mr. Manchee as pastor. The other members together with members of the Reformed church connected with other churches in the city, organized the Trinity Reformed church and on June 20, 1880, purchased at Sheriff's sale the building now occupied by them for $12,000.

The Rev. Mr. Schenck then took occasion to thank Messrs Daniel and John H. VanWinkle and others for assistance rendered in compiling the historical sketch, which he then read, and of which the following is only a summary:

On March 16, 1880, at a special meeting of the Classis of Newark, a petition was presented by Messrs Wm. Swain, Wm. B. Stewart and Theo. Mann, asking that a Reformed church be organized in Plainfield. A Committee of Classis, of which the Rev. W. J. R. Taylor, D. D., was chairman, were directed to visit this city and take the necessary steps toward effecting such organization. The Committee met on March 22, and unanimously agreed that the petition should be granted. On March 29, 1880, the church was organized with 55 members under the style and title of "The Trinity Reformed (Dutch) church of Plainfield, N. J." Henry Lindsley and Geo. L. VanEmburgh were elected Elders, and David O. Kilbourn was elected Deacon.

After several unsuccessful attempts to secure a pastor, a call was made in December, 1880, to the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond of the First Reformed church of Paterson, which was accepted and his labors began on the first Sunday in January, 1881. He continued in the discharge of his pastoral duties until February 1, 1887, when he accepted a call to the Fourth Presbyterian church of Albany, N. Y. During the six years of his pastorate, the church was blessed with a remarkable growth in all departments.

On January 1, 1883, a chattel mortgage of $3,500 was paid. When the church was yet an infant, in 1882, the house of worship was partly destroyed by fire. The building was thoroughly refurnished, refitted and repaired within and without. Services were resumed therein on the third Sunday in October. The cost was nearly covered by the insurance, $4,400. During Mr. Raymond's pastorate 254 new members were added.

In May, 1887, a call was extended to the present pastor, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, then of the Fourth Reformed church of Philadelphia. He accepted and was installed June 30, of that year, the Rev. Dr. Taylor preaching the sermon, the Rev. Dr. David Waters charging the pastor, and the Rev. Dr. Vehslage charging the people. During Mr. Schenck's pastorate of less than three years, 133 have been received into the church. The present membership is 425.

A debt of $14,000, chiefly contracted at the time of the purchase of the church building has been reduced to $4,500, and an early liquidation of this amount is anticipated. The Consistory at the present time consists of six elders and six deacons. The following persons have served, or are now serving the church as officers:

Elders—Messrs Henry Lindsley, Geo. L. VanEmburgh, Daniel G. VanWinkle, P. P. VanArsdale, R. Titsworth, W. D. W. Miller, E. A. Hegeman, Sr., E. R. Field, A. Willet, J. H. [illegible], G. Q. Dolliver and O. W. Dunham.

Deacons—Messrs D. O. Kilbourn, Jos. Metz, D. VanWinkle, I. R. Glen, C. B. West, Albertus Swain, John H. VanWinkle, O. W. Dunham, G. Q. Dolliver, T. B. Brown, H. E. Bowen, A. L. Force, E. E. Anthony, J. E. Arnold, H. E. Gayle and T. E. Hazell.

Clerks—Messrs G. L. VanEmburgh, Jos. Metz, C. B. West, John H. VanWinkle and D. VanWinkle.

Treasurers—Messrs D. O. Kilbourn, R. Titsworth, F. W. [illegible], D. Van Winkle, P. P. Van Arsdale, E. A. Hegeman, Geo. Gayle.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Was organized April 11, 1880, the first Superintendent being Mr. Henry Lindsley. The number of scholars on the roll at the beginning was 56, and the average attendance was [illegible]. Other Superintendents were elected, namely Chas. West and Geo. L. Van Emburgh.

In 1884 the present able and efficient Superintendent Mr. E. E. Anthony, was elected Superintendent, and has served continuously ever since. His assistant for three years was Mr. John H. Van Winkle. In 1887, Mr. O. W. Dunham was elected Assistant Superintendent, which office he still holds. At present, the total number of officers, teachers and scholars is 420. The library consists of 400 books, of which 100 are for the exclusive use of the primary department. The officers at present are:

Superintendent—E. E. Anthony.
Asst. Supt—O. W. Dunham.
Secretary—Elmer Bird.
Treasurer—H. E. Gayle.
Librarian—Wm. A. Woodruff.

LADIES' CHRISTIAN WORK SOCIETY.

An organization, within the church which has contributed much to its success, is the above named society. It was organized in April, 1881. Its special object is to labor for the salvation of souls; to visit the sick and afflicted, and to seek out neglected young families; also to aid in the cause of missions. Since the society has been in existence it has raised a total of $1,342.16. The society was never larger and stronger than at the present time, a large number having united during the past year, and the attendance at the business and social meetings have shown a gratifying increase. The presidents of the society have been Mrs. A. V. V. Raymond, Mrs. Chas. D. Wadsworth, Mrs. C. A. Marsh, Miss Nettie Haviland and the present (incumbent) Mrs. Chas. P. Leggett. The present officers are:

President—Mrs. Chas P. Leggett.
1st Vice President—Mrs. A. L. Force.
2d " " —Mrs. G. Q. Dolliver.
3d " " —Mrs. Frank Church.
Secretary—Mrs. C. Frank French.
Treasurer—Mrs. Carmon Parse.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS.

In this connection there are two circles; their motto is: "Look up and not down; look forward and not back; look out, and not in."

Y. P. S. C. E.

The Young People's Society Christian Endeavor was organized October 1, 1885, with 29 active and 11 associate members. To-day it is one of the largest in the State, and the largest in Union county. It consists of 16 honorary, 115 active and 40 associate members, making a total of 171. The Society is first pledged to Christ and then to the church with which it is connected. The presidents of the society have been: H. E. Gayle, C. D. Wheeler, Fred. Lucas and Fred. S. Dunn, the latter now serving in that capacity. The present officers are:

President—F. S. Dunn.
1st Vice President—C. F. Gelhaar.
2d " " —Mrs. C. Schenck.
Rec. Secretary—J. R. Dunn.
Cor. Secretary—Miss E. C. Benedict.
Treasurer—Miss Julia Johnson.

MISSIONARY FUNDS.

During the past ten years the church has raised $2,567.38 for domestic missions, and $2,158.27 for foreign missions or a total of $4,725.65. The total receipts for all benevolent objects was $11,599.66. The total amount of money raised in the ten years for all purposes was $72,598.11.

For the further information of our readers, it may be stated that the number of persons who have united with the church since its organization is 567, of whom 29 have died; 99 have been dismissed and two suspended. The rite of baptism was administered to 63 infants and 73 adults—a total of 136.

The congregation joined in singing a hymn, and the Rev. Mr. Schenck dismissed the audience with the benediction, thus bringing to a close the tenth anniversary exercises of the organization of the Trinity Reformed church.

ALL SECTS JOINED IN WORSHIP

The Rev. Mr. Richards Expresses His Pleasure and Appreciation.

A Union Service of the congregations of this city will be held in the Crescent Avenue church on the evening of Good Friday, April 4, at 8 o'clock. The service will be conducted by the Rev. Mr. Rodman, assisted by the pastors of the several churches. Christian people of every name who may be ready to meet in the name of their Crucified Lord and spend an hour in prayerful meditation on His cross and passion, are earnestly invited to come.

The Rev. Mr. Richards in announcing this meeting, Sunday morning, said: "Never in my ministerial experience have I been more pleased than with the feeling of christian fellowship shown between the several churches of this city. I am sure we all feel the honor of being allowed the privilege of having the first service of the kind ever held in this town, within our own church."

Fire at Bound Brook.

A barn owned by Peter J. Staats, was destroyed by fire Tuesday afternoon. It contained two horses, two wagons, three tons of hay and farming implements, in all valued at $2,000. There was no insurance. Tramps are believed to have been the incendiaries.

Gas Light Company Election.

At the annual meeting of the Plainfield Gas Light company's stockholders, Tuesday afternoon, the following were elected a board of directors for the ensuing year: Daniel Runkle, Harry G. Runkle, Elias R. Pope, F. A. Pope and Peter Brunson.

The board is the same as last year, with the exception that the vacancy caused by the death of Jeremiah VanDeventer is filled by the election of F. A. Pope. The board subsequently re-elected E. R. Pope as President, and H. G. Runkle, Secretary and Treasurer.

Mr. Keyes Wins the Championship for the Second Time.

The finals have been played in the New Jersey Chess Club tournament, for the State championship, which was left to be played off after the meeting in New Brunswick. E. R. Keyes, of Plainfield, and H. N. VanDyck, of Princeton, were tied for first place, neither having lost a game, and in playing the final game Mr. Keyes won, making him the champion of the State and the holder of the first prize, the Waterbury cup, while Mr. VanDyck secured second prize, a purse of $5 in gold, given by the citizens of New Brunswick.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a meeting of the consistory of the Trinity Reformed church, held April 1st, 1890, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, In the infinite wisdom of God, death has again invaded our ranks, and taken from our midst our brother in Christ, and fellow officer, Elder Randolph Titsworth, M. D., Therefore,

Resolved, That we cherish a due recognition of God's hand in taking from our Christian fellowship, one who [illegible], who identified with our church from its organization, rendering faithful service for five years as Treasurer, and as Elder from Feb. 1st, 1883, to Oct. 19th, 1888.

2d. That we humbly [illegible] in the [illegible] wisdom of Him who doeth all things well, and [illegible] bow before the Sovereign Disposer of all events.

3d. That in the death of Doctor Titsworth, we mourn the loss of a brother beloved, the memory of whose exemplary life, wise counsels, and unflagging zeal, in the cause of Christ, his Saviour, we will fondly cherish as an inspiration to us who remain.

4th. That from his modest, yet earnest Christian life [illegible] we have the comfort of the assurance that our loss is his everlasting gain.

5th. That we extend our warmest sympathy to his widow, and family, who have been deprived of a loving husband, a kind father, and a wise [illegible] [illegible].

6th. That a copy of these resolutions be [illegible] to the family of the deceased, entered in the minutes of the consistory, and be published in The Evening News, and DAILY PRESS of this city.

Some Suits.

Watson & Co. are showing in window next to Market street one sample suit made from the fine black twilled worsteds now in such great demand by all fine custom tailors. The coats and vests of these elegant suits are cut in the new Albert cutaway style with point collars and are handsomely trimmed with flat folded facings. All these suits have extra pantaloons of the new trace line patterns in the handsome new Spring shades, but of sufficient weight to fit perfect, keep their shape and put on now. Watson & Co. made a large purchase of these fine worsteds at a very low price for cash from a large importing firm in need of money, and shall offer these elegant suits, made up in faultless style, at the extremely low price of $15 for any pattern you may select, and you cannot match them for $25, as you will say when you see them.—Newark Press.

CAPTAIN CAREY SUSPENDED.

Serious Charges Preferred Against Him Which Are Likely to Result in His Removal—Officer Lynch on the Anxious Seat—Captain Grant is in Now.

Mayor Mahe, President of the City Council Elmore D. Moffett, and Councilmen Hetfield, Roberts and Spangenberg, constituting the Police Board of the city, met Monday night to hear charges preferred against Captain Tunis J. Carey and Officer Patrick Lynch.

The Board directed that copies of the charges be served upon Captain Carey and Officer Lynch, and that they be notified to appear before the Board on Thursday evening, to answer to the charges. It was also resolved that Captain Carey be suspended from duty until further notice, and he was notified to that effect. Officer George W. Grant was appointed Captain in his place, the appointment to take effect immediately. As a matter of fact it may be stated that the actions of the Board were all unanimous. Following are the charges preferred against each officer, a copy of which was served upon each one this morning:

To the Police Board of the City of Plainfield:

I do hereby charge Tunis J. Carey, a regular policeman of the City of Plainfield, Union county, New Jersey, with conduct unbecoming a policeman, by using obscene, profane and indecent language to members of the Common Council of said City, some of whom are members of the Police Board of said City, viz: on the morning and afternoon of the eighteenth day of March, A. D., 1890, to the following members of the Common Council, to wit: Elmore D. Moffett, Arthur T. Gallup, and Walter L. Hetfield. And also by using vile, obscene and profane language about members of said Common Council, to divers citizens of said City, at different times since the sixth day of January, A. D., 1890.

Dated March 31, A. D., 1890.

E. D. MOFFETT.

To D. R. Roberts, Chairman Police Committee, and the Police Board of the City of Plainfield:

We, the undersigned, citizens of Plainfield, wish to enter our protests against the mode of taking men through the streets of our city, handcuffed together, when arrested on petty charges, unless they should offer resistance, as was the case with the two men recently arrested at Cadmus' mill by police officer Lynch under instruction of Captain Carey, and marched through the streets handcuffed when they offered no resistance whatever, and against the urgent protest of Mr. Cadmus.

We, the undersigned, who witnessed the said outrage, do protest against such shameful treatment, and refer the matter to your Board for action.

UNFURLING THE FLAG.

Patriotic Exercises at the High School Yesterday Afternoon.

The ceremony attending the unfurling of the handsome flag recently presented to the High school by Mr. Ernest Ackerman, took place Tuesday afternoon, many of the parents of the scholars and friends of the school being in attendance.

The exercises opened with a song by the school, "God My King," followed by a recitation, "E Pluribus Unum," by Miss Ernestine Smith. The school sang "Consecration," and Miss Emma V. Case recited in an admirable manner "The Revolutionary Rising." After the school sang "The Pilgrim Fathers," Master Edward J. Patterson declaimed on "Liberty and Union."

The Rev. Dr. Ketcham, on behalf of the donor, then formally presented the flag to the school, at the same time illustrating the significance of the flag. He also alluded to Mr. Ackerman as a post-graduate and to the great interest he took in the school.

The Rev. Dr. Hurlbut accepted the flag on behalf of the Board of Education. He spoke of the great interest which is being manifested throughout the country by floating flags from the public schools—a spirit of patriotism, he said, which should be encouraged.

The scholars then gave three rousing cheers for the flag, and also for the donor, after which the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis made a few remarks, giving the boys some good advice.

The school and audience adjourned to the street and witnessed the hoisting of the flag amidst a volly of shots from cannon and musketry.

The Dunellen Election.

The annual election for Borough Commissioners took place at Dunellen, Tuesday. The following were elected: C. Schepflin, F. W. Brakeley, R. J. Swackhamer, John Moynihan, John P. Apgar, Fred J. Richters, Samuel Lockey.

Five hundred dollars was voted for borough purposes, but the $500 additional road money was defeated.

The following quotation appeared in Carey's sheet, on Tuesday: "All the policemen on duty on Tuesday, when they heard of the outrageous action tendered Chief Carey their resignation." This is utterly false. A PRESS reporter interviewed all of the officers last evening, and not one of them signified his desire to lay down the club and abandon $60 a month. If, however, any of the officers feel so inclined, Captain Grant will immediately accept their resignation.

Dr. Hurlbut Speaks in Brooklyn.

The New York East Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, comprising the Eastern District of New York city from the Bowery to the East River, all of Long Island, and a slice of Connecticut, will be held for a week, beginning today, in the Summerfield church, Brooklyn. A mass meeting was held in that church on Tuesday for the purpose of forming a young people's league, to be called the Epworth League. By a vote of the audience the league was established, and the Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut of this city, delivered an address in the interest of the league.

Installation of Officers.

An open meeting of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance was held Tuesday, when the following officers were installed by D. G. W. P., Brother Pyatt:

W. P.—S. R. Scribner.
W. A.—S. [illegible]
R. S.—W. R. Ayres.

Treasurer—S. E. [illegible]
Chaplain—A. Corwin.
Con.—A. Scribner.
Ass. Con.—W. Ayres.
I. S.—[illegible]
O. S.—S. [illegible]

After the installation exercises remarks were made by W. P., S. R. Scribner, D. G. W. P., Pyatt and Mrs. Corwin. Recitations were given by W. R. Mattox, W. R. Ayres and Miss May Clum. Recitations were also given by nine children, entitled "The Brightest Home."

Refreshments were served in abundance after which several hours were spent in harmless amusement.

DUNELLEN NEWS.

Items Which Interest Our [illegible] Readers.

The annual Borough meeting was held on Wednesday, March 26, when the entire ticket for Borough Commissioners was renominated. Mr. C. Schepflin, it is said, signified his desire to withdraw from the board, but he was prevailed upon to accept a re-nomination.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church are arranging a cantata, which is to be held in the church in the course of a week or two. A "Bazaar of Days" will also be held in the church early in April and the proceeds will be devoted to purchasing a new pipe organ.

The Rev. Mr. Slinson of Manalapin, N. J., has already entered upon his duties as pastor of the Presbyterian church, to succeed the Rev. Mr. Shellinger, who has gone to Albany, N. Y. The Rev. Mr. Slinson will permanently locate here, next week.

The trustees of the Presbyterian church, are about to erect a $3,000 parsonage.

An Interesting Church Sociable.

The congregation of the First Presbyterian church enjoyed a delightful sociable on Friday, arranged by Mrs. J. M. Bettman. The programme consisted of two violin solos by Mr. Conde, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Beckley; cornet solo by Mr. Chase, accompanied by violin and piano; and vocal solos by Mr. Derby and Mrs. Templin. Much amusement was created by the "packages" which were provided for every one present, and which contained a miscellaneous collection of mirth-provoking articles. Cake and cream were served.

A Popular North Plainfield Young Man.

Here's the way a Somerville paper speaks of Mr. Harry H. Brokaw of North Plainfield, successor to the late Isaac Brokaw, in the real estate and insurance business:

"The real estate and insurance business of Isaac Brokaw & Son, of North Plainfield, will be continued under the old firm name by Harry H. Brokaw. Harry is an industrious young man, of firm principles, and in addition to being a thorough business man is very popular. The many friends of his father will undoubtedly stand by him."

The Goodness That We Longed For Never Came.

It is alleged by Captain Carey's mouth organ that that polite gentleman and bold officer has brought suit against the proprietors of THE PRESS for criminal libel in holding him up to public ridicule.

We are sorry to say this is not so. At least no summons to answer has been received. We have not yet given up hope, however, as we are anxious to reply to such a charge.

THE PRESS holds no person up to ridicule. Its columns are never influenced by anyone's private spite or opinion. What Captain Carey has done that's good, this paper has praised. We are not his enemy—neither are we his pug dog.

All ever published concerning the Captain in these columns, have been facts or matters of court record. We take nothing back, and beg to be sued. Let her go, Gallagher Carey!

An Enjoyable Affair.

At the home of Mr. William W. Pearson 68 Liberty street, on Friday, there was a scene of gayety when the friends of his son, Master Charles I. Pearson, did him honor by giving him a surprise party.

There was a merry throng and as soon as the music started the floor was covered with gay dancers who enjoyed themselves heartily. Miss Emily Huff, of Rvona, was unremitting in her efforts in assisting Mrs. Pearson in making the affair a brilliant success.

Among those present were the Misses Florence Blake, Emma Teller, Maggie Shepherd, A. M. Hall, Emma Deacon, Minnie Rockfellow, the Misses Bostertl, the Misses Minnick, Bessie Schenck, Hattie Garretson and Messrs Arthur Carpenter, Harry Roberts, Daniel Dunham, Edward Cooley, Charles Hawley, Charles Wilson, Benjamin Webster, Henry Adams, John VanDyke, William Hoffman, Harvey Dayton and others.

Literary Notes.

There seems to be no end to the wonders of instantaneous photography. The Illustrated American gives this week a large plate showing a projectile leaving the gun. This was photographed for this enterprising journal by its naval correspondent with our squadron of evolution in Europe, and is a curious incident which will occasion much scientific remark.

The Easter number of the New York Ledger is rendered especially attractive by an uncommonly beautiful cover printed in colors. The central design is a picture of Easter morning in the country, the road to church, with a border of Easter lilies. This number contains the first chapters of a new story by Amelia E. Barr, entitled, "The Household of Mc Neil," which opens well, and bids fair to rival "JanVedder's Wife," so far the best known of Mrs. Barr's romances.

The Next Attraction at Music Hall.

Marie Hubert Frohman, the gifted young actress, is to bring out her own company and give two or three of her most notable plays at Music Hall, on Monday evening next.

In these days of barn-storming it is news to hear that a woman of ability and intellect, with a good voice and proper knowledge of the stage, has taken to entertaining the public.

A good play is not only entertaining, but it is instructive, especially when well interpreted. Mrs Frohman was educated abroad as well as in this country; she speaks several languages; is a writer of great ability, and familiar with the best literature of the day. She has made a careful study of the old English and French dramas. She not only possesses a rare charm and simplicity of manner; but when the play requires it, she displays power and carries the house with her through every scene. Her voice is deep and flexible like Mary Anderson's, and her eyes are wonderfully expressive.

Concerning the Street Railway.

Some people are inclined to believe that in case the Plainfield Street Railway company secure the franchise to equip and operate a street railway in this city, that it will be on a cheap scale. To set at rest the mind of such people, THE PRESS herewith produces a letter received by Dr. T. J. Pritts this morning, which bears on the subject:

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 31st received and noted. In reply would say that the Plainfield Street Railway Company propose and intends to build a first-class road and equip the same with first-class new equipment. But to state it more explicitly, and to set at rest the minds of the people who may have been misinformed:

We propose to build a standard gauge track with frequent turn-outs and switches, and to lay a 47 to 50 pound new steel side bearing rail and to make it flush with the surface. We propose to pave with stone or concrete in center of track and one foot on outside, which will make a smoother and better roadway than any you now have in Plainfield, and we also propose to equip the road with new first class double and single cars, the whole to be first-class in all respects. The character of the parties should be a sufficient guarantee of the honesty of their intentions. Yours truly,

A. W. PLATT,
For the Plainfield Street Railway Co.

SPOOKS IN THE PARK.

Strange and Peculiar Proceedings Which Cannot be Explained.

Over in Washington Park there has appeared what is undoubtedly a genuine and orthodox ghost. The story as related below was told to a PRESS reporter yesterday by one who has been a witness of the spectral visitations and whose veracity there is no reason to doubt.

It seems that the inmates of a certain house in the Western section of the Park, whose names we might give if we chose, have for some time past been frequently awakened from their midnight slumbers by a most uncanny and unaccountable sound evidently coming from the driveway at the side of the house.

The manifestations occur invariably between the hours of one and two A. M., but at irregular intervals—often several nights together and then not again for a week. The sound, which can be likened to nothing but that made by a well-shod horse, pursued by a pack of wolves or dogs, the howling and snarling of which is plainly audible, is always first heard on the drive about fifty feet West of the house. It then seems to approach and pass directly by the windows, increasing in volume, until it reaches the street—a distance altogether of 150 or 200 feet—when there is a shrill cry and it stops as suddenly as it came. The noise is so loud as to arouse the whole household and the family have stood at the windows and heard the heavy running of the horse and the snarling and howling of the other animals pass within twenty feet of them, and yet nothing could be seen. A moment later a scream would be heard in the street and then silence.

In the morning the drive-way shows no signs of having been traversed and the people are entirely at a loss to explain the affair. The gentleman of the house, a New York business man, said that he was not a believer in ghosts; but he knew no way to account for the thing, other than to call it supernatural. The PRESS man sought his natural history and found that wolves were once common in these parts. Of course, some one ought to turn up who remembers a legend about a colonial mail carrier who was attacked and killed by a pack of wolves near here in the forgotten past; but as yet no such person has come along and the affair remains a mystery.

SHATTERED THE REPUBLICAN POLE.

"[illegible] Ararat" Goes Through a Regular Milk Shake.

Lightning struck Westfield for fair, on Friday, at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. Jona Knapp had just passed when a bolt of fire descended on the big Republican pole at the corner of Broad and Elm streets, and shattered the top of it to pieces.

Mr. W. J. Gilby, of Gilby & Pierson, just before he heard the loud report, saw a ball of fire jump into the air from the iron bands that bound the upper length of the pole to the lower. This ball of fire immediately burst and the concussion broke in the windows of Mr. Fred Decker's, Gilby & Pierson's and a barber shop in the Wittke building.

The metal ball at the top of the pole, was thrown into the gutter across the street. The bulletin board built around the base of the pole, on which the Republican notices are posted, was torn all to bits and scattered a hundred feet in every direction about the road.

The damage and effect in the public library rooms, were peculiar. Splinters from the pole smashed all the windows in the library, and although not a piece of wood or anything else was to be seen inside the room, a PRESS reporter found that the top of the stove had been broken off and thrown on the floor. This piece of iron was still hot when the reporter picked it up.

There had been a severe shower a half hour before the occurrence, but there was no particular disturbance at the time, and not a sign of lightning nor a sound of thunder anywhere near. It came like the firing of a gun, without the slightest warning.

Fire in North Plainfield.

A small fire occurred in the coachman's house on Mr. J. F. Wilson's premises, on Green Brook road, North Plainfield on Friday, which was fortunately discovered in time and extinguished by the gardener, before any serious damage was done.

The White Cross Society.

The first annual meeting of "The Christian League for Social Purity" was held last evening at the residence of Mrs. E. B. Grannis, 38 East Twenty-second street, New York city. The League recently obtained a charter from the Legislature. Its purpose is to advance the cause of social purity, and especially with regard to women and young girls. Among those who delivered addresses was the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis of this city.

Logical Conclusions That Fit The Case.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—It was well said by one of the speakers at the Methodist temperance meeting on Sunday evening, "That a deeper study of the whole situation is needed." We presume he meant the subject of temperance. We will not directly charge the religious teachers of that evening with advocating the enforcement of moral virtues by legal enactment, but we gather sufficient from the public statement of what the reverend gentlemen suggested, to encourage us to offer certain logical conclusions in the premises that may change the force of their arguments as to legal remedies. Such conclusions in brief are in defence of the same cause these reverend gentlemen profess to advocate and defend, and find philosophic basis in the teaching of our common Lord.

1. If we want to check or even destroy the beneficent work of christianity we shall do so effectually by attempting to force all its teachings upon man in the shape of positive enactment.

2. What can be demanded or conceded in the name of christianity cannot be demanded in the name of law.

3. Free willingness is the essence of all virtue, and men cannot be made virtuous by legislative enactment.

4. If we can enforce christian temperance by law, we can enforce christian benevolence, christian charity, or christian virtue of any kind.

5. Christianity knows nothing of force; its motive power is love, and where force begins love ends.

6. Justice is no invention of christianity, but christianity ennobles justice.

7. Reformers cannot today make Christ a sovereign king any more than the Jews in their day.

These brief and suggestive points are in strict harmony with scripture truth and is in the line of that "deeper study of the situation needed," and we offer them to the christian teachers of this city in the same spirit as its truth.

Very respectfully,
LAYMAN.

THEY CHANGE PLACES.

The Crescents Prove Themselves Quitters, and the Olympics Step Into Their Shoes.

The four games in the Central bowling tournament, that were rolled in this city on Tuesday, made a great change in the record. The Crescents lost two, and the Olympics won two, and thereby the Plainfield teams changed places.

The Crescent team seemed scared to death and rolled like scrubs. The first game was theirs, but they were suffering so from nervous prostration they actually could not reach out and take it. In the seventh frame every man broke, and the bowling of the Crescents was so bad in both games that the Elizabeths could not have lost unless they had put their coats on and gone home, and forfeited the games.

J. M. C. Marsh was umpire. The score was:

ELIZABETHS.	1st	2d	CRESCENTS.	1st	2d
Warner	158	179	VanEmburgh	170	136
Fleming	136	167	Haven	127	119
Davis	143	188	Thiers	134	158
Dimock	138	170	Rogers	112	141
Bellner	150	[illegible]	G. Todd	156	[illegible]
	725	891		697	672

On the Olympic alleys the case was different. The honor of Plainfield was raised way up and held there. The Olympics bowled two most creditable games which to some extent decided who will have second place at the finish.

They have now only eight games to roll—six on their own alleys and two on the Crescent's. There is a probability of their winning all if they keep up the pace they have started on. Twenty-two spares was the Olympics total in the first game, Tuesday, again, while the cry of the umpire at the Crescent was frame after frame: "Nine on the first, Crescent; nine on the second, Crescent: nine all, Crescent." If the Olympics win six of their remaining eight games, Plainfield will have first place in the Central League—barring Elizabeth.

Mr. Herbert W. Stover was umpire. The score was:

OLYMPICS.	1st	2d	SOMERSETS.	1st	2d
Wilbur	116	143	Gulick	114	156
White	165	209	Goodman	149	142

Collier	164	151	Haynes	116	136
	815	737		668	697

The record of the Central Bowling Tournament, now stands:

	WON.	LOST.	PER CENT.
Elizabeth Athletic Club	16	2	889

Nameless of Westfield	8	6	571

THE BEST OF THE SEASON.

What the New York Theatres Are Offering, Worth Seeing.

Manager Daly's double bill, which he brought out at his theatre on Wednesday evening last, has proved to be as attractive to playgoers as anything he has presented this season. The principal members of his company have found congenial roles in "Haroun-al-Raschid" and "Miss Hoyden's Husband." The two pieces will be kept on the stage all the week.

* * *

Wm. H. Crane in "The Senator" at the Star Theatre is as potent an attraction as ever. The comedy will run until May. The business every night is very large, and a statement of receipts would startle many metropolitan managers. Mr. Crane has an able assistant in Mrs. Georgie Drew Barrymore, and Jane Stuart has created a part.

* * *

"The County Fair" at the Union Square, approaches its second season's close with no indication of impaired value. Neil Burgess declares that he hasn't performed to an unprofitable audience ever since he put Barnard's comedy on the stage. The record is not likely to be marred at Manager Hill's house between now and the close of the season in May.

* * *

This evening at the Broadway Theatre the J. C. Duff comic opera company will begin an engagement, opening with Gilbert and Sullivan's popular opera, "The Mikado," which it is claimed will be produced with great elaboration. Mr. Duff's company contains some excellent artists, who have already won praise and reputation for their efforts in this particular work. Among those who will appear are: Lilly Post, Louise Beaudet, Laura Joyce B ll, Charles Bassett, Mark Smith and Digby Bell. There will be a chorus of seventy-five.

FRIDAY'S SHOOTING.

Some of the Expert Trap Shooters Compete on the Middlesex Gun Club Grounds at Dunellen.

There was a large attendance at the all-day shoot on the grounds of the Middlesex Gun Club at Dunellen, Friday. Among the expert shooters present were Messrs Quimby and Whitney, representing the Great Eastern team, and Messrs Budd, Stice and Caboone, representing the Western team.

During the day, the rainstorm interfered materially with the shooting, but there were nevertheless ten matches in all shot at five live birds each. The birds were furnished by Mr. Charles Smith, and they were a fine lot of flyers, but few of them escaping outside of the enclosure.

Mr. Wm. Egbert performed valuable services as treasurer of the live stock department.

A NATIONAL SUNDAY SERVICE.

Novel and Interesting Exercises at the Congregational Church.
[Concluded.]

The Congregational Sunday school had a very pleasant service Sunday afternoon. Said one man: "I did not know when I came in whether it was Sunday or the Fourth of July." The piano and pulpit and organ gallery were beautifully draped with flags. Two Grand Army standards leaned against the pillars behind the desk on either side of a large colored map of the United States. For it was a national service; that is, a home missionary service; and it was impressed upon the eye and mind that God and native land are not far apart and love of God and love of country are near akin.

The exercises began with a voluntary played by Mrs. B. T. Barnes on the piano, and Mr. Sattelle and a young lady member of the school accompanying with violins. Devotional exercises followed in which the singing was led by the new boy choir, Mr. Bowman precenting. The Rev. J. B. Clark, D. D., Secretary of the American Home Missionary Society, made a most entertaining and stirring address, after which the piano and violins again rendered a very beautiful selection. The school sang with enthusiasm "Fair Freedom's Land," and "America," and a very enjoyable and profitable meeting came to an end.

The violins and boy choir are to be a permanent feature of the school.

"When the spring time comes," we usually find ourselves drowsy and exhausted, owing to the impure and sluggish state of the blood. To remedy this trouble, take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the most powerful, yet safe and economical, blood purifier in existence.

THREE PLAYS! MONDAY NIGHT.
MUSIC HALL.
NEW YORK STAR.
NEW YORK COMPANY.
MARIE HUBERT FROHMAN.

Plainfield is a first-class town. Is famous for its first-class people; its beautiful streets, shaded walks and refined society. Its people deserve only high class entertainments.

The event of the season is the triple bill for Easter Monday night at Music Hall. Mr. Gustave Frohman, who organized and managed the celebrated "Hazel Kirke" Company of the Madison Square Theatre, brings his great attraction—Marie Hubert Frohman with three beautiful plays to be presented that evening. She is a gifted young actress who played before two thousand people the other evening at Fall River, Mass. She brings a first class New York Company with fine new costumes.

"King Rene's Daughter," the opening play, is beautiful, romantic and realistic. It is a Danish play, in which Mrs. Charles Keane, won triumphs in London. As the blind Iolanthe, the King's daughter, beloved by a prince, Miss Frohman moves every heart. She is pathetic, with a deep melodious voice and magnetism that sway the audience. Rose Eytinge, whose name is a household word in the dramatic world, says "Her 'Iolanthe' is a revelation. Never have I seen blindness personated with such absolute truth; or passionate love, with such innocence and purity. I long to see her in Juliet. In the use of her hands alone she is wonderful."

The character represents a gracious beauteous maiden, pure as snow. She is blind, but beloved by the noble Prince Tristan. At first she does not know that she is blind. The scene is most effective. She recovers her sight; is claimed by her chivalric lover and a great festival of joy sweeps the stage. As the curtain falls, the soft music of the harp accompaniment ceases and the first class people of Plainfield awake from this dream of love and chivalry.

The two other plays on the bill are unique in their way. "Snowbound" is a realistic love story in the Sierra Nevada Mountains. "False Charms" is a very amusing farce-comedy of the old French school. Mrs. Frohman plays in all these pieces with great power and magnetism. Her deep organ-toned voice and wonder*ful eyes captivate the house.*

Notice About the Horse That Watson & Co. Gave Away.

Some time ago Watson & Co., the clothiers, put a notice in this paper that they had "a fine young gray mare that had been foundered by the carelessness of a coachman that they wished to give away to some farmer who would give her a good home." As they have had and are still having many applications for her they wish to say that she has been given to Mr. A. Everett of this city, who has a stock farm in Maryland.—Newark Press.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

On April 1 I reopened the Riverside Stock Farm Boarding stables, at Nos. 19 and 21 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J., with a choice lot of Horses.

I shall endeavor to keep on hand at all times horses suitable for all purposes, but shall make a specialty in coach and carriage teams, roadsters, family and saddle horses.

Believing that there is a growing demand in this city for such a business, I have remodeled my stable, put in large, well lighted box stalls and other improvements and have engaged an experienced salesman, who will be in charge of the business.

By running this stable in connection with, and as a branch of the Riverside Stock Farm Stables, I shall be enabled to select and keep on hand only such horses as are especially suited for this market.

The stock will always be shown, during the week, with pleasure, and you are respectfully invited to inspect the same.

—Mayor J. H. [illegible] of North Plainfield, during his three years of office has tried 150 cases, most of which were for disorderly conduct.

—The ladies of the W. C. T. U., have arranged for a lecture by Anthony Comstock at an early date. Notice of which will be given later.

—The "First Church of Christ," Mr. J. B. Cleaver leader, occupied its new quarters in the Chautauqua building for the first time on Sunday.

—The chorus of the Plainfield Choral Society is now so complete and well balanced, that all applicants for admission recently have been refused.

—The entertainment committee of the Y. M. C. A., gave the "Ladies' [illegible]" of the Association a supper at the Bazaar of Days, last Saturday evening.

—Over $2,100 were the total receipts at the "Bazaar of Days" that closed in the Crescent Avenue chapel, Saturday evening. The net profits will be about $2,000.

—Mr. Elmer [illegible] has a letter from Mr. Comanche stating as an excuse for his non-appearance in this city, Friday evening, that he had his "dates" a little mixed.

—A series of tennis matches have been arranged to be played in May between the Senior and Junior classes of the High School. The former now holds the championship.

—This month officers Flannigan and Conley are doing police duty in this city, and officers Gimson and Laine have gone to the Southward, otherwise known as the Boulevard.

—Howard Doty, a young lad, picked up a pocketbook on the sidewalk in front of Shaw's drug store yesterday, containing $12.61. Ex-Captain Carey took it away from him.

—Bernar Egel, son of Conrad Egel of East Bound Brook, says he can prove his innocence of the charge of robbery made against him by his employer, Mr. Abram L. Cadmus of this city.

—Now that the enlarged Councilmen have acted in Captain Carey's case, they will undoubtedly find time to attend to the monkey and his organ that have so outrageously [illegible] them.

—The lighting and illuminating by electricity of the "Bazaar of Days," was the work and taste of Mr. C. M. Goddard, and called forth more admiration than anything else in the entire display of beautiful things.

—Captain Grant does not "swell up" with pride since he has been promoted from an ordinary to Captain of the police force. Mr. Grant's long experience on the force should eminently adapt him for the position he now occupies.

—At the meeting of the Police Board held Monday night, Mayor Male indignantly denied the report published in the World recently with reference to his approval of Captain Carey's course. He pronounced the statement as a base fabrication.

—The three dwelling houses, 226 and 228 Grove street, and 29 Green Brook road, sold on Saturday as advertised in THE PRESS, were sold for $2,300 free of all encumbrances, to Mr. Craig A. Marsh. They were inventoried in the assignment of L. A. Sheppard at $8,000.

—The bullet accidentally shot from Contractor Moore's pistol, Sunday night, as he was about to place it under his pillow, went directly through the center of his left palm, through a pin cushion on the bureau and lodged somewhere that has not yet been discovered.

—The greatest "April fool" of the day was that perpetrated on the people by the Central railroad in changing its schedule of trains, on Tuesday, without notice. The large number arriving at the station for the 10:37 found the time had been changed to 10:35.

—Twice Captain Carey went to Elizabeth and moved the [illegible] of his mouth organ from the chambers of the Grand Jury. But in the ex-Captain's present hour of tribulation, he finds that the [illegible] weight his mouth organ has only acts as an additional soaker.

—Mr. D. J. Canary, the most wonderful bicyclist that ever lived, who has only been back a few months from a five-year's triumph in England, has rented The Casino for Monday evening, April 14, when he will exhibit his aggregation of champion polo players and cycle experts.

—The Bound Brook Chronicle says: "The Somerset Bowling Club visited Plainfield on Tuesday night and bowled two games with the Crescents, losing both by scores of 677 to 742 and 713 to 801. They are now the last in the Central Bowling Tournament and are likely to stay there."

—Last Saturday's World had an account of a flag raising at the Public school, last Friday, and fool papers copied it the next day, with the names of the speakers. Again it might be remarked, "If you don't see it in THE PRESS, it isn't so." As stated in these columns the day of the affair, it did not take place.

—The disorderly element of Scotch Plains was on the rampage, last Friday night, in the vicinity of Fanwood, and amused themselves by carrying away gates, turning over the small foot-bridges across the gutters, and finally winding up by tearing the coping off of Mr. Force's stone wall in front of his house.

—Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., has taken possession of their new rooms formerly occupied by the Knights of Pythias, corner of Front street and Park avenue. They will hold their first meeting in their new hall this evening, at which time they will install the newly elected officers for this quarter. It is understood they will name their new rooms the Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall.

Real Estate Transfers.

On March 28, there were two transfers of real estate in North Plainfield Township, as follows:

Fred W. Bird et al. to Calvin H. Rugg, lot in North Plainfield, $600; Augustus J. Winkler et ux, to Peter J. Dorlaque, property in North Plainfield, $2,500.

The Scotch Plains Shooting Case.

Constable Moffett and special officer Mattox went to Scotch Plains, Thursday, and drove a herd of Italians back to this city on foot. One of the men, Constantino Mormato, was charged by Pedro Fergolino, before Justice Nash, with shooting at him a short time ago, as told in THE PRESS. An interpreter was present and through him several witnesses were examined. The trouble, it appears, originated over a game of cards. Justice Nash held the accused in his own recognizance in the sum of $500, to await the action of the Grand Jury.

At the congregational church parsonage, by the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, on March 13, Mr. John Allen of North Plainfield, and Miss Annie E. Toms of Warrenville, were united in marriage.

The death was announced in New York, Thursday, of Robert W. Longwill, who was a member of the Produce Exchange. He was thirty years old and suffered from consumption. He died at his home in Fanwood, N. J.

The stockholders of the Montague Heights Railway company, Brooklyn, held their annual meeting yesterday afternoon and among the directors elected for the ensuing year was Mr. James F. Hotchkiss, of this city.

Mr. C. I. Westervelt and wife of this city will this week remove to Manuet, New York State, where they will take possession of a stock farm. The farm is beautifully located, and is situated about five miles from Nyack.

Contractor Charles E. Moore didn't know it was loaded, and while carelessly handling a pistol Sunday night about 10 o'clock, was shot through the left hand. Dr. Westcott dressed the wound which was painful but not very serious.

Doctor George W. Endicott, having grown in a Christian way selfish by the frequent introduction of cherubs into Plainfield society, on Tuesday introduced a little one on his own account. Both mother and boy doing nicely.

The talk in irresponsible papers to the effect that Mayor Male and Councilman Roberts were not in accord with the policy of the Police Board in reducing Captain Carey to the ranks where common policemen belong, is proven false. If you don't see it in THE PRESS it isn't so.

Mrs. S. L. Fraser, who lives just outside the swath cut by the cyclone at Louisville, Ky., has telegraphed her father, Mr. P. M. Demarest of this city, that she and hers are unharmed, but that the destruction of life and property is heartrending.

Mr. Jacob Kirkner received another telegram Thursday to the same effect as the last news published in these columns. Mrs. Kirkner's sad message now is that their daughter is no better. The doctors give no encouragement, and nothing but hope remains.

Mr. Seeley Edsall in his address before the W. C. T. U., meeting at 4 o'clock on Sunday, took occasion to refer very feelingly to Captain Carey, and instructed all to aid him in "his trying hour for vindication of his work to overthrow evil in our midst."

Signor Lore su Paoli, otherwise known as "Peanut John," has just returned from another trip to his mother soil, Italy. His visit this time in that sunny land, was of longer duration than usual, and his little Irish son that he took with him has now become quite a padrone.

THE PRESS has received a sample copy of a new periodical called "The Better Day"—a journal of temperance education. The new paper is published semi-monthly by Messrs Funk and Wagnalls, of Nos. 18 and 20 Astor place, New York, and starts out with a generous amount of reading matter.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and Mr. Aaron Powell, of this city, were among the guests present at the [illegible] birthday of Mrs. E. B. Grannis, President of the Christian League for the Promotion of Social Purity, and editress of the Church Union, at her home, 38 East Twenty-second street, New York, Thursday evening.

Before a coterie of cultured men and women, representing members of the Monday Afternoon Club, of this city, and their friends, Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, March 26, in the rooms of the [illegible] Society on Second place, read a paper on decorative art and women's part in it. She quoted freely from the [illegible] of authentic [illegible] in point, [illegible] and [illegible], but her own views were not the least wise and striking.

Mrs. Titsworth, widow of Dr. Randolph Titsworth, will remove to the home of her son at Roselle.

Mr. Geo. F. Brown and wife of North Plainfield, have gone for an extended trip through the far West.

Mr. Willie McClymont will give a party at the home of his parents, 78 Washington avenue, on Friday evening, April 11. All his young friends have been invited. Dancing at nine.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Runyon will make their future home at the pretty residence on East Front street of the late Dr. Randolph Titsworth, who is Mrs. Runyon's father.

Elmore D. Moffett, President of the Council, has been connected since 1869 with the office in Elizabeth where he has now been Assistant Clerk of the County of Union since the election of Clerk Crowell.

Another Mugwump has caught on. Mr. Herbert Bowen, son of Henry E. Bowen, of the New York Independent, and brother of Mr. Henry C. Bowen, of Netherwood, has been appointed U. S. Minister to Barcelona, Spain.

A surprise party was tendered Miss Allie Randolph and Miss Florrie Lowson, at their home on West Seventh street, on Tuesday. There was a large company present, and a most enjoyable time. The music was by Rogers.

The senior class of the High school was tendered a most pleasant reception at the home of ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, the other evening. Miss Caroline F. Randolph—who is a member of the class—was the charming hostess of the occasion.

Charles, the four-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Linser, of South Second street, died last Tuesday morning of scarlet fever. The little lad was only sick nine days. Another son, eight years old, also had the decease but recovered.

Mrs. A. V. V. Raymond, wife of the former pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, has been suffering for several weeks from nervous prostration. She is now enjoying the quiet of her sister's home in Middleville, N. Y., and is slowly regaining strength.

Mr. and Mrs. George Thatcher have returned to their handsome Summer home at West Seventh street and Central avenue. Mr. Thatcher is now in Boston with the Howard Athenaeum company, but will be in Plainfield next week. His company appears with him at Music Hall, April 15.

The silver-tongued orator of Somerset county, Peter S. Bergen, is able to see again, and with the aid of spectacles can go about like a young man once more. The operation on his eyes, in a New York Hospital, was a success, but during it he lost fourteen pounds and a great deal of strength.

The death occurred suddenly, Tuesday, at the home of her son, 69 Madison avenue, of Mary, wife of Mr. Harvey S. Moore. Mrs. Moore is the mother of the Manager of the Plainfield Electric Light Company. The funeral will be held today at noon at the house, and from the Second Presbyterian church at Rahway, at 2:30 P. M.

The funeral of the late C. C. Day, who died on Saturday, took place from his late home, corner of Park place and Duer street, North Plainfield, at two o'clock, yesterday, the Rev. W. R. Richards officiating. Miss Gussie Holmes, Miss Clara Dunn and Messrs Runyon and Richards, sang. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery.

At Oak Lane, a suburb of Philadelphia, on Sunday last, occurred the death of Sarah Eleanor, wife of Mr. Fred H. Miller, formerly of this city, in her 40th year. Mrs. Miller, during her long residence here, was one of the most active women in christian and temperance work, and her death will be regretted, as her life was remembered, by a large circle of friends in Plainfield.

Mr. James Van Over, a life-long resident at "Nolan's Point," Lake Hopatcong, died on Sunday last, after a short illness from heart disease, after a life of over 80 years. "Uncle Jimmy" had many friends in this city, who remember his kindness to them while Summering at his home during the past five years at the above mentioned popular resort. He was an honest Christian man, and his death, even at such an advanced age, is regretted and mourned by all who knew him. Peace to his ashes.

RESERVED SEATS FOR THE BALL GAMES.

A New Feature Introduced by the Crescent League for the Comfort of its Patrons.

Thirteen men are at work today erecting a new and commodious grand stand on the Crescent League ball grounds, directly behind the catcher's position. When completed it will be entirely filled with 60 comfortable seats, numbered and reserved for the whole season. Tickets for these seats will be on sale at the club house beginning this evening, at $4 each and will be transferable. The bearer will be entitled to the seat numbered on the ticket during all the games of the year, upon payment of admission to the grounds.

The games this year—which THE PRESS will publish the schedule of in a few days—will be against the strongest semi-professional teams in the country, including the Metropolitans, Brooklyn L's, Cuban Giants, Gorhams, Flushings, Acmes, Hackett-Carharts, and Lafayette and Columbia colleges. Against such players the Crescent League will put in the field the strongest amateur team in New Jersey. All its members are in training now, and pitcher Livingston is excelling his wonderful work of last year in Brooklyn. Catcher Jones says he is a phenomenon. The season will open a week from next Saturday if the weather permits the grounds to be put in condition.

Services for Holy Week at the Holy Cross.

There will be services at Holy Cross church every morning at 11 A. M. Holy Communion on Thursday morning. The second service on Good Friday is at 7:45 P. M. The Rev. Dr. Taylor will preach at that service.

The New Officers of Wilson Chapel.

At an election for officers of the Sunday school of the Mary E. Wilson memorial chapel, held recently, the following were chosen:

Supt.—E. L. Bonny of North Plainfield.
Asst. Supt.—J. H. Manning of Plainfield.
Treasurer—Andrew Wilson.
Secretary—Isaac Winslow.
Organist—Miss Nettie Beeching.
Librarian—George Howard.

Mr. Bonny was elected a Trustee to serve for three years. As President of the society he reported the work of the school to be in a flourishing condition. Many had been added to the school in the past year. With the beautiful new building and better facilities for work, he made an earnest appeal for greater efforts by those in the school to reach those who should be in, but are not. The harvest is great, he said, and an earnest effort is required to make the work effective.

The work of the coming year was laid out. New teachers will be procured, and new classes will be formed, to which non-going Sunday school scholars will be cordially invited. Enterprising citizens are engaged in beautifying the grounds adjacent to the school house, which have been somewhat out of repair.

A Cure or no Pay.

All diseases arising from a deranged liver, or from impure blood, as boils, blotches, pimples, scalp disease, scrofulous sores and swellings and consumption (which is lung-scrofula), in its early stages, are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, or the money paid for it will be promptly returned. Sold by druggists under a duly executed certificate of guarantee from the manufacturers.

8 TO 4.

WHAT IS "TO CONGREGATE?"

A Jury of Twelve Men Disagree on this Point in the Case of Captain Carey Against the "Man I'm After."

"There is no ordinance in the City of Plainfield today that prohibits any man from selling all the liquor he can at all hours of the day and night."

This was the startling proposition set forth by Counselor Kalisch, March 26, at the opening of the case of the City against Joseph B. Miller for keeping open a barroom where people congregate at unseemly hours. At least so the case has been entitled, but by the testimony of Councilmen Gallup and Hetfield as to the Captain of the Police's own words, it would appear to be the case of Tunis J. Carey against Elmore D. Moffett who the former stated "is the —— I'm after."

At two o'clock, the hour set for the trial, the little court room was full and overflowing into the Council chamber. The subpoenaed jurymen were all there, besides three active and two special policemen. The Court also arrived on time, but neither the counsel for the defense nor the prosecution were present. City Attorney Marsh arrived at 2:15, took off his hat and top coat at once, and was ready for the fray. Judge Codington thereupon took off his coat, but he had to hang it up himself on the floor. Captain Carey hung up Mr. Marsh's coat.

A few more edged their way into the room already so jammed full that the reporters and witnesses occupied the counselors' tables and the water pitcher only found room to stand on the bar of the court. Everybody from His Honor down to the meek and lowly newspaper man perched upon the edge of a cuspidor, was curious to see the counsel for the defense—shrewd Sam Kalisch of Newark. And when he arrived they were not disappointed.

He was quite an imposing figure when he entered. He was not as heavy as His Honor, but he was three times as stylish. A drooping sprig of lily of the valley, that looked as if it had both toiled and spun all that day and the night before, decorated the left lappel of his black frock coat. His locks were jet black, and carefully polished and curled. His moustache was so beautifully twisted that Juryman Miller couldn't keep his eyes off it in envy.

Mayor Male and Councilmen Roberts, Johnson, Spangenberg, Moffett, Hetfield and Gallup, were also present when the case was called. Counselor Kalisch opened the battle with a motion that "the complaint be dismissed because the ordinance on which it is based is unvalid." He continued to argue that the ordinance that aims to close the barrooms at certain hours, is not in force in the city of Plainfield since the passage of the Werts act. That was a new law providing what the minimum license fee should be, how the prosecution of violators should be carried on, and regulating other matters in such connection. It repealed all acts or parts of acts enacted before, and as it wiped out the previous law under which the present city ordinance had been adopted and enforced, it wiped out such ordinance and all its restrictions with it. There was no doubt, Mr. Kalish allowed, that the Council could then and could now adopt an ordinance to control the sale of liquor in Plainfield, but he insisted that after the Werts act became a law it was necessary to pass a new ordinance in place of that it had repealed.

Every lawyer, and some of the laymen in the court room knew the position was a strong one. It was not a point, however, to be decided off hand by a city court. It is to be hoped that it will be argued before a higher bench very soon. His Honor, himself, told THE PRESS reporter that he considered the matter sound and vitally important. But the City Attorney with a most deceiving gesture of disdain, replied that the point was not a new one. It had occurred to him long ago and he had been prepared to answer the objection every time the city had had a case of the sort. But, he said, even so able a lawyer as Counselor Fred C. Marsh, who is now and was the leader of the dominant party in the Assembly that passed the Werts bill, brought up no such point in his defence of a recent prosecution in this city under the same ordinance. "The Werts act itself says," continued the City Attorney, "'all bodies who may now have the power to grant licenses'—thus recognizing Plainfield's existing position." The Judge denied the motion at 3:10 P.M., and ordered the jury called at once.

The following were empanelled: J. P. Homan, Calvin Rugg, M. C. Dobbins, Hervey Doane, James C. Pope, Uzal B Crane, J. Fred MacDonald, J. P. Laire, Ashland C. Horton, Joseph G. Miller, Ignatz Boehm and F. O. Smith. The counsel for the prosecution challenged two others, but the defence with "conscious rectitude" accepted everybody called. Three hours later the above jury retired, but up to midnight it was found impossible for them to agree—Messrs Rugg, Dobbins, MacDonald and Laire insisting that the barroom was open after eleven o'clock and that persons congregated therein, while the others held that there was no congregating at unseemly hours in the place for the purpose of drinking and tippling as they held the ordinance meant.

The story of the case as told by every reputable witness who was examined, agreed in every particular. It was this: On the night of March 17, the Common Council adjourned at ten minutes before twelve o'clock. President Moffett and Councilmen Gallup and Hetfield started down West Front street to show themselves at a banquet that was being held in the parochial school in honor of St. Patrick, and at which President Moffett was down on the bill for a speech. As they passed Laing's Hotel, Landlord Miller who stood on the front veranda, called to them and asked what was the action of the Council in the matter of the removal of the freight house, in which he was especially interested. The Councilmen stopped to tell him, and as they stood there Miller remarked that he had no coat on, and invited them into the office.

As a number sat around inside, the four walked back by the office desk where they could not be overheard. President Moffett asked if he could not have something to drink, and Miller unlocked the barroom door that they stood near, stepped inside, turned on an electric light over the cigar case at the end of the bar a foot or two from the door, and the others followed him in. President Moffett testified that as he understood the case, Miller would have had to unlock the barroom door to get him even a glass of iced water.

However, someone made the novel remark, "what'll you have." Mr. Gallup said: "I'm as dry as a graven image and would like a glass of beer, but I would'nt ask a man to break the law." So he took a soda, Mr. Moffett took a sarsaparilla, Mr. Miller took a soda and Mr. Hetfield a cigar. The latter paid twenty-five cents for the round.

"Then," Counselor Kalisch said, "the Bold Captain Carey saw the terrible outrage being committed against the laws of the city. This Peeping Tom of Plainfield, whose small little office of Captain of Police has so inflated his small little heart." That is not all he said, either, and there were also some personal references passed between the counsel. But the City Attorney said most of the nice things, while Mr. Kalisch made all the unpleasant and uncalled for remarks.

It was further proved, in continuation of the case, that the next day Captain Carey told Councilman Gallup that he was sorry he (Gallup) was in it, because Moffett was the —— he (Carey) was after. He told Councilman Hetfield the same thing without the obscene epithet. Upon being questioned as to whether he was informed that he would receive half of any fine imposed, Carey drew from his pride-swelled breast a paper, type written, but subscribed to by himself, assigning to the Children's Home the reward that goes by law to the informer. It had only been drawn up by the City Attorney that morning, and created great merriment in the Court. Carey said the President of the Home had thanked him for it! but Counselor Kalisch thought the President was easily pleased, to be thankful for something she would never get.

The prosecution endeavored to coax Mr. Hetfield to say that he had told Carey that Miller "was guilty of a technical violation of the law." The witness emphatically denied saying so. He answered, "I thought it was nothing but a dirty, contemptible trick of Carey's, and think so now." The applause of endorsement was so great at this statement, the City Attorney threatened to expose the names of the principal violators of the Court's dignity and have them punished for contempt.

Much to the relief of everybody, Counsel limited themselves to fifteen minutes each in summing up. Both were gifted men, but Counselor Marsh had the more graces of gesture, silver tongue and polished rhetoric. His fluent closing of the case was broken in upon, however, when he called the jury's attention to the hostility of the witnesses for the defence. President Moffett sprang to his feet, and asked "Why shouldn't I feel so when such a name has been applied to me?" Carey answered, "Whoever says I said so is a liar;" but Councilman Gallup who had so sworn, paid no attention to the remark, and the Court demanded order.

As stated above, the jury could not agree on what was meant by "congregating." The City Attorney held that it was not a question of fact but a question of law, and was much disappointed at Judge Codington's declination to so charge the jury. Counselor Kalisch held that if the construction was put upon it that the prosecution endeavored to, then if Miller's hotel became so full that cots were even made up in the barroom and guests allowed to sleep there, the proprietor's $700 license would be revoked.

The City Attorney has already demanded retrial of the case. The general opinion, in which THE PRESS concurs, is that he deserves great credit for persuading so many as four jurymen that he has a just case under the circumstances.

THIS CONCERNS YOU ALL.

How the People of Plainfield [illegible] Protection From Their "Protectors!"

Counselor Kalisch's visit to this city March 26, straightened us all out about one very important matter. His questioning drew from "Chief" Carey this emphatic statement: "I am elected Captain of Police and Chief Executive of the City."

Whew!

This impressive fact cannot but have a paralyzing effect upon the law breakers of Plainfield and the wide, wide World. But there was other testimony given that had no such good effect. Councilman Gallup swore that Carey applied to the President of the Council the most offensive and obscene title known today. And Carey in open court said Councilman Gallup was a liar.

Some of the jurymen who swore to do their duty as they honestly saw their duty, were afterwards attacked by some of Captain Carey's officers. They were only called "——nice citizens"—which it must be confessed is a mild term compared to what was testified as coming from their Captain.

But it may be only a beginning.

Time Table Changes.

The new schedule of the Central railroad that went into effect Tuesday, has these changes among others:

To New York in the morning, the 10:37 now leaves at 10:35, and an 11:29 train is added, while the 12:08 is taken off. From New York: the 9:00 A. M. is taken off and a 6:15 in the evening is added.

They Give More Than Captain Carey.

Four of the jurymen who were for the acquittal of landlord Miller, have donated their fee of 25 cents each to the Children's Home.

This with the reward to the informer that Captain Carey assigned to the same institution, makes a total of one dollar added to its treasury.

An Easter Sale.

The children's Easter sale which opened Monday in the Unitarian parlors on Second place, was well patronized. It is under the management of Mrs. W. J. Leonard who is director of the Unity Band and The Glow-worms, the two children's societies which are holding the sale.

The ladies who are assisting at the tables are Mrs. S. R. Krom, Miss Edith Leonard, Miss Caroline Barber, Miss Southard, Miss Eva Pierce, Miss Viola Conklin, Miss Anna Shane and Miss Hotchkiss.

To Celebrate Their Golden Wedding.

On Friday occurred the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. James Monroe Gaskill of Dunellen. Mr. Gaskill was named after the fifth President of the United States having been born on Inauguration Day in the year 1817.

Mrs. Gaskill was formerly Miss Sarah Haines and she is a few months younger than her husband. The aged couple originally came from Rahway. They have four sons namely, Messrs Randolph and Clayton of this city, and Messrs Frank Harry C., residing at Dunellen, and a daughter is the wife of Mr. R. E. Cortell of this city. The oldest child, a daughter, died when about 18 years old. The youngest, Daniel W., died last July. The widow of the latter named and one daughter reside at Bloomsbury, N. J.

Mr. Gaskill was for a number of years foreman in the blacksmithing department of French's carriage factory, in this city. His wife has been an invalid for several years.

An Address on Japan.

As stated in THE PRESS on Saturday the annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, took place on Friday, and at the closing session in the evening the Rev. Dr. Reese, a returned missionary gave an interesting account of the manners and customs of the Japanese people, with whom he has labored for the past eleven years.

Among other things Dr. Reese said that the Japanese have been called the Anglo-Saxons of the East, but they are far from it in natural intellect and in various other ways. There is, however, nothing in Japan to hinder the progress of the people in their desire to pattern after Western civilization; on every hand there are evidences of enterprise and activity.

Dr. Reese spoke at length on the immorality of the Japanese women and declared that what is essentially necessary to reach the masses is the establishment of schools for girls and boys.

—The Borough Council for '90 will hold its first regular meeting on Friday evening next.

Dangerous Negligence.

It is as unwise to neglect a case of indigestion, etc., as a case of fever or other more serious disease; for, if allowed to progress, [illegible] danger to life may result. A few HAMBURG FIGS will put the bowels in a healthy condition, in which they may be kept by occasional use of this medicine. 25 cents. Dose, one Fig. Mack Drug Co., N. Y. For sale by J. G. Miller.

An Impressive Programme.

The 112th meeting of the local circle of the C. L. S. C., was held last Wednesday evening at the home of Miss Carrie Randolph, 40 Central avenue. The programme was:

Trajan and Hadrian..................Mr. Sperry
The dramatic writers..........Roman Literature
Mrs. Emerson.
The Works of Waters..................Miss Mooney
Recess.........Music
Prince Bismarck..................Mr. Runyon
Italian Republics in the Middle Ages..........Mr. Garrabee

The Rev. Mr. Mitchell's Lecture.

In Vincent chapel, Thursday, a large audience was assembled to hear "What Will Mrs. Grundy Say." The lecture was under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the M. E. church, and will net a nice sum.

At the hour appointed, the pastor of the church came forward and introduced "Mr. C. B. Mitchell, who will lecture to you this evening." Before commencing his lecture, he stated it was with considerable persuasion and not a little deference that he consented to deliver it before his own congregation and people. It was the first time he had ever so done. As a lecturer Mr. Mitchell proved himself also a success. The subject was interesting, amusing and at times eloquent.

Interesting Exercises at Reform Hall.

There was a largely increased attendance in Reform Hall Thursday. Mr. George F. Opdyke presided, and announced the programme of exercises, which consisted of music, singing, readings and recitations by several ladies and gentlemen, all of whom contributed to render the hour exceedingly pleasant. The newly adopted order for the Thursday evening meetings promises to be very popular. Following was the programme as arranged:

Piano Solo..................Miss Smith
Select Reading..................Mrs. Opdyke
Theme—"Mothers and the Future."
By Mrs. Mary E. Hunt.
Song ....The New Kingdom
Miss Nan Randolph.
Recitation—humorous..........Mr. Nicholson
Select Reading.........."The Enemy's Attempt"
By a member of the Club.

Councilor-Elect Weaver.

At the regular meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., held in S. of T., Hall, corner of Front street and Park avenue, last evening, after the regular routine business was transacted, the following officers were elected to serve for the next quarter:

Councilor—Edward S. Weaver.
Vice Councilor—Gilbert S. Martin.
Recording Secretary—Walter N. Martin.
Asst. Recording Secretary—David S. Dunavan
Financial Secretary—Peter H. Bennett.
Conductor—Charles S. Greer.
Warden—William A. Willson.
Inside Sentinel—Horace D Pangborn.
Outside Sentinel—John Henry.

Past Councilor R. E. Connolly was elected and installed Councilor for the unexpired term of James D. Anderson, resigned.

New Building Enterprises.

Among the new buildings about to be erected in this city and vicinity during the coming Summer, all of which are being designed by Architect W. H. Clum, is one for Mr. Wm. M. Sandford at the corner of Front street and Sandford avenue, the house to cost when completed $17,000; a brick store building for Mr. J. B. Coward, adjoining the latter's office on Park avenue, to cost in the neighborhood of $10,000; a block of dwellings for Mr. L. E. Barkalew on Duer street, North Plainfield.

Mr. Clum has also completed plans for the proposed Presbyterian parsonage at Dunellen, which is to cost about $3,500, besides plans for several smaller residences in this city. With all of these improvements under way it is safe to say that Plainfield will undoubtedly experience a building boom within the next year.

Cadmus—Coles.

At the residence of the bride's parents, 23 Emily street, at four o'clock, afternoon March 26, occurred the marriage of Mr. Wm. E. Cadmus of Brooklyn, and Miss Lillie Voorhis Coles, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Coles, of North Plainfield, by the Rev. Matthias Willing, an Episcopal clergyman of Madison Avenue, New York city, an intimate friend and relative of the Cadmus's, having officiated at the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Cadmus, Sr., and christened their son (the present groom) when a child, requested the honor of officiating.

Prof. G. P. Smith of Somerville, played Lohengrin's wedding march as the bridal party entered the parlor, where the ceremony took place. The bride was charmingly attired in a beautiful reseda faille, trimmed with cut steel point and medici lace, cut V shape, with a bunch of fragrant cream-colored Marechal Neil roses in the left hand.

The bridesmaids were Miss Mattie Johnson and Miss Laura Robins, both of Flemington. The former wore a dress of rose-colored silk, trimmed with point lace with bouquet to match, and the latter was attired in cream-colored surah, trimmed with point de sprit lace. The groomsmen were Messrs Wm K Cleverly and Geo. Cadmus, the latter a brother of the groom.

After the ceremony the usual wedding feast took place, at which a shower of hearty congratulations was poured upon the newly-wedded couple. A bountiful collation was provided for all those present.

The presents were many and of a high grade, including a well furnished house and a $250 check from the groom's father. Mr. and Mrs. Cadmus took their departure on an early train to spend their honeymoon at Niagara Falls, Buffalo and other points of interest. Upon their return they will take up their residence in Brooklyn.

Following is a list of the guests present: Mr. and Mrs. W. Cadmus, Mr. Geo. Cadmus, Mr. Harry Cadmus, Mr. Wm. K. Cleverly, Mrs. Louise Cadmus, (grandmother of groom), and Miss Minnie Cadmus of Brooklyn, N. Y.; the Rev. and Mrs. Willing, Mr. Dewitt Niven and Mr. John Lotskus of New York; Miss Mattie Johnson and Miss Laura Robins of Flemington, N. J.; Miss Katie Struve and Mrs. M. O. Osman of Somerville, N.J.; Mr. and Mrs. L. E. VanSickle and Miss Flora McGlone of White House, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. David Weaver, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lunger, Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Dickinson, Mr. J. B. Hurlburt, Miss Florence V. Hurlburt, Mr. Andrew Carpenter, Miss Ida Weaver, Mrs. Peter Weaver and the Misses Weaver of this city, and Mr. George Tate of Elizabeth.

That Mill Dam Case.

Further testimony was taken before a Vice Chancellor in the City Council chamber, Monday, in the Hyde-French mill-dam contest. An almost inexhaustable supply of witnesses was on hand, but the progress made in examining them was slow. At four o'clock the Vice Chancellor adjourned court until Wednesday at ten A. M., at which time the witnesses were notified to be present.

RADAM'S MICROBE KILLER

Cures All Diseases.

After myself and wife had used your Microbe Killer with great benefit, although I have not a farthing's pecuniary interest in your remedy, unsolicited and on my own responsibility, I wrote to nearly forty of those whose certificates you publish, embracing nearly all diseases, "please give your present impressions of Wm. Radam's Microbe Killer." I am happy to state the replies were not only favorable but enthusiastic. Many of the cures of complicated diseases almost surpass belief.

Sincerely yours,

Coughing

IS Nature's effort to expel foreign substances from the bronchial passages. Frequently, this causes inflammation and the need of an anodyne. No other expectorant or anodyne is equal to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It assists Nature in ejecting the mucus, allays irritation, induces repose, and is the most popular of all cough cures.

"Of the many preparations before the public for the cure of colds, coughs, bronchitis, and kindred diseases, there is none, within the range of my experience, so reliable as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. For years I was subject to colds, followed by terrible coughs. About four years ago, when so afflicted, I was advised to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and to lay all other remedies aside. I did so, and within a week was well of my cold and cough. Since then I have always kept this preparation in the house, and feel comparatively secure."—Mrs. L. L. Brown, Denmark, Miss.

"A few years ago I took a severe cold which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continual use of the Pectoral, a permanent cure was effected."—Horace Fairbrother, Rockingham, Vt.

AGRICULTURAL AFFAIRS.

The garden, the truck patch and the orchard should furnish the farmer with fully one-half of his living if proper care is taken with each to secure the best products in good season.

The potato beetle will attack nearly all kinds of early plants. They must be watched closely. Egg plants are special foods for the beetles, they preferring them to potatoes.

It is often profitable to grind grain for pigs where a farmer has a mill of his own and can do it at odd times. But to haul it to mill and back and pay toll takes most of the profit out.

The garden is neglected on the farm, and many farmers do not cultivate a plat for a garden. The full value of farming can only be obtained by those farmers who grow vegetables and fruits as well as staple crops of grain and grass.

It is the late frost—the frost that comes at a time when spring [illegible] it is safer not to take the chances of loss with tender bricks.

The value of apples on the farm as food for fat stock is [illegible] investigation of the subject [illegible] are advised to plant orchards for the purpose of supplying this fruit [illegible] Sweet apples are the most [illegible] while the tart varieties, although affording [illegible] are useful as an appetizer and an aid to digestion.

An exchange suggests that as a farmer grows old and unfitted for heavy tasks it is better for him to undertake some light service, such as the care of domestic animals and of a small garden, rather than relapse into idleness. [illegible] give up work is, for a man who has always been used to labor, too [illegible] but a certain and speedy [illegible] from a world where he seems to himself no longer of any use." This is a truth which [illegible] in actual life.

The advantage of good feeding depends much on regularity. If supplies are furnished at irregular hours not only are animals kept uneasy but their digestion is injured and they do not thrive. [illegible] in the great advantage of herbivorous animals over those of carnivorous habits. Flesh-eaters gorge themselves when they capture their prey, and then suffer from hunger until their next capture. This keeps them always thin in flesh, as they have to be to hunt well.

The seed of no garden vegetable is more easily grown than that of the beet. It is sold wholesale very cheaply, but every farmer should, so far as possible, grow beet-seed for his own use. [illegible] well-shaped, not overgrown [illegible] for seed. Those who grow beets largely for sale plant a late crop, which is forced to grow rapidly by high manuring and good cultivation. The idea that because a long, slow-grown root will seed abundantly it is as good as any for seed is a great mistake. Seed from such roots rapidly degenerates, and in a few years will grow plants that run to seed the first season.

"We believe," says the Canada Health Journal, "that there is no better direct remedy for intemperance than strict vegetarianism. Sir Charles Napier tried a vegetable diet as a cure for intemperance in twenty-seven cases and the cure was effected in every case, the time varying from thirty-six days to twelve months."

Dr. Anafad Bokai, professor of the University of Klausenburg, claims to have compounded a solution which completely neutralizes the poison introduced into the system by the bite of a mad dog. This solution consists of chlorine water, salt brine, sulphuric acid, permanganate of potassium and eucalyptus oil.

The French Anti-Tobacco Society has made experiments to determine the effect of tobacco smoke upon meat and vegetables ready for cooking or prepared for the table, and the result has [illegible] that the smoke deposits all its poisonous qualities in the food. A piece of rare roast, after being exposed for [illegible] to tobacco smoke, was offered to a dog which refused to touch it. It was then concealed in some palatable covering, and the dog ate it and died of nicotine poisoning.

Odors have been found to vary according to the molecular weight of substances, and it is believed, with good reason, that smell is due to gaseous vibrations like sight and hearing. Substances of low molecular weight have no odor, probably because their particles can not strike the olfactory nerves with sufficient force to be perceived. Others do not produce the strong one being perceived alone. By studying two odors [illegible]

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"A LIVING DOG IS BETTER THAN A DEAD LION."

The Man of Small Gifts Who Uses What He Has Is Worth More Than He of Great Talent Who Allows His Ability to Lie Dormant.

BROOKLYN, March [illegible].—There was the usual difficulty in getting [illegible] the Academy of Music this morning [illegible] Dr. Talmage's [illegible] "A Dead Lion," and his text, [illegible] ix, 4: "A living dog is better than a dead lion." Following is a verbatim report of the sermon:

The Bible is the strangest, the loveliest, the mightiest, the weirdest, the best of books. Written by Moses the lawyer, Joshua the soldier, Samuel the judge, Ezra the builder, Job the poet, David the shepherd, Daniel the prime minister, Amos the herdsman, Matthew the custom house officer, Luke the doctor, Paul the scholar, John the exile, and yet a complete harmony from the middle verse of the Bible, which is the eighth verse of the one hundred and eighteenth Psalm, both ways to the upper and lower lids, and from the shortest passage, which is the thirty-fifth verse of the eleventh chapter of John, to the longest verse, which is the ninth verse of the eighth chapter of Esther, and yet not an imperfection in all the 773,692 words which it is composed of. It not only reaches over the past, but over the future; has in it a ferry-boat, as in second Samuel; and a telegraph wire, as in Job; and a railroad train, as in Nahum; and introduces us to a foundryman by the name of Tubal-Cain, and a shipbuilder by the name of Noah, and an architect by the name of Aholiab, and tells us how many stables Solomon had to take care of his horses, and how much he paid for those horses. But few things in this versatile and comprehensive book interest me so much as its apothegms, those short, terse, sententious, epigrammatic sayings, of which my text is one: "A living dog is better than a dead lion."

THE DOGS AND LIONS OF THE BIBLE.

Here the lion stands for nobility, and the dog for meanness. You must know that the dog mentioned in the text is not one of our American or European or Scottish dogs that, in our mind, is a synonym for the beautiful, the graceful, the affectionate, the sagacious and the true. [illegible] and if you doubt it, ask the natives of the Alps, out of which he picked the exhausted traveler. The shepherd dog is a poem, and if you doubt it, ask the highlands of Scotland. The Arctic dog is the people of explorers, and if you doubt it, ask Dr. Kane's expedition. The watch dog is a living protection, and if you doubt it, ask ten thousand households over whose safety he watched last night. [illegible] the author of my text, lived in Jerusalem, and the dog he speaks of in the text was a dog in Jerusalem. Last December I passed days and nights within a stone's throw of where Solomon wrote this text, and from what I saw of the canines of Jerusalem by day, and heard of them by night, I can understand the slight appreciation my text puts upon the dog of Palestine. It is lean and mangy and disgusting, and afflicted with parasites, and takes revenge on the human race by filling the nights with clamor. All up and down the Bible, the most of which was written in Palestine or Syria, or contiguous lands, the dog is used in contemptuous comparison. [illegible] "Is thy servant a dog that he should do this thing?" [illegible] the Syro-Phenician woman said, "Even the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from the master's table." Paul says, in Philippians: "Beware of dogs," and St. John, speaking of heaven, says, "Without are dogs."

On the other hand the lion is healthy, strong, and loud voiced, and at its roar the forests echo and the mountains tremble. It is marvelous for strength, and when its hide is removed the muscular compactness is something wonderful, and the knife of the dissector bounds back from the tendons. By the clearing off of the forests of Palestine and the use of firearms, of which the lion is particularly afraid, they have disappeared from places where they once roamed, but they were very bold in olden times. They attacked an army of Xerxes while marching through Macedonia. They were so numerous that one thousand lions were slain in forty days in the amphitheatre of Rome. The Barbary lion, the Cape lion, the Senegal lion, the Asiatic lion, make in a most absorbing and exciting chapter in natural history. As much of the Bible was written in regions lion haunted, this creature appears in almost all parts of the Bible as a simile. David understood its habits of night prowling and day slumbering, as is seen from his description: "The young lions roar after their prey and seek their meat from God. The sun ariseth, they gather themselves together, and lay them down in their dens." And again he cried out, "My soul is among lions." Moses knew them and said, "Judah is couched like a lion." Samson knew them, for he took honey from the carcass of a slain lion. Solomon knew them and says, "The king's wrath is as the roar of a lion," and again, "The slothful man says, There is a lion in the way." Isaiah knew them, and says, in the millennium, "The lion shall eat straw like an ox." Ezekiel knew them, and says, "The third was as the face of a lion." Paul knew them and says: "I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion." Peter knew them and says, "The devil as a roaring lion walketh about." St. John knew them, and says of Christ, "Behold the Lion of the tribe of Judah!"

THE MEANING OF THE TEXT.

Now, what does my text mean when it puts a living dog and a dead lion side by side, and says the former is better than the latter? It means that small faculties actively used are of more value than great faculties unemployed. How often you see it! Some man with limited capacity vastly useful. He takes that which God has given him and says: "My mental endowment is not large and the world would not rate me high for any intelligence, my vocabulary is limited, and my education was defective, but here goes what I have [illegible]

THERE ARE PLENTY OF DEAD LIONS.

The simple fact is that the world has been, and the world is now, full of dead lions. They are people of great capacity and large opportunity, doing nothing for the improvement of society, nothing for the overthrow of evil, nothing for the salvation of souls. Some of them are monetary lions. They have accumulated so many hundreds of thousands of dollars that you can feel their tread when they walk through any street or come into any circle. They can by one financial move upset the money market. Instead of the ten per cent. of their income which the Bible lays down as the proper proportion of their contribution to the cause of God, they do not give five per cent., or three per cent., or two per cent., or one per cent., or a half per cent., or a quarter per cent. That they are lions, no one doubts. When they roar, Wall street, State street, Lombard street and the Bourse tremble. In a few years they will lie down and die. They will have a great funeral, and a long row of fine carriages, and mightiest requiems will roll from the organ, and polished shaft of Aberdeen granite will indicate where their dust lies, but for all use to the world that man might as well have never lived. As an experienced one below much he can carry with him, put a ten cent piece in the palm of his dead hand, and five years after open the tomb and you will find that he has dropped even the ten cent piece. A lion! Yes, but a dead lion! He left all his treasures on earth, and has no treasures in heaven. What shall the stonecutter put upon the obelisk over him? I suggest, let it be the man's name, then the date of his birth, then the date of his death, then the appropriate Scripture passage, "Better is a living dog than a dead lion."

But I thank God that we are having just now an outburst of splendid beneficence that is to increase until the earth is girdled with it. It is spreading with the speed of an epidemic, but with just the opposite effect of an epidemic. Do you not notice how wealthy men are opening free libraries, and building churches in their native villages? Have you not seen how men of large means, instead of leaving great philanthropies in their wills for disappointed heirs to quarrel about, and the orphan courts to swamp, are becoming their own executors and administrators? After putting aside enough for their families (for "he that provideth not for his own, and especially those of his own household, is worse than an infidel"), they are saying: "What can I do, not after I am dead, but while living, and in full possession of my faculties, to properly direct the building of the churches, or the hospitals, or the colleges, or the libraries that I design for the public welfare, and while yet I have full capacity to enjoy the satisfaction of seeing the good accomplished? There are bad fashions and good fashions, and, whether good or bad, fashions are mighty. One of the good fashions now starting will sweep the earth—the fashion for wealthy men to distribute, while yet alive, their surplus accumulation. It is being helped by the fact that so many large estates have, immediately after the testator's death, gone into litigation. Attorneys with large fees are employed on both sides, and the case goes on month after month, and year after year, and after one court decides, it ascends to another court and is decided in the opposite direction, and then new evidence is found, and the trials are all repeated. The children, who at the father's funeral seemed to have an uncontrollable grief, after the will is read go into elaborate process to prove that the father was crazy, and therefore incompetent to make a will; and there are men on the jury who think that the fact that the testator gave so much of his money to the Bible society, and the missionary society, or the opening of a free library, is proof positive that he was insane, and that he knew not what he was signing when he subscribed to the words: "In the name of God, amen. I, being of sound mind, do make this my last will and testament."

HOW IS THE TIME FOR GOOD WORK.

The torn wills, the fraudulent wills, the broken wills have recently been made such a spectacle to angels and to men that all over the land successful men are calling in architects and saying to them: "How much would it cost for me to build a picture gallery for our town?" or, "What plans can you draw me out for a concert hall?" or, "I am specially interested in the incurables, and how large a building would accommodate three hundred of such patients?" or, "The Church of God has been a great help to me all my life, and I want you to draw me a plan for a church, commodious, beautiful, well ventilated, and with plenty of windows to let in the light; I want you to get right at work in making out plans of such a building, for, though I am well now, life is uncertain, and before I leave the world I want to see something done that will be an appropriate acknowledgment of the goodness of God to me and mine; how soon can I hear from you?"

In our own city we have many examples of this. What a grandeur of beneficence has our fellow citizen, Mr. Pratt, demonstrated, building educational institutions which will put their hands on the nineteenth century, and the twentieth century, and all the centuries! All honor to such a man! Do not say so when he is dead, say it now. It would be a good thing if some of the eulogies we chisel on tombstones were written on paper in time for the philanthropists to read them while yet they are alive. Less post-mortem praise, and more ante-mortem!

A poor Scotch lad came to America at twelve years of age, and went to Pittsburg. He looked around for work, and became an engineer in a cellar, then rose to become a telegraph messenger boy, then rose to a position in a railroad office, then rose to a place in a telegraph office, then rose to be superintendent of a railroad, then rose till he became an iron and steel manufacturer, then rose until he opened free libraries in his native land, and last month a free library in Allegheny City, and now offers two million dollars for a free library in Pittsburg. This example will be contagious until the earth is revolutionized. How majestic such men in comparison with some I wot of, who amass wealth and clutch it with both hands until death begins to feel for their heart strings, and then they dictate to an attorney a last will and testament, in which they spite some daughter because she married against her father's wish, and fling a few crumbs to God and suffering humanity, as much as to say: "I have kept this surplus property, through all these seven winters, and through all these long years, from a needy and suffering world, and would keep it longer if I could, but as I must give it up, take it, and much good may it do you!" Now we begin to understand the text: "Better is a living dog than a dead lion."

THE DEAD LIONS.

Who would attempt to write the obituary of the dead lions of commerce, the dead lions of law, the dead lions of medicine, the dead lions of social influence? Vast capacity had they and mighty range, and other men in their presence were as powerless as the antelope, heifer or giraffe when from the jungle a Numidian lion springs upon its prey. But they got through with life. They lay down in their magnificent lair. They have made their last bound. [illegible]

My text also means that the condition of the most wretched man alive is better than that of the most favored sinner departed. The chance of these last is gone. Where they are they cannot make any earthly amends available. After Charlemagne was dead he was set in an ornamented sepulcher on a golden throne, and a crown was put on his cold brow, and a scepter in his stiff hand, but that gave him no dominion in the next world. One of the most intensely interesting things I saw last winter in Egypt was Pharaoh of olden times, the very Pharaoh who oppressed the Israelites. The inscription on his sarcophagus, and the writing on his mummy bandages, prove beyond controversy that he was the Pharaoh of Bible times. All the Egyptologists and the explorers agree that it is the old scoundrel himself. Visible are the very teeth with which he gnashed against the Israelitish brickmakers. There are the sockets of the merciless eyes with which he looked upon the overburdened people of God. There is the hair that floated in the breeze off the Red Sea. There are the very lips with which he commanded them to make bricks without straw. Thousands of years afterward, when the wrappings of the mummy were unrolled, old Pharaoh lifted up his arm as if in imploration, but his skinny bones cannot again clutch his shattered scepter. He is a dead lion. And is not any man now living, in the fact that he has opportunity of repentance and salvation, better off than any of those departed ones who, by authority or possessions or influence, were positively leonine, and yet wicked?

A CHANCE TO BE SAVED.

What a thing to congratulate you on is your life! Why, it is worth more than all the gems of the universe kindled into one precious stone. I am alive! What does that mean? Why, it means that I still have all opportunity of being saved myself and helping others to be saved. To be alive! Why, it means that I have yet another chance to correct my past mistakes and make sure work for heaven. Alive, are we? Come, let us celebrate it by new resolutions, new self examination, new consecration and a new career. The smallest and most insignificant today is worth to us more than five hundred yesterdays. Taking advantage of the present, let us get pardon for all the past and security for all the future. Where are our forgiven sins? I don't know. God don't know, either. He says: "Your sins and iniquities will I remember no more."

What encouragement in the text for all Christian workers! Despair of no one's salvation. While there is life there is hope. When in England a young lady asked for a class in a Sunday school, the superintendent said, "Better go out on the street and get your own class." She brought in a ragged and filthy boy. The superintendent gave him good apparel. In a few Sundays he absented himself. Inquiry discovered that in a street fight he had his decent apparel torn off. He was brought in and a second time respectably clad. After a few Sundays he again disappeared, and it was found that he was again ragged and wretched. "Then," said the teacher, "we can do nothing with him." But the superintendent fitted him up again and started him again. After a while the gospel took hold of him and his heart changed. He started for the ministry and became a foreign missionary and on heathen grounds lived, and translated the Scriptures, and preached, until among the most illustrious names of the Church on earth and in heaven is the name of glorious Robert Morrison. Go forth and save the lost, and remember however depraved, however ragged, and however filthy and undone a child is, or a man is, or a woman is, they are worth an effort. I would rather have their opportunity than any that will ever be given to those who lived in magnificent sin and splendid unrighteousness and then wrapped their gorgeous tapestry around them and without a prayer expired. "Better is a living dog than a dead lion."

THE LAST SHALL BE FIRST.

In the great day it will be found that the last shall be first. There are in the grog shops and in the haunts of iniquity today those who will yet be models of holiness and preach Christ to the people. In yonder group of young men who came here with no useful purpose, there is one who will yet live for Christ and perhaps die for Him. In a pulpit stood a stranger preaching, and he said: "The last time I was in this church was fifteen years ago, and the circumstances were peculiar. Three young men had come, expecting to disturb the service, and they had stones in their pockets which they expected to hurl at the preacher. One of the young men referred to refused to take part in the assault, and the others, in disgust at his cowardice, left the building. One of the three was hanged for forgery. Another is in prison, condemned to death for murder. I was the third, but the grace of God saved me." My hearer, give no one up. The case may seem desperate, but the grace of God [illegible] to undertake a hard lift. I proclaim it this day to all the people—Free Grace! Living and dying, be that my theme—Free Grace! Sound it across the continent, sound it across the sea—Free Grace! Spell out those words in flowers, lift them in arches, build them in thrones, roll them in oratorios—Free Grace! That will yet Edenize the earth and people heaven with nations redeemed. Free Grace!

Salvation! Oh, the joyful sound!
'Tis pleasure to our ears,
A sovereign balm for every wound,
A cordial for our fears.

Buried in sorrow and in sin,
At death's dark door we lay;
But we arise by grace divine
To see a heavenly day.

A Washerwoman's Fortune.

There is considerable stir among a number of good ladies, who are now looking about for a washerwoman. It came about in this way: Mrs. Kelly, a woman about 55 years old, living in the rear of George W. Stout's residence, on North Meridian street, has been earning her livelihood by washing. She is a hard working woman, a member of the First Baptist church.

She says that about ten years ago, upon the death of her father, she inherited a piece of property in St. Louis, upon which there was a mortgage of $2,500. For this property she was offered $15,000, which she refused to take, her friends advising her that it was worth more. She got no income from it, but kept on washing, having found a renter, to whom she leased the house and lot for $50 a month, and arranged that all in excess of taxes and repairs was to be applied upon the mortgage.

It was a temptation for her to take $15,000, but she resisted, continued at work, and the other day she received notice that the last payment had been made, and the property, which is in the heart of the city, was free of debt and all her own, being valued at nearly $80,000. Later came news of the death of a brother in California, who left her a fortune of $60,000. It is said she arranged with a St. Louis man, for a fee of $1,000, to go to California and make full settlement; that he returned with $40,000 in approved securities, chiefly United States bonds, but that $20,000 more is coming to her, which will require her personal presence to make proper settlement. The ladies lose a good washerwoman, but Mrs. Kelly gains $100,000.—Indianapolis News.

Some English Marriages.

Of 3,300 brides over fifty years of age who were married last year one secured a youth of twenty, three were accommodated by men of twenty-one, and fourteen others kept their choice of striplings below twenty-five. In one of the last named cases the good lady was forty years older than her partner.—Manchester Courier.

A Teacher's Tact.

Mlle. Bossy, a French head mistress who was recently decorated with the Legion of Honor, treated the dignity which had been conferred on her in a very graceful manner. Addressing her pupils, she said: "My children, the work you sent to the exhibition has been appreciated as it deserved to be. The government, not being able to reward you all, has wished that I should wear this little red ribbon to keep in memory your success. You will see it every day, and if you are ever inclined to relax your efforts it will remind you that you owe it to yourselves to show yourselves ever worthy of your decoration." The children understood the meaning of their teacher's little speech and cheered enthusiastically.—New York Telegram.

For the first time in history the pope has conferred a pontifical decoration on a monarch who does not belong to the Christian faith. The holy father has promoted to the shah the Order of Pius IX and has forwarded to him the insignia, together with an autograph letter in which he thanks Nasr-ed-Deen for the protection and liberty accorded to Catholics in Persia.

The aristocracy of Spain was held to consist of those who traced their lineage back to the time before the Moorish conquest. These people were whiter than those who had been mixed with Moorish blood; the veins upon their white hands were blue, while the blood of the masses, contaminated by the Moorish infusion, showed black upon their hands and faces. So the white Spaniards of old races declared their blood was "blue."

The first capital of the colony of South Carolina was erected on a bluff of the Ashley river, but in 1680 it was abandoned, and a new city founded on Oyster Point, at the junction of the Ashley and Cooper rivers, and named Charles Town, since abbreviated into Charleston, in compliment to the King, Charles II. Annapolis, the capital of Maryland, was so named in honor of Queen Anne, the word meaning "the city of Anne." Cecil, Lord Baltimore, was the person from whom the city of Baltimore received its title.

The hearse was formerly a frame-work for setting candles in, particularly at funeral services, where hearses of great splendor were placed over the bodies of distinguished persons. Portable hearses, for the reception of coffins, and having covers with fittings for candles, were used to carry corpses from the house to the church, where the candles were lighted. They were the origin of the modern vehicle called by this name; and from the fact that these candles were placed at the four corners of the frame arose the modern custom of placing wooden representations of urns fashioned like ancient lamps. Plumes are often substituted to add to the appearance of the conveyance.

HE KNEW HIS MAN.

How "De Doctor O' de Flesh" Sized Up "De Doctor O' de Spirit."

The Swamp Physician Succeeded in Marrying a Relation to the New Preacher—It Took a Man to Run Away with His Wife.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

There lives in a smokey-swamp neighborhood of Georgia an old negro who is known as Dr. Bluke. He is not only a doctor by title, but is a physician by profession.

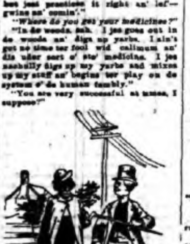
"You do not pretend to say that you practice medicine, do you?" a white man once asked.

"I doan pertend ter say nothin', sah; I jes says it," the old fellow answered. "I doan perten ter practice medicine, but jest practices it right an' lef'—gwine an' comin'."

"Where do you get your medicines?"

"In de woods, sah. I jes goes out in de woods an' digs up yarbs. I ain't got no time ter fool wid calimum an' dis uder sort o' sto' medicine. I jes nachelly digs up my yarbs and mixes up my stuff an' begins ter play on de system o' de human fambly."

"You are very successful at times, I suppose?"



"I DON'T PRETEN' NUFFIN', I JUST CURE."

"Oh, yas, sah; mighty, an' one o' my strong holts is swamp fever."

"You cure that disease, do you?"

"Oh, no, I doan cure it. No pusson kin cure dat er disease; case, sie man, swamp fever doan bit er pusson till his time dun come an' when er pusson's time dun come, w'y, o' cose, nobody kin save him; but you better blebe I skeers de swamp fever mightily when I gits atter it. Make it think dat er wagin an' team is runnin' er way, I does."

The negroes who live in old Bluke's neighborhood have great faith in him, and even Sandy Gray, the new pastor of Oak-Flat Church, stepped down from the pulpit and heartily shook hands with the celebrated physician.

"De doctor o' de sperit wushes ter shake han's wid de doctor o' de flesh," said the preacher.

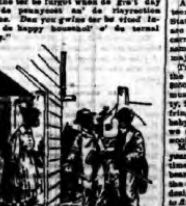
"An' de doctor o' de flesh is monstus proud o' dat high honor, sah," Bluke replied, "an' axes as er mighty high favor dat de sperit doctor will go right home wid him ter dinner, whar he will find de wa'm bread o' welcome, an' de sweet preserves o' honor."

"Bruder Bluke, side I has promised ter go some whar else ter day, yit I kaint keep frum ceptin' yo' invite, case I sorter feel dat de Lawd is er callin' me down dat way."

The doctor seized the preacher's hand and pressed it to his bosom. The preacher gazed affectionately upon the doctor and exhibited many signs of emotion.

"My sweet wife is at home gittin' things ready for us, 'bruder, case I tole her dat I gwine fetch you," said the doctor, as they walked along. "You has no doubt seed er good many sweet ladies, and has hearn o'er mighty sight o' 'em, but de lady you gwine see at my house is de flower dat makes all de uder flowers lose dey 'fume and sweetness. I reckon you been yerin de white folks talk erbout marriage dun been er failure, but wait till you see my home befo' you fixes up yo' opinion."

"Bruder," said the preacher, "you dunno know how much good it do dis ole heart ter yere you talk dat way. It brings up ter my mine de blessed ole days when de spirit o' peace an' love hang over de home o' de man whut blebed in de Lawd. An' you aint gwine ter be furgot when de gre't day o' de pennycost an' de riaysrection come. Dun you gwine ter be vited inter de happy househol' o' de ternal city."



"YANDER IS MY HOUSE."

"I hopes so," the doctor answered with emotion. "I prayes so, fur de Lawd knows dat I'se done my best down yere on dis yeth. Let us turn up dis way, fur yander is my house."

Mrs. Bluke received them at the door, and the warmth with which she welcomed the preacher assured him at once that the doctor's picture had not been overdrawn.

"Now, jes make yose'f puffeckly at home," said the host. "Take dis easy cheer, an' put yo' feet up dar on dat ar stool."

"Bruder, dis yere tender kin'ness, so gentle an' pure, melts me inter er little chile er gin."

"We're all chillun when de heart is touched, bruder," the doctor responded. "Julie," he added, addressing his wife, "we'll take dinner now er soon as you kin get it in."

"Brother Bluke," said the preacher, when the wife had withdrawn from the room, "yo' wife is er mighty purty [illegible] take de sponsibilities o' dis yere house. You ain't been married long, is you?"

"No, not but little while; but Julie is aline shal ter de ercasion. Skuse me fur axin sich er question, but doan you think dat she is pretty?"

"She is er beauty, sah," the preacher responded with more enthusiasm than piety.

"Not only er beauty," the doctor rejoined, "but de best pusson in de worl', an' cook! Law me you jes oughter see dat chile bake er shote. She jes bakes er shote till he gits right up in de pan an' squeals fur joy, he so proud o' hisse'f. Ah, she say dinner is ready. Jes step dis way, please."

The preacher was delighted with the meal, and so charmed was he with the society into which he had fallen that he did not take his departure until late at night.

On the following Saturday, Parson Gray came back again, and, although his visit was unexpected, yet the welcome which he received was warm and cordial. "You must not count yo' visits ter dis house," Dr. Bluke remarked when the guest began to offer an apology for coming again so soon. "You is puffeckly welcome all de time at my house. Eben ef you want sich er bright doctor o' de spirit you would still be welcome, fur you is sich good comp'ny fur Julie, an' lemme tell you dat er man dat doan want his wife ter hab comp'ny ain't de right sort 'o man or ain't got de right sorter wife."

"Bruder," said the preacher, wiping his eyes, "you'll neber know how my po' heart warms toward dis yere househol', an' de Lawd knows dat in my soul I loves you both."

Once, when the doctor returned home, having been over into another neighborhood to poison a patient, he found the preacher and Julie engaged in earnest conversation, but too broad-minded to show evidences of jealousy, he seized Mr. Gray by the hand and said: "All de time welcome at my house, bruder."

One evening upon reaching home, the doctor did not find Julie to welcome him. He walked about the house, seemingly attempting to convince himself that nothing was wrong, but at last, finding that her clothes had been removed, he looked into the "cubbord" to see if he could find anything to eat and remarked: "She is dun gone."

The next day, while the doctor was standing in front of his house, a white man rode up, and stopping at the fence, said:

"Bluke, old man, you have my sympathies."

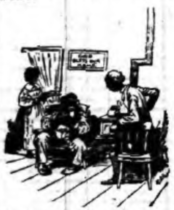
"What is I doin' wid 'em, sah?"

"Don't you know what I mean?"

"No, sah: I kain't say dat I does."

"I mean that I am sorry for you."

"Now, come? Whut you sorry fur me er bout?"



"ALL THE TIME WELCOME AT MY HOUSE, BRUDER."

"Why, I heard that your wife had run away with the new preacher."

"Yas, sah, I reckon you'se yered dat, an' I reckon de preacher thinks dat it is er fack. Er-haw-haw, it tickle me when I think o' dat man. Lemme tell you suthin. I had er sort o' a relation libin' ober in de Blue-Smoke curmunity—er neice or suthin o' dat sort. Mr. Gray he uster preach ober dar, and dis relation o' mine she fell in love wid him, but he neber tuck de slightes' notice o' her. She mout be 'duced ter him one day an' he wouldn't know her de nex'. So I hearn er bout it, an' when de preacher come ober yere I sent fur de chile an' tole her dat ef she wanted him I would see dat she got him. Wall, I tole my wife all er'about it, an' sent her 'way from home, fotch de preacher over one day, I did, an' let on dat Julie was my wife. I knowed dat de scounul gwine ter bite at de bate, er haw, haw. Knowd dat he jes nachully couldn't hep it. Oh, yas; dat gal is dun married ter him by now, ter he-he. Po' fool thinks dat he run er way wid my wife; but lemme tell you, it takes er man ter run away wid her. Dat lady weighs mos' 300 pounds.

A curious fact is that of the seventeen clerks in the Senate of the new State of Washington a majority (nine) are women, and there is but one who carries "Mrs." before her name. The same rule holds good with the House, a majority of the clerks being ladies.

The last venture that we read of in the use of human hair is a fan valued at $250, says Harper's Bazar. Deft fingers must have fashioned this unique curiosity, for what appears to be costly lace fringing the sticks is really human hair; baby curls, like unto fairy thistle-down, we doubt not, yielding to the gentle wooing of summer's softest breezes.

Mr. Herbert Spencer lives all the year round in boarding-houses. Sometimes the clatter and chatter grows unbearable, but the philosopher rises to the occasion. He has two little buttons designed by an artist and made exactly to fit his ears. When the noise grows too great he thrusts them in. No noise can pass those buttons.

The Government of St. Domingo, which claims to have the only original bones of Columbus, is desirous of forwarding them to the United States for use in 1892, provided there be given in return for them twenty thousand dollars cash down and twenty per cent. of the receipts on public exhibition of the same.

A grocer at Mobile wanted forty barrels of Northern apples, and a man in Hamilton, O., sent them to him, and went along to collect the pay. After he had collected it and skipped out it was found that every barrel contained one peck of apples and a fine assortment of turnips, and nobody knows how soon war will break out.

One can fritter away a fortune on hat-pins. Not only are turquoise, amethysts, garnet and amber jewels beautifully cut and mounted, but antique buttons are sought for, simply put on the pin and counted unique and ornamentally ancestral. Fancy paying thirty-five dollars for a hat-pin button of the Elizabethan age, but B. Franklin's philosophy winks pooh.

Baked Cod with Cream Sauce.—Remove the skin and bones from some cold boiled cod; tear it in flakes with two forks; lay on a baking dish which can be sent to the table; season with salt and pepper; pour the sauce over it; dust quickly with bread crumbs; dot with small bits of butter, and brown in a quick oven.

Fairy Rolls.—One cup of butter, two cups of sugar, one cup of milk, and three and two-thirds cups of flour: spread with a knife very thin on buttered sheets of tin, or if you do not have them, invert a baking pan; bake in a moderate oven; cut in squares and roll while hot. If they become hard before they are rolled return to the oven a second. This is very nice to eat with ice-cream.

Minced Veal.—Cut some slices of old veal into small bits, mix with the meat gravy and a little boiling water. Season with pepper, salt, a little walnut catsup, French mustard and pepper sauce; add a grated lemon, and let simmer half an hour; mix a tablespoonful of butter and two of flour together smoothly and stir in with half a teacup of cream; let boil five minutes. Serve hot, garnished with fresh toast.

The progress of stellar photography is well exemplified in the case of the inner satellites of Uranus, which, although they are among the most difficult of all, have, during the past year, been successfully photographed.

In a startling paper to the Vienna Academy of Science, Theodor Gross has doubted that sulphur is an element, believing, for reasons soon to be given, that it is a compound of carbon with some other as yet undetermined elementary substance.

A correspondent of the British Journal of Photography, having found, by a twenty-five minutes' exposure in photographing the moon, that the image travelled nearly the length of his plate during the exposure, suggests that photography might be made the means of measuring the movement of the heavenly bodies.

The use of nitro-glycerine in cases of emergency instead of alcohol is recommended by an English physician. A drop on the tongue rouses a fainting man, and it may restore life in the case of apparent death, as from drowning. It has quickly relieved headache, heart pains and asthma, and strengthened weak pulse in fevers.

Modern chemistry shows that the medical lore of the ancient herbalists had a much sounder basis than had been imagined. In 1597 water cresses were recommended for the cure of scurvy and scrofula. Chemists now say that the cress contains sulphur, phosphorus, iodine and iron—substances that are known to be actual antidotes to scrofula.

Prof. Poe, of Bridgeport, Conn., has drowned and resuscitated a pet rabbit eleven times, and suffocated it also with the fumes of burning charcoal, and restored it to life. The professor uses a pair of artificial lungs. Artificial respirations produce muscular contraction and expansion, forcing oxygen into the lungs and drawing out the deadly gases.

Experiments have demonstrated that the relation between the velocity of a projectile and the resistance offered by the air to its motion differs materially from Newton's theory that the resistance is proportional to the square of the velocity. For velocities which are nearly equal to that of sound in air the proportionate increase of the resistance is much greater than that of the velocity.

For determination of the air temperature at great heights the Berlin Society for Ballooning is going to try a method of Herr Siegsfeld, who uses a thermometer which, by closure of an electric circuit when certain temperatures are reached, gives a light-signal. Small balloons, each containing such a thermometer, will be sent up by night, and the light will affect photographically a so-called "photo-theodolite," while the height then attained will be indicated in a mechanical way.

HOW CAN THE LONG

A line may be a very long one and yet be the shortest between given points. For instance, the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway has over 3,000 miles of road; magnificently equipped and managed. It is one of the greatest railway systems of this country; for the same reasons is the traveler's favorite to all points in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana. It is the only line to Great Falls, the future manufacturing center of the Northwest; to the fertile free lands of the Milk River Valley; and offers a choice of three routes to the Coast. Still it is the shortest line between St. Paul, Minneapolis, Fargo, Winnipeg, Crookston, Moorhead, Casselton, Glyndon, Grafton, Fergus Falls, Wahpeton, Devils Lake and Butte City. It is the best route to Alaska, China and Japan; and the journey to the Pacific coast Vancouver, Tacoma, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco will be remembered as the delight of a life-time once made through the wonderful scenery of the Manitoba-Pacific Route. To fish and hunt; to view the magnificence of nature; to revive the spirit; restore the body; to realize the dreams of the home-seeker, the gold-seeker, the toiler, or the capitalist, visit the country reached by the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway. Why, Mary, how your baby cries!

Yes, he has colic again.

Why don't you give him Dr. Taylor's Soothing Syrup?

Is that good?

Yes, for Pains, Colds, Coughs, &c., it is excellent for either young or old. Of the many kinds of medicines I have used in my family I have found none to equal it.

Thank you, Jane, I will try it. Margaret Ann, go as quick as you can to [illegible], or [illegible]'s Drug Store, and get a bottle of Dr. Taylor's Soothing Syrup.

A METRICAL MEDLEY.

Editorial Etiquette.

When the editor is writing do not bother him with talk;
If you haven't time to take a seat, go out and take a walk;
Do not rudely lean behind him, of his subject making note,
Nor stand and view your visage in the shoulder of his coat.
—Life.

The Man Who Talks Shop.

We all have grown so very used
To teasing, loathsome bores—
The men who whistle in the house,
And never close the doors;
Who will go out between the acts
To take a little drop—
We scarcely ought to mind the man
Who's always talking shop.

A nuisance? Did you ever have
A fly buzz round your head,
Alighting on it now and then,
Till you would fain be dead?
You have? Aha! You swear to think
Of it. Hush up! Now stop;
He's nothing when compared to him
Who's always talking shop.

Now, whether he's an author, or
An artist, or a poet,
He is the man who always seems
To want us all to know it;
He likes to throw in business words
Till mad you'd like to hop.
He will not stop, that awful man
Who's always talking shop.

Some day a cyclone will swoop down,
A blizzard will descend,
And scoop him up to give the wretch
A very proper end;
Or else some vengeful mortal's gun
Will, with a sounding pop,
Put daylight through that fiend of fiends
Who's always talking shop.
—Lawrence American.

Loss and Gain.

[illegible] loss, and almost think
[illegible] and death a boon
[illegible] a day or hour too soon;
Or wish that we of Lethe's dark might drink
And in oblivion all life's troubles sink
And so, because ourselves are out of tune
And not harmonious as a brook in June,
We tempt the breakers at death's brink.
What though our lives were strewn with richest gain,
And we should prosper through each day and year,
Yes, never know a moment's care or pain,
Or realize what 'tis to doubt and fear,
Yet would such gain be loss and all in vain,
Though life were spent without a single tear.
—Alexander Macaulay, in Christian at Work.

Lillie's Lullaby.

Weary of play,
My Lillie is dozing;
Slowly we sway
In the low rocking chair.
Hair all aglow,
My fond arms enclosing,
Swing to and fro
In the fire-light glare.

Long shadows fall,
The twilight is going;
Over us all
Comes this feeling of rest.
Here on my arm,
The warm light aglowing—
Safe out of harm
Nestle close to my breast.

Sleep until dawn,
May the dear God above thee
When darkness is gone,
Bring thee safe to the light.
Kiss me, my dear,
I always will love thee;
Sleep without fear,
Little dreamer! good night!
—Judd Lyman, in Chicago Journal.

Sleepin' Time.

Night-owl can't be day bird too,
True for me an' true for you;
Can't escape no pain or sorrer—
Natur's boun' ter overtake,
An' she'll ketch you if you stay
Wake fer sleep bofe night and day.

Owls was borned to wink at night;
Man was made for natur's light.
Owls may hoot befo' de dawn,
Mornin' comes an' den he's gone—
Knows he's gotter get his res'
If his wuck's to be ther bes'.

Wait twell you get old lak' me,
Den you'll see, jes lak' I see,
How we gotter get our sleep—
Elsewise we'll hab cause to weep.
True fer me an' true fer you,
Night-owl can't be day bird too.
—Hugh Cochrane, in Toronto Globe.

The Good Old Way.

There was a nice young fellow
As ever you did see;
Likewise a nice young lady,
And just as good as he.
And so they chanced one day to meet,
When they were feeling gay,
And so of course they fell in love,
The good old way.

He feared he should not get her,
So he was feeling blue;
And she was in consumption fits
For fear he would not, too.
But such thin trouble did not last,
I am real glad to say;
They soon were married firm and fast,
The good old way.

Then were the gossips watching,
The tattle-bags perplexed,
And Mrs. Grundy itching
For what was coming next.
Some thought they'd have a family;
Some blockheads answered: Nay.
They raised their children—yes, they did—
The good old way.

They lived and helped each other,
As they agreed before;
And so God's blessing came to them,
In basket and in store.
They knew enough to save a cent,
Safe, for a rainy day;
And peacefully through life they went,
The good old way.

They lived long, useful, Christian lives,
In all good, honest pride,
Till old Time banged them with his scythe,
And then, of course, they died.
They had great, splendid funerals,
The best words folks could say;
Then side by side we buried them,
The good old way.

This is a song and sermon, too,
And true memorial rhyme;
And folks who live so just and true
Are blessed all the time.
A splendid, loving, useful life,
Such always find it pay.
Who walk like them, my kith and kin,
The good old way.

Their graves are green, they may be seen,
Their monuments I see;
And memory loves them back again
For all their love to me.
Love rules the world with power and might,
Love guides us home to stay,
And Heaven shines bright to kindly light
The good old way.
—Brooklyn Eagle.

His Revenge.

The girl that I love has gone back on me quite;
It is hard thus my hopes should miscarry,
But I'm told in a note which came to me last night,
That another man she is to marry.

Ruddy-haired was my love, and I thought I could trust
One with looks which should make her warm-hearted,
But she's made her decree and accept it I must;
I have tried to be brave since we parted.

And though to my happiness this is the end,
Though my hopes and my fancies are dead ones,
A flower-piece superb to her wedding I'll send,
A horse in white roses on red ones.
—Merchant Traveler.

DINING-ROOM DAINTIES.

A SIMPLE dish of dessert, made of bananas, is prepared by slicing them and serving with cream and fine sugar. Whipped cream would be still better. For banana fritters stir sliced bananas into a good light batter and drop in by the spoonful into boiling lard.

OYSTERS may be broiled, instead of fried, by rolling them in cracker crumbs and dipping them in melted butter, and then in cornmeal, or fine bread crumbs. Lay them in a wire broiler and cook quickly over a hot fire. They should be seasoned and served at once.

CHOCOLATE BISCUITS.—Whisk the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth, mix in lightly two and a half ounces of grated chocolate, one and a half ounces of fine flour and one ounce of castor sugar. Drop the mixture in small heaps on a sheet of paper and bake in a brisk oven.

COCOANUT CREAM.—Prepare candy same as for plain cream candy. Pour boiling water over a teacupful of dried, or desiccated cocoanut, drain off and stir the cocoanut into the boiling candy when about half done. When done stir to a cream and pour out into a well-oiled mold, and cut into bars when cold.

IT has just been held by the highest Russian court that the civil rights awarded to Jews under certain conditions in Russia do not extend to their wives and children, and that a deed recently made by a Jew to his wife was illegal, she not being able to hold land.

NOT ALWAYS LOST.

Ex-Convicts Who Reform and Lead Respectable Lives.

Views of New York's Leading Criminal Lawyer, and Others Who Have Dealings With Law Breakers, Concerning Professional Criminals.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

The following opinions from men who have had daily dealings with professional law breakers for years goes somewhat to contradict the assertions that professional criminals never, except while in prison, give up their bad ways.

New York's Celebrated Criminal Lawyer.

The desire of the man who has once been a criminal to keep from the public the knowledge of his former depredation suppresses many affecting stories of genuine reformation, which show that no man's case is hopeless till he dies.

Years ago in New York Eddy Dunphy, professional pickpocket and perfect adept at his trade, after spending some years in state prison, determined to reform. He obtained employment as a detective at the Hotel Brighton and there earned laurels of approval from his employers and thanks from guests whose persons and property he protected. He is dead now, but he has left a good name behind him. He was faithful, honest and fearless to the end. There is another whose name I will not mention as he is laboring and living close to this office where I write. He was a pickpocket who served many years of imprisonment. After his last release he said to the lawyer who had defended him:

"You know that I have gained hundreds of thousands of dollars by picking pockets. When I was in funds, I was able to escape, but whenever I was poor, I was arrested. Now I am released, a discharged convict, without a cent to my name. I want to begin all over again. What ought I to do?"

The lawyer said: "You have luxurious tastes and have been used to spending money so lavishly that you could not be contented with $15 a week."

"Indeed I would," said the convict.

"I will try you," said the lawyer. And he did try him and the ex-convict is now a man grown gray in honorable service; thoroughly trustworthy and honest, and highly respected.

I know a professional burglar—and a very fortunate one at that. He escaped arrest again and again. The produce of his burglaries he used to gamble and dissipate. At last he was caught, convicted and imprisoned. When he got out he said:

"Mr. Howe, I have come to the conclusion that what the chaplains say is about the truth. The honest way is the best, and I am going to try to reform. But I have not a dollar, and I don't know how I am going to live."

A newspaper reporter was present and heard what the ex-convict said. I suppress his name because I know he would desire it.

"I will start a subscription for you," he said.

He did start the subscription, heading it with $5. This man was a watchmaker by trade. He has now a jewelry and watchmaker's store on Third avenue, owns the house in which he lives, goes to church regularly and is, I think, a religious man. These are two well known instances; I might name many others.

The idea of perpetual imprisonment for professional criminals is barbarous, and I would not consider it for a moment. I can never bring myself to believe in the depravity of any man. To my mind society should be paternal and show to its erring children such mercy as we ourselves desire from a higher power. What you call a professional criminal can only be judged by his acts up to the present time. Supposing he is 30 years of age and has made his living as a thief ever since he was 15, would you say to him:

"You are a professional criminal! You shall be confined in State prison all the rest of the time that God allows you to dwell on this earth."

What right has society to limit God's mercy and power? As the law stands now, the punishment for many offenses is practically imprisonment for life, and I think it is wrong and barbarous, and worthy only of the dark ages.

WILLIAM F. HOWE.

From a Reformer's Standpoint.

In a Western monastery of one of the most prominent orders of Roman Catholic Monks, there is a young man of 32 years who was received into full brotherhood about three years ago, after a long period of trial. He is an ardently religious young man, stern, ascetic and severe to himself, with charity for mankind in general; in fact, as admirable a character as a monastery could produce. Yet if you look on the right page of Inspector Byrnes' book about criminals, you will find the photograph and police record of [illegible] ——. He was a well known sneak thief up to ten years ago, when he sought help to lead a new life. A situation was procured for him in a large factory. He worked hard and rose steadily. He was an ardent Catholic, and determined to enter a monastery, and there he is now.

The publication of Byrnes' book caused great consternation in a happy Harlem home, for the wife recognized in one of the photographs the man who married her four years before. The record that accompanied the photograph spoke of him as an expert sneak thief and window smasher. In 1880 this man disappeared from the view of the detectives. He was reformed through the help and influence of friends, and has been leading a perfectly honest life. Another whom the book hit pretty hard was a woman of 30 years, whose record is that of a pickpocket and shoplifter. She was a most unscrupulous and dangerous woman, but is now entirely reformed and has been since 1879. She was at last accounts in the service of a wealthy family in uptown New York, a hardworking and thrifty domestic, who has saved money and uses it well. In May, 1886, we got sentence suspended on a boy aged 18. He was a professional criminal who had been arrested seven or eight times in the west, being though so young, a very daring and accomplished pickpocket. He is now in one of the best known schools of this country, studying to be a home missionary. The superintendent tells me that he is the most spiritually-minded young man among the students. His letters confirm this judgment to my mind. I know of a counterfeiter who has opened a shop in the northern part of the State, and is highly respected in the city where he lives.

W. M. F. ROUND.

District Attorney Ridgway.

Yes, there are some cases of reform among professional criminals. I know several who are thoroughly straightened up. They are engaged in legitimate business and their past is buried. One whom I have in mind now has been leading a respectable life for six years and another nearly five years. They have families and good homes and their neighbors know nothing of their past.

I do not believe that the supervision of the police prevents men from reforming. I don't believe that the police ever interfere with a man who is trying to lead an honest life. I am opposed to the idea of locking habitual criminals up for life. One reason I have for my opposition is that I consider it extreme and unnecessary cruelty to the criminal and then, on the other hand, if there was a general law which permitted or ordered the locking up for life of such who were adjudged "professional criminals" the liberty of a man would hang by a very slender thread and much evil might result.

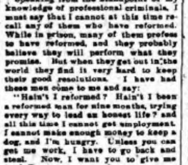
What would constitute a professional criminal? That question might well puzzle authorities. Anyhow it would be hard, if, after the vilest criminal had returned, he should be chased back to his evil ways by the conservators of public morality. The law gives a fair chance for reform now. I would not like to see that taken away. The reformation of men who have become habitual criminals is almost too hopeless a task to view seriously. But good work may be done by the authorities in stopping the supply, and this is a matter where a great knowledge of human nature is necessary to form right judgements. Judges cannot be too careful in dealing with first offenders.

JAMES W. RIDGWAY,
District Attorney, Kings County, N. Y.

From Brooklyn's Chief of Police.

Speaking from the standpoint of my knowledge of professional criminals, I must say that I cannot at this time recall any of them who have reformed. While in prison, many of them profess to have reformed, and they probably believe they will perform what they promise. But when they get out in the world they find it very hard to keep their good resolutions. I have had these men come to me and say:

"Hain't I reformed? Hain't I been a reformed man for nine months, trying every way to lead an honest life? and all this time I cannot get employment. I cannot make enough money to keep a dog, and I'm hungry. Unless you can get me work, I have to go back and steal. Now, I want you to give me work."



"HONEST MEN WOULDN'T WORK WITH HIM."

If these men who make an honest effort to reform and live respectably had the same facilities which ordinary men enjoy, they would probably get along well enough; but society is against them. Avenues of industry are all closed in their faces, or if one of them does get employment anywhere, one of his old prison companions is as likely as not to come along and expose him. I have had business men come to me and say:

"I have in my employ a man who was a celebrated thief. I only discovered this a day or two ago. I have been trusting him to go to the bank with money for me, and he has been faithful in every instance. He suits me fairly, and I don't think I could replace him as satisfactorily. His conduct during the past year, while he has been in my employ, has been unexceptionable. Now, what had I better do?"

My practice in such cases has been to direct the merchant to follow the prudence of his own judgment in the matter. There was a case of that kind not long ago. A man in business on Fulton street came to me, and told me that he had in his employ a man who had served several terms in jail for theft. The man was young, and appeared to have reformed. He traveled about with the firm's cash at times and never went astray. Sometimes he had $25, sometimes $50 of the firm's money in his possession. In all ways other than his bad record, which he seemed to have left behind him, the man appeared to have reformed. I told this man to use his own judgment, and he concluded to keep the young man on and take risks. He did, and about a month later $500 of the firm's money fell in the way of the reformed young man. He never came back; the temptation was too much for him. Still, I do not put that young man forward to illustrate the uselessness of trusting to fellows who have served terms of imprisonment.

No matter how bad a man may be, he ought to have a chance to reform and live honestly.

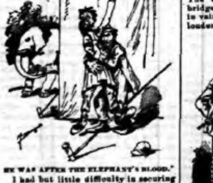
THE CIRCUS DIDN'T PAY

The Elephant Got Himself Disliked and Started the Trouble.

Then a Rival Circus Borrowed $150 of the Manager—He Had to Throw Up the Business and Hire Out On a Farm.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

For some time I had been lamenting the disappearance of the old wagon road circus. The mellow light of recollection threw a halo of fond endearment about the circus that formed in procession just without the village and then came triumphantly marching up the hill. I had heard so many men speak of this—had heard such universal denunciation of the great railroad show with its three rings and new-fangled clowns—that I saw a fortune in the revival of the old-time circus. I sold my store, mill and real estate, all at a sacrifice, but what I lost in realization of full value I gained in hopes that flew high in an atmosphere of determination to be a king whose royal colors should awaken a gladsome shout in many a sequestered community.



"HE WAS AFTER THE ELEPHANT'S BLOOD."

I had but little difficulty in securing actors, the girl to ride on a broad pad, the old-joke clown and the fellow to swing on a rope, but my ability as an organizer was somewhat strained when I turned my attention to the collection of animals; and, as the season was advancing, I was compelled to content myself with a lame bear, a one-eyed wolf and a young elephant that had seen a great deal of rough service.

We made our first break in the southwestern part of Missouri, in a community where a circus had not been seen since the early days of Dan Rice; and as we marched in triumphal review in front of the blacksmith's shop and the magistrate's office, I, standing in the band wagon and exclaiming that a free exhibition would be immediately given at the big tent, knew that the mellow light of recollection threw a halo about me. There was the freckled face boy that had saved up his dimes from the commercial transaction of selling stolen eggs; there was the family that had come fifty miles in a wagon; there was the town marshal with his great swagger of authority, and there was the solemn-face man, who would not have poked his nose outside the door but for the fact that he had to bring the children to see the procession.

Just as we were making ready to begin the ring performance, and when I was about to appear as clown, our regular hand having fallen off the wagon and hurt himself, one of the men came running into the dressing-room and excitedly informed me that a local bully had gotten into a fight with the elephant. I hastened into the "menagerie," and there found several of my men holding a tough-looking fellow. He grasped a long knife with one hand and was struggling desperately. The elephant stood a short distance away, straining his chain and throwing clods of dirt in the air.

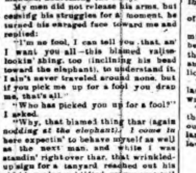
"What is the matter here?" I demanded, addressing the bully.

My men did not release his arms, but ceasing his struggles for a moment, he turned his enraged face toward me and replied:

"I'm no fool, I can tell you that, an' I want you all—this blamed valise-lookin' thing, too (inclining his head toward the elephant), to understand it. I ain't never traveled around none, but if you pick me up for a fool you drap me, that's all."

"Who has picked you up for a fool?" I asked.

"Why, that blamed thing thar (again nodding at the elephant). I come in here expectin' to behave myself as well as the next man, and while I was standin' right over thar, that wrinkled-up sign for a tanyard reached out his old blow-pipe an' lifted up my coat-tail and wiped his mouth on it. My name



A DARKEY THAT WOULDN'T BE IMPOSED UPON.

ain't Bob Hackett for nothin', I can tell you that. I bought this coat, I did, an' when a blamed thing that has wore all the hair offen hisself, slidin' round the country, comes an' without any cause whatever wipes his mouth on the tails that of, w'y he's jest got me to whip. I don't want nobody to come whipin' his slobber on me, an' I won't have it, nuther."

He began to struggle again, and it was as much as the men could do to hold him. "I was goin' to a pic-nic tomorrow," he raved, "but now this coat's ruined by that slobberin' slouch. Bet a hundred dollars I cut off his blow-pipe."

He broke loose, lunged at the elephant and cut at him with the knife. The elephant understood the situation. He seized the fellow and threw him through the tent. Just as I turned away I heard some one exclaim:

"Whuts de matter wid you? Ain't you got no biznez ter tend ter sides flingin' dirt on er man's close?"

Looking round I saw an old negro brushing his coat. "What is the matter?" I asked.

"Er good 'eal de matter, sah. Come in yere tendin' ter my own bizness an' want pesterin' nobody an' de fust thing I knowed dat trifin' scounnl (pointing to the elephant) come er flingin' dirt on my cloze. Wanter war deze garmens to er funul ter mor' an' I ain't likin' it er tall when dat scounnl comes er flingin' his trash on 'em. I doan know him er tall, an' he ain't got no right ter come round me wid sicher liberty. W'y, sah, I wouldn't 'low er ole frien' ter come roun er dirtyin' up deze garmens, much less er honory a lookin' stranger ez he is. You make him habe hisse'f ur I gwine hurt him, an' w'en I hurt him I hurt him bad. I kin tell you dat."

During the whole time of the afternoon performance I could see that trouble was brewing, and just as we were getting ready for the evening exhibition the town marshal came to me, and drawing me to one side, said:

"Now, I want you to understand that I am your friend."

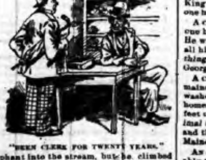
"All right, what is the matter?"

"Wall, now you must know that your elephant has rendered himself mighty unpopular in our city."

"Yes, I cannot help but see that he has made several enemies."

"Ah, ha, an' that is what brings me to you. Now Bob Hackett is a mighty full-blooded feller, an' that elephant done wrong when he wiped his mouth on the tails of Bob's coat. That wan't a polite trick. Can'n—wan't gentlemanly no way you can fix it; an' agin that nigger wan't treated right. Elephant had no right to throw dirt on his clothes. Now, the upshot of the whole thing is this: Bob's friends and the nigger's friends air gittin' together an' they air goin' to mob that elephant, an' if you want to keep him w'y you had better pull up your shebang right now an' pull out as fast as you can."

I couldn't afford to lose that elephant. I could have squeezed through without the wolf and possibly could have worried along without the bear, but the loss of the elephant would have fatally crippled my menagerie; so, I decided to take up the tent and quietly steal away. The night was dark and we succeeded in starting off unobserved, but had not gone more than a mile before we heard a shout that told us too plainly that we were pursued. We hastened onward as fast as we could, and were greatly encouraged until we came to a creek. Then a difficulty arose. The elephant refused to cross the bridge. We tried to shove him on but in vain. The shouts of the mob grew louder and louder. We shoved the elephant into the stream, but he climbed out on the same side. The mob drew nearer. At last we got the elephant on the bridge. The frail thing broke down and all of us went into the water. The mob was upon us. The rascals shot the elephant. We proceeded on our journey with the lame bear and the one-eyed wolf.



"BEEN CLERK FOR TWENTY YEARS."

The next day I learned that we had a rival in the field. Jack Brock, an old showman had whipped round and had stolen our territory. We were billed to appear at Green Briar, and I knew that if we made a good impression at that place, we should soon be able to get another elephant. One day, when we were within twenty miles of Green Briar, a man rode up to me and said:

"I want to see you on a matter of business. Jack Brock's circus is billed to appear in our town—Green Briar. It is the best circus town in the country, but it is necessary for you to get there first if you want to do anything. Now, I am the clerk of that county, and am inclined to favor you. Give me one hundred and fifty dollars and I will promise not to grant Brock any license. By this means you will have everything your own way."

This was my opportunity. I gave him the money, and feeling secure, gave a performance at a little place a few miles from Green Briar. When I did reach that great commercial center I found that Brock had just left and that he had taken nearly every dollar out of the town. I hastened to the clerk's office. The rascal had deceived me.

"I wish to see the clerk," said I, to a man whom I found in the courthouse.

"I am the clerk," he answered.

"Ain't there some mistake about that?"

"Reckon not. I have been the clerk of this county for twenty years."

"Why, I met a man about twenty miles from here and he declared that he was the clerk of this county, and that if I would give him one hundred and fifty dollars he would not grant license to Brock."

"Yes, I heared some of the boys laughing about that. The man you met was Jack Brock."

That night the bear died. I killed the wolf the next morning, and hired out to a farmer. There is no particular halo about my head. I have no love whatever for the old wagon show.

THE number of books published in this country last year was less by over six hundred than during 1888. In the departments of fiction and law, however, there was an increase in 1889 over the previous year. In England also there was a decrease of over five hundred in the number of books published in 1889 as compared with those of 1888.

THE names of Dickens and Thackeray pair as naturally in one's mind as do those of Pope and Dryden or of Schiller and Goethe. Yet it is not generally known that Thackeray first met Dickens where the former proposed to become the illustrator of his earliest book, a proposition which was, presumably, declined, as Cruikshank was the artist who materialized Boz's keen humor.

HERE is an odd extract from the Edinburgh Review of 1864: "Mr. Browning, in truth, more nearly resembles the American writers Emerson, Wendell Holmes and Bigelow, than at any poet of our country. Tried by the standards which have hitherto been supposed to uphold the force and beauty of the English tongue and of English literature, his works are deficient in the qualities we should desire to find in them. We do not believe that they will survive, except as a curiosity and a puzzle."

A FRENCH electrical journal estimates that the total length of the telegraph wires (including submarine cables) of the world in use at the present time exceeds half a million miles. Four-fifths of the land wires are in Europe and America. All the submarine cables together give a length of 80,000 miles. The same journal asserts that the United States has a far larger number of subscribers to the telephonic exchange service than any other country.

A THOUGHT.

Spain and Italy ranked high as maritime powers in the time of Christopher Columbus.

To one he owed nativity and to the other the practical means of prosecuting his great adventure, the laudable exploit of his life.

These two nations still possess large naval and commercial fleets, and have determined to see them fitly represented in honoring in 1892 the grand year of the century 1492.

A splendid and well adopted idea.

How appropriate it would be for Congress to order the naval forces of the United States to join those of Spain and Italy in sailing over the olden route of unknown seas from Palos to Bahamas, and then for all the vessels to assemble within the magnificent harbor of New York, and there with joyous accord, thundering after salute, answering salute, and the starry [illegible] proudly waving in unison with the representative flags of ancient Castile and Genoa, worthily celebrate the memory of the illustrious Admiral who gave to history and civilization a New World.

That would be a hundred-fold more glorious and impressive than the holding of any kind of Fair exhibit.

Because it would in reality demonstrate the real character of a Columbian anniversary and do it in the right place.

POLITICAL CORRUPTION.

Our country at the present day is disgraced and jeopardized by corrupt politics.

That is not an idle assertion, but a positive fact, and the degrading evil finds origin within both the Democratic and Republican parties.

It is no uncommon event to hear an honest man declare—"I am disgusted with politicians and political corruption." For such expressed antipathy there certainly exists abundant cause.

Fraudulent stuffing of ballot boxes and the tendering of false returns, combined with the dishonest raising and expenditure of money in the procurement of nominations and votes, if not effectually stopped, will surely convert elections into a mockery of the popular will.

Then, again, the manipulation of legislation for the exclusive benefit of schemers and place-hunters, and the pocketing of plunder by officials of high and low degree, is fast making public office the resort of political thieves.

Every American citizen has the legal and moral right to entertain and express his own political opinions, and we believe the great majority of both Democrats and Republicans are thoroughly honest and desire honesty in the choice of and conduct of public servants.

It is for such citizens to join together and with determined might crush to everlasting death the viper of Political Corruption.

What a finale and misnomer it would be to hold a rural show on the bank of Lake Michigan in 1893, one year behind time, and call it a World's Fair, commemorative of the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus, a sailor of the briny sea.

When more genuine statesmen and practical men from the ranks of business, mechanical and labor are sent to Congress, in place of windy political lawyers and tricksters, vast and substantial will be the growth of this country not only in material prosperity, but in honest [illegible].

The Democratic party never had a truer representative than ex-President Cleveland, because he carried into practice that noble declaration of his—"public office should be a sacred trust." He made it such. Would that all officials were of the Grover Cleveland stripe!

The man who so undervalues the privilege and dignity of American citizenship as to barter his vote for money, or any other sordid consideration, ought to be forever disfranchised, and the political scoundrel, the term is not a whit too harsh, who offers such temptation and pays the corrupting price, should, in addition to disfranchisement, be given a lengthy sojourn within prison walls.

They Had Good Sense.

The following item in reference to the Crescent League's new ball players, is taken from the Rahway National Democrat of Friday:

"A. H. Chamberlain, manager of the Rahways last season, has retired from active participation in base ball owing to pressure of business. The insinuation in a local contemporary last week that he used his influence to have some of last year's team sign with Plainfield, was either actuated by spite or ignorance of the facts. The real 'milk in the cocoanut' in the ball cocoanut was cash. The men were offered more money than they could get in Rahway, and they very sensibly accepted the offers."

In Favor of the Liquor Drinker.

There was a lively informal debate at Reform Hall, Thursday, it being the regular monthly meeting of the Reform Club. After the disposal of routine business, the deferred question—"Which parties do the most harm in the world, those who sell or those who drink beer and whiskey"—was taken up for discussion and drew forth varied remarks from a large number of gentlemen present. The vote of the meeting was largely against the liquor seller. "If the selling and drinking of intoxicating beverages lead to the commission of crime, should the liquor traffic have the sanction of law," was introduced as the subject for debate next Thursday evening.

President Harper announced that the Rev George M. Angleman, Jr., of Kansas, will speak in Reform Hall on Sunday evening next.

EASTER-TIDE.

HOW THE DAY WAS OBSERVED IN THE CHURCHES.

A Profusion of Flowers in All of the Pulpits—Special Music and Sermons in Commemoration of the Resurrection

[From "The Daily Press" of April 7.]

Easter Day in the Christian churches becomes more and more every year a time for the most joyous of the religious festivals. Music and flowers are added to the Bible lessons of the day, until the greater part of the services consist of grand harmonies rendered by full choirs and choruses of a highly cultivated order. Even the non-ritualists are joining in the Easter festival services, and hymns of joyous thanksgiving are now heard there also, joined in by congregation and Sabbath school.

Easter Day, which is observed throughout the known World, and which commemorates Christ's resurrection from the dead, was observed in this city, yesterday, with great solemnity and devotion. In early years the church ornamentations were principally candles, and the common salute between Christians was a kiss and the words "Christ is Risen," to which the response was made: "He is Risen Indeed." This custom has practically been done away with, and the principal altar ornamentations now are flowers.

In some of the churches the floral decorations were not so elaborate as in former years, but all were neat and attractive and showed good taste in their arrangement. The day was ushered in with bright sun shiny weather, and so it continued until nightfall. In all of the churches the attendance at the morning service was unusually large, and in the evening, where services were held, the churches were literally packed.

The programmes arranged for the special Easter music, by the various church choirs, were lengthy and elaborate, showing that both care and good judgment had been used in their preparation.

TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

At the morning service the pastor, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, preached an able sermon to a large congregation on the Resurrection of Christ, his text being "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept."—I Cor 15-20.

The singing by the choir:

Soprano—Miss Emma Ward.
Alto—Mrs. E. F. [illegible]
Tenor—Mr. [illegible] Stevens.
Bass—Mr. [illegible]

was thoroughly enjoyable and gave evidence of the careful training they had received under the direction of Mr. A. L. Titsworth, choir director. The following was the musical programme:

Organ—Festal Prelude in G	Samuel T. Strang
Old Hundred—Praise God	G. Franc
Anthem—Te Deum in E flat	Thos. S. Lloyd
Response—Lord have mercy	[illegible]
Gloria—Glory be to the Father	W. G. Williams
Hymn	This is the day the Lord hath made
Hymn	The morning purples all the sky
Offertory—Christ our Passover	F. Schilling
Anthem—See Now the Altar	J. Faure
Hymn	Christ the Lord is risen today
Organ—Festal March in F	George Calkin

The floral display of blooming potted plants and cut flowers was really beautiful, the result of much labor on the part of Mrs. C Frank French, assisted by Miss Minnie Arnold.

The evening service was also largely attended and was under the management of the Sunday School of the church, the Superintendent, Mr E. E. Anthony, presiding. The exercises consisted of the following musical programme, an address by Mr C. D. Baxter and one by the pastor, and also a recitation by ten little girls entitled, "The Lilies," and a recitation by little Miss May Ryerson:

Organ [illegible] in C major	Arthur Carnall
Anthem—Christ our Passover	Thos. S. Lloyd
Hymn 190	Choir and school
Hymn 202
Offertory—As it began to Dawn	Chas. Vincent
Anthem	The Saviour hath risen
Old Hundred—Praise God	G. Franc
Organ Postlude in C	E. H. [illegible]

The organist at both services was Mr. Arthur L. Titsworth, and his manipulation of the keys was highly creditable.

EASTER AT HOLY CROSS.

The Easter services at the Church of the Holy Cross yesterday morning were beautiful and impressive, and the congregation present more than filled the edifice. The chancel, altar and font were, as usual, elaborately, but tastefully decorated with a profusion of flowers and budding plants. Two immense banks of daisies, callas and carnations, reaching nearly to the top of the brazen candelabra, were placed on either side of the altar and the pulpit and lectern were ornamented by handsome floral memorials.

The Rector, the Rev. T. Logan Murphy preached a remarkably strong sermon on the subject of the "Resurrection and the Immortality of the Soul." The choral programme, which was both appropriate and attractive, was well rendered by the vested choir of men and boys and reflected much credit upon their leader and instructor, Mr. Charles W. Kellogg and Mr. E. C. Hubbard, late of All Saint's church, New York, who presided at the organ. The offering which was taken up for parish expenses amounted to over $400.

In the afternoon the annual Easter festival of the Sunday school took place and the attendance in the church was again greater than the capacity. The services included the singing of carols and addresses by the Rector and Superintendent, H. K. Phillips. Prizes were awarded to the Misses Leontine Meade, Helen Phillips and Maggie M. Hurlburt and Master Howard Terrill and Harry Weitmann. The annual parish meeting for the election of officers for the coming year, will be held this evening in the church.

AT GRACE CHURCH.

Long before the time for service at Grace church yesterday the edifice was filled to overflowing and the chorus had to be placed in the aisle to accommodate late comers. The church and altar were prettily decorated with Easter lilies. Mrs. Wm A. Freeman presided at the organ in an efficient manner. At the appointed time the white robed choir consisting of about thirty voices entered at the right of the chancel, singing a joyous Easter processional. The order of the music was as follows:

Processional—"Angels Roll the Stone Away"	P. F. [illegible]
Anthem—"Christ Our Passover"	Chappell
Gloria	Chappell
[illegible]	B. Tours
Anthem—"They have taken away my Lord"	J. Stainer
Kyrie Eleison	Tours
Gloria Tibi	Barrett
Hymn—"Jesus Christ is Risen Today"
Offertory—"As it began to Dawn"	Vincent
Sanctus	Gounod
Communion Hymn	[illegible]
Gloria in Excelsis	[illegible]
Nunc Dimittis
Recessional Hymn 99—"The Day of Resurrection."

The Rector, the Rev. E. M. Rodman preached an appropriate sermon from the text, "I laid Me down and slept and rose up again, for the Lord sustained Me." The solos by Masters Fred. Freeman, soprano, and Arthur Freeman, basso, were exceptionally well rendered.

In the evening the children held their Easter service. One of the features of the service was a wooden frame, representing the cups of the [illegible] which occupied a prominent position in the centre of the chancel. On the frame were fastened flowered letters, each class ascribing a letter with an appropriate verse, the whole when completed spelling out the sentence, "The Lord of Life is Risen." The offerings of the morning were devoted to the building fund, and over three hundred dollars was added to the treasury for this project.

The decorations in this church which consisted mainly of annunciation and Easter lilies, some of which came from Bermuda, were artistically arranged by Mrs. F. O. Herring, assisted by the members constituting the altar committee.

PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH.

A rather larger audience than usual was present at Park Avenue Baptist church. Flowers have been an important feature in the Easter service in this church for years, and this year formed no exception. A goodly display of potted plants adorned the pulpit platform, many of them in bloom, but it was not quite so extensive or so brilliant as on some former occasions.

The pulpit was occupied by the Pastor, the Rev Asa Reed Dilts, who took his text from John 1, 49—"Rabbi, thou art the son of God", and endeavored to show that what Nathaniel so tersely expressed with so much confidence at his very first interview with the great Teacher, was, after the lapse of more than eighteen centuries, still indeed the very truth.

To sustain his position the preacher touched but slightly upon the sayings of Christ himself as to his divine origin, the testimony of the apostles or the harmony existing between the teachings and the life of Christ; but relied chiefly upon the extraordinary events which have transpired in connection with Christ and the wonderful works performed by him while upon the earth which demonstrated his divinity beyond a cavil, touching briefly upon all the important miracles performed by the Lord during His brief earthly ministry. He closed the recital with the most wonderful and important of all miraculous events, the resurrection—the anniversary of which joyful occasion, they had met to celebrate that morning.

Special Easter music was rendered by the choir, portions of which it was quite apparent, had hardly been fully grasped by some of the vocalists.

The floral display was under the auspices of the Y. P. S. of C. E. of said church, and at the close of the service one of the blooming plants, which had helped to make the occasion bright and joyous, was kindly sent by the committee in charge to each member of the church or congregation, so far as known, who, on account of sickness was unable to be present.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The Easter services in this church were appropriate to the day, and the floral decorations were neat and tasty. The usual church choir sang special Easter music. The morning service was a communion service, but the service of song announced to take place in the evening was postponed until next Sunday evening, owing to the sudden illness of one of the members of the choir. The Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham preached a short sermon, taking his text from John. 20th chapter, 20th verse.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Easter services held in this church were very interesting. Since the church has been re-modeled and a new organ put in, the music has been made one of the special features of the services. Yesterday was no exception to this rule. The platform and around the pulpit was very prettily decorated with flowers of all kinds and the effect it produced to that part of the auditorium was indeed fine. The flowers, which consisted mostly of potted plants, were from the conservatories of Messrs. L. W. Serrell and Chas. W McCutchen. The decorating committee consisted of Mr. L. W. Serrell, Miss Serrell, Miss Yerkes, Miss Runyon and Miss Worth.

The chorus choir of thirteen voices under the leadership of Charles McCutchen rendered very fine music appropriate to the occasion.

At the morning service they rendered two beautiful anthems which showed careful training.

The Rev. Dr. Yerkes delivered a short sermon on the "Resurrection of Christ." One of the special features of this service was the "Right hand of fellowship" given to fifteen new members. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper closed the morning exercises.

In the afternoon at three o'clock the Sunday school of the church and the Mt. Olive Baptist Sunday school met together and gave an interesting programme, consisting of Easter carols, hymns and anthems by the choir. Mr. B. T. Barnes sang a bass solo which was very nicely rendered.

The singing of "Christ Arose" by the scholars of Mt. Olive school was particularly commendable.

The pastor also gave a short talk at this service that was appropriate to the occasion. The Rev. Mr. Fernald gave an address which was listened to with much interest, after which the schools rendered an Easter hymn, and the Benediction was pronounced, thus ending the services of the day.

CHURCH OF OUR SAVIOUR.

The service at the Church of Our Saviour, Netherwood, was largely attended. The music was especially fine. Morning prayer included a processional hymn, anthems, the Te Deum and Benedictus. The communion office began with the Introit, followed by Kyries, Gloria Tibi and Nicene Creed. The programme of music after the sermon embraced a number of parts, closing with a recessional hymn. The Sunday school had a delightful festival in the afternoon, which included the singing of carols by the school and an address the rector, the Rev. S. P. Simpson.

The priest in charge, the Rev. S. P. Simpson, read the Treasurer's report, which showed the church to be in a healthy financial condition, and evidenced a remarkable improvement in all church work during the past three months. A beautiful brass ewer for the font was one of the many Easter offerings.

CHURCH OF THE HEAVENLY REST.

At the Church of The Heavenly Rest there was a full congregation. The chancel and altar were tastefully decorated with choice flowers. The musical programme was as follows. The choir comprised Miss F. A. Stevens, soprano; Miss C. F. Davis, alto; Mr. J. O. Stevens, tenor and Mr. J. F. Pearson, basso;

Processional—"Why seek the living among the dead?"
Anthem—"Christ Our Passover"	[illegible]
Gloria	W. C. Williams
Te Deum	[illegible]
Jubilate	[illegible]
Gloria Tibi	Stevens
Offertory—"Blessed be He, etc"	[illegible]

The children's Easter festival was held at half-past three, consisting of carol singing by the children, with appropriate devotional exercises and an address by the rector. The singing throughout was spirited and excellent and both morning and afternoon exercises were highly creditable to those who conducted them.

SEVENTH DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Easter festival in the above named church was unusually attractive. The pulpit decorations, arranged by the ladies of the church were particularly fine. Most of the choice flowers and potted plants being loaned for the occasion from the conservatories of Messrs Geo. H. Babcock, C. Potter, Jr., & M. Titsworth, F. S. Wells, J. F. Hubbard and other members of the church. The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, the pastor, preached an eloquent sermon on "Music."

Miss Jessie Utter presided at the organ, and during the service the choir, composed of Mrs. D. E. Titsworth and Mrs. C. H. Dunham, sopranos; Miss Mabel Potter and Miss Nell Randolph, altos; Dr. Frank Wells and E. E. Runyon, tenors, and D. E. Titsworth and A. L. Titsworth bassos, rendered the following delightful anthems:

Anthem—"Christ the Lord is Risen Today"	Thos. Spencer Lloyd
Anthem—"As it began to Dawn"	Chas. Vincent
Anthem—"See now the Altar"	Faure

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The Congregational church was beautifully decorated with an abundance of cut flowers, arranged about the pulpit by Mrs. Wm. H. Brower. Special music was rendered by the church choir assisted by a volunteer quartette. The sermon was upon the text "I will make thee ruler over many things." Following was the programme:

Organ Voluntary	Haydn
Easter Hymn, Sing We Alleluia	Gilchrist
Doxology
Invocation	By the pastor
Hymn, Room for Jesus	Mrs. W. L. Patton
Congregational hymn 4[illegible]
Responsive reading	Gloria
Easter Anthem, Christ Our Passover	Dudley Buck
Scripture
Prayer	Pastor
Offertory, Bass Solo
Hymn 4[illegible]
Sermon, Matt. 25, 21
Easter Carol, the Strife is O'er	Schumann
Hymn 4[illegible]
Benediction
Postlude	Batiste

The regular church choir consists of Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organist and leader, Miss H. Burnett, soprano; Miss E. Ginn, alto; Mrs. Chas. Steiner, alto; Mr. Babson, tenor; Prof. L. B. Goodrich, Basso. The members of the assistant choir were: Mrs. W. L. Patton, soprano; Mr. Salton Stall, tenor; Mr. Miller, basso.

CRESCENT AVENUE PRESBYTERIAN.

The programme for both morning and evening services at the Crescent avenue church, was impressive and effective. The main feature was the choir singing, which, especially in the evening was fully up to the high standard attained by Mr. Pierson's corps of vocalists. Mrs. Myers', Miss Holmes' and Mr. Runyon's solo parts were thoroughly satisfactory.

The Rev. Mr. Richards preached both morning and evening. The pulpit was banked in front with cut lilies. The organ in its new position at the right of the altar, had been revoiced and was even sweeter than before.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH.

Masses were celebrated in St. Mary's yesterday morning at 8.30, 9.45 and 10.45 o'clock the latter a High Mass, the celebrant being the Rev. Father Smyth, the pastor. The main altar of the church was tastefully decorated with flowers, which with the many lighted candles made a fine appearance. The new choir under the leadership of the organist, rendered music appropriate to the day. The Rev. Father Stafford, assistant pastor, preached a sermon at the last mass from the text: "Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, who was crucified; He is risen; He is not here; Behold the place where they laid Him." Vespers were celebrated at eight o'clock in the evening.

ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH.

In this church services were held at 8 30 and 10 30 o'clock, A. M., and for the first time in the history of the church solemn vespers were said in the evening at 8 o'clock. The Rev. Father Freeman preached a sermon at both masses, which is also an unusual occurrence, and delightful solos were rendered by Mr. Jules Boutes, Miss Maggie Keegan and Mrs. Thos. McGann. Miss Lizzie Gavin presided at the organ.

The pulpit decorations were elaborate and of good taste, reflecting great credit upon Mrs. A. E. Kenney and Miss Keegan, the ladies having the matter in charge.

M. E. CHURCH.

In the M. E. church, yesterday, the Rev. W. C Snodgrass, D.D., of Jersey City, preached at both the morning and evening service, before large audiences. Besides the rendering of special Easter music by the choir, and the exquisite pulpit decorations there was no other public demonstration.

UNITARIAN CHURCH.

The late pastor of the Unitarian church, the Rev. W. F. Tilden, had prepared an Easter sermon, but on account of the unexpected close of his engagement by illness, he was not present. His sermon was, however, read to the congregation by H. B. Wells, President of the Society. The rest of the service also followed the order prepared for the day by Mr. Tilden. An Easter offering of $71 was made to the church building fund by the children of the Society, being the proceeds of the parlor sale held by them last week.

EMMANUEL BAPTIST MISSION.

The Emmanuel Baptist Mission worshipped, yesterday, for the first time in their new place, Cutter's Hall, 25 West Front street. Both afternoon and evening services were largely attended. The pastor, the Rev. J. W. Mitchell, preached on the "Resurrection of Christ," taking as his text, Matt. 28: 5th and 6th verses. The floral display was very beautiful.

WARREN UNION MISSION.

The attendance at both the afternoon and evening service in Warren Mission chapel, yesterday, were very largely attended. The afternoon programme contained some twenty-one numbers, all of which were exceedingly well rendered. The exercises consisted of singing, recitations, responsive reading, exercises by the scholars of the primary class, jug collection for the library fund and an address by the Superintendent, Edward C. Pease.

Miss Emma Stevens told the "Story of the Resurrection," in a highly creditable manner. Other recitations were given by Miss Bessie Martin, Miss May Squires and Master Willard Martin.

The evening service was similar to that given in the afternoon, including addresses by the Superintendent and the Rev. W. E. Honeyman. The floral decorations were exquisite, the same being loaned by Mr. Chas W. McCutchen, L. J. Denton and Mrs. Lindsay, and arranged under the personal supervision of the floral committee of the Young People's Society.

GERMAN REFORMED.

In the German Reformed church two services were held commemorative of the Resurrection. The floral display was very fine, and special Easter music was well rendered.

HOPE CHAPEL.

Easter was observed, both afternoon and evening, in Hope chapel. In the evening Mr. H. R. Munger delivered an address. 210 members of the Sunday school were present at the afternoon session.

He Thinks Easter Vacation, Sectarian.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS—Today the public schools are closed for the so-called Easter holidays. A few months ago a great cry was raised here in opposition to the Parochial schools and sectarian teaching in general. One man even went so far as to publicly advocate an amendment to the State constitution that would prohibit sectarian schools.

Now what is this Easter observance but sectarianism? The Jew pays his proportion of school taxes, yet his children are deprived of the privilege of schooling during Easter, the observance of which he does not believe in. What is sauce for the goose should be sauce for the gander, yet the Romanist must not be allowed his Parochial schools, but the Protestant insists that the Jew shall observe Easter. How is this for American justice and freedom?

"CAREY MUST GO!"

Lawyer Bergen of Elizabeth Claims the Board Has No Jurisdiction in the Matter, But the Members Think Differently and Oust the Gallant (?) "Chief"—Officer Geo. W. Grant Promoted to His Late Position—Officer Lynch Suspended for a Month.

The Police Board met on Tuesday and suspended Policeman Lynch for one month without pay. Captain Carey was also suspended for three months without pay, and the resolution appointing him Captain was rescinded and Officer Geo. W. Grant was appointed Captain for the balance of the year.

Chairman Roberts presided at the meeting and the other members of the Board present were Mayor Male, Messrs Moffett, Hetfield and Spangenberg. The charges against Carey for using "foul, indecent and abusive language" at divers times since January 5th last, were read, to which the defendant pleaded "not guilty, sir."

Lawyer Bergen made an objection, not for the purpose, he said, of interfering with an investigation of the alleged charges, but he claimed that according to an act of 1885 the Police Board has no jurisdiction in the matter. Previous to 1885, Mr. Bergen claimed, the police held office at the pleasure of the appointing power, and up to that year it was in the hands of the Council to remove an officer for good and sufficient grounds, but the law enacted in 1885 provides first for the term of office, and goes on to state that no person shall be removed from office except for good and sufficient causes, the charges against said officer to be in writing, and a copy of the same to be filed with the municipal officers. Mr. Bergen laid great stress on section five of the act which reads: "It being the intent of this act to give the person so charged a fair trial." He claimed that the city ordinance provides for the dismissal or expulsion of an officer without a hearing or trial, which, he said, conflicts with the law of 1885. He insisted upon a dismissal of the complaint.

Chairman Roberts said: "We propose to try these gentlemen under the ordinance which gives us power, and if the ordinance is no good its time we knew it." Mr. Roberts told Counselor Bergen that his objections would be considered. Section three of the "ordinance to regulate the appointment and tenure of office of appointable officers," reads as follows:

> In the case of any policeman charged with any neglect or misconduct, such charges shall be made directly to the Police Board and the same shall be investigated by said Police Board, who shall give the policeman charged a hearing upon said charge, if he desire, and said Board shall upon investigating or hearing said charges decide whether the said policeman be guilty of said charges or any of them or not, and their decision shall be final and conclusive. If they find him guilty they may suspend said policeman for a period of time not exceeding three months, and forfeit his pay during said suspension, in their discretion.

Counsel for the defence then challenged the right and competency of Councilmen Moffett and Hetfield to sit in the Police Board, claiming that both of them were hostile to and had formed an opinion against Carey. He insisted that they be not allowed to sit in the board, but his objection was overruled, and Mr. Ed. Marble took the stand.

The witness testified to Carey's being in Miller's Hotel on the night of March 17 and 18, and to the vile language he used while in there. Messrs Geo. Miller and Frank Hale both substantiated Mr Marble's statement.

Councilman Gallup was next sworn, and his testimony was in substance the same as that given at the Miller trial, as reported in THE PRESS at the time. He said he naturally felt sore against Carey when told that a complaint had been lodged against Miller, as it included him in the "gang;" he further stated that at first he thought Carey had done his duty, but he was now satisfied that it was a matter of pure personal spite.

Mr. Daniel Littell was the next witness objected to by Mr. Bergen, who claimed that it was unfair to go back as far as January and bring up evidence against the accused. Mayor Male coincided with Mr. Bergen, but the objections were over-ruled, the Mayor voting 'No.'

Mr. Male asked for the opinion of the Corporation Counsel, but it was so clearly established in the complaint that the charges dated back in January, that no legal opinion from Mr. Marsh was necessary.

Mr. Littell told of his conversation with Carey during which the latter asked him how he liked the new Council. "I don't know," testified the witness. Whereupon the defendant said: "They're —— traitors to turn us out and elect Moffett the —— —— as President of the Council."

On cross-examination Mr. Littell said that he told Mr. Roberts soon after his conversation with Carey, that if he (Carey) was confirmed by the Council there would be trouble before the end of the year.

"Gep" Frazee was put on the stand, after he had spoken his little speech, in which he advised all interested to shake hands and thus end the tempest in the teapot. With much reluctance the witness kissed the bible, or "last resort" as he called it. He testified to hearing Carey call Mr. Roberts a d—d old traitor, but notwithstanding the fact that he was under oath at the time, the witness gave the most important part of his testimony in THE PRESS office yesterday, which did not come out at the trial. In answer to a question as to whether he had not said that all the police board would get out of him, they would have to pump out, Mr. Frazee answered in the affirmative, adding "But I don't want 'em to pump me." When leaving the stand Frazee was seen to nudge defendant's Counsel, which showed plainly that he was in sympathy with the defence. The prosecution then rested.

Counsel for the defence declined to proceed with the investigation, stating that he would protect his client in a higher tribunal.

Final action was deferred for the time being, and the charges against policeman Patrick Lynch were then taken up. Mr. Lynch also pleaded "not guilty." He was defended by Mr. Bergen.

Messrs John Brooks, A L. Cadmus, F. A. Miller and Geo W. Eddy, three of whom were the complainants, testified to seeing two reputable citizens chained together and marched through the streets, followed by two officers; the prisoners offering no resistance.

Officer Lynch was sworn. He testified that he was acting under instructions from Carey, who told him to to put handcuffs on the prisoners. Officer Carey bore him out in his statement.

Mr. Brooks then addressed the board stating that from the evidence produced he was satisfied that the officer was simply doing his duty under instructions. He asked the board to dismiss the complaint against Mr. Lynch.

A recess of ten minutes was taken and when the board reconvened Mr. Moffett moved to suspend Officer Lynch for one month without pay. The motion was adopted, Mr. Male voting "no."

A motion by Mr. Hetfield suspending Mr Carey for three months without pay, prevailed, the Mayor again voting "no."

Mr Hetfield moved to rescind the resolution appointing Carey Captain, adopted, Mr. Male voting in the negative.

Upon resolution adopted Officer Geo. W. Grant was appointed Captain of Police for the balance of the year.

The Board adjourned at 10:30 o'clock.

THE OLYMPICS IN THIRD PLACE.

They Tie the Mondays, and Prove They Are Full of Sand.

There was great excitement at Westfield when the second match between the Olympics of this city, and the Mondays, Friday night, resulted in a tie. The Plainfielders won the first game by 24 pins, but in the second the Westfielders led from the beginning On the last frame, however, the Mondays did not wind up in good shape, and Collier, the last man to bowl, got a strike on a spare and secured a total of 48 pins in his ninth and tenth frames and tied the score.

All hands bowled another frame to decide the game, when the Olympics by the fine total of 87 showed that no excitement had any effect on them. The Mondays only got 63. Mr. C W. MacQuoid was umpire. The score was:

HURLED FROM A WAGON.

One of Scavenger Brown's Men Thrown Out in a Runaway Accident and Bumps His Head Against the Railroad Bridge.

On Friday afternoon as Mr. John Brown, the scavenger, and one of his employees, whose name could not be ascertained, were seated in a light wagon, driving along Richmond street, the animal, it is said, took fright at a passing train and ran away. The driver did the best he could to keep the horse in the middle of the street, but just as they were passing under the railroad bridge, both Mr. Brown and the hired man were thrown out, the latter striking his head on one of the iron supports, inflicting an ugly wound on the forehead.

The unfortunate man was taken to Dr. Boone's office, where the wound was dressed and sewed up. Mr. Brown escaped uninjured, but his wagon was almost completely wrecked. The horse was captured in the neighborhood of the Crescent ball grounds.

MRS. GILES GETS A VERDICT

In Her Suit Against the Executor of the Late Wm. Ryan—$1,274.40 Awarded Her For Taking Care of an Aged Couple.

Judge Beasley presided in the Middlesex County Court at New Brunswick, on Friday last, and the morning session was occupied in the trial of the case of Mary E. Giles vs. Louis Ryan, executor of the estate of Wm. Ryan. Mrs. Giles, who lives in South Plainfield, sued for compensation for services in taking care of her aged father and mother. She was represented by Judge Cowenhoven. The defense, which was represented by Alan Strong, claimed that she never expected pay for her services and would not have filed a claim had she not fared badly by her father's will.

The case was tried before a jury, and the jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff, in the sum of $1,274 40.

At Hope Chapel.

The meeting at Hope chapel on Friday evening, was conducted by the Rev. Mr Fernald, who gave an entertaining and instructive talk on temperance. He related, during his discourse, his experience as a temperance man; how he had given his promise to his Master before entering college, and how he had been tempted while in college. He also gave some apt illustrations of the misery and want brought about by the drink habit. His remarks were attentively listened to.

Funeral of Mrs. Nancy Hand.

The funeral of the late Nancy Hand took place Monday afternoon from her late home, 100 East Front street. The house was filled with relatives and friends and the funeral procession was one of the largest that has ever taken place in the city. The Rev. Dr. Parks, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, of which Mrs. Hand was a member, conducted the services. He spoke of the departed as a true christian believer; also of her many good and kind ways. The Rev. Dr. Ketcham also spoke very highly of her as being a good christian woman.

The pall bearers were six grandsons: Fred W. Hand, Frank Hand, Chas. Hand, Edward Hand, Ernest Hand and Winfield S. Jimerson. At the close of the ceremony all present were given a chance to look for the last time upon the face of the departed dead. The remains were then taken to Scotch Plains and interred in the family plot beside her late husband.

Easter at Washingtonville.

A special Easter service was held in the M. E. Wilson memorial chapel Sunday evening, under the leadership of Mr. H. O. Newman of this city, assisted by about fifteen ladies and gentlemen also of this city, who formed a choir and rendered several selections, the audience joining in the chorus.

Every seat was filled by attentive listeners as the leader gave a word-picture of the last week of our Saviour's life on earth, following Him in His journeys to and from Jerusalem. His arrest in the Garden, the last supper, the midnight trial, the rejection by the mob, the crucifixion and burial, and the first Easter morning when Christ our Lord broke the bonds of death and led captivity captive.

Miss Dewey presided at the organ with ability, the effect of which was seen in the spirited singing by the congregation. Miss Julia Ketcham and Mrs. Collier each sang a solo appropriate to Easter. To say that the audience was delighted by the kindness shown by these two gifted ladies who took part, would but feebly express their appreciation.

Mr Wm. Murray, President of the Y. M. C. A., of this city, gave a short talk and told how Easter is held by the different nations, and why it is called Easter. The platform was surrounded by beautiful banks of lilies in full bloom, and China asters and other potted plants completely hid the reading desk from view. It was an Easter long to be remembered by those present as one of joy to the believer—just what Easter means.

—L. L. Manning has just completed a substantial and imposing monument in the family plot of Mr. B. C. Peck at Hillside cemetery. It is of selected Quincy granite, about 10 feet high above the base, and weighs something over twelve tons. The word Peck is in raised block letters on the face.

"Man wants but little here below, but wants that little strong."
This is especially true of a purge. The average man or woman does not precisely hanker for it, as a rule, but when taken wishes it to be prompt, sure and effective. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets leave nothing to be desired in point of efficacy, and yet their action is totally free from any unpleasant symptoms, or disagreeable after-effects. Purely vegetable, perfectly harmless.

DIVORCE IN TWENTY DAYS.

An Accommodating Chicago Lawyer Offers One to a Plainfield Wife, Permitting Her to be the Plaintiff, and Promises That Nobody Will Know It and She Will Not Have to Appear in Court.

Mrs. Ida May Cook of this city, daughter of Mr. Wm. B. Ayers, was deserted by her husband many months ago, as told exclusively in THE PRESS. She and their little girl have received no support or assistance from Mr. Cook, since. He has been traveling in the West, and three weeks ago, it is said, his marriage to another woman was published.

The letter given below is dated just a week before the alleged publication of Mr. Cook's second marriage. The printed heading announces that the writer is an attorney and counselor at law, a notary public, and loan broker. The letter proves him to be a most accommodating gentleman, as well. It is as follows:

CHICAGO, MARCH. 17, 1890

Miss Ida May Cook:—Your husband has written me in reference to obtaining a divorce, and says that you are no doubt quite as anxious as he is to obtain one.

If this is the case and you will sign papers consenting to a divorce, I can obtain a divorce in 30 days that will release both parties and permit both to remarry in any state in the Union

The divorce to be legally and quietly obtained and of no expense to you.

I have advised him to let you be the plaintiff and obtain divorce for his fault, as he is more able to stand the blame than you.

You will not be required to appear in open court, nor none of your friends know of suit. All I wish is your signature to papers.

You may depend upon the utmost good faith towards both of you in case you sign papers.

If you wish to resume your maiden name, write me maiden name in full.

Respectfully yours,
A. GOODRICH.
124 Dearborn street.

But Mrs. Cook says she will agree to nothing of the kind, and has given the letter to her lawyer for a reply. She proposes to probably prosecute her recreant husband for bigamy and then compel him by order of the court to contribute to the support of herself and their child. "He's burned his fingers," she says, "and will have to pay for the way he has treated me."

EASTER LODGE.

Another Association of Knights of Honor in Plainfield.

The 50th Lodge of Knights of Honor, in New Jersey, was established in this city, Monday night. Thirty-two were named as its charter members, and twenty-six were present and initiated. The lodge was named "Easter Lodge" by a unanimous vote.

The following grand officers were present and occupied their several stations:

Past Dictator—B. H. VanNess.
Grand Dictator—Richard C. Jones.
Grand Vice Dictator—Geo. W. Small.
Grand Asst. Dictator—H. W. Leland.
Grand Representative—John M. Mahew.
Grand Guide—W. H. Bush.
Grand Guardian—E. Doremus.

The following officers of the new lodge were unanimously elected and installed by the grand officers:

Past Dictator—Seymour Marsh.
Dictator—T. H. Bertindale.
Vice Dictator—T. R. Gone.
Asst. Dictator—Peter Neuman.
Reporter—Chas. W. Kellogg.
Financial Reporter—Geo. A. Hallock.
Treasurer—W. H. Lyon, Jr.
Chaplain—Chas. VanWinkle.
Guide—C. C. Burnett.
Guardian—J. N. Messerschmitt.
Sentinel—Jas W. Davis.
Trustees—John E. Stewart, E. W. Conklin, C. S. Carvin.

Remarks were made by Grand Officers Van Ness, Mahew, Jones, Small, and by Dictator Bartindale and others of "Easter." The officers of the new lodge are "pushers", and the outlook for a large accession of members is very encouraging. They have secured lodge rooms in Hand's new building on Second street, and will meet the first and third Monday evenings of each month.

THE REV. MR. ANGLEMAN OF KANSAS.

Another Very Interesting Address at Reform Hall.

There was a fair attendance at the Reform Hall meeting, Sunday night, President Harper occupied the chair, and the regular choir led by Mr. King with Mr. George Rogers as organist, were present.

The Rev. George M. Angleman, Jr., formerly of Plainfield, but now of Kansas, conducted the devotional services. After which that gentleman delivered an address both argumentative and instructive. He based his remarks upon the VII Chap. of Acts, 34th verse, and from the wonderful dealings of the Almighty with Moses as the chosen instrument to deliver the people of Israel from cruel Egyptian bondage, presenting a striking analogy, he declared that the same mighty power for human deliverance existed now as then, and that, in due time, the terrible evils inflicted by the liquor traffic upon the people of this age would be removed. He urged all to do their whole duty in the conflict for right over wrong, and predicted the coming day when a glorious victory would be secured. Mr. Angleman elicited the profound attention of his hearers, and closed a very interesting meeting with the benediction.

Editor Wm. J. Leonard of the Central Times, is announced as the speaker for next Sunday evening.

Holy Cross Parish Meeting.

At the annual parish meeting of Holy Cross church, held on Monday in the Church, the following were elected officers for the ensuing year:

Wardens—George P. Dupee and Charles J. Taggart.

Vestrymen—Col. Mason W. Tyler, Dr. J. H. Carman, Thomas E. Warman, Samuel Townsend and W. L. Saunders

Delegates to Convention—W. J. Leonard, J. H. Carman and A. E. Faber, Jr. Alternates—H. R. Phillips, Frank S. Browne and G. N. Hartley.

To Remove the Fire Alarm Tower.

Chief Doane of the Fire Department, has been granted permission to solicit bids for the fire alarm bell and tower. The tower was condemned by the Board of Fire Commissioners about six years ago, and it is now found necessary to remove it.

The bell, although of good tone, is so much like the bell on St. Mary's church in sound that it is oftentimes conflicting to the firemen

It is Chief Doane's intention to place a steam gong at the electric light station, which it is thought will give better satisfaction.

The Crescents Beat the Somervilles Again.

The Crescent League bowling team met the Somersets, Monday night, and again won both games from the latter. The match was on the Somerville alleys. Mr. Charles Reed was umpire. The score was:

Redly the firelight shines through the room,
Chasing away all the shadow and gloom;
Light-hearted children are prattling in glee;
Father is as happy as can be,
For the wife and mother who suffered so long,
Is getting her health back and soon will be strong.
And who is so happy as she is to-night,
As she thinks of the shadow that's taken its flight—

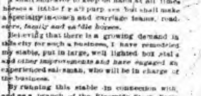
the shadow of disease that darkens so many homes, and makes the life of wife and mother one of terrible suffering. How pleased we are to know that at last a remedy has been found. It comes to cheerless homes with "glad tidings of great joy." Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has done for women what no other remedy has done, or can do, and it is not to be wondered at that women who have been cured by it are so enthusiastic in its praise. It is the only medicine for women sold, by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers of satisfaction, or money returned.

A Versatile Actress.

Music Hall contained a small but most appreciative and enthusiastic audience, on Monday. The great talent and versatility displayed by Marie Hubert Frohman, appealed so strongly to the intelligent people present that she was repeatedly applauded and called before the curtain.

She is a remarkably good reader, and her equally commendable interpretation of pathetic, tragic and light comedy parts, cannot be excelled by any woman on the boards today.

Attention, Farmers!



On Saturday, April 12,
I shall receive another carload of choice Western Horses and Mules, which I will offer for sale with my usual guarantee. An inspection is solicited.
Respectfully,
J. H. [illegible]
[illegible] street and Grant avenue.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

On April 1, I re-opened the Riverside Stock Farm Branch Stables, at Nos. 19 and 21 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J., with a choice lot of Horses.

I shall endeavor to keep on hand at all times horses a little for all purposes but shall make a specialty in coach and carriage teams, roadsters, family and saddle horses.

Believing that there is a growing demand in this city for such a business, I have remodeled my stable, put in large, well lighted box stalls and other improvements and have engaged an experienced salesman, who will be in charge of the business.

By running this stable in connection with, and as a branch of the Riverside Stock Farm Stables, I shall be enabled to select and keep on hand only such horses as are especially suited for this market.

The stock will always be shown, during the week, with pleasure, and you are respectfully invited to inspect the same.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

I. A. DEMAREST, - - City Editor.

—Oh, for a Y. M. C. A. building.

—There will be a regular meeting of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, Monday evening, at eight o'clock.

—Attention is called to the Spring display of South Bend Plows, and Seeds of all kinds, at Pierson Hardware Co.

—Ice is now 40 a hundred in Plainfield, until May 1; after that it will be two or three dollars as the ice man pleases.

—Mr. Robert S. Manning and Mr. Mulford Cole are the petit jurors from this city drawn at Elizabeth, on Tuesday.

—Mr. Thos. Cleary, an employee of Mr. A. W. Griffen, was painfully injured on the leg Tuesday afternoon, by having a heavy stone fall on him.

—Officer [illegible] has not been suspended from regular police duty. He declares that he will not serve while there are any charges hanging over him.

—At a meeting of the township committee, held Friday night, Messrs Jackson & Codington were appointed counsel for Fanwood Township for the ensuing year.

—At a regular meeting of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., held on Tuesday, Mr. George W. Moore was installed Adjutant in place of Mr. John E. Stewart, resigned.

—A correspondent writes to inform THE PRESS that Mr. Patrick Whalen of Plainfield avenue and Fifth street, is building a kitchen addition to his house. The foundation walls are already up.

—Owing to the absence of School Trustee Hurlbut, and because of the fact that all the fires were out in the school buildings, the Board of Education adjourned their regular meeting until next Monday evening.

—The Crescent League ball team expect to open the season on Saturday afternoon, with a match on the LaGrande avenue grounds against the Star Athletics, the best semi-professional team in Newark.

—The Emmanuel Baptist Mission, of which the Rev. J. W. Mitchell, is pastor, has secured [illegible]'s Hall on West Front street as a permanent place of worship. Services will be held there every Sunday hereafter.

—Fifteen columns of live advertisements appear now in THE PRESS. Its rates are higher than any other paper in the city, but it is read by people with money to spend and the advertisers have found that out by experience.

—Mr. Edward Crater of East Front street, who underwent a surgical operation, over a week ago, has had a relapse, and is again confined to the house, inflammation having set in in his left foot, where the operation was performed.

—The special services of Easter Sunday in twenty places of worship in this city, were reported in THE PRESS of Monday. This feat has never been equaled by a Plainfield paper. The Easter sermon, in full, of the Rev. Dr. Talmadge, was also contained in Monday's issue of that paper.

—A humorous lecture was given in Reform Hall, Monday night, under the auspices of the Home Building and Loan Association, by Mr. Fred. D. Crosier, of the Orange Journal. Addresses were also made by Mr. W. H. Sampson and others interested in the Association. The attendance was very large.

—Those of our readers who design purchasing a horse for pleasure driving or other purposes, should examine the car load just received by Mr. J. H. Foster, and now on exhibit at his new sale stables corner Grant avenue and Fourth street. Also, several spans of good mules. His announcement appears in our advertising columns.

—The sub-committee on designs for the Soldiers Monument, met at Gen'l Mosley's house, Saturday evening, and considered again the five designs before them. The members of the committee have visited various monuments and inspected numerous granites. They will report the result of their labors to the general committee for action.

—There is something very "square" about the Olympic bowlers. They had a match on with the "Nameless," in the Central tournament, Tuesday night, and would have won because the latter team was short three men. But when the Olympics heard of this, they agreed to postpone the match until the 22d, thus throwing up two victories that would almost have surely assured their position in second place.

The Mayor Does Not Uphold Carey.

Mayor Marx, at the meeting of the Police Board, Tuesday night, expressed himself as thoroughly convinced of Police Officer Carey's guilt, and was in favor of suspending him for 30 days. But he voted against the three month's suspension. All the other members of the Board voted for the longer term.

Grace Church Election.

At the annual meeting of Grace church parish the following elections took place:

Wardens—J. B. Finch, C. P. Bull.

Vestrymen—Messrs Jas. B. Dumont, O. T. Waring, Edward Fleming, Wm. E. Lowe, Geo. [illegible], E. N. Erickson and W. R. Cole.

Delegates to Diocesan Convention—Messrs Dumont, Clark and Lowe.

Alternates—Messrs Bull, Erickson and Cook.

To Archdeaconry—C. C. Howard.

The Good Friday Union Service.

People [illegible] through the Union service in Crescent Avenue church, Friday evening, and the auditorium and galleries were packed. The Rev. Dr. Rodman conducted the service, and Dr. J. L. Hurlbut and the Revs. A. B. Dilts, C. L. Goodrich, Cornelius Schenck and W. R. Richards spoke.

The vested choir of Grace church took the prominent part in the singing, led by Mrs. Freeman at the organ. The choir of the Crescent Avenue church, assisted in the hymns. Dr. Rodman said in closing, that the Revs. Ketcham, Yerkes and Lowry had expressed deep regret at being unable to be present; that the place of Mr. Mitchell who was obliged to be out of town had been ably filled by Dr. Hurlbut; but that he hoped that on the next Good Friday, there would be on the platform not only the pastors, but every one in town.

Their Obligation Cancelled.

When the Crescent Avenue choir agreed to raise $1500, aside from their individual subscriptions, toward the building fund, they did so with much trepidation as it seemed a great undertaking, and afterward they would fain have retired if it had been possible. They are now released from their obligation, having given to the treasurer of the church $2,400, or $900 beyond their "guarantee." This money has been raised by diverse undertakings. At the "Ground Breaking" last June, $121; at the concert last March, $350, and the balance at the Bazaar of Days. In the latter entertainment they exceeded their greatest hopes and thoroughly appreciate the hearty fellowship and assistance that was rendered them, not only by the church people, but also by outsiders who by donations, patronage, and assistance in other ways helped to make the affair the success that it was, both financially and socially.

When constabulary duty's to be done, to be done—
A policeman's lot is not a happy one.

PERSONALIA.

Cashier Carman Pease is expected home from the South today.

Mr. D. G. Marshall is lying dangerously ill at his home on Park avenue.

A second boy came to Mr. and Mrs. Morris C. VanArsdale, early on Thursday.

Mr. A. W. Davison and family of East Fifth street, have removed to Rochester, N. Y.

Mr. Geo. C. Mahon and family of La Grande avenue, are at Clifton Springs, New York state.

Mr. F. Curtis and family of Mercer avenue, North Plainfield, have removed to New York State.

The Rev. W. P. Tilden of the Unitarian church, is a guest at Dr. Coates' Sanitarium, Lakewood, N. J.

Mrs. Hannah Coghill, formerly of Washington Park, North Plainfield, will hereafter reside in New York.

Dr. A. S. Titsworth of Dunellen, has so far recovered from his recent illness, as to be able to go out again.

Mr. Theo. [illegible] of Carlton avenue, has gone to Leadville, Colorado, in the interests of his mining enterprises.

Mr. Walter Dobbins has returned from Peddie Institute and will spend his Easter vacation with his parents in this city.

Mr. Robert S. Manning of Franklin place, had a successful operation performed upon him by Dr. Kipp of Newark, April 2.

George W. Abbott, Jr., has become a law student in the office of Charles A. Reed, Esq., at Plainfield, says the Gazette of Somerville.

"Mrs. Van Name and her daughter of Plainfield, are visiting here with Mr. and Mrs. Kempton," says the Home News of New Brunswick.

Mr. W. D. Murray and Miss Murray, entertained a large party of friends, on Tuesday, at their home at Central avenue and Eighth street.

Mr. J. J. Crowe of Grandview avenue, North Plainfield, with his family, have removed to Allentown, Pa., where they will permanently locate.

Miss Kitty, daughter of Freeholder Doty of Union, is spending a week with the family of Mr. James H. Searing of No. 39 Madison avenue.

Miss Florence Titsworth, a student in the Pennington Seminary, is spending her Easter vacation with her parents on Madison avenue, this city.

Mrs. Arthur Stace and her little son Joe, formerly of this city, but now of Newark, made a flying visit to Mrs. D. C. Bird, of West Second street, Easter Sunday.

Dr. Chauncey M. Field arrived in Plainfield early on Monday, after nearly a year's absence, during which time he made a trip to Australia for the benefit of his health.

Clara Dressell, aged about 3 years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dressell, of Emily street, North Plainfield, died on Saturday morning last of membraneous croup. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Daniel Cory Adams, of this city, is one of the Class of '90, of the New York Homeopathic Medical College, that will be graduated with the usual exercises, in Chickering Hall, this afternoon at three o'clock.

The latest advices by cable received by Mr. Jacob Kirkner, bring news of a slight improvement in his daughter's condition. Letters dated two weeks ago, also contain much that is the cause for more hopefulness.

Mr. J. E. Crater on Saturday underwent a painful but successful surgical operation. Dr. Allis amputated the small toe on his left foot by removing a portion of the first joint upon which a large bunion had formed.

Judge Wm. R. Codington and Mr. Howard L. Emerson were chosen trustees of the Crescent League, on April 2, and the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and the Rev. A. B. Dilts, were elected honorary members of the association at the same meeting.

Mr. Jas. Reddick of East Front street has a curiosity in the shape of a chicken. It has one blue leg and one yellow leg. Its comb and tail feathers are similar to a rooster. Said chicken crows morning and night and lays an egg every day. It is one year old this Spring, and highly prized by its owner.

A surprise party was tendered to Master Brittin Martin, Jr., at his parents' residence, No. 13 Muhlenberg place, Friday night. The affair was arranged by the Misses Minnie Martin and Lizzie Gulick, and about twenty-five young people were present and enjoyed themselves in various ways. Refreshments were served during the evening.

At Henry, Illinois, on March 25, occurred the death of Miss Amelia Hoagland, sister of Mr. Peter Hoagland of this city. Miss Hoagland was 65 years of age and was for several years a resident of this place. Maria L. Nevius, wife of Mr. Theodore Layton, and a niece of Mr. Hoagland, also died at Blackwell's Mills, N. J., on April 4.

Councilman Roberts wants THE PRESS to say that none of the gentlemen who recently called upon him in the interest of police officer Carey, told him that his position in the matter would hurt his business. Mr. Roberts says that such threat emanated elsewhere. The gentlemen referred to above treated him with the utmost courtesy and justice.

Every day's progress towards an understanding of the cause of the failure of John F. Plummer & Co., serves to show that W. S. Darling, a former Councilman of this city, had been helping himself daily until he had secured all the available cash of the firm, and then he left. A member of Mr. Plummer's family told a PRESS reporter this morning, that it was supposed that Darling had thousands of dollars with him or else salted away in New York where no one could touch it.

"Wifehood Better Than a Career."

Under this heading, there appeared in the Evening World on Saturday, the following, among other communications, on "The Futures of Our Girls:"

To the Editor:

Father and mother must join together to make our girls feel that home is the best place in the world. If this is well learned while with them the way is prepared for a new home when the daughter is to have one of her own, where she will rule as queen. Let her look upon a married life as the ideal one and discourage the "career" idea.

Plainfield, N. J. A HOME LOVER.

Fire in North Plainfield.

Between three and four o'clock on Thursday, fire was discovered in a frame dwelling house situated on Race street, North Plainfield, but fortunately it was extinguished before any great damage was done. The building was owned by Andrew Lutkins and was occupied by a number of colored families.

The fire originated from a stove in one of the rooms on the ground floor and when the inmates were aroused some of them became greatly excited. One of the frightened females who emerged from the house in her night robe was heard to exclaim to her husband in an excited tone, "Fro' down 'Mandy's trunk, you villian," but it was not necessary to remove any of the household goods, as a few pails of water subdued the flames.

A general alarm was sounded in North Plainfield, and in response to a call Chief Doane of this city sent Alert Hose carriage over into the borough.

CHEERS FOR REED.

A Schedule of the Matches the Crescents Will Play Under the Flags He Has Presented Them.

Mr. Charles A. Reed has presented the Plainfield Crescent League with a pair of handsome foul flags of blue with P. C. L., in gold on them, and a large pennant of the same. He said among other nice things in his presentation speech, "I trust these colors will always prove a mascot to the Crescent baseball nine, and a Hoodoo to any other team that plays beneath them." Then the walls of the club house rang with cheers for "Deacon Reed."

The schedule of games arranged, as given below, shows that work is cut out for the Crescent nine this season. But as they never had a better team, the close of the year will find the majority of victories on their side. All the members are already in training, and on Monday, Livingston, the Crescent's pitcher, pitched for the Albany against the Brooklyn association team. He held the professionals down to five hits. These are the games for the first three months, all to be played on the League grounds at LaGrande avenue which have been newly levelled, rolled and put in thorough order:

April 12—Star Athletics, the best semi-professional nine in Newark.

April 19—The original Acmes, who are the champions of New York in their class.

April 26—Lafayette College nine of Easton, Pa.

April 30—The champion college nine of Columbia College, New York.

May 3—Hackett-Carhart nine, who are also signed to play in the opening exhibition matches of the New York and Brooklyn league teams.

May 10—Rutgers college nine, which was one of the very few that won a game from the Crescents, last season.

May 17—Wiltons of New York, the champions of Harlem.

May 24—Vernons of Brooklyn, the best of that city's amateurs.

May 30—In the morning, the Flushings, the champions of Long Island. In the afternoon, the celebrated Brooklyn L's.

May 31—Unions of New Brunswick, which is a member of the League to which the Somervilles belong.

June 7—The original Acmes, a second game.

June 14—The well known Sylvans of Harlem.

June 21—Metropolitans of New York, who stand at the head of all professional teams outside of the National league.

June 28—The Mercers of Trenton, made up of the pick of all the best players in that city which supports a half-dozen ball clubs.

Later in THE PRESS will be given a schedule for the rest of the season, including games with the Gorhams, Cuban Giants, etc.

WHAT ONE CHURCH DID THE LAST YEAR.

Over Ten Thousand Dollars Contributed For Christian Work.

At the yearly meeting in the Crescent Avenue church, on April 2, Mr. L. N. Lovell and Mr. H. C. Squires, elders, and Mr H. O. Newman, deacon, were re-elected.

Mr. Richards then read the yearly report of the Ladies' Aid Society, which includes all branches of Christian work. There has been raised among the ladies during the year, for Home Mission work, $500 in money, and barrels valued at the same amount. The Foreign Mission Society, which is connected with the First Presbyterian church, raised $500. The Young Ladies' Mission Band, also connected with the First church, raised about $270. The Earnest Workers, a band of young boys, under the supervision of Mrs. Christopher Goddard, raised $66. The Sunshine Band of little girls obtained $31. There was also raised for the Muhlenberg Hospital, $90, Children's Home, $258, McAll Auxiliary, $213, W. C. T. U., $120, for the Relief Society, $430. The Relief Society have undertaken a new work of encouraging the poor to save money. They have about 160 depositors. The aggregate of deposits is about $1200, ranging in value from $100 to 10 cents.

Mr. H. O. Newman read the report of the Sunday school, which is in a very good condition. There has been contributed by it $530. Mr. S. A. Ginna reported the Bethel school in a flourishing condition. They have raised $565, thereby paying all their running expenses, and $300 toward their pastor's salary. Mr. H. C. Squires gave an encouraging report of Hope chapel, which now stands fifth in numbers among all the schools of Plainfield.

Mr. J. K. VanArsdale gave a report of the church which now contains 732 members. The collections for benevolent purposes during the year have amounted to $9,856. Mr. S. R. Struthers reported for the deacons. Their fund has been $495. Mr. I. W. Rushmore reported the financial condition of the church, and Mr. C. A. Baynon, the conditon of the Young People's Association.

A Westfielder Injured.

Mr. Orrin Pierson, an old resident of Westfield, while loading posts and rails on a car at that place afternoon April 2, fell backwards from the car, striking his head on a cross-tie, and inflicting a deep scalp wound. The injured man was taken to his home, where a physician dressed the wound.

Committed Without Bail.

James Cowen, an employee at the Pond Machine Tool Co, who says he came to this city from Scranton, Pa., seven weeks ago, was arraigned before City Judge Codington at the station house Thursday, charged with being drunk and disorderly. He pleaded guilty to the charge and Judge Codington sentenced him to the county jail for sixty days.

Immediately thereafter Constable Moffett served the prisoner with a warrant issued by Justice Nash on complaint of Officer McCue, who charges that Cowen assaulted him while in the discharge of his duty. On this charge Justice Nash held him for the Grand Jury in the sum of $250.

The prisoner went under the name of "James White" where he was employed. Constable Moffett took him to Elizabeth during the forenoon.

Gazelle's Nomination of Officers.

At the regular monthly meeting of Gazelle Engine Co., No. 1, held in their parlors on April 2, and after the regular order of business, the following officers were nominated to serve the company for the ensuing year:

Foreman—C. R. [illegible].
1st Asst.—C. F. Johnson.
2d Asst.—J. H. Searing.

1st Asst.—J. H. Albert.
2d Asst.—I. Taynor.
3d Asst.—G. M. [illegible].
Representatives to Firemen's Relief Association—J. A. Hubbard, E. C. [illegible], L. J. [illegible].

The election for the above named officers will be held at the Engine house on Monday evening, May 5, between the hours of 7 and 9 o'clock.

Nervous Disorders.

DR. FLINT'S REMEDY must be taken when excessive or continuous muscular exertion, exciting passions, or over-indulgence, stimulating food or drink, or nervous disorders have long continued. Descriptive treatise with each bottle; or address Mack Drug Co., N. Y. For sale by J. G. Miller.

—The Union county Freeholders have decided to issue and sell $150,000 worth of county road bonds, bearing four per cent. interest, to pay for additional improvements to the the county roads.

FOR CHARITY'S SAKE.

PLAINFIELD'S UPPER SOCIETY ENJOY A PUBLIC BALL.

The Swells and Belles of This City and Elsewhere Dance in "The Crescent" and a Thousand Dollars for Muhlenberg Hospital is the Result.

The most brilliant affair of this, or any other season, in the circles of upper society of this, or any other city, occurred Tuesday at The Crescent. The handsome building was artistically draped in yellow and white, the chimney corners and dressing rooms were hung with rich portierres, spread with costly rugs, furnished with soft divans and plush cushioned seats and lighted with jewelled lamps and costly silver and onyx candelabra.

Boxes in the wide gallery above the entrance and overlooking the spacious dancing surface, were also comfortably and elegantly fitted up. They were occupied by the following and their guests: Mrs. A. D. Shepard, Mrs. M. E. Edgerton, Mrs. Charles Ames, Mrs. Rowland Cox, Mrs. Charles Fisk, Mrs. Gen'l Wm. H. Sterling, Mrs. D. O. Wotherspoon, Mrs. H. P. Talmage, Mrs. J. L. Anthony, Mrs. J. J. H. Pollion, Mrs. Frederick J. Kuhne, Mrs. Walter Stewart, Mrs. James Scott and Mrs. F. F. Beals.

The supper room where Marsel of New York served a rare menu from eleven till one o'clock, was separated from the main floor by a grove of trees, and its entrance was beautified with blooming plants. Exotics, palms and lilies were also arranged upon the stairways. All this adornment and decoration, the work of a week past, was the subject of admiration from everybody. It was all a result of the artistic taste and faithful work of Mrs. Robert L. Burnett, Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, Mrs. Harry G. Runkle and Mrs. Pliny Fisk.

The six hundred present included everybody of high social standing in the city and borough. There were also present a large number of society people from New York, Bergen Point, Elizabeth and Westfield. Chancellor Williamson, and a party of Elizabethans, came in President Maxwell's private car "Monmouth." There was also a special train from New York, which returned laden with thoroughly satisfied people shortly after two o'clock this morning.

Nothing occurred to mar the complete enjoyment and entire gratification of all, so perfect was every arrangement and detail under the direction of Messrs Pliny Fisk, H. G. Runkle, C. E. Brooks and Major R. L. Burnett. In spite of the scores of carriages that at some times were hurrying to leave their guests, no block resulted. There was no crush at the cloak rooms, and the trained waiters served the many without a break.

The order of dance included 25 numbers, and was an artistic concert as well. Emil Elliott, of New York, was the leader of the orchestra, and the music included a new polka entitled "Plainfield Assembly," composed for the event. There were also lanciers arranged from Offenbach's "Brigands," Sullivan's "Gondoliers" and Suppe's "Clover;" waltzes by Waldteufel, Strauss and others, and a score more of the most beautiful selections.

A list of the names of those present, would fill two columns. Suffice it to say, as already said, every body, who was anybody of the upper crust, was there. The expenses of the affair were of course very large, but it is believed that a thousand dollars for Muhlenberg Hospital, will be the result.

The patronesses were: Mrs. William Bloodgood, Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, Mrs. Pliny Fisk, Mrs. Frederick J. Kuhne, Mrs. Robert L. Burnett, Mrs. Harry G. Runkle, Mrs. William T. Kaufman, Mrs. DeWitte C Ivins and Mrs Charles J. Fisk.

The Floor Committee included: Messrs William Bloodgood, Harry G. Runkle, William T. Kaufman, Charles J. Fisk, Frederick J. Kuhne, Lewis G. Timpson, Andrew McKinney, Fred W. Walz, Edward M. VanBuren, Edward Bloodgood, John N. Moore, John P. Munn, Charles E. Brooks, Robert L. Burnett, Pliny Fisk, Dewitte C. Ivins, Harry G. Squires, Herbert W. Stover, Clarence L. Murphy, Thomas VanBoskerck, Percy Kuhne, David O. Wotherspoon and Howard W. Beebe.

Afraid.

At the regular meeting of the West End baseball club at Somerville, last Tuesday evening, mention was made of the proposition received from the manager of the Plainfield Crescents for a series or exchange of games the coming season, which, however, it was decided to decline.

Struck by Lightning.

During the heavy thunder show on Monday, a house owned by Mrs. A. L. Cadmus at 13 Spooner avenue, was struck by lightning. The brick chimney was split entirely in two, and a strip of the slate roofing, two feet wide, was torn from the peak of the house to the gutter. The house is occupied by a family named Smoker, and there was but one lady in the building at the time. She suffered only from shock.

Small Fire.

Yesterday while some little children were playing upstairs at Mrs. H. T. Smith's house on Bay street, they discovered the little boy, five years old, with a lighted candle in each hand. One of the little girls in trying to take the candles from him set fire to the lambrequin on the mantel. The children cried "Fire," but by the time Mrs Smith got upstairs the lambrequin was blazing half way up to the ceiling. Grabbing a stand cover she tore down the lambrequin and threw it out the window, before any further damage was done.

A Novel, But Worshipful Service.

The congregation of the First Church of Christ are settled in their new Park avenue hall. Friday evening a goodly number met for the first week-night service.

Mr. Cleaver's originality of method in the conduct of these meetings, is impressive and edifying. Anybody can go to meeting—so can a mouse. Anybody can say prayers—so can a parrot. Anybody can read the Bible—that requires but an ordinary education. But to fill one's part in the Bible exercises to which Mr. Cleaver's followers have been educated, one must be apt in Bible truth and teaching. Mr. Cleaver's work with his people has been to this end. With a little modulation in the singing, still to be desired, the service is novel and worshipful.

In the Valley.

Mr Robert S. Doyle of Trenton, spent Easter with friends in the valley.

The Winter grain, wheat and rye in this section, is in a most promising condition, and the farmers are looking forward to good crops. The wet weather is making Spring work late.

The enterprising brothers, Herbert and Arthur Phillips, have themselves erected one of the largest and most convenient of barns in this section, which speaks high of their ability, as they are not carpenters, but farmers.

Mr. George W. Wilsane is erecting a new house on Somerset street which he intends to occupy as a home in the near future. George is a good fellow and deserves a good ——, but then we promised not to say a word. Just wait and read THE PRESS.

Keep Them in the Nursery.

OBITUARY.

NANCY TERRY HAND.

The death is announced of Nancy Terry, widow of the late William Hand, which occurred at her home on East Front street, on Thursday, after a nine weeks' confinement to the bed from heart failure. Had she lived until the 23d instant, Mrs. Hand would have been eighty years of age. Her husband died on October 29, 1864.

Mrs Terry was born near Plainfield on April 23, 1810, and she was married on February 22, 1829.

Mr. and Mrs. Hand had nine children, as follows: John, who was the first New Jersey soldier to fall a victim of the rebels deadly aim, killed at Munson Hill, Va., August 31, 1861; Mary, the wife of J. D. Gilliand, who died the same day her brother was killed; Charlotte, wife of Mr A. L. Jimerson of Netherwood; Captain William Hand; Henry, now of Florida, who was disabled at Chancellorsville, and has never regained his health; David, a deacon in the Scotch Plains Baptist church; Thomas; Hezekiah, the present postmaster at Scotch Plains, and Sarah, wife of Mr. Herman Cook, who died on August 8, 1876. Of the grand children, twenty-five are still living.

Resolutions of Winfield Scott Post.

At a regular encampment of this Post, held March 11, 1890, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS: It has pleased the Almighty to remove from our ranks our honored Post Commander, Isaac Brokaw, therefore be it;

Resolved, That in the death of Comrade Brokaw this Post lost one of its main supports; the Order, one of its ablest defenders and his country a brave and fearless citizen.

Resolved, That the heartfelt sympathy of Post, 73, Dept., of N. J., G. A. R., and its Auxiliary Corps, No. 10, W. R. C., Dept., of N. J., be extended to the family of our late Commander in their bereavement.

Resolved, That these resolutions be engrossed and framed and presented to the family, that they be spread in full upon the Post's minutes and a copy be furnished the papers of our city for publication.

JOHN E. STEWART,

At a regular encampment of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, Dept., of N. J., G. A. R., held Tuesday evening, April 8, 1890, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted;

WHEREAS; God in His infinite wisdom has called from our ranks Comrade J. Newton Jenkins, therefore be it;

Resolved, That in the death of Comrade J. Newton Jenkins our Post has lost one of its best members. Fraternal whenever approached; charitable whenever appealed to and as loyal as any, who offered their lives that their country might live.

Resolved, That the heartfelt sympathy of this Post be extended to the family of the late comrade in their affliction.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Post, a copy be sent to the family of our deceased comrade and a copy furnished the DAILY PRESS of our city for publication.

Return of the Horses.

Bartholomew's twenty-four educated horses, that appeared at Music Hall, week October 28, last, to crowded houses and delighted everybody that saw them, will appear again week April 21, for six evenings and Wednesday, Friday and Saturday afternoons. It is one of the most popular entertainments ever given here and will no doubt again attract immense audiences.

An Array of Amateur Musicians.

There was a reception on Thursday given to the educational classes of the Y. M. C. A., at the rooms of the Association. Music was furnished by Miss Dunn, pianist, Messrs Holmes and Newman violinists and Messrs James and Fletcher Hallock, banjoists. Mr. J. Robinson addressed the stenograph class and Mr. Wm Murray gave a reading. There was also a "potato race," the prize being won by the younger son of Mr John Abbott. Refreshments were served.

Unhealthy News.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—My attention has just been called to a personal in the evening news, stating that I left for Europe last week in search of better health. Please state in your reliable paper that the fabrication of such news shows great shallowness in the editorship of a paper. It is useless to say that my health is as good as ever, and wish the reading in the news was as healthy.

FELIX MARX.

Nothing But Praise For Tom.

The great Eastern and Western teams of crack shooters, who have been traveling about the country closed their engagement in Boston on Wednesday. In referring to the champions, the Boston Daily Globe of Thursday has the following to say of Mr. Thos. H. Keller of this city:

"All of the boys are sorry to say goodby to Tom Keller, the capable advance agent. Tom is the soul of good nature, and his work on the trip has been excellent. In all of his work he has displayed the ripest judgment, and the boys speak in the highest terms of him. Tom is a newspaper man, and his articles on trap shooting, over the signature of 'Tee Kay,' have been widely read and commended by all interested in that fascinating sport."

In Their New Quarters.

The members of Noah Dove Encampment, No. 28, met for the first time in the new Odd Fellows Hall in the Hand building, on Thursday. Among the Grand Officers present were the following:

A. B. Pierce, G. P., of Newark; A. J. Doan, G. H. P., of Jersey City; James C. Robbins, G. S. W., of Hamilton Square; W. H. Biddle, G. S., of Atlantic City; J. B. Smith, G. Rep., of Newark; S. N. Rockhill, G. Rep., of Bordentown.

Delegates were also present from Columbia, No. 38 and Mt. Carmel Encampments of Elizabeth; Fidelity Encampment, No 55, of Jamesburg, N J.

After the routine of business and listening to a few remarks from the patriarchs present, the members of the encampment and their guests adjourned to Casper's dining parlors on East Front street, where they partook of a bountiful collation.

In purchasing medicines, don't try experiments; the first and only consideration should be genuineness. Ayer's Sarsaparilla has stood the test of forty years, and today it is in greater demand than ever—a triumphant proof of popular approval.

Compatible with the laws of chemistry and with the laws of health, is Hires' Cough cure. 25 cents, all dealers.

—The second anniversary of the organization of the Knights of Honor in Plainfield, will be celebrated with an entertainment in Music Hall, Tuesday the 15th inst. The programme and tickets will be ready for distribution among the members of the lodge at the meeting to-night.

The usual treatment of catarrh is very unsatisfactory, as thousands of despairing patients can testify. A trustworthy medical writer says: "Proper local treatment is positively necessary to success, but most of the remedies in general use by physicians afford but temporary benefit. A cure certainly cannot be expected from snuffs, powders, douches and washes." Ely's Cream Balm is a remedy which combines the important requisites of quick action, specific curative power with perfect safety and pleasantness to the patient.

BEGINNING TO BEG FOR MERCY.

Ex-Captain Carey's Friends Seeking a Compromise, and He Asking to be Forgiven.

[From The Daily Press of April 4.]

It should by this time be apparent to ex-Captain Carey and his advisers, that Councilmen Moffett, Hetfield, Roberts, Gallup and Spangenberg are not to be driven nor persuaded from what they consider their path of duty.

They have been asked to "settle the matter amicably," but have refused to thus—from their point of view—compound a felony. All sorts of pressure have been brought to bear on them, but they still say they will suspend without pay police officer Carey for using abusive and obscene language about members of the Plainfield Common Council and about other public authorities.

Effort with the Board as a body failing, Carey and his endorsers are now—as politicians say—"getting in their fine work." The committee that waited on Councilman Roberts, yesterday morning, in Carey's interests, told Mr. Roberts, the liveryman, that his business would suffer if Mr. Roberts, the Councilman, voted to suspend the policeman who called him a "—— traitor."

Then as that did not seem to work, Carey himself called on Councilman Roberts an hour or so before the Board was to sit on his case, and admitted he had called Councilman Roberts a "—— traitor," and that he had afterwards denied it. Then he took it back, apologized and promised to do better. But he did not apologize to President Moffett, or Clerk Coward or anyone else he had abused with his tongue. If he could get Councilman Roberts' vote in the Council, he might get back on the police force, let his opinion stand regarding the others, and still "have it in for them."

But that won't work either. The matter of Detective Murphy and his fate, is a forecast of Carey's case. THE PRESS held high up to public commendation every good deed that Murphy did, as it has held high up to public commendation every good deed that Carey has done, but when Murphy became a public nuisance and an abusive officer, THE PRESS said he must go—and he went.

THE PRESS says Carey must go.

Where They Will Spend Their Vacation.

Miss Valentine, principal of the Bryant school building started Friday for Troy, N. Y., Miss E. L. Lewis, goes to Washington, D. C., for a week, and Miss Stowel will spend the coming week in New York city.

Miss Tabor of the Irving school will spend her vacation at home, in Upper New York State.

Will Take Good Care of the Flag.

The handsome new flag unfurled from the High School building last week, will float in the breeze on all clear days. Three boys have been selected from each of the three highest classes—three for April, three for May and three for June, when the school closes—whose duty will be to hoist the flag every morning and lower it at the close of each day's session.

Asleep on the Rail.

About 10:30 o'clock on Wednesday evening the police were notified that a man was lying asleep cross-wise on the main East-bound track near Richmond street. Officers Flannigan and Cooney went to the place, but the man disappeared.

Thursday afternoon Special Officer Sliter discovered a man sound asleep on the track near Madison avenue. He aroused the slumberer, who seemed thankful to escape with his life.

What We Drink in Plainfield.

It may be interesting to read just now what the State Geologist finds contained in this city's drinking water. He said in a recent report:

In Plainfield and vicinity, Mr. O. B. Leonard reports 20 bored wells "located from Scotch Plains to Dunellen and Bound Brook. They have always given a satisfactory supply. My inquiry has not given me information of any flowing wells. As far as I can ascertain, the water in the different tubes does not rise above the general average level of the underground supply in the sand and gravel." These wells penetrate the shale from 10 to 50 feet. The supply is satisfactory in quantity and, like that of the overlying sand and gravel, of excellent quality. Two samples were analyzed. One from the well of L. V. F. Randolph, 21 feet in the shale, was found to contain:

	Grains
Total solids, per gallon	7.980
Chlorine	0.422
Hardness (grains of calcium carbonate)	2.974
Free ammonia, parts per 1,000,000	0.008
Albuminoid ammonia, parts per 1,000,000	none

The second sample came from the well of John B. Brown, also in Plainfield, and 59 feet in the shale. It contains:

	Grains
Total solids per gallon	5.366
Chlorine	0.525
Hardness (grains of calcium carbonate)	2.879
Free ammonia, parts per 1,000,000	0.027
Albuminoid ammonia, parts per 1,000,000	none

The water from the driven well of Mason W. Tyler, which is 40 feet deep, contains:

Solid matter, per gallon, in grains	5.664
Chlorine	[illegible]
Hardness, calcium carbonate	4.624
Free ammonia, parts per million	.017
Albuminoid ammonia	none

Indigestion

IS not only a distressing complaint, of itself, but, by causing the blood to become depraved and the system enfeebled, is the parent of innumerable maladies. That Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best cure for Indigestion, even when complicated with Liver Complaint, is proved by the following testimony from Mrs. Joseph Lake, of Brockway Centre, Mich.:—

"Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony, was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an improvement in my condition. My appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life."

HOW CAN THE LONG BE THE SHORT
A line may be a very long one and yet be the shortest between given points. For instance, the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway has over 3,000 miles of road; magnificently equipped and managed, it is one of the greatest railway systems of this country; for the same reasons it is the traveler's favorite to all points in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana. It is the only line to Great Falls, the future manufacturing center of the Northwest; to the fertile free lands of the Milk River Valley; and offers a choice of three routes to the Coast, still is the shortest line between St. Paul, Minneapolis, Fargo, Winnipeg, Crookston, Moorhead, Casselton, Grafton, Fergus Falls, Wahpeton, Devils Lake and Butte City. It is the best route to Alaska, China and Japan; and the journey to the Pacific coast, Vancouver, Tacoma, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco will be remembered as the delight of a lifetime once made through the wonderful scenery of the Manitoba-Pacific Route. To fish and hunt; to view the magnificence of nature; to revive the spirit; restore the body; to realize the dream of the home seeker, the gold-seeker, the toiler, or the capitalist, visit the country reached by the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway. Write to F. I. Whitney, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn., for maps, books and guides. PEERLESS DYES Are the Best.

TOLD OF THE TITLED.

Queen Victoria recently ordered [illegible] bakers to make her an American apple pie.

Leopold, King of the Belgians, is over six feet high. He is possessed of fine literary tastes and geography is his hobby.

The Crown Prince of Sweden and Norway during his recent stay at [illegible] adopted two little Tyrolese boys, sons of a poor carpenter, and they are now members of his household at Stockholm.

The Emperor William has issued an order that in future no paintings or statues or busts of himself or of the members of the royal family, alive or dead, are to be purchased with any public funds for galleries or public buildings.

The Queen of Sweden delights in forced meat balls, fried in sweet oil and served with poached eggs, [illegible] always the national dish of raw salt [illegible] preserved in the ground and [illegible] perfection as [illegible] where figure on the royal table.

The late Empress Augusta always said that the month of January was fatal to [illegible]. She was greatly shocked when she heard of the suicide of the Crown Prince of Austria, because it confirmed her belief in the sinister nature of January, in which it occurred. When she was taken ill with the influenza she said: "It is January; I will die."

An American who recently saw the King and Queen of Portugal says: "The King is a fine-looking young man, about thirty years of age, decidedly blonde, of medium height, well built and with a graceful carriage. The Queen, who is a daughter of the Comte de Paris, is not called beautiful, but if she were not a Queen would probably be called simply a very pretty woman."

The little King of Spain's first demand when he began to get well was that he should be taken "to see [illegible] lame beggar," a cripple for whom he has formed a great attachment, and who is allowed to come to the side of the carriage and hold long conversations with the young monarch, when he is out for an airing. The King is very self-willed as he grows older, and will only yield to his mother when she tells him she is going to her room to cry. That always wins him over.

Emperor Frederick's death probably destroys the Duke of Cumberland's last hope of recovering the large private fortune of which he was practically robbed by the German Government. Emperor William wanted to restore it to him but Prince Bismarck overruled his desire. Emperor Frederick was determined that he should have it, and had his life been spared would doubtless have carried out his design in spite of the Chancellor. But now the Duke's righteous claim is not worth a [illegible] the thousand dollars.

It is a curious fact that King Humbert, of Italy, is nearer to the throne of the United Kingdom, if the divine right of blood be recognized, than Queen Victoria. His majesty's title is derived from the beautiful daughter of James I., Elizabeth of Bohemia, whose daughter became the mother of George I., while the Italian sovereign's [illegible] James' son, Charles I., whose daughter Henrietta Maria, married into the House of Savoy. Thus he has one generation more of English blood in his veins than his royal cousin of England.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said the professor, "I find that I can not perform the experiment of inflation, as the wind machine is out of order." There was a great groan of disappointment. "However," added the professor, suddenly, "I may be able to provide a substitute. Is there a gentleman from Chicago in the audience?"

The Emperor of Germany has been dissuaded from publishing the poems he wrote when he was a very young man. And consequently the world will never know what he used to think about a summer evening, and the stars, and the glad springtime and other pretty things that interest very young poets.

The discovery of gold in a recent meteoric stone suggests some very interesting thoughts. It is commonly believed that meteors are fragments of other worlds accidentally thrown outside their usual orbit into that of the earth. The question is whether the gold where it originated was the cause of so much strife and contention as it has for ages been on this planet.

A young man, recently married, suggested to his wife that they should argue some question frankly and fully every morning in order to learn to [illegible] of each other. The first question he posed to her: "Whether a woman could dress on seventy-five dollars a year," and he took the affirmative; and when last seen he had climbed onto a haystack and was pulling a ladder up after him.

A SEASONABLE SERMON.

THE SUBJECT: MACHPELAH; OR, EASTER THOUGHTS.

Preached by Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., Sunday, April 6—The Full Text Here Reported—The Resurrection Idea a Most Blessed Thought to All Christians.

BROOKLYN, April 6.—The Academy of Music was appropriately decorated today for Easter service, and the regular action of the Brooklyn Tabernacle was assisted by eminent musical performers. The hymn sung before sermon was:

We praise thee, O God, for the Son of thy love,
For Jesus who died and is now gone above.

The subject of Dr. Talmage's sermon was "Machpelah; or, Easter Thoughts." It was based on the words in Gen. xxiii, 17, 18: "And the field of Ephron, which was in Machpelah, which was before Mamre, the field, and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, that were in all the borders round about, were made sure unto Abraham." Following is the sermon in full:

MACHPELAH.

Here is the first cemetery ever laid out. Machpelah was its name. It was an arboreted beauty, where the weapon of death was bandaged with foliage. Abraham, a rich man, not being able to bribe the King of Terrors, proposes as far as possible, to cover up his ravages. He had no doubt previously noticed this region, and now that Sarah his wife had died—that remarkable person who at ninety years of age had born to her the son Isaac, and who now, after she had reached one hundred and twenty-seven years, had expired—Abraham is negotiating for a family plot for her last slumber. Ephron owned this real estate, and after, in much sympathy for Abraham, refusing to take anything for it, sets [illegible] on a big price—four hundred shekels of silver. This cemetery lot is paid for, and the transfer made, in the presence of witnesses in a public place, for there were no deeds and no halls of record in those early times. Then in a cavern of limestone rock Abraham put Sarah, and, a few years after, himself followed, and then Isaac and Rebekah, and then Jacob and Leah. Embowered, picturesque and memorable Machpelah! That "God's acre" dedicated by Abraham has been the mother of innumerable mortuary observances. The necropolis of every civilized land has vied with its metropolis.

The most beautiful hills of Europe outside the great cities are covered with costly and funeral vase and arched gateways and columns and parterres in honor of the inhabitants. The Appian Way of Rome was bordered by sepulchral commemorations. For this purpose Pisa built its arcades of marble sculptured into [illegible] and the [illegible] of dead [illegible] that have vanished. Genoa built its terraces cut into tombs; and Constantinople covers with cypress the silent habitations; and Paris has its Pere-Lachaise, on whose heights rest Molière and David and Marshal Ney and Cuvier and La Place and Molière, and a mighty group of warriors and poets and painters and musicians. In all foreign nations [illegible] on all sides is expended in the work of interment, commemoration and [illegible].

RESTING PLACES OF THE DEAD.

Our own country is second to none in respect to the [illegible] body. Every city and town and neighborhood of any intelligence or virtue has, not many miles away, its sacred [illegible], where affection has engaged sculptor's chisel and florist's spade and artificer in details. Our own city has shown its religion, as well as its art, in the manner in which it holds the memory of those who have passed forever away, by its Cypress Hills and its Evergreens and its Calvary and Holy Cross and Friends' cemeteries. All the world knows of our Greenwood, with now about two hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants sleeping among hills that overlook the sea, and by lakes embosomed in an Eden of flowers, our American Westminster Abbey, an Acropolis of mortuary architecture, a Pantheon of mighty ones ascended, mighty as ever, [illegible] in marble, while generations in peace waiting for other generations to join them. No dormitory of [illegible] deeper in all the world has so many mighty dead.

Among preachers of the gospel, Bethune and Thomas DeWitt, and Bishop Janes and Tyng, and Abeel the missionary, and Beecher and Buddington, and McClintock and Inskip, and [illegible] and Chapin, and Noah Schenck and Samuel Hanson Cox. Among musicians, the renowned Gottschalk and the holy Thomas Hastings. Among philanthropists, Peter Cooper and Isaac T. Hopper, and Lucretia Mott and Isabella Graham, and Henry Bergh, the apostle of mercy to the brute creation. Among the literati, the Carys, Alice and Phoebe; James K. Paulding and John G. Saxe. Among journalists, Bennett and Raymond and Greeley. Among scientists, Ormsby Mitchel, warrior as well as astronomer, and lovingly called by his soldiers "Old Stars;" the Drapers, splendid men, as I well knew, one of them my teacher, the other my classmate.

Among inventors, Elias Howe, who, through the sewing machine, did more to alleviate the toils of womanhood than any man that ever lived, and Professor Morse, who gave the magnetic telegraphy, the former doing his work with the needle, the latter with the thunderbolt. Among physicians and surgeons, Joseph C. Hutchinson, and Marion Sims, and Dr. Valentine Mott, with the following epitaph which he ordered cut in honor of the Christian religion: "My implicit faith and hope is in a merciful redeemer, who is the resurrection and the life. Amen and amen." This is our American Machpelah, as sacred to us as the Machpelah in Canaan, of which Jacob uttered that pastoral poem in one verse: "There they buried Abraham, and Sarah his wife; there they buried Isaac, and Rebekah his wife; and there I buried Leah."

A GREAT QUESTION.

At this Easter service I ask and answer what may seem a novel question, but it will be found, before I get through, a practical and useful and tremendous question: What will resurrection day do for the cemeteries? First, I remark, it will be their supernal beautification. At certain seasons it is customary in all lands to strew flowers over the mounds of the departed. It may have been suggested by the fact that Christ's tomb was in a garden. And when I say garden, I do not mean a garden of these latitudes. The late frosts of spring and the early frosts of autumn are so near to each other that there are only a few months of flowers in the field. All the flowers we see today had to be petted and coaxed and put under shelter, or they would not have bloomed at all. They are the children of the conservatories. But at this season, and through the most of the year, the Holy Land is all abloom with floral opulence.

You find all the royal family of flowers there, some that you supposed indigenous to the far north, and others indigenous to the far south—the daisy and hyacinth, crocus and anemone, tulip and water lily, geranium and ranunculus, mignonette and sweet marjoram. In the college at Beyrout you may see Dr. Post's collection of about eighteen hundred kinds of Holy Land flowers; while among trees are the oak of Bashan, olives, and the [illegible] of the tropics, walnut and willow, ivy and hawthorn, ash and elder, pine and sycamore. If such floral and botanical luxuriance are the wild growths of the fields, think of what a garden must be in Palestine! And in such a garden Jesus Christ slept after, on the soldier's spear, the last drop of blood had [illegible]. And thus we have appropriately that all our cemeteries should be flowered and tree shaded. In June, Greenwood is Brooklyn's garden.

THE RESURRECTION IDEA.

"Well, then," you say, "how can you make out that the Resurrection day will beautify the cemeteries? Will it not leave them a plowed up ground? On that day there will be an earthquake, and will not this split the polished Aberdeen granite, as well as the plain slab that can afford but the two words, 'Our Mary,' or 'Our Charley?'" Well, I will tell you how Resurrection day will beautify all the cemeteries. It will be by bringing up the forms that were hidden there, and in garmenture so are to be now more beautiful than any calla lily, and the forms that are to be more graceful than any willow by the waters. Can you think of anything more beautiful than the reappearance of those from whom we have been parted? I do not care which way the tree falls in the blast of the Judgment trumpet, or if the [illegible] that day shall turn under the last [illegible] and the last [illegible], if out of the broken and shell[ed] come the bodies of our loved ones not dead [illegible], but irradiated.

The idea of the resurrection gets easier to understand as I hear the phonograph unroll some voice that talked into it as long as a year ago, just before our friend's decease. You turn the wire, and then come forth the very tones, the very articulation, the very cough, the very song of the person that breathed into it once, but is now departed. If a man can do that, cannot Almighty God, without half trying, restore the voice of your departed? And if he can return the voice, why not the lips and the tongue and the throat that fashioned the voice? And if the lips and the tongue and the throat, why not the brain that suggested the words?

And if the brain, why not the nerves, of which the brain is the headquarters? And if he can return the nerves, why not the muscles, which are less ingenious? And if the muscles, why not the bones, that are less wonderful? And if the voice and the brain and the muscles and the bones, why not the entire body? If man can do the phonograph, God can do the resurrection. Will it be the same body that in the last day shall be reanimated? Yes, but infinitely improved.

Our bodies change every seven years, and yet, in one sense, it is the same body. On my wrist and the second finger of my right hand there is a scar. I made that at 12 years of age, when, disgusted at the presence of two warts, I took a red hot iron and burned them off and burned them out. Since then my body has changed at least a half dozen times, but those scars prove it is the same body. And we never lose our identity. If God can and does sometimes rebuild a man five, six, ten times, in this world, is it mysterious that he can rebuild him once more, and that in the resurrection? If he can do it ten times, I think he can do it eleven times. Then look at the seventeen year locusts. For seventeen years gone, at the end of seventeen years they appear, and by rubbing the hind leg against the wing make that rattle at which all the husbandmen and vine dressers tremble as the insectile host takes up the march of devastation. Resurrection every seventeen years!

THE GOSPEL ALGEBRA.

Another consideration makes the idea of resurrection easier. God made Adam. He was not fashioned after any model. There had never been a human organism, and so there was nothing to copy. At the first attempt God made a perfect man. He made him out of the dust of the earth. If out of ordinary dust of the earth and without a model God could make a perfect man, surely out of the extraordinary dust of the mortal body, and with millions of models, God can make each one of us a perfect being in the resurrection. Surely the last undertaking would not be greater than the first. See the gospel algebra: ordinary dust minus a model equals a perfect man; extraordinary dust and plus a model equals a resurrection body. Mysterious about it? Oh, yes; that is the reason why I believe it. It would not be much of a God who could do things only as far as I can understand. Mysterious! Oh, yes; but no more about the resurrection of your body than about its present existence.

I will explain to you the last mystery of the resurrection, and make it as plain to you as that two and two make four, if you will tell me how your mind, which is entirely independent of your body, can act upon your body so that at your will your eyes open, or your foot walks, or your hand is extended. So I find nothing in the Bible statement concerning the resurrection that staggers me for a moment. All doubts clear from my mind. I say that the cemeteries, however beautiful now, will be more beautiful when the bodies of our loved ones come up.

THE REST OF THE GRAVE.

They will come in improved condition. They will come up rested. The most of them lay down at the last very tired. How often you have heard them say, "I am so tired!" The fact is, it is a tired world. If I should go through this audience, and go round the world, I could not find a person in any style of life ignorant of the sensation of fatigue. I do not believe there are fifty persons in this audience who are not tired. Your head is tired, or your back is tired, or your foot is tired, or your brain is tired, or your nerves are tired. Long journeying, or business application, or bereavement, or sickness have put on you heavy weights. So the vast majority of those who went out of this world went out fatigued. About the perfect place to rest in is this world. Its atmosphere, its surroundings, and even its hilarities are exhausting. So God stops our earthly life, and mercifully closes the eyes, and quiets the feet, and folds the hands, and more especially gives quiescence to the lung and heart, that have not had ten minutes' rest from the first respiration and the first beat.

If a drummer boy were compelled in the army to beat his drum for twenty-four hours without stopping, his officer would be court martialed for cruelty. If the drummer boy should be commanded to beat his drum for a week without ceasing, day and night, he would die in attempting it. But under your vestment is a poor heart that began its drum beat for the march of life thirty or forty or sixty or eighty years ago, and it has had no furlough by day or night; and, whether in conscious or comatose state, it went right on, for if it had stopped seven seconds your life would have closed. And your heart will keep going until some time after your spirit has flown, for the auscultator says that after the last expiration of lung and the last throb of pulse, and after the spirit is released, the heart keeps on beating for a time. What a mercy, then, is it that the grave is the place where that wondrous machinery of ventricle and artery can halt!

Under the healthful chemistry of the soil all the wear and tear of nerve and muscle and bone will be subtracted and that bath of good, fresh, clean soil will wash off the last ache, and then some of the same style of dust out of which the body of Adam was constructed may be infused into the resurrection body. How can the bodies of the human race, which have had no replenishment from the dust since the time of Adam in paradise, get any recuperation from the storehouse from which he was constructed without our going back into the dust? That original, life giving material having been added to the body as it once was, and all the defects left behind, what a body will be the resurrection body! And will not hundreds of thousands of such appearing above the Gowanus heights make Greenwood more beautiful than any June morning after a shower? The dust of the earth being the original material for the fashioning of the first human being, we have to go back to the same place to get a perfect body.

Farms are apt to be rough places, and those who toil in them have their garments grimy and their hands scratched. But who cares for that, when they turn out for us beautiful musical instruments or exquisite upholstery? What though the grave is a rough place, it is a resurrection body manufactory, and from it shall come the radiant and resplendent forms of our friends on the brightest morning the world ever saw. You put into a factory cotton, and it comes out apparel. You put into a factory lumber and iron, and it comes out pianos and organs. And so into the factory of the grave you put in pneumonias and consumptions, and they come out health. You put in groans, and they come out hallelujahs. For us, on the final day, the most attractive places will not be the parks or the gardens or the palaces, but the cemeteries.

THE PERFECT RESURRECTION BODY.

We are not told in what season that day will come. If it should be winter, those who come up will be more lustrous than the snow that covered them. If in the autumn, those who come up will be more gorgeous than the woods after the frosts have pencilled them. If in the spring, the blossoms which they tread will be dull compared with the rubicund of their cheeks. Oh, the perfect resurrection body! Almost every one has some defective spot in his physical constitution; a dull ear, or a dim eye, or a rheumatic foot, or a neuralgic brow, or a twisted muscle, or a weak side, or an inflamed tonsil, or some point at which the east wind or a season of overwork assaults him. But the resurrection body shall be without one weak spot, and all that the doctors and nurses and apothecaries of earth will thereafter have to do will be to rest without interruption after the broken nights of their earthly existence. Not only will that day be the beautification of well kept cemeteries, but some of the graveyards that have been neglected, and been the pasture ground for cattle and rooting places for swine, will for the first time have attractiveness given them.

It was a shame that in that place ungrateful generations planted no trees, and twisted no garlands, and sculptured no marble for their Christian ancestry; but on the day of which I speak the resurrected shall make the place of their feet glorious. From under the shadow of the church, where they slumbered among nettles and mullein stalks and thistles and [illegible], they shall rise with a glory that shall flash the windows of the village church, and by the bell tower that used to call them to worship, and above the old spire beside which their prayers formerly ascended. What triumphal procession never did for a street, what an oratorio never did for an academy, what an orator never did for a brilliant auditory, what obelisk never did for a sky, resurrection morn will do for all the cemeteries.

HE IS RISEN INDEED.

This Easter tells us that in Christ's resurrection our resurrection, if we are his, and the resurrection of all the pious dead, is assured, for he was "the first fruits of them that slept." Renan says he did not rise, but five hundred and eighty witnesses, sixty of them Christ's enemies, say he did rise, for they saw him after he had risen. If he did not rise, how did sixty armed soldiers let him get away? Surely sixty living soldiers ought to be able to keep one dead man! Blessed be God! He did get away. After his resurrection Mary Magdalene saw him. Cleopas saw him. Ten disciples in an upper room at Jerusalem saw him. On a mountain the eleven saw him. Five hundred at once saw him. Professor Ernest Renan, who did not see him, will excuse us for taking the testimony of the five hundred and eighty who did see him. Yes, yes; he got away. And that makes me sure that our departed loved ones and we ourselves shall get away. Freed himself from the shackles of clay, he is not going to leave us and ours in the lurch.

There will be no door knob on the inside of our family sepulchre, for we cannot come out, of ourselves; but there is a door knob on the outside, and that Jesus shall lay hold of, and, opening, will say: "Good morning! You have slept long enough! Arise! Arise!" And then what flutter of wings, and what flashing of rekindled eyes, and what gladsome rushing across the family lot, with cries of "Father, is that you?" "Mother, is that you?" "My darling, is that you?" "How you all have changed! The rough gone, the croup gone, the consumption gone, the paralysis gone, the weariness gone. Come, let us ascend together! The older ones first, the younger ones next! Quick now, get into line! The skyward procession has already started! Steer now by that embankment of cloud for the nearest gate!" And, as we ascend, on one side the earth gets smaller until it is no larger than a mountain, and smaller until it is no larger than a palace, and smaller until it is no larger than a ship, and smaller until it is no larger than a wheel, and smaller until it is no larger than a speck.

Farewell, dissolving earth! But on the other side, as we rise, heaven at first appears no larger than your hand. And nearer it looks like a chariot, and nearer it looks like a throne, and nearer it looks like a star, and nearer it looks like a sun, and nearer it looks like a universe. Hail, scepters that shall always wave! Hail, anthems that shall always roll! Hail, companionships never again to be broken, and friendships never again to part! That is what resurrection day will do for all the cemeteries and graveyards from the Machpelah that was opened by Father Abraham in Hebron to the Machpelah yesterday consecrated. And that makes Lady Huntingdon's immortal rhythm most appropriate:

When thou, my righteous Judge, shalt come
To take thy ransomed people home,
Shall I among them stand?
Shall such a worthless worm as I,
Who sometimes am afraid to die,
Be found at thy right hand?

Among thy saints let me be found,
Whene'er th' archangel's trump shall sound,
To see thy smiling face;
Then loudest of the throng I'll sing,
While heaven's resounding arches ring,
With shouts of sovereign grace.

Safe for the Night.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Education in Russia is at a low ebb. Only twelve per cent. of the population can read and write.

A very large letter was recently mailed in Australia. It weighed 220 ounces, and the value of the stamps on it amounted to $55.

An enormous growth of ivy has partially destroyed the wall of Christ church, Waterloo, and a few days ago brought a section of it tumbling to the ground. The church had been built fifty years.

Government statistics, recently published, place the population of the Russian empire at 108,787,235, of which 81,725,185 are in Russia proper.

A French fashion for marking table linen is to have the monogram or simple letters embroidered on the table cloths in front of the place occupied by the master and mistress about three-quarters of a yard from the edge of the table. The napkins are marked in the middle.

Says the Sei I Kwai Medical Journal: Apropos of the suspected influence of the climate of Japan in the causation of rheumatism and neuralgia in resident foreigners, it is interesting to note that horses imported into Japan from China and other countries are soon more or less disabled by rheumatism.

Luminous paint absorbs light during the day and gives it forth at night. The ceiling of an English car painted with the composition lights the vehicle at night. England had the only factory and charged $3 a pound for the paint, but a new factory in Triesch, Austria, is selling it for fifty cents per pound. It is made of roasted oyster shells and sulphur.

The White House stables are a pretty group of brick buildings situated on a lot south of the mansion and sheltered by a row of box trees. There are four horses for the use of the president's family, three bays and a gray. One of the bays is named John and he is of a remarkably gentle nature and extremely fond of eating sugar from Mrs. Harrison's hand.

The English government is building a dry dock at Gibraltar of sufficient capacity to hold the largest iron clad, and there is much bitter feeling in Spain, and also in France, at this new assertion of England's unalterable determination to preserve her dominance in the historic sea that laves Malta and Cyprus and is the waterway to her Indian empire.

A few days ago John Ball, of Rochelle, Ga., had a log rolling, and about 12 o'clock, while the men were at dinner, an old hen came in the house, jumped upon the bed, deposited an egg, which one of the small children took to carry to his mother, and on the way accidentally dropped the egg, which was broken, and to the astonishment of those present it was found to contain a chicken fully developed.

All kerosene lamps should be filled in the daytime and at a regular hour. They must not be too full; they must be very carefully wiped off. The globes and chimneys should be kept clean and clear. The wicks are best trimmed by simply rubbing off the charred surface. The light is often affected by the holes in the burner becoming clogged. This can be remedied by boiling the burners in a strong solution of washing soda.

There are now 29 crematories situated in various parts of the world; Italy has 22; America has 10; while England, Germany, France, Switzerland, Denmark and Sweden have one apiece; in Italy there were 2 cremations in 1876; the number rose to 15 in 1877, and in 1888 the number was 226; since 1876, 1,177 cremations have taken place in Italy, while the combined number in all other countries brings the total to only 1,388.

The Winter Existence of Alligators.

One day in February Mr. Sim Bowles, who lives in Mitchell county, was walking around his millpond, which is situated at the forks of two creeks. In his peregrinations he came across a cave. Leading from it through the earth was an apparently large burrow. He obtained a pole and began investigating. The cave and burrow extended some twenty feet. He dug into it, and between five and six feet beneath the surface he came to seven alligators. They were large, old rusty fellows, ranging from four to ten feet in length.

They were sound asleep, enjoying their winter nap in accordance with the queer habits of these hibernating saurians. They were promptly dispatched. There is an old belief that when the alligators find the winter approaching they gobble down a number of pine knots to fill up their aching voids and then take their lengthy siesta. Mr. Bowles thought this would be a good opportunity to test this belief, and accordingly one of the reptiles was cut open. Within it were several fat light wood knots, and now Mr. Bowles is ready to testify to the truth of this theory as to the capacity of the alligator for digesting the knots of pine while slumbering through the winter months.—Atlanta Constitution.

An Accidental Declaration.

A young clergyman tells the following: In a certain country parish I had the good fortune to board with a farmer whose daughter was of that nature and appearance which equally attract men of all professions.

The young people of the neighborhood gradually became convinced that a "match" was in progress, and many were the insinuating winks and nods when we two were together. But I managed to escape embarrassment pretty well until an unlucky evening during one of those meetings where every one tells his or her "experience." This young lady had just spoken, when, as she took her seat, I started the good old Methodist hymn:

I love thee, I love thee,
Thou knowest very well;
But how much I love thee
I never can tell.

It was too much for the congregation.—New York Press.

Rabbit Proof Fences.

The rabbit proof fences erected by New South Wales and Queensland will, when the one at present being erected on the South Australian boundary line has been completed, be 667 miles in length. It is estimated that the one in course of erection will cost about £30,000. The fence starts from the Murray at Chowilla, and runs to the northeast corner of this colony, a distance of 346 miles. The completion of the scheme being carried out by the two governments will embrace 667 miles of fencing, of which 467 miles will have been erected by New South Wales and 200 by Queensland.—Montreal Star.

JAY GOULD has a sharp way of calling people to account. A newspaper man, a neophyte, by the way, went to interview him the other day and took some Western Union blanks out of his pocket to make notes on. Mr. Gould looked at him rather sternly and said with some show of asperity: "Young man, you not only want my ideas for nothing, but you purloin my property to take them down on. You should have your employer furnish you with a note-book."

"PARDON me, sir, but I think you are carrying my umbrella. I could swear to that ivory handle anywhere. If I had not recognized it instantly, I should not have presumed to stop you. That carving was done"— "Spare me the details, please. It is altogether probable that this is your property. I have no particular claim upon it." "Then how did it come to be in your possession?" "It was left in my hall last night by a burglar who got away with most of the family silver." "I—I guess my umbrella was a size larger than that after all."

DO CRIMINALS REFORM?

Views of Some of the Men Who Deal Directly With Them.

Inspector Byrnes Cannot Recall a Single Case of Genuine Reformation, and Warden Green Only Remembers One—Other Views.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

Below will be found the opinions of those best qualified by their experience and vocations to judge on that long and sturdily disputed question, "Whether or no professional criminals ever do reform?" A case in point is that of Jimmy Hope, the expert bank burglar, who claims to have reformed and retired permanently from the "profession," who is now writing his autobiography. The contributors to this interesting discussion are men who know all about professional criminals if any on this earth do.

"How much do you need to live on?" I once asked a celebrated burglar whom I found behind the bars.

"About $100 a week is a moderate allowance."

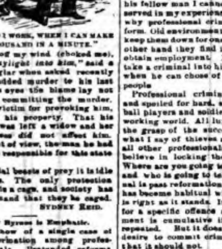
"And supposing you could earn that in an office where you have to work from nine till four o'clock each afternoon, would you not sooner do that and live honestly?"

"What do you take me for. When I work I make thousands of dollars in a few hours. My time is my own, after that."

I believe that man spoke honestly for all professional criminals.

The professional criminal is a lunatic with two delusions. First, that it is right for him to take the property of other men, second, that he can thus become rich and live in peace and happiness.

The trouble is that he cannot think straight. He never doubts that all his acts are right. In fact, it seems to him that there is no right outside of himself. He has no sympathy with his fellow-men. He does not understand them. With cynical eye he moves among them, watching his chance, and anon making his spring when the time seems probable. The struggles and terror of his victim affects him no more than the struggles of the wild hare affect the lynx.



"WHY SHOULD I WORK, WHEN I CAN MAKE A COOL THOUSAND IN A MINUTE."

"He shut off my wind (choked me), an' so I let daylight into him," said a Brooklyn burglar when asked recently why he had added murder to his last crime. In his eyes the blame lay not with him for committing the murder, but with the victim for provoking him, by defending his property. That his victim's wife was left a widow and her child fatherless did not affect him. From his point of view, the man he had murdered was responsible for this state of things.

To such social beasts of prey it is idle to sermonize. The only protection against them is a cage, and society has a right to demand that they be caged.

SYDNEY REID.

Inspector Byrnes is Emphatic.

I do not know of a single case of genuine reformation among professional criminals. Pretended reforms may frequently be observed, but should the penitent get a chance to steal anything worth taking, the temptation is too much for him. I have in my mind now five or six cases of men who had been professional criminals, who tried to convey the impression to me that they had undergone a change of heart, and would in the future live honest lives. These fellows set up business with money they had stolen, but their business was only a blind. They were still as crooked as ever, not taking part in robberies themselves, but planning them and getting other thieves to execute their plans, and give them a percentage of the proceeds. Thus they escape the risk of jail, but they are more wicked and dangerous than the ordinary thief.

A man who has just completed his first term of imprisonment almost invariably resolves that it shall be his last. He goes back to the city and struggles along for a short time, trying to make an honest living, but it is very hard. Everything is against him. Employers will not give him work. He falls in with his old associates; they tempt him; he is without means—he takes to stealing again as naturally as a duck takes to water.

Criminals are cruel to each other. Let one of them get employment and be living honestly, and another finds him out. If the one who is working does not submit to blackmail, the employer will receive a letter telling him what kind of a man he has working for him. I got employment for a number of professionals who were trying to give up their old lives. In every case old associates who found them, tried to bleed them, and failing in that, exposed them and had them turned adrift again.

A thief on the public highway is like a case of smallpox in a tenement house. He is a menace to all about him, and should be put where he could do no damage. Many States of this country have what is called a "Professional Criminal Act," and we need one. During the last session of the Legislature such an act was introduced and passed through the Senate, but it was defeated in the Assembly mainly through the efforts of a New York city member. The criminals against whom it was directed had influence enough to defeat it. The men who are active in spreading the erroneous impression that professional criminals of the most hardened description are in the habit of reforming and leading model lives ever after, are what I call professional philanthropists who get salaries for effecting such reforms. The people who pay them expect results, and consequently, every now and then one of these professional philanthropists catches a thief who is willing to pose as a reformed man. He takes these fellows about with him from place to place, and the thief makes addresses at meetings, and tells how hard he was, and how bad his companions are, and how he has been brought to see the light through the ministrations and exhortations of the professional philanthropist, and how holy and righteous and full of grace he has become. As a star evangelist of the sensational order the thief is a great success till he is talked out, when the philanthropist discards him for a new attraction and the thief goes back to his old business again.

THE EVANGELIST CROOK.

THOMAS BYRNES.

Ex-Warden Green Says No.

With the exception of Billy Porter, the bank burglar, I never met a professional criminal who did not reform—when he was in prison. And this is not all hypocrisy. A convict often leaves the penitentiary with the best intention. But when he gets out into the world he finds all the avenues to employment crowded with people who are not only honest and capable, but are known to be such, while he has a stigma on his name. He is liable at any time to be exposed as a jail-bird and the kind of work that he can get is often considered beneath him, for criminals have plenty of pride. If he does succeed in getting a good place, he generally goes to the wall sooner or later in the competition with people who are not handicapped. But most convicts when released go straight back to their old haunts, because they have nowhere else to go.

I think the wisest thing we can do with our professional criminals is to shut them up for life after they have served three terms for felony, if they won't earn an honest living.

The time to reform criminals is at the beginning of their career. If a boy who stole and fell into the hands of the police for the first time was sent to prison for a year and worked very hard for six weeks, then released, with the remainder of his term hanging over him, to be added to any future sentence he might get if he did not keep straight, I think it would frighten him and do some good; but usually young criminals are treated with such great tenderness that they grow to ridicule prisons. As they advance in crime they become prison-proud. They boast of having done time in this and that State, just as men boast of having been all over the world. I would be severe on young criminals, and try to frighten them into behaving themselves, and failing in that, I would shut them up for life.

JOHN GREEN.

A Voice from the Tombs.

I am inclined to state from my experience as a prison official that only a very small percentage of professional criminals reform.

The professional criminal who has served several terms of imprisonment and makes an effort to reform has many obstacles in his path. If he succeeds in obtaining honest employment and tries to shun his former prison "acquaintances," he is often jeered and sneered at by a low class of criminals, who occasionally "give him away." As a result, he is discharged or he quits work discouraged and again falls back into his old criminal habits.

The Prison Association assists discharged criminals in many ways to reform, but in my opinion only a very small number of the "professional criminals" do reform.

CHARLES OSBORNE
"Warden" of The Tombs.

What Jere Wernberg Thinks.

I know of only two habitual criminals who ever reformed, and I have known a thousand of the class. The two of whom I speak were burglars, who had achieved considerable distinction. They gave up lives of crime and are now doing well in New York. I remember another man of the same class who straightened up and lived for a time respectably. He was a pickpocket of no mean order of talent. He went to Washington and whether or not he is still living at peace with the law and his fellow man I cannot tell. I have observed in my experience several reasons why professional criminals do not reform. Old environments and associations keep them down for one thing, and on the other hand they find it very difficult to obtain employment. No man wants to take a criminal into his store or office when he can chose of so many honest people.

Professional criminals become lazy and spoiled for hard, steady toil just as ball players and soldiers are lost to the working world. All luxuries are within the grasp of the successful thief, and what I say of thieves applies as well to all other professionals. Still I don't believe in locking them up for life. Where are you going to draw the line and who is going to tell when a criminal is past reformation and when crime has become habitual with him. The law is right as it stands. It punishes a man for a specific offence and the punishment is cumulative if the offence is repeated. But it does not punish the desire to commit crime, and I think that it should not.

THE cod-fishing industry off the eastern coast of Long Island is better than for many years.

THERE are over 100,000 miles of submarine cable in operation—sufficient to girdle the earth four times.

IT HAS been decided that Bedloe's Island, on which the statue of Liberty stands, belongs to New Jersey.

THE number of telegraphic messages annually transmitted in all parts of the world may be estimated at 300,000,000.

AN AMERICAN company has given two French painters an order for a panorama of Stanley's two journeys through Africa. It is intended for the world's fair in 1892.

THUNDERSTORMS are more frequent in Java than in any other part of the globe. On an average they occur in the island on ninety-seven days of the year. In England the average marks thunderstorms on about seven days in the year—only half the number recorded in France.

AT THE beginning of the present year it is estimated that about $600,000,000 was invested in electrical industry in this country, distributed as follows: Telegraph companies, $120,000,000; telephone companies, $80,000,000; electric light and power plants, $300,000,000; electrical supply works, $100,000,000.

THE new cantilever bridge across the Colorado river, 13 miles below Needles, Cal., will require 3,300,000 pounds of iron to complete it. It rests upon two massive stone piers that are 65 feet below the bed of the river, and the center span is the longest unsupported one in the world—660 feet between the cantilevers.

THE Pike's Peak cogway will be illuminated the entire seven miles by electricity. Carbons will sparkle on top of the old giant of the Rockies, and a night train will be run for the benefit of those who enjoy novelty. It will require an enormous outlay of money to put in the plant, but the contractors say it will be done.

A HARTFORD hardware merchant named Hill is responsible for the invention of the American lawn mower. He sent a number of the clumsy English mowers to a Philadelphia man and overcharged him 75 cents for boxing. The Philadelphian refused to pay for them, and sat down and invented a lawn-mower of his own, which has driven out the English contrivance.

THE great Bear River Canal in Utah, for the construction of which $2,000,000 has been provided, is expected to be one of the most extensive irrigation works in this country. It will irrigate 200,000 acres of land in Salt Lake Valley and 6,000,000 on Bear river, increasing the value of the land to $50 an acre. Bear lake is in Eastern Idaho. The reservoir for the canal covers 150 square miles.

IT is said that the common cow-catcher attachment to locomotives is about the only article of universal use that was never patented. Its inventor was D. B. Davis, of Columbus, O., who found his model in the plow. Red lights on the rear car of trains, it is said, were adopted at the suggestion of the late Mrs. Swisshelm after a railway accident in which she had a narrow escape.

JOHN JACOB ASTOR owned two thousand seven hundred high class dwelling houses, rented at an average of two thousand dollars a year each. He owned besides tenement houses in untold number and no end of real estate devoted to business uses.

QUEEN VICTORIA has a fancy for Vienna and French bread and rolls in all sorts of odd shapes. Besides having it made up in a score of fancy twists and curls, she always has some baked in the form of little dolls. These are for her grandchildren when they eat at her table.

KING HUMBERT is a true vegetarian. He lives entirely on vegetables, antepastos and fruits. The doctors have forbidden him to drink coffee, and his only beverage is at present a little Bordeaux and plenty of water. The King never feels so well as when his fare is bread, potatoes and oranges.

DELMAR GUANCIA, a Spaniard, who is now visiting the principal cities in this country, does not speak a word of English. He expresses his wants by pictures: If he wants a pitcher of water he shows the picture of a pitcher to the bell-boy. If he desires to attend the theater he shows a picture of a stage with actors to the hotel clerk and a boy is assigned to take him to the best show in town.

CHOICE BITS OF VERSE.

Truth.

The scholar spake, as one who knows
Whereof he speaketh: "Truth is old—
Time's hand has touched his head with snows.
The heart of Truth is stern and cold.
The rude world offers only scoffs and jeers;
And sore of spirit Truth drags out his years."

Whereat the poet sweetly smiled;
"Nay, thou art wrong. I found the Truth
In semblance of a little child,
Endowed with everlasting youth;
And what I heard was lisped with childish tongue.
The world is growing old—but Truth is young."
—Flavel Scott Mines, in Independent.

Not Uncommon.

Just a selfish maiden,
Just a niggard old,
Just a little wedding,
Just a pot of gold.

Just a funeral sermon,
Niggard passed away,
Just a buxom widow,
Rich and rather gay.

Just a dashing fellow,
Trim from head to feet,
Looking for a fortune,
Something of a beat.

Just another wedding,
Just a honeymoon,
Just a foolish woman
Learning something soon.

Just a squandered fortune,
Just a grim divorce,
Just a gray-haired woman,
Just the usual course.
—Merchant Traveler.

A Poem Postponed.

I want to tell you about my kitten—
The prettiest kitten that ever purred;
But I've looked my speller through and through,
And I can't discover a single word
That rhymes with kitten,
Excepting mitten—
And that is old, and too absurd;
So the only thing for me to do
Is just to send you what I've written,
And wait till she grows to be a cat—
There are ever so many to rhyme with that.
—Helen C. Walden, in St. Nicholas.

Grandmamma's Fan.

Ivory sticks and painted face,
Bits of yellow, tattered lace,
Tiny mirror set in place,
Beauty sadly marred by age,
But a treasure I'll engage
When the minuet was the rage.

Fancy I can see her now—
Powdered locks above her brow,
Sweeping courtesy, mincing bow;
Such a dainty, graceful maid—
One hand holds her stiff brocade,
Other yields the coquette's aid.

O'er her little head well curled
Spreads the silken toy unfurled.
Now it's shut—anon it's twirled
To conceal a stolen glance,
Or a crimson blush perchance,
As she treads the stately dance.

Ghostly, fleeting vision fair,
Flashing eyes and powdered hair,
Marble shoulders glancing bare—
Time rolls backward for a space.
O'er this faded silk and lace
Gleams the witch'ry of thy face.
—Edith Sessions Tupper, in Life.

Regret.

'Twas after the ball,
'Twas dark in the hall,
Her "good-night" was not very emphatic;
'Twas such a good chance
For sweetest romance,
And I lingered with longing ecstatic,
'Twas dark in the hall
'Twas after the ball.

'Twas after the ball,
'Twas dark in the hall—
Such a chance for a parting romantic!
And—she was not cold;
Why was I not bold?
When I think of it now I am frantic.
'Twas dark in the hall,
Just dark—that was all.
—Morgan MacKnight, in Judge.

The Will.

Blame not the times in which we live,
Nor Fortune, frail and fugitive;
Blame not thy parents, nor the rule
Of vice or wrong once learned at school—
But blame thyself, O man!

Although both Heaven and earth combined
To mold thy flesh and form thy mind,
In spite of science, spite of fate,
The judge within thee, soon or late,
Will blame but thee, O man!

Say not, "I would, but could not—He Should bear the blame who fashioned me—
Call you mere change of motive choice?"
Scorning such pleas, the inner voice
Cries: "Thine the deed, O man!"
—J. A. Symonds, in Woman's Journal.

A Hirsute Romance.

A curly, well-trimmed beard he wore,
Its color golden yellow.
'Twas just the kind most maids adore
Upon a handsome fellow.

But she who was his joy and life
Refused him most politely,
And said she could not be his wife,
With "bear face" so unsightly.

Then to a barber hastened he,
Because it seemed his duty
To let his fair beard taken be,
E'en though it spoiled his beauty.

So with a shaven face he went
Anew to woo the maiden.
To her his manly knee he bent,
His tongue with sweet words laden.

But 'twas no use—she threw him o'er,
And cruel more than clever,
She said, "I can not wed you, for You're more bare faced than ever!"
—Lawrence American.

STRANGE TO RELATE.

A MAN who recently fell ill in Warsaw begged his doctor to accept an old lottery ticket in place of fee, and the doctor did so. The ticket drew $40,000.

A CURIOUS use has been found for the phonograph. It was produced at the funeral of a clergyman in order that a sermon of the deceased upon himself might be heard by the mourners.

AN actress in New York has entered a claim that a particular pose which she assumed while being photographed "is all her own," and that no other actress or photographer has the right to appropriate such pose.

MRS. CONWAY, an aged Irish woman of Atlanta, Ga., put on mourning in honor of Jefferson Davis and Henry W. Grady. Her dresses were made from the calico used in draping some of the city windows when those gentlemen died.

IT very seldom happens that bees will make their honey and comb in the open air, but such a case has been found in an orange grove southeast of Orlando, Fla., where a swarm of bees made a large piece of honey on the limb of an orange tree.

A TEXAN advertised that he would be at Murfreesboro, Tenn., one day lately, to buy all the hens he could get at twenty-five cents apiece. He came along in a poultry car capable of holding 5,000, and he had to telegraph for another, as there were 10,000 pullets waiting for him.

A ST. LOUIS woman identified a body in the morgue as that of her husband, from whom she had been separated for several years, and gave it an expensive funeral. Her husband has since turned up alive and well, and, having learned that his wife had buried him in style, called on her to express his thanks.

CHARLES NESS, of Searsmont, Me., who was partially blind for twenty-five years from a bad fall received during the war, fell while carrying a pail of milk into the house one day lately and again struck the back of his head heavily. Strange to say, his eyesight has been restored, and now he can see to read as well as before the first accident.

ONE of the industries of New York is the insurance of babies. The sum paid is usually five cents a week on each child. The system is productive of good in so far that it assures very poor people against being put to extremes in the event of a death in the family. On the other hand, the possible and even probable abuses are obvious, for it gives heartless parents a direct personal interest in the death of one who is entirely at their mercy.

IN New York a life insurance company has lent $120,000 to a church and the church has had the lives of a number of its members insured in favor of itself. The life insurance company agrees, every time one of the members who is thus insured dies, it will reduce the debt of the church by the amount of his policy. Every time the church has a funeral one of these it tops off a slice of debt; in other words, members and debt disappear together.

A SEANCE IN CONGRESS.

Several Good Stories Retailed in the House Restaurant.

Remarkable Effect of the Oklahoma Debate—Colonel Dick Wintersmith's Opinion of John Chamberlin—Judge Timothy J. Campbell to the Front.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]

The pie-eater of the West, the bean-consumer of the East, the "chitting" masticator of the Gulf States and the terrapin admirer of the Eastern shore retail many an amusing story while smacking their lips over their beer, ice-water, whisky or champagne. There were a great many of these stories told in the restaurant during the Oklahoma debate.

One good story of a good man always brings out another of the same man.

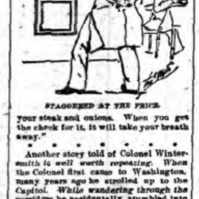
One of Colonel Dick Wintersmith, of Kentucky, was retailed. It was said that not long ago he went to John Chamberlin's hotel for breakfast. He indulged in beefsteak and onions. The steak was succulent and the onions were crisp and not greasy. The Colonel enjoyed the meal hugely. After swallowing an extra cup of coffee he called for his check. It amounted to over two dollars. He protested strenuously, saying that it was an outrageous price. John Chamberlin laughed at him and offered to "chalk his hat." The Colonel, however, with true Kentucky hauteur, refused the favor. He paid the bill. Not long afterward an acquaintance entered the restaurant. Turning to the Colonel he said:

"My appetite is a little off this morning. I hardly know what to order for breakfast."

The Colonel advised him to try beefsteak and onions.

"There is nothing more palatable," his friend responded, "and nothing that would satisfy my appetite so well, but I have to attend several fashionable receptions this afternoon, and I am afraid that the onions will taint my breath."

"That needn't trouble you," the Colonel replied. "Sit down and order your steak and onions. When you get the check for it, it will take your breath away."



STAGGERED AT THE PRICE.

* * * * * * * *

Another story told of Colonel Wintersmith is well worth repeating. When the Colonel first came to Washington, many years ago he strolled up to the Capitol. While wandering through the corridors he accidentally stumbled into the public gallery of the United States Senate. The galleries were packed. Charles Sumner was making a speech. Everybody listened with breathless interest. When Mr. Sumner closed, Garret Davis arose. Mr. Davis enjoyed the nick-name of Garrulous Davis. As he began to speak there was a rush from the galleries. Colonel Wintersmith was astounded. He recognized Mr. Davis and became indignant. Drawing a brace of revolvers he said:

"Gentlemen, you will please keep your seats. The Senator from Kentucky is talking and you must hear him."

Every man resumed his seat instantly. Among the number was an old Jerseyman, who was wedged in a front seat between two negroes. Garret Davis talked for three hours. The Jerseyman drew many a long breath, but never swored. When the speech was concluded he walked up to Colonel Wintersmith and said:

"Did I understand you that it was the Senator from Kentucky who was addressing us?"

"Yes, sir," responded the Kentucky Colonel; "he was Senator Davis from Kentucky. Have you any fault to find with his speech?"

"N—n—no," the Jerseyman stammered, "but I want to ask one favor of you. The next time you catch me in this gallery when the Senator from Kentucky arises to speak, please don't warn me, but shoot—shoot right off—the quicker the better."

* * * * * * * *

A good story was told of Colonel Moses P. Handy, the well-known president of the Clover Club in Philadelphia. This club amuses itself by inviting the most noted men in the country to its banquets, and by toasting them and by chaffing them when they reply to the toast. At one banquet, at the end of a speech, Colonel Handy said: "It now gives me much pleasure to call upon the Nestor of the Press to respond to a toast."

He referred to Mr. McKee, an old Philadelphia editor. Ex-Governor Bunn, of Idaho, a well-known newspaper man, arose with mock dignity and acknowledged the compliment. Quick as a flash Handy responded: "I said Nestor of the Press—not jester."

Bunn was floored and his temper was not improved when Dr. Bedloe shouted: "A hot cross bun."

* * * * * * * *

Asher G. Caruth, of Kentucky, next described a laughable scene. He located it in the Texas Legislature, but possibly it occurred in Kentucky. A valued member had died, and the House was paying tribute to his memory. In an affecting speech a colleague, in referring to the deceased, said:

"He left a front room unfortunately vacant at the house of Widow Jones' on the hill, whar it is fittin' to remark that the members of this yer Legislater are boarded at the uniform price of four dollars a week, washin' not included."

At this a tall member from Tom Green County shouted: "P'int of order, Mr. Speaker!"

"The gentleman will state his p'int," the Speaker replied.

"Are it in order," said the member, "for a man in a speech on to a dead man to ring in a boardin'-house kept by his aunt and furnished by hisself?"

* * * * * * * *

As many good stories are told of Hon. Timothy J. Campbell as of any man who ever came to Washington. The latest was retailed by Congressman Dunphy, while stripping the wing of a chicken. It seems that Judge Campbell, Nicholas Muller, Jr., and a mutual acquaintance were standing on the steps of the Astor House picking their teeth when a squad of immigrants came up Broadway. They were strong, flaxen-haired fellows with weather-beaten faces, and overladen with luggage.

THE OLD JERSEY MAN UNABLE TO ESCAPE FROM A THREE HOUR SPEECH.

The mutual acquaintance said: "I wonder what country they came from."

Nicholas Muller, Jr., who is an expert in such matters, replied: "They are Norwegians."

"Oh, no," broke in Judge Campbell, "you're off there. They are Swedenborgians. I can tell them by their clothes."

* * * * * * * *

Another Congressman told a good story of Judge Campbell. While the judge was a member of Congress, there was treachery in one of the Assembly districts composing his Congressional district. The newspapers were commenting on its effect upon the judge's future political prospects. A brother member, upon meeting him, expressed a fear that it would be so damaging that Mr. Campbell would be defeated, if renominated.

"Oh, no," replied the judge, with the utmost confidence. "I know myself, and I know my people. I've been reading poetry lately. The poets always get things right. There's one verse written by a fellow named Tennyson that just suits my case. I don't believe you ever heard it. It's this:

"'Men may come, and men may go,
But I stay here forever.'"

Then turning to his brother member he raised both hands and said: "You can bet that my house is not built upon a rock of sand."

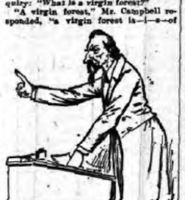
* * * * * * * *

Judge Campbell was one of the most popular men in the House. A more genial and obliging gentleman never breathed. He was particularly affable to new members. In the last Congress he introduced a new member to Governor Gear, who represents the old First district of Iowa. The Governor, who is fully as genial as the Judge, shook hands with the new acquaintance and said: "Oh, yes, I remember you perfectly. You were a member of the last House."

"Oh, no, Governor," Judge Campbell remarked; "he is a new member. You're entirely off. This House is a virgin forest to him."

The Representative, who overheard the remark, here broke in with the inquiry: "What is a virgin forest?"

"A virgin forest," Mr. Campbell responded, "a virgin forest is—i—s—of course any man knows what a virgin forest is—a virgin forest is—"



"ARE IT IN ORDER?" SAID THE MEMBER.

Here he began to move his hands as though he was working a buzz-wheel. "A virgin forest is a place—well, its a place where the hand of man has never put his foot."

* * * * * * * *

One of the best incidents of the Judge's career in Congress occurred just after the violent debate in the Senate between Senators Ingalls and Voorhees. The words "infernal liar," "dirty dog," "villainous scoundrel" and other epithets were freely used. Two days afterward Judge Campbell was called out of the House by an importunate constituent. On his return he entered through the main door. A violent spat between two members was in progress. The Judge was half way down the aisle when the word "liar" was used. Throwing both hands aloft, he shouted in a shrill falsetto voice: "Mr. Speaker. Parliamentary inquiry."

The Speaker rapped with his gavel and said: "The gentleman rises to a parliamentary inquiry. He will state it."

"Is this the United States Senate chamber?" Mr. Campbell screamed.

The House broke into a loud guffaw and the laughter continued for a minute or more. It broke up the row between the irate Representatives, who slunk to their seats before the merriment subsided.

THERE are two classes of people in the world—those who make fools of themselves and those who don't need to.

THE bones of the average man only weigh about twenty-four pounds, and yet some people put on airs, and step around, as though they weighed a ton.

WHATEVER chivalrous feelings is general the men of America may feel for women, they certainly do not stand up for them in the street cars. Consequently the women have to stand up for themselves.

IT is hard to tell which is the most ridiculous, the young fool or the old fool; but the old fool has this advantage—he will never be a young fool, whereas the young fool may some day be an old fool.

AN old convict recently released from the Auburn penitentiary, boasts of the fact that he was conducted to that institution by Grover Cleveland. He was convicted of murder and sentenced to imprisonment for life at Buffalo in 1871. "Grover Cleveland was Sheriff at the time of my sentence," he says, "and instead of sending a deputy to Auburn with me he went himself, saying that he had never been in the State prison and wanted to improve the opportunity. I believe I am the only man in the world who has been escorted to prison by a President of the United States. The very last paper Mr. Cleveland signed his name to at Albany as Governor was my pardon, to take effect March 5, 1890, and here I am."

METHOD IN HIS MADNESS

How Old Man Adrick Made Good His Son's Escape.

He Talked Horse to the Officer and Delays Him—This Illustrates the Mistake a Man Makes in Not Coming to the Point at Once.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

An old fellow, living in a remote district of Tennessee, was standing in his yard, lazily leaning against the fence, when a man, greatly excited, ran up and exclaimed:

"I must have a horse at once."

"Must be goin' to travel," the old fellow answered.

"Yes, and I am in a terrific hurry. Come, get me a horse at once and I will make it all right with you."

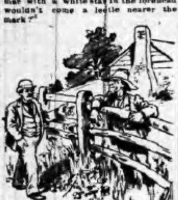
"Want a fast hoss, I reckon?"

"Yes, hurry up."

"How would a bay hoss with white stockin' feet suit you?"

"He'll do. Get him at once, please."

"Wall, I want to do the best I kin, an' nachully have to feel around a little, so I would like to know if a bay mar with a white star in the forehead wouldn't come a leetle nearer the mark?"



"I MUST HAVE A HORSE AT ONCE."

"I suppose I must humor you, although I am in a desperate hurry. Bring me the mare with the white star in the forehead."

"All right. I reckon I am the most particular man about a hoss you ever seed. I may go along wearin' of a dirty shirt an' my ha'r mout not be none too well combed, but when it comes to my hoss, w'y he's jest got to be fixed up in style or thar ain't no enjoyment for me. An' I always must have the best hoss. It don't make no difference if I ain't goin' more'n a mile away from home an' bein' of a liberal turn of mind I always reckon that other folks air the same way, so wouldn't you a leetle ruther have a black hoss with gray fetlocks?"

"Yes, give me him. Quick, please."

"You mean the black hoss with gray fetlocks?"

"Yes, yes; hurry up."

"Then you don't want the bay mar with the white star in the forehead?"

"No, get the black horse."

"An' not the one with white stockin' feet."

"Great Cæsar, no. Get me the black horse."

"Wall, now, you air jest as welcome to any of the others."

"Look here," said the applicant, endeavoring to be calm, "what sort of a man are you?"

"Wall, a native of ole North Kliny, of tolerable fair complexion, an' weigh about a hundred an' eighty when my debts air paid an' I am a feelin' right good."

"Now, sir, I am going to tell you in as few words as possible why I am in such a hurry. I am after a man who has committed an infraction against the law—"

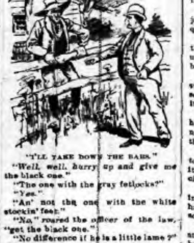
"The triflin' rascal."

"And unless I reach the railway station before he does he will escape me. My horse broke down about a quarter of a mile back yonder and I must have another one at once."

"You ride putty good stock when you do ride, I reckon."

"Look here, are you going to let me have a horse or shall I be compelled to take one?"

"Why don't you tell me which one you want? A man that is as accommodatin' as I am always insists on a feller takin' of his choice."



"I'LL TAKE DOWN THE BARS."

"Well, well, hurry up and give me the black one."

"The one with the gray fetlocks?"

"Yes."

"An' not the one with the white stockin' feet."

"No," roared the officer of the law, "get the black one."

"No difference if he is a little lame?"

"Confound it, you didn't tell me that he was lame. Get me one of the others, it makes no difference which one. Quick, or I shall be left in an embarrassing lurch."

"Then I reckon you want the bay mare with the white star in the forehead."

"Yes, she will do."

"No matter if she has got a habit of stumblin' an' fallin' down?"

"You infernal rascal, you didn't say anything about that. Get me one of the others, quick."

"Oh, now that I come to think about it, how would a blooded colt suit you?"

"The very thing. Get him at once."

"Even if he never has been rid?"

"You infernal rascal, I am half inclined to jump over there and wallow you. Here I have been fooling with you until that fellow will beat me to the station. I will go and make my own selection. Where is your stable?"

"Ain't got none."

"What! you have all those horses and no stable?"

"All what hosses?"

"Why the horses we have been talking about."

"I ain't got no hosses. Had a old nag last year but he died with the botts. I didn't say that I had any hosses, an' you didn't ask me if I had any. You come along an' 'lowed that you must have a hoss, so' I was jest a askin' what sort of a hoss you would like to have. If you had a asked me if I could let you have a hoss, w'y, as a man that never dodges a p'oint, I wouldn't told you no. But you didn't do that. You jest said that you had to have a hoss. In this here neighborhood, when a man wants anything he don't come to you an' say he must have it, but first asks you if you've got it; but I reckon customs air different in different parts of the country, an' I won't hold you responsible fur something you ain't used to."

The officer looked up and down the road, and then, bending a severe gaze on the old fellow, said:

"I would be discharging a duty, and would be serving justice, to get over there and whip you within an inch of your life."

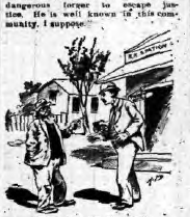
"That mout be, but I'd ruther you wouldn't do it, fur I've got to chop down a coon tree an' split a hundred rails after while, an' if you was to take me through sich a tough course of sprouts I mout not feel like doin' it, but if you must have a little exercise for yo' health, w'y I reckon I can accommodate you. I ain't got no science in the matter of boxin'—with me it is all knock down an' drag out—but I reckon you will excuse the ignorance of a ole man who hain't had many opportunities. You can jest climb over here, or ef you ain't feelin' right peart I'll let down the fence for you."

"I won't fight you, old man, however much I may be disposed to do so—will not fight you, although you have caused a criminal to escape, for I now plainly see that you are not of sound mind. Good morning."

"So long. Wish I did have all them nags we was talkin' about. You bet we'd git on 'em an' have a ride, sho nuff."

At the railway station the officer learned that the criminal had boarded the train and made his escape.

"This is enough to provoke a saint," said he. "I have not only lost a thousand dollars reward, but have allowed a dangerous forger to escape justice. He is well known in this community, I suppose."



"THAT WAS HIS FATHER."

"Who, that fellow John Adrick?" some one asked.

"Yes: and I'll be ashamed to show my face when I get back to town, and all on account of an old imbecile I met back yonder. He held me a half hour, talking about horses."

"Was he a peculiar old fellow with squint eyes, and long yellow whiskers?"

"Yes."

"Live in a double-log house to the left of the road?"

"Yes, he is the man."

"Well, but he is not the fool in this case. You see he is the father of the forger and held you until the boy got away."

OPIE P. READ.

A Serious Man Now.

"Where is the dashing boarder who used to be the life of the table when I was here before, Mrs. Livermore," asked the old patron of the house, addressing the landlady.

"I married him," was the quiet reply.

"Indeed! He was one of the sprightliest fellows I ever met, always bubbling over with spirits and chock full of stories. He's away from home, I suppose; I haven't seen him since I returned."

"He's at home; he has never been away."

"Indeed! where is he then?"

"He's in the kitchen washing dishes."

A Cow Ahead.

Justice Lamar, who never accepts a pass or present of any kind, tells of himself this one: "Down in the locality I call my home lives old John Dillard. Some years ago John presented me with a very fine Alderney cow. I said: 'John, I never receive presents.' 'Well,' he replied, 'Lamar, just give me your note, and, as you will never pay it anyway, you will be nothing out and a cow ahead.'"

A Modified Order.

Cowboy (striding into the Round-up Saloon)—Gimme a drink, an' be quick about it, if ye know what's good for ye. I ain't goin' ter pay fur it, nuther.

Experienced Bartender (suddenly covering him with a revolver)—What'll ye have?

Cowboy (blanching)—Water. I suppose that's the only drink that's free.

HOW SOME CREATURES FEED.

THE clam feeds with a siphon, and the oyster with its beard.

THE leech has three saws, with which it does good service in the phlebotomy line.

SPIDERS chew their food with horny jaws, which are sharp enough to give quite a nip.

THE butterfly pumps nectar into itself through a tube, and bees and flies suck up their food with a long tongue or proboscis.

THE tapeworm has neither mouth nor stomach, but just lays along and absorbs the already digested food through its skin.

SNAILS have teeth on their tongues—hundreds of them, but, as if these were not enough, some have them also in their stomach.

THE woodpecker has a three-barbed tongue like a Fijian's spear, with which it draws out the worm which it has excited by its tapping.

THE sturgeon is toothless and draws in its food by suction, but the shark has hundreds of teeth set in rows that sometimes number ten.

THE cuttlefish, which among other strange things, always walks with its head downward, does not chew its food at all, but masticates with its gizzard.

TOADS, tortoises, turtles and many lizards have no teeth. Frogs have teeth in their upper jaw only. Ant-eaters, sloths and armadillos have no teeth.

THE caterpillar feeds with two saw-edged jaws, working transversely, and uses them to such good advantage that he eats three or four times his own weight every day.

GRASSHOPPERS and locusts are very well provided with the necessary machinery for eating much and often. They have saw-like jaws, and gizzards too, the latter being fitted out with horny teeth.

THE lion and the tiger, and, indeed, most of the carnivora, do not grind their food, using their jaws only up and down, the molars acting like chopping knives, or, rather, scissors. Their mouths, in fact, are a veritable hash-mill.

THE carp's teeth are set back on the pharynx, so that it may be literally said to masticate its food in its throat. The carp, too, is about the only cud-chewing fish, the coarsely-swallowed food being forced up to these throat teeth for complete mastication.

DOGS seize their food with their jaws, cats with their feet, and so do monkeys, some of them pressing their prehensile tails into service. The squirrel uses its paws to carry its food to its mouth; the elephant its trunk, the giraffe, anteater and toad their tongues.

THE jelly-fish absorbs its food by wrapping itself about the object which it seeks to make its own. The starfish is even more accommodating. Fastening itself to the body it wishes to feed on, it turns its stomach inside out and enwraps its prey with this useful organ.

THE ray, or skate, for instance, has a mouth set transversely across its head, the jaws working with a rolling motion, like two hands set back to back. In the jaws are three rows of flat teeth set like a mosaic pavement, and between these rolling jaws the fish crushes oysters and other mollusks like so many

HEN PROTECTION.

The American Union is safe.

Let the eagle scream.

Hens along the Canadian border are to be protected.

Not laboring men protected, mind you, but laying hens.

The Republican solons in Washington have decreed a heavy tariff tax on eggs.

They do not lower it on the poor man's blanket and tin dinner pail, oh no, but pile it towering high on eggs.

Great is Protection,

And McKinley is its prophet.

He now expects every hen within the wide limits of the United States together with joy morning, noon and night, and every farmer from Maine to Oregon to shout himself hoarse as a bull-frog in honor of that grand egg protecting piece of statesmanship.

But the farmers of this country are not all simpletons, as some tricky politicians appear to think.

And we can justly imagine one of them as saying—

"Look here, McKinley, your protection talk is very fine, that egg tariff is quite right, but tell me, why you allow a particular friend of yours, that rich nickel monopolist in Pennsylvania, to import nickel ore from Canada, free of duty, in order that he may pocket more millions of profit, while we poor farmers can scarcely live?"

"Then agin, why do you re-impose a duty on hides, at the dictation of a mere close Chicago syndicate, thereby compelling us farmers to pay higher prices for the leather we use and the shoes we and our families wear?"

"Hold, my dear Mr. Farmer, you must have full faith in the protection we give you, without asking questions. Accept the assurance that tariffs are mighty intricate affairs, above ordinary comprehension, and only to be solved by ponderous Congressional brains."

"Bosh, Mr. McKinley, don't talk about brains, honesty and consistency are the things I am after, and permit me to say I firmly believe they cannot be found outside of Tariff Reform."

"Goodbye, 'till November."

PRESIDENTIAL.

Mr. Henry C. Lea, a prominent Republican of Philadelphia, in a recent open letter to President Harrison severely commenting upon his apparent subserviency to certain corrupt and designing politicians, made use of the following pointed expression:

"Discard the advisers who are luring you to your downfall. Recognize that the truest political expediency lies in the application of conscience to public affairs, and that you can serve your party best by stimulating the noble aspirations of the nation, rather than by pandering to the baser appetites of spoilsmen."

That was sound and timely advice, and without mentioning his name, it virtually pronounced a high eulogium upon the official character of President Harrison's immediate predecessor.

"The application of conscience to public affairs" made Grover Cleveland, while President of the United States, eminently great. No man in this or any other land ever filled public office with purer intent and more ardent effort to render [illegible] faithfully discharged trust for the honor of country and the welfare of all the people, than he.

Corrupt spoilsmen had no control over President Cleveland. They dared not approach him, because they well knew his determination for the right, and that no human power could budge him from doing what he conscientiously believed to be honest, just and true.

That was a glorious feature of the Cleveland Administration, and every passing day adds to the popular appreciation of it.

A STORM GATHERING.

If the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee of the present House of Congress intended to concoct a tariff totally devoid of practical business sense, and directly adverse to the interests of the American people, they have certainly accomplished the job by framing and reporting such a bill as that bearing the name of McKinley, their Chairman.

Under the hypocritical and thread-bare plea of protection, they unblushingly seek to still further enrich the mercenary few, monopolistic combines, at the expense of the toiling masses, to destroy commercial intercourse by imposing onerous and unnecessary restrictions, and to lessen, if not obliterate opportunities for the employment of labor, by levying absurd and even increased taxation upon materials essential for manufacturing industry and enterprise.

Viewed politically, we would have the Republican majority in Congress pass the McKinley tariff just as reported, because the effect will surely be to create a popular revolution and make the next House of Representatives overwhelmingly Democratic.

Opposition to the McKinley scheme is not confined to Democrats. Several of the most influential Republican journals throughout the country vehemently denounce it as an outrage. The Philadelphia Telegraph (Tariff Rep.) speaks out in meeting after the following fashion:

"The more the McKinley bill is examined, the more clearly it is seen to be the work of political tricksters; the more certain it is to be shown as not based upon wise and enduring principles of national prosperity. It is a one-sided, narrow-minded, partisan, vote-catching, double-ender affair, that may for a time catch voters at both ends, but in a little while it will lose more than is gained thereby. The Republican party never yet succeeded in that sort of business. It does not deserve to, and it never will."

A political storm is gathering.

The Union County Quartette.

(From the New York World.)

The Union County Democratic Quartet is said to consist of County Clerk Crowell, Rahway; President Moffett of the Plainfield City Council; Assemblyman Marsh and ex-Judge Gilhooley. The latter is to look after Elizabethport during the coming campaign for Senator and Sheriff, while Assemblyman Marsh is to take care of Elizabeth proper. Clerk Crowell of the Rahway Jacksonian Legion, is expected to look out for that city, and President Moffett to take care of Plainfield.

TWO-THIRDS FOR REVISION.

Vote of the Elizabeth Presbytery on the Question of Creed.

The annual meeting of the Presbytery of Elizabeth, which embraces thirty-one churches, was held in the First Presbyterian church in this city Tuesday. The opening sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Teal, of Westminster church, Elizabeth, the retiring moderator.

The following officers were elected:—Moderator, the Rev. Edward Greene, of Cranford; Stated Clerk, the Rev. Mr. Parry, of Pluckamin; Permanent Clerk, the Rev. John D. Kerr, of the Third Presbyterian church of Elizabeth; Temporary Clerk, the Rev. Mr. Cobb, of the Second Presbyterian church of Elizabeth, and Treasurer, the Rev. J. A. Blauvelt, of Roselle.

The committee appointed at the last regular meeting of the Presbytery to consider the overture submitted by the General Assembly on the subject of revision of confession was constituted as follows: Ministers, the Revs. Drs. Kempshall, Teal, Gillespie, McNulty, Ketchum, and the Revs. Converse and Greene; Elders, Voorhees, [illegible], Woodruff and Pierson.

At the business session Tuesday the committee submitted both a majority and a minority report, the former by the Rev. Dr. Kempshall, of Elizabeth, and the latter by the Rev. Edward Greene. Several hours were spent in discussing the reports, and the Presbytery decided by a two-thirds vote in favor of the majority report, which favored a revision.

The New York Independent of this week gives returns of the vote of 126 Presbyteries on revision of the Confession of Faith.

These returns show that 82 Presbyteries have voted in favor of revision, 40 against revision, and 4 have refused to vote.

There are yet eighty-six Presbyteries to be heard from, and the indications are, the Independent says, that the vote in favor of revision will be about two-thirds of the number.

In the evening popular services were held in the church, at which addresses were made on "Consecration," "Growth" and "The Christian's Duty and Wisdom as to the Impenitent," respectively.

The Woman's Presbyterial Society for Foreign Missions in the Presbytery held its nineteenth annual meeting in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church at 2:30 P. M., Tuesday. The annual reports were presented, and other business transacted.

NEARING THE FINISH.

Fanwood Passes Westfield in the Bowling Tournament.

Four of the scheduled games in the Central League were bowled on Tuesday, two at Fanwood and two at Elizabeth. Fanwood won both from the "Nameless" of Westfield; and Elizabeth won one and lost one with the "Mondays" of Westfield.

Elizabeth's men were all out of shape, but the Westfielders won with a score of a little over 700. Fanwood's bowlers, however, made the highest average of the tournament. Their scores were:

TWO POLICEMEN DISMISSED.

Done the Same Way in Jersey City as in Elizabeth and Plainfield.

Twenty Jersey City policemen who had violated the rules of the department in one way or another were up for trial at yesterday's meeting of the Police Board of that city. Chairman George Conklin of the First Precinct, and Patrolman Cooper of the Fifth Precinct, both of whom were found guilty of serious charges, were dismissed from the force.

The Racing Season Opened Yesterday.

The prospects for a brilliant meeting at the New Jersey Jockey Club's track were never so bright, and from indications the season will be the greatest yet enjoyed by the club. The opening was Tuesday. Arrivals from several prominent stables have been coming in daily and the list of horses entered in the different events will be large. This meeting is the opening of the Spring racing season in this vicinity, and it will be under the personal superintendency of Col. McIntyre, Secretary of the club.

Spending the People's Money to [illegible].

Early in the year 1889, before any official papers had been appointed, there was to be done some city advertising and the City Clerk inserted it in the Constitutionalist and the Central Times, two papers of opposite politics, as the State law requires.

He not only did not authorize the advertising to be done in any other paper, but personally forbid any other paper to insert it. In spite of that, one Morrison presented a bill for the very advertising that had been particularly and distinctly refused him.

That was over a year ago, and the Council of 1889 would never pay the bill. The Council of 1890, however, voted on Monday that a warrant be drawn for the amount—$63.20.

One of the Councilmen said he voted for the illegal claim "to get rid of Morrison." Others of the Councilmen felt the same way, while the rest were afraid of the claimant. Now what will the people think of "an honorable body" who will vote away the people's money to hush a man's mouth—who will use other people's money to protect their own skins?

The Council of 1890 has furnished the evidence that it is worth at least $63.20 to a man if he will scare them [illegible].

CITY COUNCIL MEETING.

ANOTHER LONG AND TEDIOUS SESSION.

The Appropriations Fixed, and the Tax Ordinance Adopted—"Battle Row" Leased for the City's Poor—The Claim of the Late Geo. P. Suydam Adjusted, Likewise the Illegal Claim of Thos. W. Morrison—Resolutions Relating to the Action of the Police Board Declared Out of Order by the Chair, and an Appeal Taken from His Decision—The Council in an Uproar.

Probably one of the most disgraceful scenes which has ever occurred in this city, since the city was incorporated in 1869, took place at the adjourned regular meeting of the City Council, on Monday—a matter which will go on record as being unprecedented in the history of the city. Just who is responsible for the disgraceful proceedings, THE PRESS is not at this time prepared to state. Suffice it to say that "there's a nigger in the fence," somewhere.

President Moffett called the meeting to order at 8:30 o'clock, "sharp," all the members being present. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, after which the regular order of business was suspended and Council went into a Committee of the Whole, with Mr. Newhall chairman, and Mr. J. B. Coward, clerk.

The various committees then reported the amount of money thought necessary for the coming year as follows:

Alms Committee—$4,500.

Finance Committee—$200.

Fire and Buildings—$10,000.

Police, Salaries and Elections—$13,500, which amount includes $840 for rent, $400 for election purposes, and the salaries of two additional policemen

Public Lights—$9,000. With this appropriation the Committee recommended the location of several additional lamps. The increase over last year's appropriation is about $1,500 in round numbers.

Streets—$15,000 Chairman Smith said in submitting the Committee's recommendation that some of the streets in the city are in a wretched condition. He further stated that the Council of '89 had left about $3,000 in unpaid claims for the present Council to adjust. Besides about $1,200 has already been expended for street work this year, leaving a trifle over $11,000 available.

Mr. Hetfield spoke in favor of reducing the tax percentage. He expressed himself of the opinion that the $3,000 due, left by the last Council, was to be paid by the outstanding taxes of '89. He was in favor of making the appropriation $12,000. Mr. Rushmore favored the $15,000 appropriation. A vote was taken and the committee's recommendation was adopted, Messrs Hetfield and Jenkins, voting "No."

Water, Printing and Stationery—$1,500.

Board of Health—$800.

Public Library—$2,500.

Mr. Moffett introduced an ordinance relative to the assessment and collection of taxes. The ordinance provides for the assessment of $25,000 for general purposes $4,500 for the support of the poor; $2,500 for the maintenance of the Public Library, and $10,000 for Fire Department purposes. The ordinance was adopted, and when the Committee of the Whole arose, Chairman Newhall reported the same to the Council, together with the several other recommendations of the committees, all of which were adopted without a dissenting vote.

Several applications for hack, truck and cartmen's licenses were received, referred and subsequently granted, and Garret Dyer and James Dawe were confirmed as members of No. 2 Engine Company.

The corrected claim of Engineer Rudolph Hering, for $1,080, was referred and finally ordered paid.

Upon resolution adopted by Mr. Dunham, "Battle Row" was leased at a rental of $450 a year for the city's poor, the owner agreeing in writing to put the place in a tenantable condition, and the Corporation Counsel was directed to prepare a lease and have the same signed by the Mayor and Clerk.

The Finance Committee, through Mr. Newhall, submitted bids from the Herring and Marvin Safe companies, the former offering to furnish the city, for its treasurer, a "champion fire proof safe" for $112.50 net cash, and the latter one of the Marvin safes for $90. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee with power.

The Fire and Building Committee reported on the petition of Messrs Jno. H. Tier and J. W. & H. Coddington, sent in at the last meeting, recommending that the petition be not granted. Recommendation adopted.

Mr. Rushmore, from the Laws and Ordinance Committee, reported back certain documents received from the Census Bureau at Washington, with the recommendation that the clerk fill in the blanks and forward the same to Washington. So ordered.

The same Committee reported on the claim of the widow of the late Judge Geo. P. Suydam for injuries to a horse, and recommended the payment of $150 in full settlement for the claim for damages. The matter was laid over, to find out whether the city or the Board of Freeholders was responsible for the accident.

VOTING FOR AN ILLEGAL CLAIM.

An ancient claim of Thos. W. Morrison, for $63.20, payment of which was refused by the Council of 1889, because it was illegal, was next brought up by the Laws and Ordinance Committee, through Mr. Rushmore, its chairman, who stated that the claim was a just one and should be paid. Mr. Dunham was of the same opinion, claiming that negligence on the part of ex-City Clerk Leonard was the cause of the claim remaining unpaid.

Mr. Hetfield took the right stand, justly claiming that inasmuch as the Council last year had refused to pay the bill, he saw no reason why the present Council should shoulder the claim. Nevertheless, the bill was order paid. All voting aye.

[As a matter of fact it may be stated that the term of the official papers in this city comes to an end and expires with the Council each year, on January 1. At the time Morrison's claim is dated, March 1, 1889, there were no officially appointed papers in this city, and according to law the City Clerk was obliged to publish official notices only in two newspapers. Clerk Leonard selected the Central Times and THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, and at the same time he informed Morrison of his selection, telling him that he must not publish the proceedings. In spite of this Morrison published the ordinances, etc., adopted by the Council, and sent in his bill for $63.20 over a year ago. The City Clerk refused to audit the claim, and the Council of 1889 refused to pay it].

The same committee also reported in favor of paying two bills of Jasper R. Wilson for crushed stone, alleged to have been delivered. One bill was for $230.50, and the other was for $10.23. Although the vouchers were lost, the Committee had no doubt that the claims were correct, and they were ordered paid.

The liquor license applications of F. E. Miller and Frank Linke were reported back by the License Committee as conforming with the ordinance, and they were ordered engrossed and advertised.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the Public Lights Committee to locate additional street lights, as set forth in the committee's recommendation above referred to.

THE CIRCUS BEGINS.

At this stage in the proceedings, Mr. Newhall sprung an unexpected set of resolutions upon the Council, as follows:

WHEREAS, Proceedings have been instituted before the Police Board of the City of Plainfield which have resulted in resolutions of the Police Board to exclude from office Tunis J. Carey and Patrick Lynch members of the police force of said city, with forfeiture of their salaries for specified periods; and

WHEREAS, The said action of the said Police Board in the premises may be illegal and irregular whereby the City of Plainfield, or the members of the Common Council of said city, may be rendered liable for the payment of the salaries of said officers, during the period prescribed by said resolutions for their exclusion from office, and otherwise; and

WHEREAS, The said action of the said Police Board may have been taken without the full benefit of the advice of competent counsel upon the questions of law upon which the validity of the decision of said board depends.

Resolved, That the Corporation Counsel be and is hereby requested at once to prepare and submit to the Council a written opinion as to whether the proceedings of the said Police Board in the said cases of Carey and Lynch, were, in every way, formal and according to law, and, particularly, advising the Council first: Whether the accused officers were fairly and lawfully tried according to the laws of the State of New Jersey; second, Whether a regular and formal appeal has been taken by said officers from the decision of said Police Board, and, if so, whether, under existing rules and adjudications, there is reason to believe that the action of said Police Board will be set aside. Third, whether, if the proceedings of said Police Board are held, by an appellate tribunal, to be irregular and illegal, the City of Plainfield, or the members of said Police Board, or the members of the Common Council not members of said Board, will be rendered liable in the premises, and if so, to what extent. Fourth, whether, if there is reason to believe that the things done by said Police Board are likely to be adjudged to be unlawful, there are means provided by law whereby the City of Plainfield can be protected against legal proceedings and liability growing out of the said action of said Board. And be it further

Resolved, That upon the coming in of the said opinion of the Corporation Counsel, further action will be taken by the Council, without unnecessary delay, upon the subject to which these resolutions relate.

Mr. Hetfield thought that the resolutions were out of order, and the chair so decided it.

Mr. Newhall spoke in support of the resolutions, and appealed from the decision of the chair, something quite unusual for a Plainfield Council to do. Mr. Rushmore seconded the appeal, and openly expressed himself in favor of the resolutions.

Mr. Smith said he would have to vote to sustain the chair, unless the last section was stricken off. He moved to amend the resolutions by striking off the last section. Amendment adopted by a vote of 6 to 5.

"NO! NO!"

At this juncture in the proceedings, and while the fire bell was sounding an alarm, an effort was made to adjourn, but without effect, some of the Councilmen shouting "no! no! it isn't fair," etc. The vote on adjournment was as follows:

Ayes—Messrs Gallup, Hetfield, Moffett, Roberts and Spangenberg.

Nays—Messrs Dunham, Jenkins, Johnston, Newhall, Rushmore and Smith.

Mr. Hetfield made a motion to lay the matter on the table. Lost.

A vote was taken on the appeal from the President's decision, and Messrs Dunham, Jenkins, Johnston, Newhall, Rushmore and Smith, voted in support of the appeal.

A motion by Mr. Hetfield, laying the matter on the table, prevailed, and after the Auditing Committee made a report, Council adjourned at 11:30 o'clock.

THE MILLER CASE.

The Jury Agrees on a Verdict of Guilty, With a Recommendation of No Punishment. The Case Appealed.

The second trial of the case of the city vs. Joseph B. Miller for an alleged violation of the city ordinance in keeping his barroom open after eleven o'clock at night, came up before City Judge Codington and the following jury in the Council chamber, Monday afternoon: F. E. Marsh, J. F. McIntyre, Chas. Hand, Wm Brokaw, Charles Thiers, J. J. Kenney, L. E. Hart, John Rowland, Wm Hardy, John Berkaw, Wm. Dunn and Wm. Addis. A long panel of jurors were subpœnaed, but several of them were challenged either by the prosecution or the defence.

Counselor Samuel Kalisch of Newark, opened the case by renewing his motion to dismiss the complaint, on the ground that the ordinance under which the complaint was drawn, was adopted prior to the passage of the Werts bill, claiming that no conviction could be obtained under said ordinance. Another objection raised by counsel was that the ordinance was invalid because it provides that one-half of the fine shall go to the informer, and the city charter does not impose upon the Council the dispensation of fines. He further claimed that the suit was not properly brought, and that the complaint was fatally defective. The jury was sworn at 3:45 o'clock, and Mr J. B. Coward was the first witness sworn.

Counsel for the defence admitted the same documentary evidence as that presented at the former trial.

The only new evidence brought out by the prosecution was the fact, testified to by Councilman Johnston and Nicholas W. Conway, that Mr. Miller had admitted to Lawyer Bergen that his barroom was open after 11 o'clock on the night of March 17. The city then rested without even putting the complainant on the stand.

Mr. Kalisch asked for a non-suit, on the grounds before stated. The request was over-ruled.

Messrs Hetfield, Moffett and Miller testified substantially the same as at the former trial, after which the defence rested.

Able summing up was made by counsel on both sides, and after the Judge charged the jury, stating that any recommendations would be duly considered, the jury retired at 5:45 o'clock.

As soon as the door was closed on the jury, Juror McIntyre lighted his pipe, settled himself in a comfortable chair and remarked that he never ate any supper and was prepared to stay all night. But the jury were not long in deciding that as the defendant himself, all his witnesses and everyone else present, swore that the barroom was open after eleven o'clock, it must have been open. They also agreed, however, that Miller had not meant to violate the law, and Juror Thiers suggested that the Judge be instructed not to put any penalty upon the defendant.

Foreman Marsh was of the opinion that the Court would not listen to any "instructions" of the sort, but probably would consider the jury's "recommendations." To settle the matter, Judge Codington was sent for. He told the jury that he had had nothing to say further than he had already stated in his charge. He would take into consideration and give due weight to any recommendation they might hand in with their verdict.

After the Judge had retired a resolution was drawn up and signed by every member of the jury, requesting the Court to entirely suspended sentence. This was handed in with a verdict of "guilty," and Judge Codington suspended sentence as recommended.

The defendant has appealed the case and it will be carried to a higher Court for settlement.

Broke His Arm.

A young man named Casey, who is employed by Mr. H. A. Pope, was removing some empty boxes to Mr. E. J. Shaw's residence Monday afternoon, when he accidentally fell from the wagon in which he was standing fracturing the left arm at the wrist.

Poisons, such as opium, morphine, etc., ought to be avoided. [illegible] Cough Cure is entirely free from dangerous drugs, and costs 25 cents only.

MR. JACKSON'S TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

His Horse Shot by Youthful Highwaymen, and He Narrowly Escapes Running Over a Little Girl.

Mr. John H. Jackson, of Messrs Jackson & Codington, attorneys and counselors-at-law, met with an experience, last week, that might have proved fatal but for his coolness and presence of mind in a critical moment. While Mr. Jackson was returning from a visit to a client to whose home he drove in one of Plainfield's livery rigs, he turned into Grant avenue. As he did so he observed two boys about 14 years of age on the sidewalk, one of whom had a gun in his hand. He also observed that the boy pointed the gun towards him. Before he could expostulate the boy fired.

Mr. Jackson expected he was shot, but a sudden plunge by the horse called attention to the animal. The horse turned suddenly in the roadway, sprang on the sidewalk and ran madly towards Seventh street. Mr. Jackson pluckily held on the reins as the thoroughly frightened animal tore along, drawing the buggy after him.

Mr. Jackson then saw a little girl on the sidewalk coming towards him apparently oblivious of her danger. He shouted as loud as he could for her to get out of the way. As he flew by he closed his eyes and thinking of the dangerous position of the child, he breathed a prayer for her safety. The horse rushed on, but after a while he was able to get it off the sidewalk and into the road again, when after going a few blocks further the horse quieted down.

Mr. Jackson then had a chance to make an inspection. He found the breeching broke and the dashboard bent where the horse's heels struck it as he played a tattoo in close proximity to the legal head. Mr. Jackson drove down Grant avenue again in hopes of obtaining the name of the miscreant who so wilfully fired at him, and to render assistance to the little girl. To his delight he found the little girl was standing on the bank of the sidewalk as much surprised at the gentleman who had driven on the walk, as the driver was to find her unharmed. But the boys were no where to be seen. They had completely disappeared as if the earth had swallowed them.

Mr. Jackson drove to the livery stable after arranging the harness, where it was found that the horse was wounded in the shoulder. A veterinary was called who discovered that six shot had taken effect in the horse's shoulder, from which they were extracted. THE PRESS has not mentioned this before, in hopes that some clue might be obtained by the police as to the identity of the boy, but up to the present time nothing has been found of him. Mr. Jackson is more experienced in driving than ever before, but now he prefers to walk.

REFORM HALL.

Editor Wm. J. Leonard Delivers an Interesting and Instructive Address.

The speaker in Reform Hall Sunday evening was editor William J. Leonard of the Central Times who, after conducting the devotional services, delivered an able, argumentative and very interesting address. He reviewed the temperance question in its various phases, held up to view the terrible results of the drink habit, introduced pointed illustrations showing why all good citizens should band together for the suppression of the evil, condemned the whole license system and without harshly criticising those who entertained different opinions, boldly avowed himself in favor of the total prohibition of the liquor traffic, the bad effects of which he said were visible everywhere, and to a noticeable extent in Plainfield. Mr Leonard was listened to with close attention.

President Harper presided, and Mr. King led the music, with Mr. Rogers as organist. The president gave notice that the Thursday evening meeting of this week would be held in the basement instead of in the main hall.

Runaway on East Front Street.

A young woman seated in a basket phaeton, was driving along East Front street, Monday afternoon, when the animal took fright and ran away. The woman's name could not be ascertained, and when last seen she was being carried rapidly in the direction of Scotch Plains.

Oppressive Heat.

Sunday was a genuine Summer day and at times the heat was very oppressive. During the afternoon, the thermometer registered 85 degrees in the shade and 106 in the sun.

The intense heat did not, however, prevent people from going out of doors, and during the afternoon the streets were thronged with pedestrians and pleasure seekers.

A Successful Test.

Upon invitation of Manager Chas. K. Moore of the Plainfield Water Works company, Mayor Male and other city officials, on Saturday afternoon witnessed the partial testing of the six wells recently sunk by the company at Netherwood. The test proved satisfactory, the capacity of the wells being 1,000 gallons a minute. This gives an average daily supply of 1,440,000 gallons.

A Small Fire.

At an early hour on Saturday morning, Mrs. Henry Layton, one of the occupants of the tenement house in the rear of French's carriage factory on Somerset street, discovered a fire burning briskly in a room on the ground floor. She gave an alarm, and neighbors hastened to her assistance, extinguishing the flames with a few pails of water. The fire originated from a defective flue.

Rewarded After 16 Years of Faithful Service.

Mr Charles Carpenter, the courteous, efficient and always obliging general station agent at Dunellen, was today transferred to a position in the general office of the New Jersey Central Railroad, at 119 Liberty street, New York city. Mr. Carpenter has been in the employ of the Central Railroad for the past twenty years, and for the last sixteen years he has filled with accuracy and precision the position which he today left to accept a more lucrative one in the Company's main office.

By the removal of Mr Carpenter from Dunellen the company will lose the services of a reliable man, but it will also profit by appointing him to the position he will hereafter hold, and besides it shows the company's appreciation of Mr. Carpenter's many years of faithful service. Mr. Carpenter will continue to reside in Dunellen.

—Gustav Sutterlin of North Plainfield, was Monday granted beer-bottling license by the Court at Somerville. The case of Shotwell vs. Rice, was also adjourned over for a week.

John Smith is the happiest man that I know,
But wasn't he blue, though, not three months ago?
"My wife's running down just as fast as she can,
And the doctors can't help her," and then this poor man
Almost cried as he thought of the poor, suffering wife
Who seemed to be losing her hold upon life.

"Smith, I know just how you feel," said a friend to whom he told his sad story. "My wife was troubled precisely as yours is. I don't just understand it. I read about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription one day, and the first time I was at the drug store I bought a bottle of it and took it home to her. It worked wonders. In a short time she said she felt like another woman, and she began to hope that there was relief for her, after all. She kept on taking the medicine for a time, and now she's well. Get a bottle of the 'Prescription' and try it on your wife." "I will," said Smith. And he did, and it cured her and that's why he's so happy today.

12 INNINGS.

THE CRESCENT LEAGUE'S NINE OPEN THE SEASON WITH AN EXCITING GAME.

Newark's Professional "Stars" Greatly Surprised That They Had to Fight to Win—Jones and Livingston, "the Pony Battery," Surpass the Public's Expectations, and Five Hundred Spectators Fail to Find a Fault in Plainfield's New Team.

Though the sun shone and the air was mild, Saturday, still it was mid-Spring, the ground was full of the remnants of disappearing frosts, and the grand stands were draughty Consequently it was not expected that many would witness the opening of the baseball season on the Crescent League's grounds. Yet fully 500 men and a half-dozen ladies passed through the gate curious to see what kind of players Messrs Leggett and Burnet had signed to represent Plainfield in 1890.

The opening game was with Newark's crack semi-professional nine, the Star Athletics, which included Joe Nealis, of the Norfolk professionals, as catcher; Hetzell, of last year's Newark professionals, as pitcher; Carlin, formerly of the Elmiras, on second base; Armitage of the Acmes on first, and other selected players of experience and ability. They arrived early, dressed themselves in the homeliest suits imaginable, and stepped into the diamond with the assurance, "We've got a cinch," stamped on their faces.

The odds were certainly in favor of the visitors. They were old hands, and had been practicing and playing together every day for some weeks past. Whereas the Crescent nine met for the first time a few minutes before the game was called. The handsome pennant presented by Mr. Charles A. Reed, floating from a new white pole with a golden ball on top, did not hang its head a bit, however, and every Crescent seemed as full of determination to spread himself and make a show, anyhow.

The umpire engaged for the season, "Mr Johnson of Harlem," called the game as soon as 3:45 o'clock struck and the boys on the bleachers began to shout, "play ball!" Martin of the Crescents on arriving at the New York ferry to take the two o'clock train, found it would not accomodate the people with even a short-stop at Plainfield, so the game began without him. He arrived in time to take his place in the second inning.

The score was:

*Two men out in 12th inning, when winning run was made.

Earned runs—Stars 2. First base on errors—Crescents, 5; Stars, 5. Base on balls—Crescents, 1; Stars, 2. Hit by ball—McMurray, Carlin. Left on bases—Crescents, 8; Stars, 6. Two base hits—Martin, Armitage. Home run—Nealis. Passed balls—Nealis, 3. Wild pitch—Livingston, 1. Fli s caught—Crescents 10; Stars, 10. Umpire, Mr. Johnson. Time of game, 2:15.

Captain Wiegand being unacquainted with his men, could not lay out the batting order as it should have been, and undoubtedly a run was lost in the sixth inning at least. But the Crescents hit remarkably well for the first time at the bat, and up to the eighth inning had made five hits, while after the second inning not a Newarker got a hit until the tenth. Livingston gave entire satisfaction, and the good judgment of his selection was apparent. He struck out every man on the Stars with one exception. Jones proved himself a wonder. Not a ball passed him, and he cut off every man who attempted to steal second. Wiegand dropped nothing but a twisted ball over his head that he had to turn his neck out of joint to even see. Lufbery and Lee played an errorless game, the latter showing up in better form even than last year. Martin was unlucky in the field, but made two of the three runs and a two-bagger that would have added another if there had been one more batter to follow him.

The out field was a little stiff with the exception of Spencer. The two Macs each dropped a fly, but neither of the batters who hit them got home. Spencer was only put on to fill a vacancy, but he proved the right man in the right place. Three flys came his way and he fastened to them in approved shape. His backing-up of second base was also commendable. In the eight inning Reed started for second, and Jones throw went over "Joe's" head. Seeing that the ball had passed Lufbery, Reed continued on the way to third; but Spencer captured the ball, made a beautiful throw to Lee and the runner was out.

The Stars made their third run in the fifth inning, through the errors of Martin and McLaughlin The Crescents tied the score in the eighth through Carlin's error that gave Martin his first, and the hits of Wiegand and Jones that brought him home. Not another run was scored until the close of the 12th inning after two of the Stars were already out. Hetzell went to the bat and Armitage was on third. Hetzell had two strikes and Livingston gave him a teaser to pop up in the air. It went up as intended, but unfortunately dropped just behind Livingston and just in front of Lufbery where neither could get it in time to shut off Armitage at the plate Thus the winning run was made by a scratch in the closest game Plainfield had ever seen.

The score by innings was:

Crescents	0	0	0	1	1	0	0	1	0	0	0	0	—3
Stars	0	2	0	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	—4

Fire in the Valley.

A dwelling house owned and occupied by a man named Dykeman, located Northwest from Seeley's Mills, in Washington Valley, was partially destroyed by fire yesterday forenoon. The roof was burned off and the interior of the house was badly damaged. The fire originated from a defective chimney.

Meeting of the Street Committee.

The Street Committee of the City Council met on Saturday evening to decide upon the appropriation thought necessary for the running expenses of that part of the city government for the coming year The committee did not complete its work and another meeting will be held this evening at seven o'clock.

Raid on the Gamblers.

Frequent complaints have been made to the police against certain persons who are in the habit of gambling on Sunday, in the neighborhood of the Oil Cloth Works Sunday afternoon Captain Grant surprised a party of gamblers, and captured several decks of playing cards. The players consisted of men and boys, both white and black, and when the officer approached they took to their heels.

One of the players, a burly negro, struck Henry Southard a stunning blow in the face, as the former was escaping from the gambling den.

CHURCH NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Some Items and Figures From the Rev. Mr. Mitchell's "Visitor."

The pastor reported at Conference 523 full members, and 75 probationers; total 598.

Edwin Loomis, Geo C. Martin, and W. R. Codington were elected Trustees at the last annual meeting.

The following persons were united in marriage by the pastor: March 27, David C. Runyon and Mrs. Carrie Lott; April 8, Lewis B. Gamberton and Rebecca A. Smith; April 9, Thomas W. Kerr and Jessie V. Ennis.

The average amount paid by each member last year for the current expenses of the church was eight dollars. If each member had paid only seventy-five cents more there would have been no deficiency. Let there be an advance all along the line this year.

The city pastors dine at the Methodist Parsonage, Monday evening, April 14.

Dr. Carroll delighted a crowded congregation at Central M. E church, Newark, on Conference Sunday morning.

Master Donald McGee is recovering from scarletina, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry McGee will soon be released from their enforced quarantine.

The floral decorations at Easter were furnished by the Ladies' Aid Society, and Mrs. Clinton VanVliet superintended their arrangement with her usual good taste in such matters.

The following is the financial statement of the church:

The Sunday school has been re-organized with the object of a more thorough grading of the school. The Primary Department has been put in charge of Mrs. Chas. B Mitchell, with Miss Mary Martin as her assistant. The children will be taught in one large class, and much attention will be given to exercises adapted to young children Much prominence will be given to music. The ladies in charge of this department have had experience in this kind of work, and it is expected that the change from the old system of separate classes will be an improvement. There are still two classes in the Intermediate Department, in charge of Mrs L. M. French and Miss Sarah Sharp. The Junior Department consists of a five years' course. During the first four years the classes will retain the same teacher. The scholars of the fifth year will be in two classes, each having a separate class-room, and be in charge of Walter McGee and Miss Emma McGee. The Senior Department is divided into eight classes. There is a Ladies' Class, led by Mr. S. E. Birdsall; a Young Men's Class, in charge of Mr Geo. C. Martin; three Young Ladies' Classes, led by Mr. P. M. Smith, Mr. Ezra Loomis and Miss Adelaide McGee; a Lecture Class of ladies and gentlemen, who will pursue a regular normal course and prepare for teaching, led by Mr. James R Joy; a Reserve Class of ladies and gentlemen, who will study the lesson one week in advance, from which class supply teachers will be taken when regular teachers are absent, led by Mr. G. M. Rittenhouse. When scholars are promoted from the Junior to the Senior Department they will be about sixteen years of age The promotions from one department to another, or from one class in the Junior Department to another will take place annually at the beginning of the Conference year. Each year a reception will be given in the chapel by the Senior Department to the new members. A similar reception will be held by the Junior Department The scholars have been assigned to the various classes and departments according to their ages. It is possible some mistakes have been made, but Superintendent Jackson will gladly correct any such errors. The changes have been so radical, and many classes have been so separated from each other and their teachers, that it was a great pleasure to the officers of the school to note the good feeling and willing co-operation of the scholars and teachers. The new arrangements meet with the hearty approval of the Sunday School Board. We now have one of the best graded schools in Methodism, and with our unsurpassed chapel, every needed supply and help, an efficient corps of officers and teachers, and 450 pupils, our school justly ranks among the foremost in the land. All our young people should find a place in some of these classes, and the adult members of our church and congregation will find excellent teachers in the various classes of the Senior Department. The older members of the church should more often visit the school, see what is being done, and encourage the good and thorough work which is being accomplished in this department of the church. Mr. Jas. W. Jackson was again unanimously elected Superintendent, and he has appointed Dr. Hurlbut and Mr. Geo. R. Cornwell as his assistants.

DUNELLEN NOTES.

Interesting Items From Plainfield's Suburb.

The Easter exercises in the Dunellen Presbyterian church were of an unusually interesting nature. In the morning, the new pastor, the Rev. Mr. Stinson preached on the Resurrection, and in the evening the children sang carols, gave recitations, and the pastor delivered an address.

The handsome property recently owned and occupied by Mr. J. W. Handren, has been exchanged for a farm in Connecticut owned by Mr F J. Ritche

Mr. Percy Phillips has removed from Dunellen, and taken up his residence on Madison avenue, Plainfield.

The congregation of the Presbyterian church tendered their new pastor, the Rev. Mr. Stinson, a reception on Tuesday evening of last week.

Somerset County Courts.

The April term of the Somerset county Courts convened at Somerville on Tuesday last. So far as filed there are but seven Supreme Court cases, and four cases in the Circuit Court. In the Supreme Court the first case is that of Wm. H. Shotwell vs. Robt. W. Rice, in tort; R. V. Lindabury; Craig A. Marsh

In the Circuit Court the only case in which North Plainfielders are implicated is that of W. D. Heebner vs. Adam Fritz, On contract. Nelson Runyon; Walter L. Hetfield.

Dress Suits.

Watson & Co. are showing in window next to Market street one sample suit made from the fine black twilled worsteds now in such great demand by all fine custom tailors. The coats and vests of these elegant suits are cut in the new Albert cutaway style with point collars and are handsomely trimmed with flat folded facings. All these suits have extra pantaloons of the new trace line patterns in the handsome new Spring shades, but of sufficient weight to fit perfect, keep their shape and put on now. Watson & Co., made a large purchase of these fine worsteds at a very low price for cash from a large importing firm in need of money, and shall offer these elegant suits, made up in faultless style, at the extremely low price of $15 for any pattern you may select, and you cannot match them for $25, as you will say when you see them.—Newark Press.

RADAM'S
MICROBE KILLER
Cures All Diseases.

After myself and wife had used your Microbe Killer with great benefit, although I have not a farthing's pecuniary interest in your remedy, unsolicited and on my own responsibility, I wrote to nearly forty of those whose certificates you publish, embracing nearly all diseases, "please give your present impressions of Wm. Radam's Microbe Killer." I am happy to state the replies were not only favorable but enthusiastic. Many of the cures of complicated diseases almost surpass belief.
Sincerely yours.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

On April 1, I reopened the Riverside Stock Farm Branch Stables, at Nos. 19 and 21 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J., with a choice lot of Horses.

I shall endeavor to keep on hand at all times horses suitable for all purposes but shall make a specialty in coach and carriage teams, roadsters, family and saddle horses.

Believing that there is a growing demand in this city for such a business, I have remodeled my stable, put in large, well lighted box stalls and other improvements and have engaged an experienced salesman, who will be in charge of the business.

By running this stable in connection with, and as a branch of the Riverside Stock Farm Stables, I shall be enabled to select and keep on hand only such horses as are especially suited for this market.

The stock will always be shown, during the week, with pleasure, and you are respectfully invited to inspect the same.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

[illegible] A. DEMAREST, - - City Editor.

—Oh, for a Y. M. C. A. building.

—The next legal holiday will occur on Friday, May 30—Memorial Day.

—"Harry," [illegible] handsome horse, is much better and able to be out again. Veterinarian Foerch [illegible].

—A punster says ex-Captain Carey is like a nightwatchman, because one's Ben Wright and the other's been wrong.

—Five boys, ranging in age from ten to a dozen years, were [illegible] on coal trains near the Netherwood station, on Saturday afternoon.

—Mr George W. Rockafellow, who has been identified with the corner of Park and North avenues in a business way for very many years, has rented another store in the Thorn block on Somerset street.

—In the Middlesex County Courts at New Brunswick on Saturday, liquor licenses were granted to Wm. H. Taylor of Dunellen; Ellen Gerry of South Plainfield, and Herman Dana and Lloyd R. Nelson of New Market.

—The members of the third commuters club—principally residents of Washington Park—deny that they are to have the "Howard" car when the members of that club give it up for their new Pullman. They are to have a brand new one of their own, they say.

—It is rumored that the members of the W. C. T. U., are considering the possibility and devising the probable means of purchasing for their permanent occupancy and purposes, the Seventh-day Baptist church upon the completion of its new chapel.

—The members of the original commuters club who ride in the private car "Howard," to and from New York, are having refurnished for their use a 72 foot Pullman, twelve-wheel parlor car. The "Howard" will be engaged by a third club that is now forming in this city.

He Can be Married Now.

Warren Pierson, of Westfield, who fell off a railroad car and severely hurt himself a few days ago, as told exclusively in THE PRESS, was able to be out again Friday. He was to have been married the day after his fall but the wedding was postponed.

A Fall in Hay.

While a farmer named Kelly of Scotch Plains, was driving along Park avenue with a load of hay, Friday afternoon, on his way home from Oak Tree, about half of the load fell off in a heap in front of Mr F. M. Demarest's grocery store. Mr Kelly was thrown violently to the ground, but sustained no serious injury. The hay was reloaded and Mr. Kelly went on his way after a half-hour's delay.

Doings of the Shakespeare Club.

The young ladies of the Shakespeare Club met Friday night at the home of Mr. Willie MacClymont on Washington avenue, whose parents had provided music and refreshments for their enjoyment. Dancing and other amusements whiled away the time until a late hour. The next reception of the club will be held at the home of the Misses Hasbrouck, on East Fifth street, Friday evening, April 18.

Killed by the Cars.

Just before 1 o'clock Saturday, J. Potter Johnson was struck by an engine as he was crossing Park avenue on the railroad bridge. He was thrown to the sidewalk below almost in front of Cook Bros' office. The back of his head struck on a sharp piece of flag stone, causing concussion of the brain, from which he died about a half-hour afterwards. He leaves a wife and three children. He was formerly of the firm of Shepherd, Johnson & Godown who built the Hotel Netherwood, the Talmage residence and other prominent buildings in Plainfield.

Mr. Hastings to Speak in this City.

Mr. H. L. Hastings, the great anti-infidel lecturer, will speak in this city under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., on Tuesday evening, April 22.

Mr. Joseph Cook says: "Last Summer it was my fortune to see a Boston jail bird in the presence of the representatives of ninety-one colleges at Northfield, and to hear the young men from all quarters of the land cheer him to the echo, in a house packed to the doors. Mr. H.L. Hastings, most [illegible] for [illegible] on the question was that 'Jail [illegible].'"

Presenting Resolutions of Condolence.

Chairman Wm. C. Smith and Messrs W. R. Northrop, M. C. Dobbins, Jesse Emmons and Captain Wm. H. Hand, constituting the new Council of Administration of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R.; met Thursday and audited the report of the quartermaster.

The members then adjourned to the late Isaac Brokaw's residence on Duer street, North Plainfield, where they presented Mrs. Brokaw with a set of engrossed resolutions, regarding the death of their late Commander, and also a photograph of the handsome floral design presented by the Post on the day of the funeral. Mrs. Brokaw was visibly affected as she accepted the tokens showing the high esteem in which her husband was held by the Post.

In a Flourishing Condition.

Franklin Council, No. 41, is at the present time in a flourishing condition and is growing very rapidly, numbering at the present time nearly one hundred members. They have leased the rooms corner of Park avenue and Front street, formerly occupied by the Knights of Pythias, which they will endeavor to make one of the most attractive in the city. It will be known hereafter as the Jr O U A M Hall. At their meeting Thursday an Entertainment Committee was appointed to arrange musical and literary entertainments for the amusement of the members and their friends at intervals during this Spring and next Winter. The committee are making arrangements for a musical entertainment to be held in their hall in about two or three weeks, to which all the members and their friends will be invited. After the entertainment a lunch and sociable will be held.

Evangelist Mills to be Sent For.

The board of directors of the Y. M. C. A., entertained the clergymen of the city with a supper prepared by the ladies "X," Thursday. Among the guests were the Revs. Dr. Kirkland, Dr. Yerkes, Dr. Lewis, Dr. Rodman, and Messrs Richards, Mitchell, Dills and Schenck.

The principal subject of consideration was the holding of Evangelist Fay Mills to come to Plainfield. This wonderful young revivalist is the man who a few weeks ago was doing such remarkable work in the making of converts all over the State, that THE PRESS sent a reporter to New Brunswick to write up an account of his personal appearance and methods.

At a meeting of the Plainfield ministers at the time, it was decided not to invite Mr. Mills to come to this city. But last evening the good cheer set forth by the ladies, and the persuasive powers of the Directors, changed the minds of the clergymen, and they have decided to send a joint invitation to Mr. Mills to come as soon as he can. It is said, however, that the evangelist has already engagements that cover two years [illegible].

PERSONALIA.

Miss Holmes entertained a number of her friends, evening April 9, with a whist party at her home.

Mrs. Elise Courvoisier, formerly of this city, and now of New York, is visiting Miss Stelle of Central avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bushnell of Central avenue and Ninth street, were at home to their friends, Friday evening.

Miss Mary Coulter, of South Plainfield, is visiting her niece, Mrs. C. A. Thomas, of George street, New Brunswick.

Mrs. D. S. Babcock with her daughter, Mrs. Brown, of Brooklyn, is visiting her son, Mr. W. R. Babcock, of Webster place.

John Collins, an old resident of this city, died at the home of his son-in-law, on East Third street, early Sunday morning.

Mr. James Traynor, Miss Rose Traynor and nephew, all of this city, have gone to Ireland to remain with their parents until September.

A select few of the intimate friends of Mr and Mrs N. D. C. Hodges were entertained at their Franklin place home, on Friday evening.

Mr. Fred'k D. Whiting, of this city, is manager of "The Volunteer," a New York magazine issued in the interests of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Mr. Evans, formerly employed at the Potter Press Works, who went to Colorado in search of health has returned to this city greatly benefitted by the trip.

Dr. David G. Atwood started on Friday for a trip to Illinois, for the benefit of his health. Mrs. L. C. Atwood, the doctor's mother is also arranging for a trip to Colorado.

Mr. Lemuel W. Serrell has kindly presented to the High School a geological map of New York city and vicinity. The map is very valuable and will be of great use to the school.

Miss Jean Murray, of Central avenue, and Miss Eleanor Demarest, of East Fifth street, left for Albany, on Friday, where they will be the guests of the Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Dana.

The Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut of this city, occupied the pulpit in St. Paul's M. E. church in Newark, on the the morning of Easter day, preaching an able sermon appropriate to the day.

The recent advent of another boy into a well known Washington Park family, again calls attention to the fact that none of the city and borough babies for some months past, have been girls.

The Cooking Class was entertained at Miss Waring's home, on Park avenue, Thursday. There were about fifty present, and all thoroughly enjoyed the music, dance and supper provided.

A surprise party was tendered to Miss Kittie Reed, at her home, corner of Fifth and Liberty streets, Friday night. About fifty young people were present and enjoyed an evening of uninterrupted pleasure.

At the home of the bride's mother on Manning avenue, North Plainfield, afternoon April 9, occurred the marriage of Mr. Robert G. Wyckoff of LaGrande avenue, and Miss Theresa Case, the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes officiating.

Mr. E. D. Young, formerly employed at the Pond Machine Tool works, has severed his connection with that institution, to accept a more lucrative position as an entomologist at Titusville, Florida. He starts for that place today.

At the residence of the bride in Dunellen, Wednesday, April 9, at 2:30 o'clock, took place the marriage of Mrs. A. A. Babcock, and Mr. Wm. Wyatt of Brooklyn. Mr and Mrs. Wyatt will make their home in the latter city.

At the morning service in St. Mary's church, Sunday, the Rev. Father Smyth publicly announced that John Day and Mary Newman, both of this city, had been excommunicated from the church, for getting married during Lent.

At Hope chapel, Sunday night, the service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Fernald. He read the Scripture from Second Corinthians, fifth chapter, and took for his text: "And we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ."

The household effects of William S. Darling, who has recently figured so prominently with John F. Plummer, were on Saturday transferred from his New York residence to the house on South avenue, this city, owned by Mrs. Darling.

About fifteen of the members of the German club of North Plainfield, attended a sociable held at the residence of Master Carl Brown, on Rock View avenue, April 9. Dancing, games and refreshments, helped to make up the evening's enjoyment.

A musicale was given by ex-Councilman and Mrs. Stephen A. Ginna, at their palatial home on Broadway, Thursday, that was attended by the very best of Plainfield's society. Mazzetti of New York furnished the supper, which was both sumptuous and elegant.

At a meeting on Monday, the W. C. T. U., decided that they could not afford to purchase the Seventh Day Baptist church. There is a probability now that the building will be turned around on Fifth street, and the new stone chapel will then be erected on the Central avenue corner.

The Hunterdon Independent published at Frenchtown, N. J., in a recent issue said: "Mr J. W. Young of Plainfield, and Miss Lava, of this place, were united in the bonds of matrimony at the bride's home on Saturday morning, the Rev. J. C. Clyde, D. D., officiating. The happy pair left on the 12:39 train.

Miss Kate Kimball, Secretary of the C. L. S. C., and Miss Georgie Chamberlin, have both been ill with diphtheretic throat trouble since the removal of the Chautauqua headquarters to Buffalo. Soon after both had recovered, Miss Kimball was seized with another attack. Now she is coming home to this city for a needed rest.

At the home of her nephew, Mr. C. W. L. Martine, of Fanwood, occurred the death on Saturday of Miss Eliza Martine in the 85th year of her age. She fell and broke her hip a few weeks ago, from the shock of which accident at her age, she never recovered. She is also the aunt of Mr. Jno. E Martine of this city. The funeral will be held at her late home, Fanwood, to-morrow at 1:30 P. M.

The Rev. N. W. Cadwell of Westfield, exchanged pulpits with the Rev. Cornelius Schenck of the Trinity Reformed church Sunday morning. Mr. Cadwell's theme was "Sure foundations, or it pays to build well." His thoughts were gathered from Isaiah 28-16. He commanded the closest attention of his hearers, and those who were hungry for the word of God were spiritually fed by his able discourse.

The funeral of the late J. Potter Johnson, who was killed by the cars on Saturday, took place from the house on East Third street, on Wednesday at 2:30 o'clock P. M. Mr. Johnson was forty-five years of age, and for the past twenty years he has been a resident of this city. He was a member of Jerusalem Lodge, F. and A. M., and was highly respected by all who knew him. His tragic death is a severe blow to the widow and children who survive him.

There was an unusual scene at the station Friday morning, when the 10:26 train left for New York. Miss Murray and Miss Demarest were starting for Albany, and a large party of ladies and gentlemen were giving them what is commonly called a "send off." Secretary Manning of the Y. M. C. A., distributed quantities of rice among the gathering, and it was showered on the departing young women, mingled with kisses, farewells and good wishes.

Miss Lizzie R. Sutphen of Washington, D. C., is visiting her cousin Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, of East Front street.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Gilbert of West Eighth street, have returned from a ten days' visit at Old Point Comfort.

Mr. William Archibald Coddington has been appointed Secretary and Counsel of the Grocers' Protective Association of this city.

Carrier Joseph Fuller of THE PRESS corps has a baby brother, which was born to Mr. and Mrs. F D. Fuller, of Arlington avenue, during Monday night.

Mr. Fred S. Cutter, for some time past an employee of the office of the Pond Machine Tool company, has accepted an offer to connect himself with the Water Works Co., of Plainfield. His ability and affability particularly fit him for the post.

At the meeting of the Board of Education, on Monday, Mr. Wm. C. Hubbard, son of Assessor Hubbard, was appointed official school census taker. Mr. Hubbard has served in such capacity for two years past, and has done the work well and thoroughly.

Mr. W. J. Roome of Washington Park, was thrown out of his buggy, Sunday, and narrowly escaped being killed. His horse was frightened by the sudden onslaught of a dog belonging to Mr. E. J. Waring. It is said that it is an old trick of this same dog.

The funeral of the late John Collins, who died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. S. Sharkey, on East Third street, during Saturday night, took place from St. Mary's church, Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Edward Danz, a brother of Mr. Herman Danz, proprietor of the Lake House, at New Market, sailed this afternoon at 3 o'clock for Europe, as Purser on the steamer Fulda. Mr. Danz has the best wishes of his many friends both in this city and New Market.

At the home of the officiating clergyman on the 11th instant, occurred the marriage of Mr. G. F. Wales to Mrs Emma P. Good, wife of the late Judge Peter P. Good of this city. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. L. Jackson, of Brooklyn, the bride's former pastor, while she was a resident in the far West.

POISONED BY EATING PARIS GREEN.

Albert Martin, While Killing Cockroaches Tastes of the Deadly Poison and Dies in Great Agony.

Albert, the seventeen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. C. Martin of Central avenue and Eighth street, died in great agony at five o'clock Tuesday afternoon, from the effects of a dose of Paris green.

Tuesday morning the young man was about the house killing cockroaches with the deadly poison, when he felt a desire to taste the drug. He applied a small quantity to his tongue, and in a short time he was taken violently ill. Dr. Jenkins was immediately summoned and applied the usual remedies, but the patient continued to grow worse and died with convulsions at five o'clock, as above stated.

Albert Martin was one of the most popular young men in this city. He was a shining light in the M. E. Sunday school and was beloved by all who knew him. His friends were a legion, and his demise while yet in young manhood will cast a gloom over the community at large, and especially over the relatives and friends of the bereaved family.

The funeral will take place at the residence of his parents, 32 West Eighth street today at 3 P. M., and interment will be made in Greenwood on the following day. At the request of the family no post-mortem examination was made.

THE FATE OF "ITS" FRIENDS.

But the Tide Flows With THE PRESS, the Paper of the People.

The Counsel to the Corporation, Craig A. Marsh, Esq., says: "The News has done more to hurt Chief Carey than THE PRESS."

This comes to us from a source so unquestionably veracious, as an expression of the judgment of a man so unquestionably discerning, there is no doubt that it was said, and said by Mr. Marsh.

The single minded citizen—unprejudiced by spite and unbiased by politics—will agree that THE PRESS has done policeman Carey no scintilla of harm, itself. He, alone, is to blame—for the matters of fact, court record, and sworn testimony against his standing as an officer of the peace, that have been published in these columns, and have caused something to fall on him with a "dull, sickening thud."

And the same unprejudiced and unbiased, single minded citizen, will agree with Mr. Marsh on the other side of the question. The support of the News will kill any man, in time. The people will have none of its friends. Its praise incites distrust, and its proteges become its victims. Those whom the News loves, die soon.

It mewled over "Detective" Murphy as the "Saviour of Plainfield," and thereupon Murphy's demise was sudden. It has drooled over "Chief" Carey as an Apollo and a Messiah, and the same fate was accorded him. THE PRESS said "Murphy must go," and he went. THE PRESS said "Carey must go," and he went. It is plain to be seen that the day is fast coming when THE PRESS will be called upon to say the News must go. Then the result will be the same to the News, as to Murphy, and to Carey.

MR. PLUMMER'S AFFAIRS.

W. S. Darling Still Among the Missing—His Dealings With the First National Bank in Plainfield Said to Have Been Crooked.

W. S. Darling of John F. Plummer & Co., has not been heard from yet by the assignee of the firm, Mr. Murphy, and Mr. Murphy says that he does not expect to see him again. There seems to be no doubt that he has run away. The method Darling pursued in obtaining the large sum of money which he got from the firm ($500,000, it is said) was something after the style of the Sixth National Bank wreckers, although in Darling's case the money actually passed, while little or no money was used in the other case.

Darling would deposit, for instance, in the First National Bank of this city, drafts on the First National Bank of New York, and the next day he would deposit the checks of Stoney & Darling, drawn on banks where the firm kept accounts, with the First National Bank in New York, to meet the Plainfield drafts. In this way sums amounting from $1,000 to as high as $50,000 were taken by Darling.

Mr. Plummer had had a business connection with Darling for twenty-one years, and trusted him implicitly. Darling's checks, which were paid into the First National Bank, were from Stoney & Darling's book, which no one saw but himself, and thus he was able to cover up his doings.

What has become of the money is a mystery, for Darling lived in a quiet way, and apparently spent less than his income.

Both Mr. Plummer and Mr. Darling were long residents of Netherwood. The latter at one time was a Councilman of Plainfield. He and Mr. Plummer built the Netherwood Hotel. Mr. Darling's house is now Mr. Bloodgood's, and Mr. Plummer's is Mr. Anthony's.

"After a varied experience with many so-called cathartic remedies, I am convinced that Ayer's Pills give the most satisfactory results. I rely exclusively on these Pills for the cure of liver and stomach complaints."—John B. Bell, Sr., Abilene, Texas.

RETURN OF THE FAVORITES.

Bartholomew's Educated Horses at Music Hall Again.

Professor Geo. Bartholomew demonstrated the week of October 28, to over 8,000 persons in Music Hall, the power which the educated human mind can exercise over the brute creation, as well as the degree to which the latter can be trained and educated.

His twenty-four handsome horses give performances in four acts, and the number of feats which they perform is remarkable. The horse which is naturally an intelligent beast seems to have been educated by him, until it seems endowed with almost human faculties and perceptions.

The only requisite they apparently lack is the power of speech. They are capable of doing almost anything and understand every word of command and go through their several parts with willingness and apparent enjoyment.

The exhibition has been considerably improved since its last appearance here, and several novel mechanical effects, fine trappings and appropriate scenery have been added, which will lend an additional charm to the entertainment. The animals show the greatest proficiency in playing a tune with bells and in performing a military drill. All the features are pleasing and excite applause and admiration.

The horses will appear in Music Hall all of next week and give six evening and three afternoon performances, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

WESTFIELD AVENUE PREFERRED.

Union County Freeholders to be Asked to Make It the County Road to Plainfield.

A big petition is to be presented to the Freeholders of Union county at the next meeting. Residents of Elizabeth and some of the outlying townships will ask that the line of one of the proposed county roads be changed. Instead of constructing it from Jersey street through Elmora, they want Westfield avenue.

It is claimed that Westfield avenue is a more direct route, because it passes through the villages of Cranford, Westfield, Fanwood and other places on the line of the Central Railroad. Besides, it is regarded as much safer, as it does not run near or cross any railroad tracks. It is said that many citizens heretofore in favor of the Jersey street route are now in favor of Westfield avenue.

The Board is opposed to making any change in the county roads, but if it can be satisfactorily demonstrated that the best interests of the people of the county would be subserved by adopting the route via Westfield avenue to Plainfield, it may be agreed to.

AN UNEXPECTED ATTACK.

Dr. R. J. Shaw is Thrown Down by a Concealed Enemy on East Front Street, Last Night.

Dr. R. J. Shaw was stood on his head by a banana peel, Thursday, about 10:30 o'clock. Next morning he was filled with pain and an earnest assurance that the banana peel must go.

Dr. Shaw was on his way home when he met the peeling just opposite No. 28 East Front street. He was not suspecting an attack from any quarter, and, besides, had a bottle of "milk" in one hand. He was thrown down, his hand severely cut by the bottle breaking, and he was almost drowned in the milk. The fall was a bad one but fortunately no serious injury resulted. The doctor struck on his left shoulder, though it is his right side that is hurt the most.

It is supposed from that fact, that the banana peel jumped on him after it threw him down.

FAMILY TESTIMONY.

Records on File in THE PRESS Archives for the Present.

Mr. L. C. Backer, whose sister is the wife of Policeman Carey, came all the way from White House, Thursday, to present us with a history of certain facts of court record and family casualties directly connected with Carey's past life. We have filed the story away with other testimony in the same relation that has been furnished us by another of Carey's brothers-in-law, Mr. R. W. Mahafee, of this city.

Memorial Day Detail.

The following persons constitute the Memorial Day detail appointed by Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R.: Chairman, I. McVoy; Secretary and Treasurer, W. W. Coriell; H. C. Drake, Samuel Reese and William Day, the latter of Scotch Plains.

He'll Have Better Luck Next Time.

Mr. Marion Sutton, otherwise known as "Grundy," one of the brakemen on drill engine No. 30, took a "day off," on Tuesday, fishing for Raritan River shad at Bound Brook. His presence along the river bank, however, frightened the fish away, and in order to make a good showing when he returned home, he bought a North River shad on the way.

Reform Club.

Another interesting meeting, under the new order of exercises, was held in Reform Hall, Thursday. After a solo by Mrs. King, and very appropriate readings by Col Dietrich and Mr. George F Opdyke, questions were submitted and elicited a lively discussion. President Harper announced as the topic for this Thursday evening—"What effect has the liquor traffic upon political morality and the public expense?" Debate open for all.

Councilman Spangenberg Shows the Way to Appreciate a Faithful Officer's Service.

Friday afternoon a massive gold badge was presented Captain George Washington Grant of the Plainfield police force, accompanied by the following letter:

NETHERWOOD, April 11, 1890.

Capt G. W. Grant, Plainfield, N. J.

MY DEAR SIR: I take great pleasure in presenting you with the badge herewith, in recognition of the faithful manner in which you have fulfilled your duties as a police officer during the past eight years.

Yours very truly,

L. SPANGENBERG.

An Accident at Ponds.

Frederick Thompson, an employe at the Pond Machine Tool Co., met with an accident on Friday which nearly resulted in his death. The man was working around a heavy casting which was being transferred from one part of the shop to another by one of the steam cranes, when in some unaccountable manner he was struck on the head by the casting, inflicting deep scalp wounds.

The injured man was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital, where Dr. J. B. Probasco dressed the wounds. Later he was taken to his home at No. 212 West Front street. Mr. Thompson is a young man, and has been married but about seven months.

—One of the jurymen on the Miller trial informs THE PRESS that Judge Coddington was not requested to suspend sentence until after the verdict was handed in.

QUESTIONS YOU'LL ALL BE ASKED.

They Are Only a Very Few, and Very Simple, But Who Will Answer Them?

Preparations for the great work of taking the census next June are now nearly completed. The actual work of enumeration will cover about one month when the returns will be sent to the census bureau from all parts of the Union and the work of classification and combination will begin. The entire country has been divided into 175 Supervisors' districts and under each one of these Supervisors there will be from 150 to 200 or more enumerators, and each of these enumerators will have his boundaries of work fixed and his work classified as closely as possible. No enumerator will have over 4,000 people to look after.

The army of enumerators some 35,000 strong will begin their work simultaneously on the 2d of June and must complete their labors within a month. The enumerators will be residents of their respective fields and presumed to be personally familiar with a good share of the people whom they visit.

As a matter of interest to the people of Plainfield, THE PRESS appends the list of questions which the enumerators will carry with them to be answered:

1 Give christian name in full, and initial of middle name, surname.
2 Whether a soldier, sailor or marine during the Civil war (United States or Confederate) or widow of such person.
3 Relationship to head of family.
4 Whether white or black, mulatto, quadroon, octoroon, Chinese, Japanese or Indian.
5 Sex.
6 Age at nearest birthday. If under one year, give age in months.
7 Whether single, married, widowed, or divorced.
8 Whether married during the census year (June 1, 1889, to May 31, 1890).
9 Mother of how many children, and number of these children living.
10 Place of birth.
11 Place of birth of father.
12 Place of birth of mother.
13 Number of years in the United States.
14 Whether naturalized.
15 Whether naturalization papers have been taken out.
16 Profession, trade or occupation.
17 Months unemployed during the census year (June 1, 1889, to May 31, 1890).
18 Attendance at school (in months) during the census year (June 1, 1889, to May 31, 1890).
19 Able to read.
20 Able to write.
21 Able to speak English. If not, language or dialect spoken.
22 Whether suffering from acute or chronic disease, with name of disease and length of time afflicted.
23 Whether defective in mind, sight, hearing or speech, or whether crippled, maimed or deformed, with name of defect.
24 Whether a prisoner, convict, homeless child, or pauper.
25 and 26 Is the home you live in hired, or is it owned by a member of the family?
27 If owned by head or member of family, is the home free from mortgage incumbrance?
28 If the head of the family is a farmer, is the farm which he cultivates hired, or is it owned by him or by a member of his family?
29 If owned by head or member of family, is the farm free from mortgage encumbrance?
30 If the home or farm is owned by head or member of family, and mortgaged, give the postoffice address of owner.

It is important and desirable that every one should be acquainted with the scope of the inquiry and that correct information shall be furnished. Some of the questions may seem searching and people may be reluctant to reply; but it should be remembered that the information is private and will be held as such by the Census officials. Besides a severe penalty may be imposed upon persons refusing to give the desired information.

$60,000 LEFT FOR THE CHURCH.

The Fight Over the Wealth of Two Brother Misers, Finishes in a Draw.

The almost world-renowned Frame Lee will case, has just been amicably settled. Messrs Monroe Long and John Jackson, the executors chosen by the deceased, will serve as such, as Mr. Wm. Hetfield and Mrs. James H. House have agreed to renounce their claims for appointment as executors.

The real estate is to go to the heirs, and the personal property to the church. The real estate is appraised at $65,000, and the personal property is estimated at the same amount. So the two sides have made a fair division, although from the bad condition of the real estate the appraisement would seem to be high.

But when all hands have received their parts and parcels, and counted their cash in hand, it will be found that the lawyers got as much as anybody. The legal fees will amount to about $50,000, which taken equally from the shares of the legatee and the contestants, will leave each about $60,000.

Carey to be Reinstated at Once.

A few of the prominent residents of this city met at the Library building on Tuesday, to exchange views on the Carey-Lynch suspension matter.

A committee consisting of Mr. M. W. Tyler, chairman, and Messrs J. E. Tracy, L. W. Serrell, E. R. Ackerman, J. M. Whiton and J. B. Dumont, was appointed to prepare documents protesting against the action of the Police Board.

A purse of money was subscribed for Carey.

A Reception to the Bayard of Mount Ararat.

Tuesday night in the Westfield Hotel parlors, the popular druggist of that town Mr. George A. Bayard, was most agreeably surprised. He was sent for at 9 P. M., to come from his store to the hotel, where he found thirty of the best citizens were assembled to give him a reception upon his safe return home from a six weeks tour in the Southern States. Dr. Sherman Cooper was Master of Ceremonies, and Mr. Samuel Reese was Secretary.

Dr. Bayard was taken completely by surprise. He was presented with a large and fine crayon portrait of himself, handsomely framed, which his friends had had made during his absence. Letters of regret were received from a number of prominent men in the county, who had been invited to attend but could not.

Dr Cooper made a speech of welcome; Samuel Reese presented the picture; and Dr. Bayard made a very pleasant and effective reply. The evening was spent in mutual admiration, music and singing.

A Cure or No Pay

Is what the proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery guarantee to those who use that wonderful medicine for any blood taint or humors, eruptions, pimples, blotches, scrofulous sores or swellings. Money refunded if it don't benefit or cure.

—The difficulty between two of the employees of the Pond Tool company, referred to in THE PRESS, Saturday, was because a man by the name of Wright not only refused to obey Foreman Nickolson's orders but knocked the Foreman down. Mr. Nickolson made no attempt to retaliate. Wright was thereupon discharged by Mr. Lee, Supt. of the Works.

—"The Care and Feeding of Infants" is the title of a most valuable little book issued by the proprietors of Mellin's Food, the Doliber-Goodale Co., 41 Central Wharf, Boston, Mass. It will be of great assistance to every mother in feeding her child. Send for a copy; it will be mailed free to any address.

—If Mrs. Partington was a Plainfield shopkeeper today, and a patron of THE PRESS, verily would she say: "Sweet are the uses of advertising."

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

The usual treatment of catarrh is very unsatisfactory, as thousands of despairing patients can testify. A trustworthy medical writer says: "Proper local treatment is positively necessary to success, but most of the remedies in general use by physicians afford but temporary benefit. A cure cannot be expected from snuffs, powders, douches and washes." Ely's Cream Balm is a remedy which combines the important requisites of quick action, specific curative power with perfect safety and pleasantness to the patient.

MRS. DARLING GONE TOO.

Civil Proceedings Against Her Contemplated by the Firm's Assignee.

Mrs Wm. S. Darling, wife of Plainfield's ex-Councilman Darling, who wrecked the firm of John F. Plummer & Co., left her quarters at the Grenoble apartment house, Seventh avenue and Fifty-seventh street, New York, on Thursday last, having sent her furniture to a house on South avenue, this city, as told exclusively in THE PRESS. Partner Darling disappeared some three weeks ago.

Richard S. Newcombe, counsel for the assignee of the firm, says that civil proceedings will be begun against Mrs. Darling for the recovery of property which Darling purchased in her name. "I know of $50,000 or $60,000 worth of real estate standing in Mrs. Darling's name," said Lawyer Newcombe, "which I am convinced was purchased out of the misappropriated funds of John F. Plummer & Co. I hope to find a good deal more property that has been acquired in the same way. As to Darling's hiding place, we have not the slightest clue, nor do we expect to see him right away."

A New York paper yesterday says that no little excitement was caused in Plainfield, when for the first time it became known through THE PRESS that Mrs Darling had moved here. The fact of Mrs. Darling's presence was not made public by her friends, but the news got abroad when two of Morgan's big furniture vans backed up to the Darling cottage in Netherwood and all of Mrs. Darling's furniture was deposited there. The work of removal was conducted very quietly and rapidly and under the supervision of Mrs. Darling's faithful maid Josie.

It had been planned by Mrs. Darling's friends that she should remain at a hotel in this city while the work of removing the furniture to her cottage was in progress. This plan was changed by the kindly interposition of Mrs. Watson, who lives at Plainfield, and who persuaded her to at once leave New York and go and live with her while her cottage was being prepared for her occupancy.

WETUMPKA LODGE.

Celebrating its Second Anniversary.

The second anniversary of Wetumpka Lodge, No. 3,401, K. of H., was held in Music Hall, on Tuesday, over one thousand persons being present by invitation. The entertainment consisted of vocal and instrumental music, humorous recitations by Miss A. B. Hall of Brooklyn, who thoroughly entertained the large audience, solos by Mrs. W. M. Colguhoun of Brooklyn; piano solos by Miss Edna Ray Park of this city; banjo selections by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Jenkins of Somerville, assisted by Master Clifford Dunn; a selected duett by Mrs. Colguhoun and Miss R. May Hall, accompanied on the piano by Mr. Hall Martin of Brooklyn; and a series of slight of hand performances by Mr. Howard A. Knudson, Manager of the Criterion Theatre, Brooklyn.

Mr. C. J. Feytel presided in his usual polished and efficient manner, delivering an address on the "Good of the Order." Among other things he told of the object of the entertainment and of the rapid growth of Wetumpka Lodge, starting as it did two years ago with a membership of 33, and increasing until now its membership is nearing the one hundred mark.

The Knights of Honor, he said, is strictly a fraternal organization, and its success is assured by the voluntary obligation of 132,000 members. It is a national organization, extending from Maine to California; it has 36 Grand Lodges and 2,500 subordinate lodges. The object of the lodge is to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, visit the sick, bury the dead and care for the wife and orphans.

The entertainment above evening was a pronounced success in every particular, and reflects great credit upon those who had charge of the arrangements. The performers were all greeted with hearty applause, and each and every number on the programme was executed in a highly creditable manner.

Church Election.

At the annual church and parish meeting of the First Presbyterian church held April 9, 1890, the following were elected:

Elder—Fred C. Lounsbery.

Deacons—J. W. Anthony, C. A. Hazeltine.

Trustees—H. A. Pope, Wm. H. Shotwell, E. St. John, C. E. Bond.

Comes High, but the Girls Must Have It.

In New Brunswick the price of soda has advanced, and the dude and his best girl will suffer accordingly next Summer. Heretofore no druggist has charged more than 5 cents for a glass of soda water, unless an expensive syrup was called for, but the regular price for soda water will now be 10 cents. The increase in the price of ice is given as the cause for doubling the soda water rates.

Death of Godfrey Haberle

At his home on Somerset street, about 4:30 o'clock afternoon April 9, occurred the death of Mr. Godfrey A. Haberle, aged 70 years, his death resulting from paralysis. Mr. Haberle was born in Germany February 29, 1820, and he came to this country about fifty years ago, locating here ten years later. He was a clothing cutter by trade, and for many years past had been in the employ of Schepflin & Co., the clothing manufacturers of this city.

Dr. Hurlbut and the Rev. Mr. Mitchell Re-appointed.

The thirty-third annual Convention of the Newark M E Conference came to a close in the Centenary M. E. church at Newark, on April 8. Among the appointments made was that of the Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, as the Corresponding Secretary of the Sunday School Union and Tract Society of the M. E church. The Rev. Chas. B. Mitchell was also re-appointed pastor of the M. E church in this city; the Rev. J. W. Seran was appointed pastor of the M. E. church at Dunellen, and the Rev Richard Johns was appointed pastor of the M. E. church at Bound Brook.

The church at Scotch Plains is a supply, and no regular pastor was appointed.

Sick Headache

IS a complaint from which many suffer and few are entirely free. Its cause is indigestion and a sluggish liver, the cure for which is readily found in the use of Ayer's Pills.

"I have found that for sick headache, caused by a disordered condition of the stomach, Ayer's Pills are the most reliable remedy."—Samuel C. Bradburn, Worthington, Mass.

"After the use of Ayer's Pills for many years, in my practice and family, I am justified in saying that they are an excellent cathartic and liver medicine—sustaining all the claims made for them."—W. A. Westfall, M. D., V. P. Austin & N. W. Railway Co., Burnet, Texas.

"Ayer's Pills are the best medicine known to me for regulating the bowels, and for all diseases caused by a disordered stomach and liver. I suffered for over three years from headache, indigestion, and constipation. I had no appetite and was weak and nervous most of the time. By using three boxes of Ayer's Pills, and at the same time dieting myself, I was completely cured."—Philip Lockwood, Topeka, Kansas.

"I was troubled for years with indigestion, constipation, and headache. A few boxes of Ayer's Pills, used in small daily doses, restored me to health. They are prompt and effective."—W. H. Strout, Meadville, Pa.

STARTLING NEWS FROM NEW MARKET.

Miss Hallett is Thrown From Her Horse, and Mr. Steiner Catches 19 Cat Fish.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Prof. Rich, the evangelistic blacksmith and maker of 207 kinds of horse shoes, is preaching here and will remain a week.

John Steiner caught 19 large cat fish in three hours, the other day, and they were not biting very good, either.

The Lehigh Valley R. R., Co., is going to spend a big lot of money in lawns and flower beds about the station in this place.

Miss Alice Hallett, of New Market, and Miss Flora Ward, of New York, were out horseback riding, Friday, when Miss Hallett's horse was frightened by the cars. It threw her off and her foot catching in the stirrup she was dragged some distance. Her ankle was wrenched out of place, and she will be confined to the house for some time. Her escape from death was indeed miraculous.

HOW CAN THE LONG BE THE SHORT ?

A line may be a very long one and yet be the shortest between given points. For instance, the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway has over 3,000 miles of road, magnificently equipped and managed. It is one of the greatest railway systems of this country; for the same reasons it is the traveler's favorite to all points in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana. It is the only line to Great Falls, the future manufacturing center of the Northwest; to the fertile free lands of the Milk River Valley; and offers a choice of three routes to the Coast. Still it is the shortest line between St. Paul, Minneapolis, Fargo, Winnipeg, Crookston, Moorhead, Casselton, Grafton, Fergus Falls, Wahpeton, Devils Lake and Butte City. It is the best route to Alaska, China and Japan; and the journey to the Pacific coast, Vancouver, Tacoma, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco will be remembered as the delight of a life-time once made through the wonderful scenery of the Manitoba Pacific Route. To fish and hunt; to view the magnificence of nature; to revive the spirit; restore the body; to realize the dream of the home seeker, the gold-seeker, the toiler, or the capitalist, visit the country reached by the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway. Write to F. I. WHITNEY, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn., for maps, books and guides. If you want a free farm in a lovely land, write for the "Great Reservation;" read it and resolve to accept the golden

THE fear of microbes, which is rapidly becoming a dominant factor in modern life, has lately received a curious illustration at Neudamm, a small town in Prussian Saxony. A municipal order has been issued that all barbers, hairdressers and "tonsorial artists" generally shall, under legal penalties, well and truly disinfect their instruments every time after they have been used.

ABOUT THE UMBRELLA.

IN QUEEN ANNE'S time the umbrella is mentioned both by Swift and Gay as being employed by women, but up to the middle of the eighteenth century it appears never to have been used by men, though Wolfe, the future conqueror of Quebec, wrote from Paris in 1752, describing it as in general use there, and wondering that so convenient a practice had not penetrated to England.

DEFOE has described the umbrella as one of the contrivances of Robinson Crusoe, and umbrellas were in consequence at one time called "Robinsons." They were looked on as a sign of extreme effeminacy, and they multiplied very slowly. Dr. Jamieson, in 1782, is said to have been the first person who used one in Glasgow; and Southey's mother, who was born in 1752, was accustomed to say that she remembered the time when any one would have been hooted who carried one in the streets of Bristol.

A SINGLE coarse cotton umbrella was often kept in a coffee-house to be lent out to customers, or in a private house to be taken out with the carriage and held over the heads of ladies as they got in and out; but for many years those who used umbrellas in the streets were exposed to the insults of the mob, and to the persistent and very natural animosity of the hackney-coachmen, who bespattered them with mud and lashed them furiously with their whips. But the manifest convenience of the fashion secured its ultimate triumph, and before the close of the century umbrellas passed into general use.

HANWAY, the famous traveler and philanthropist, who returned to England in 1750, is said to have been the first Englishman who carried an umbrella, and a Scotch footman named John Macdonald, who had traveled with his master in France and Spain, mentions in his curious autobiography that he brought one to London in 1778, and persisted in carrying it in wet weather, though a jeering crowd followed him, crying: "Frenchman, why don't you get a coach?" In about three months the annoyance almost ceased, and gradually a few foreigners and then some Englishmen followed his example.

SAGE SAYINGS.

TRUE practical philosophy makes the most of little pleasures, and the best of every thing.

HARSH counsels have no effect; they are like hammers which are always repulsed by the anvil.

WE gain nothing by falsehood, but the disadvantage of not being believed when we speak the truth.

HALF the things which we grumble at to-night will right themselves before to-morrow night, if we let them alone.

GOOD-nature, like a bee, collects honey from every herb. Ill-nature, like a spider, sucks poison from the sweetest flower.

DON'T waste your ammunition on ducks. Many a man gets into a wrangle with some one who is utterly beneath notice.

IT was long since discovered that though it is easy to crown an ass with laurel leaves, yet his ears will always spoil the effect.

THOSE who would render their lives useful should diffuse them [illegible]

THE chief secret of comfort lies in not suffering trifles to vex us, and in cultivating our undergrowth of small pleasures, since very few great ones, alas! are let on long leases.

IF a man knew as many odd and mean things about others as he must know about himself, would he be apt to speak to them without [illegible]

EXTREMES may come, even to the good, and when riches take to themselves wings, practical knowledge of [illegible] life is by far more [illegible] than [illegible] the one for the genuine struggle for existence.

A [illegible] goes up on his fore feet, and a cow on her hind feet.

A squirrel comes down a tree head first and a cat tail first.

ANIMAL natures differ: some are like an old Dutch clock, of slow and stately pendulum; others like a little Waterbury watch, always in a hurry; and so with plants; some, like the mushrooms, are in haste to vegetate; others, like the century plant, may take many years to attain maturity.

So let our lips and lives express
The holy Gospel we profess.

He announced as his text Proverbs xx, 14: "It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer; but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth." Following is his sermon in full:

Palaces are not quite so [illegible] as the world imagines. If you think that the only time kings and queens come forth from the royal gates is in procession and gorgeously attended, you are mistaken. Incognito, by day or by night, and clothed in citizens' apparel or the dress of a working woman, they come out and see the world as it is. In no other way could King Solomon, the author of my text, have known everything that was going on. From my text I am sure he must, in disguise, some day have walked into a store of ready made clothing in Jerusalem, and stood near the counter and overheard a conversation between a buyer and a seller. The merchant puts a price on the coat, and the customer begins to dicker and said: "Absurd! that coat is not worth what you ask for it. Why, just look at the coarseness of the fabric? See that spot on the collar? Besides that, it does not fit. Twenty dollars for that? Why, it isn't worth more than ten. They have a better article than that, and for cheaper price, down at [illegible] Brothers. Besides that, I don't want it at any price. Good morning." "Hold," says the merchant, "don't go off in that way. I want to sell you that coat. I have some payments to make and I want the money. Come now, how much will you give for that coat?" "Well," says the customer, "I will split the difference. You asked twenty dollars, and I said ten. Now, I will give you fifteen." "Well," says the merchant, "it's a great sacrifice; but take it at that price." Then Solomon saw the customer with a roll under his arm start out and go and enter his own place of business; and Solomon, in disguise, followed him. He heard the customer as he unrolled the coat say: "Boys, I have made a great bargain. How much do you guess I gave for that coat?" "Well," says one, wishing to compliment his enterprise, "you gave thirty dollars for it." Another says, "I should think you got it cheap if you gave twenty-five dollars." "No," says the buyer in triumph; "I got it for fifteen dollars. I beat him down and pointed out the imperfections until I really made him believe it was not worth hardly anything. It takes me to make a bargain. Ha! Ha!" Oh, man, you got the goods for less than they were worth by positive falsehood; and no wonder, when Solomon went back to his palace and had put off his disguise, that he sat down at his writing desk and made for all ages a crayon sketch of you: "It is naught, it is naught, saith the buyer; but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth."

There are no higher styles of men in all the world than those now at the head of [illegible] in Brooklyn and New York and in the other great cities of this continent. Their casual promise is as good as a bond with piles of collaterals. Their reputation for integrity is as well established as that of Petrarch residing in the family of Cardinal Colonna, and when there was great disturbance in the family the cardinal called all his people together and put them under oath to tell the truth, except Petrarch, for when he came to swear the cardinal put away his book and said: "As to you, Petrarch, your word is sufficient."

Never since the world stood have there been so many merchants whose transactions can stand the test of the Ten Commandments. Such bargain makers are all the more to be honored because they have withstood year after year temptations which have flung many as flat and flung them so hard they can never recover themselves. While all positions in life have powerful inducements to evil there are specific forms of allurement which are peculiar to each occupation and profession, and it will be useful to speak of the peculiar temptations of business men.

First, as in the scene of the text, business men are often tempted to a sacrifice of [illegible] truth, the seller by exaggerating the value of goods, and the buyer by depreciating them. We cannot but admire an expert salesman. See how he first induces the customer into a mood favorable to the proper consideration of the value of the goods. He shows himself to be an honest and frank salesman. How carefully the lights are arranged till they fall just right upon the fabric!

Beginning with goods of medium quality, he gradually advances toward those of more thorough material or more attractive pattern. How he watches the moods and whims of his customer! With what perfect calm he takes the order and bows the purchaser from his presence, who goes away having made up his mind that he has bought the goods at a price which will allow him a living margin when he again sells them. The goods were worth what the salesman said they were, and were sold at a price which will not make it necessary for the house to fail every ten years in order to fix up things.

But with what burning indignation we think of the iniquitous stratagems by which goods are sometimes disposed of. A glance at the morning papers shows the arrival of [illegible] a young merchant from one of the inland cities. He is a comparative stranger in the great city, and, of course, he must be shown around, and it will be the duty of some of our enterprising houses to escort him. He is a large purchaser and has plenty of time and money, and it will pay to be very attentive. The evening is spent at a place of doubtful amusement. Then they go back to the hotel. Having just come to town, they must, of course, drink. A friend from the same mercantile establishment drops in, and [illegible] suggest that they must drink. Business prospects are talked over and the stranger is warned against certain dilapidated mercantile establishments that are about to fail, and for such kindness and magnanimity of warning against the dishonesty of other business houses, of course, it is expected they will—and so they do—they take a drink.

Other merchants lodging in adjoining rooms [illegible] manufacture, gum watches made out of brass, barrels of fruit the biggest apples on the top, wine adulterated with strychnine, hosiery poorly woven, cloths of domestic manufacture shining with foreign labels, imported goods represented as rare and hard to get, because foreign exchange is so high, rolled out on the counter with matchless display. Imported, indeed! but from the factory in the next street. A pattern already unfashionable and unsalable palmed off as a new print upon some country merchant who has come to town to make his first purchase of dry goods and going home with a large stock of goods warranted to keep.

Again, business men are often tempted to make the habits and customs of other traders their law of rectitude. There are commercial usages which will not stand the test of the last day. Yet men in business are apt to do as their neighbors do. If the majority of the traders in any locality are lax in principle, the commercial code in that community will be spurious and dishonest. It is a hard thing to stand close by the law of right when your next door neighbor by his looseness of dealing is enabled to sell goods at a cheaper rate, and decoy your customers. Of course you who promptly meet all your business engagements, paying when you promise to pay, will find it hard to compete with that merchant who is hopelessly in debt to the importer for the goods purchased, and to the landlord whose store he occupies, and to the clerks who serve him.

There are a hundred practices prevalent in the world of traffic which ought never to become the rule for honest men. Their wrong does not make your right. Sin never becomes virtue by being multiplied and admitted at brokers' board, or merchants' exchange. Because others smuggle a few things in passenger trunks, because others take usury when men are in tight places, because others deal in fancy stocks, because others palm off worthless indorsements, because others do nothing but blow bubbles, do not, therefore, be overcome of temptation. Hollow pretension and fictitious credit and commercial gambling may awhile prosper, but the day of reckoning cometh, and in addition to the terror and condemnation of outraged communities the curse of God will come, blow after blow. God's will forever and forever is the only standard of right and wrong, and not commercial ethics.

Young business man, avoid the first business dishonor, and you will avoid all the rest. The captain of a vessel was walking near the mouth of a river when the tide was low, and there was a long, stout anchor chain, into one of the great links of which his foot slipped, and it began to swell and he could not withdraw it. The tide began to rise. The chain could not be loosened nor filed off in time, and a surgeon was called to amputate the limb, but before the work could be done the tide rolled over the victim and his life was gone.

And I have to tell you, young man, that just one wrong into which you slip may be a link of a long chain of circumstances from which you cannot be extricated by any ingenuity of your own or any help from others, and the tides will roll over you as they have over many. When Pompey, the warrior, wanted to take possession of a city, and they would not open the gates, he persuaded them to admit a sick soldier. But the sick soldier after a while got well and strong, and he threw open the gates and let the devastating army come in. One wrong admitted into the soul may gain in strength until, after awhile, it flings open all the avenues of the immortal nature, and the surrender is complete.

Again, business men are sometimes tempted to throw off personal responsibility upon the moneyed institution to which they belong. Directors in banks and railroad and insurance companies sometimes shirk personal responsibility underneath the action of the corporation. And how often, when some banking house or financial institution explodes through fraud, respectable men in the board of directors say: "Why, I thought all was going on in an honest way, and I am utterly confounded with this misdemeanor!" The banks, and the fire and life and marine insurance companies, and the railroad companies, will yet stand up for judgment in the last day, but those who in them acted righteously will receive, each for himself, a reward, and those who acted the part of neglect or trickery will each for himself, receive a condemnation.

Unlawful dividends are not clean before God because there are those associated with you who grab just as big a pile as you do. He who countenances the dishonesty of the firm, or of the corporation, or of the association, takes upon himself all of the moral liabilities. If the financial institution steals, he steals. If they go into wild speculations, he himself is a gambler. If they recklessly embarrass a creditor, he himself is guilty of cruelty. If they swindle the uninitiated, he himself is a defaulter. No financial institution ever had a money vault strong enough, or credit staunch enough, or dividends large enough, or policy acute enough to hide the individual sin of its members. The old adage, that corporations have no souls, is misleading. Every corporation has as many souls as it has members.

Again, many business men have been tempted to postpone their enjoyments and duties to a future season of entire leisure. What a [illegible] the Christian religion would be to all our business men if, instead of postponing its uses to old age or death, they would take it into the store or factory or worldly engagements now! It is folly to go amid the uncertainties of business life without God to help.

A merchant in a New England village was standing by a horse, and the horse lifted his foot to stamp it in a pool of water; and the merchant, to escape the splash, stepped into the door of an insurance agent, and the agent said, "I suppose you have come to renew your fire insurance." "Oh," said the merchant, "I had forgotten that." The insurance was renewed, and the next day the house that had been insured was burned. Was it all accidental that the merchant, to escape a splash from a horse's foot, stepped into the insurance office? No, it was providential. And what a mighty solace for a business man to feel that things are providential! What peace and equilibrium in such a consideration, and what a grand thing if all business men could realize it!

Many, although now comparatively straitened in worldly circumstances, have a goodly establishment in the future planned out. They have in imagination built about twenty years ahead a house in the country not difficult of access from the great town, for they will often have business, or old accounts to settle, and investments to look after. The house is large enough to accommodate all their friends. The halls are wide, and hung with pictures of hunting scenes and a branch of antlers, and are comfortable with chairs that can be rolled out on the veranda when the weather is inviting, or set out under some of the oaks that stand sentinel about the house, and [illegible] in the cool breeze, and songful with the robins.

There is just land enough to keep them interested, and its crops of almost fabulous richness springing up under application of the best theories to be found in the agricultural journals. The farm is well stocked with cattle and horses, and sheep that know the voice and have a kindly bleat when one goes forth to look at them. In this blissful abode their children will be instructed in art and science and religion. This shall be the old homestead to which the boys at college will direct their letters, and the hill on which the house stands will be called Oakwood or Ivy Hill or Pleasant Retreat or Eagle Eyrie. May the future have for every business man here all that and more beside! But are you postponing your happiness to that time? Are you adjourning your joys to that consummation?

Suppose that you achieve all you expect—and the vision I mention is not up to the reality, because the fountains will be brighter, the house grander and the scenery more picturesque—the mistake is none the less fatal. What charms will there be in rural quiet for a man who has thirty or forty years been conforming his entire nature to the excitements of business? Will flocks and herds with their bleat and moan be able to silence the insatiable spirit of acquisitiveness which has for years had full swing in the soul? [illegible] Will leaf and cloud and fountain charm the eye that has for three-fourths of a lifetime found its chief beauty in hogsheads and bills of sale? Will parents be competent to rear their children for high and holy purpose, if their infancy and boyhood and girlhood were neglected, when they are almost ready to enter upon the world and have all their habits fixed and their principles stereotyped? No, sir; now is the time to be happy. Now is the time to serve your Creator. Now is the time to be a Christian. Are you too busy? I have known men as busy as you are who had a place in the store loft where they went to pray. Some one asked a Christian sailor where he found any place to pray in. He said: "I can always find a quiet place at masthead." And in the busiest day of the season, if your heart is right, you can find a place to pray. Broadway and Fulton street are good places to pray in as you go to meet your various engagements. Go home a little earlier and get introduced to your children. Be not a galley slave by day and night, lashed fast to the oar of business. Let every day have its hour for worship and intellectual culture and recreation. Show yourself greater than your business. Act not as though after death you would enter upon an eternity of railroad stocks and coffee and ribbons. [illegible] With every yard of cloth you sell throw not in your soul to boot. [illegible] Christian character. Decide once and forever who shall be master in your store, you or your business.

Again, business men are often tempted to let their calling interfere with the interests of the soul. [illegible] that sends men into the business world to get educated, just as boys are sent to school and college. Purchase and sale, loss and gain, disappointment and [illegible] purity, the dishonesty of others, panic and bank suspension are but different lessons in the school. The more business, the more means of grace. Many have gone through without panic unhurt. "Are you not afraid you will break?" said some one to a merchant in time of great commercial excitement. He replied: "Aye, I shall break when the fiftieth Psalm breaks, in the fifteenth verse, 'Call upon me in the day of trouble and I will deliver thee.'"

The store and the counting house have developed some of the most stalwart characters. Perhaps originally they had but little uprightness and force, but two or three hard business thumps woke them up from their lethargy, and there came a thorough development in their hearts of all that was good and holy and energetic and tremendous, and they have become the giant men in Christ's great army, as well as lightnings in the great world of traffic. But business has been perpetual depletion to many a man. It first pulled out of him all benevolence, next all sociability, next all religious aspiration, next all conscience, and though he entered his vocation with large heart and noble character he goes out of it a skeleton, enough to scare a ghost.

Men appreciate the importance of having a good business stand, a store on the right side of the street or the right block. Now, every place of business is a good stand for spiritual culture. God's angels hover over the world of traffic to sustain and build up those who are trying to do their duty. To-morrow, if in your place of worldly engagement you will listen for it, you may hear a sound louder than the rattle of drays and the shuffle of feet and the chink of dollars stealing into your soul, saying, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all other things shall be added unto you."

Yet some of those sharpest at a bargain are cheated out of their immortal blessedness by stratagems more palpable than any "drop game" of the street. They make investments in things everlastingly below par. They put their valuables in a safe not fire proof. They give full credit to influences that will not be able to pay one cent on a dollar. They plunge into a labyrinth from which no bankrupt law or "two-thirds enactment" will ever extricate them. They take into their partnership the world, the flesh and the devil, and the enemy of all righteousness will boast through eternal ages that the man who in all his business life could not be outwitted or overreached at last tumbled into spiritual defalcation and was swindled out of heaven.

Perhaps some of you saw the fire in New York in 1835. Aged men tell us that it beggared all description. Some stood on the housetops of Brooklyn, and looked at the red ruin that swept down the streets and threatened to obliterate the metropolis. But the commercial world will yet be startled by a greater conflagration, even the last. Bills of exchange, policies of insurance, mortgages and bonds and government securities will be consumed in one lick of the flame. The Bourse and the United States mint will turn to ashes. Gold will run molten into the dust of the street. Exchanges and granite blocks of merchandise will fall with a crash that will make the earth tremble.

The flashing up of the great light will show the righteous the way to their thrones. Their best treasures in heaven, they will go up and take possession of them. The toils of business life, which racked their brain and ranged their nerves for so many years, will have forever ceased. "There the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest."

ODDS AND ENDS.

At a shooting party of five guns recently given by Count [illegible] the bag consisted of 2,380 hares and 219 pheasants, shot on one day.

The Bulgarian government proposes to adopt the Gregorian calendar instead of the old style Greek calendar still used in Russia and some weeks out of agreement with the rest of the world.

The rule of growth is that a child should increase two pounds in weight for every inch in height between three and four feet and two and one-half pounds for every inch between four and five feet.

During a performance of "L'Africaine" recently in Paris at the Opera the chorus became so flat that the director signaled for the orchestra to cease playing, and the prayer, "O, Grand Saint Dominique" was given without accompaniment. The explanation afforded was that the choristers were over fatigued by rehearsals.

Cotton paper is used in the cheapest grades of cigarettes, and wrappers for 1,000 cigarettes cost only two cents. Rice paper is the choicest and most costly used in cigarette making. Tobacconized paper is made by saturating paper with an infusion of tobacco and pressing it in such a way as to produce an imitation of the veins of the tobacco leaf.

Some boys playing on the canal bank at Retford found a hole full of silver coins. Nine of the lads filled their caps with the money, which they took to the police station. The treasure place was afterward thoroughly searched, and altogether £250 worth of coins were taken out. The coins had evidently been under ground for many years.

The dagger with which Ravaillac assassinated Henry IV of France has been found by a Berlin antiquary. He bought a curious thick cane from a peasant, and on examination the stick proved to be hollow and to contain an ancient poniard and tiny snuff box. In the latter was a paper stating that the owner of the stick had carried off the historical dagger from the Paris Palais de Justice in 1815.

A 14-year-old boy confined in a Paris prison for attempted murder, being put into a strait jacket as a punishment for violation of the rules, managed to free himself by rubbing off the fastenings against a corner of his cell door frame, and then made out of his clothes a rope with which he strangled himself from the bars of his cell.

The largest and heaviest building stone ever quarried in England was taken from the Plankington quarry, near Norwich, in February, 1889. It was in one piece, without crack or flaw, and weighed over thirty-five tons. It was 15 feet long, 6 feet high and 5 feet wide.

The French government is taking vigorous measures to suppress the morphine habit by punishing the druggists who sell the drug to persons whom they know to be addicted to its use. One druggist who had been convicted of this offense in one district, and had paid the penalty, has been refused a diploma in another district, where he has opened a new shop.

[illegible], the Russian traveler and ethnologist, points out in recently published statistics that there are in the Russian army 400,000 heathens and 50,000 Mahometans, the latter forming 70 per cent. of the Russian Cossack regiments. He also states that Christianity is rapidly decreasing in the southeastern parts of the empire.

English thieves are using a contrivance looking like an ordinary walking stick, but which is so arranged that by pressing a spring at the handle the ferrule will spread apart and form a sort of spring clip that will take hold of anything that is within reach. The thing is called "the continental lifting stick," and is used to take goods from behind counters when the shopman's back is turned.

The deepest lake in the world is Lake Baikal, in Siberia. Its area of over 9,000 square miles makes it about equal to Erie in superficial extent; its enormous depth of between 3,000 and 4,300 feet makes the volume of its waters almost equal to that of Lake Superior; although its surface is 1,350 feet above the sea level, its bottom is nearly 3,000 feet below it.

The largest advertisement in the world is that of The Glasgow News, cut in the shape of flower beds on the side of a hill back of Ardenlee, Scotland. The words "Glasgow News" can be seen and plainly read a distance of four miles; the length of each letter is 40 feet; the total length of the line 393 feet; the area covered by the letters 14,845 feet.

George Augustus Sala, who once carried cards on which was engraved the line: "Leading literary man of England," is suing an artist who said that he (Sala) once painted a human figure with six toes on the right foot. MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

THE costliest cigars sold in New York are the big Henry Clays from Havana, which come in a fine cabinet box and are wrapped in gold foil. There are only twenty-five in a box, and they retail at $1.40 each.

HENRY M. STANLEY estimates the distance which he traveled in the interior of Africa at about 5,400 miles, of which all but about 1,000 miles were on foot. The entire cost of the expedition will not, he says, exceed $150,000.

THE latest English fancy is to wear with a tailor-made gown a small, fancy watch of iron, or oxidized to resemble iron, with elaborate gold initials, fastened by a brooch on the left front of the basque, as a medal or other decoration would be worn.

BECAUSE some plants are partial to moisture it does not indicate that such plants must be grown in a wet soil. There is quite a difference between wet, undrained soil and soil that retains only sufficient moisture to be of advantage to the crop.

ALTHOUGH the sweet pea is not a lawn plant, and therefore not adapted for our purpose in this connection, it is on account of its delicate perfume a necessity for a complete summer bouquet. Plant in the garden in rows in the same manner as the edible pea, using very tall fine-twigged bushes for brush. In favorable seasons this plant will often attain a height of six feet.

ALTHOUGH not a brilliant flower, the sweet mignonette requires a place in the flower border; some of the new varieties grow very large heads of bloom and are exquisitely fragrant. In propagating this plant from seed a different treatment from the other annuals is necessary. The seeds should be sown sparsely, the plants allowed to grow to their full transplanting size in the propagating box, from which they should be removed direct to the border with care, disturbing the roots as little as may be possible.

VIOLET INK is rather the fashion at present. One of the novelties in stationery is paper of a delicate shade of pink on one side and primrose on the other. This style is called "sub rosa," and is supposed to be especially appropriate for "rosebuds." Dull vert-de-gris, or "moonlight," and gobelin-gray note paper, with the initials stamped upon it in dead white, is much used for correspondence. A complicated network of gilt threads, thrown in a filmy way upon a gray note sheet, is unique, though but an evolution of a design of last season.

EZRA L. STEVENS, of Washington, D. C., who recently died at Asbury Park, N. The pupils in the Indian schools always called him "Father Stevens." He was one of the most prominent members of the Masonic order in the United States, and had attained the thirty-third degree. It is said that he sat in Masonic lodges with more Presidents of the United States than any Mason now living. He raised President Garfield to knighthood.

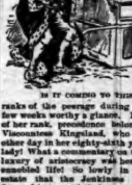
Bismarck sulking in his tent, France uneasy over William the Young's after-dinner speech, Emperor Joseph sharpening his sword, the Czar squinting slyly at Afghanistan, Lord Salisbury sick and thunder in the air. Europe is in a fit of the blues that bids fair to develop into a sharp touch of delirium tremens if some soothing syrup is not quickly prescribed by whoever the wisest doctor may happen to be. At present his name is not known. Curious, as it has been pointed out, that Bismarck should have resigned on the anniversaries of the Berlin revolution of 1848 and the founding of the Paris commune in 1871. The three events happened on March 18. Bismarck, the highest figure on the European chess-board of our time, was born on April 1, in the year of Waterloo. He has made a fool of German and French wiseacres almost every year for a quarter of a century, and now his withdrawal from the keepership of the German Empire he created suggests the appropriateness of Will. II., alias I Will., adopting his Maker's natal anniversary as his own imperial fete day.

Lord Salisbury's enforced trip to the Riviera just now goes much against the grain of his imperious nature. While strong of brain and nerve, the English Premier has never been robust. His is a flabby rather than a fleshy physique; looking heavy, he is really the weaker for this undesirable extra bulk. They say he tipped the beam at 230 pounds the other day on his sojourn with the Prince of Wales. His normal weight should not, and did not use to exceed about 175. Dropsical symptoms are feared, though care and stern doctor-rule may avert what would be a great calamity, not to the party only, but to the country, for Lord Salisbury is admitted by all to be the strongest Secretary for Foreign Affairs since Lord Palmerston's day.

One of the shrewdest judges of the first rank—Mr. Justice Field—has retired from the bench and accepted a peerage. He has chosen the singular title, Lord Ventris, though he is quite slim in his proportions. His elevation to the House of Lords is not an empty compliment. He is appointed to strengthen the group of law lords whose services the country thus secures gratuitously. There have been several notable deaths in the ranks of the peerage during the past few weeks worthy a glance. By virtue of her rank, precedence belongs to the Viscountess Kingsland, who died the other day in her eighty-sixth year. Poor lady! What a commentary on the fabled luxury of aristocracy was her titularly ennobled life! So lowly in her high estate that the Jenkinses long ago dropped her out of their courtly chronicles; and you do not find fully set forth all the fine story of her birth in the ermine or her lucky leap into it by marriage, or whatever was the stepping-stone which raised her into her pauper nobility.



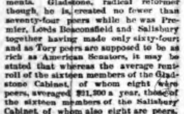
IS IT COMING TO THIS.

She was the widow of the sixth Viscount Kingsland, who died in 1833, and with his death the title expired. Kingsland is one of the populous northern suburbs of London, and if, as is presumable, some portion of the land once belonged to her husband, she should have been among the richest dames of England. But whatever her property was she lost it by the fraud of her trustee nearly half a century ago. "Fine words butter no parsnips," saith the musty proverb, and homage to fine titles does not swell nor even start a banking account. Poor Lady Kingsland had to support herself by needlework like any of her hundred thousand untitled sisters in misfortune. And then, in her old age, pressure was put upon the Royal Bounty fund, by which a glorious income of $500 a year was actually squeezed out to sustain this ennobled soul in its casket of vulgar flesh and blood. May she be wearing a more substantial coronet in a still higher "upper circle," where poverty ceaseth to pinch and royal doles to vex the proud spirit.

He is not yet dead, for not every body has the good breeding to withdraw when he—becomes a burden or a nuisance to his kind, but Lord (or is it Viscount) Hinton is qualifying for the celestial choir by grinding a street organ for his daily bread and beer. The times are out of joint, indeed, when peerages "descend" upon circus clowns and hurdy-gurdy torture men. And grievous must it be to the ex-noble or ignoble spirit to realize that Demos does not wax ecstatic in welcoming Aristos into the ranks of lowly but honest labor. When the late clever Earl of Caithness and the late second son of the Duke of Westminster took to mechanical industries (the former wrought at the lathe and the latter drove railway engines between Liverpool and Chester) there was no paean of joy heard in the ranks of industry over the compliment to manual labor. Not a bit of it. It seems as if the British Workmen would prefer that peers should turn circus clowns, perhaps from some supposed affinity between the masquerading performances.

Lord Napier, of Magdala, one of your true grits, a worker, an artist in war, a soldier who wrought more practical good to India and Britain by his clever engineering schemes, road making, fortification building, railway planning, than his self-advertising messmates ever did with their swords, pens and jaws combined. A modest man—marvel of marvels in a marvelous age. One who was happier in the quiet doing of good work than in hearing it trumpeted about afterwards. He did splendid, solid, daring soldier work at the relief of Lucknow, at the capture of Tantia Topee, of Gwalior, at the seige of Pekin, and at the sacking of the Summer Palace. In the thick of the fight his field-glass was shot out of his grasp, his vest ripped open by bullets and his body received three other shots. He led the unprecedented expedition across the rocky highlands of Abyssinia to rescue a handful of missionaries from King Theodore's chains. Loaded with honors, every one of which he had as really earned by personal service as ever a workman earned wages, Lord Napier remained the most modest of them all, and richly has he deserved the last honor of reposing his bones alongside Nelson and Wellington beneath the dome of great St. Paul's.

There are as many self-made men to-day in the English House of Lords, proportionally, as in the House of Commons. So far from it being true that the sporting or younger peers legislate for the country, the fact is they never attend. The share of work done in the upper house is entirely done by peers who owe their position to their brains and the prolonged experience of a hard-working life, more than the members of the Commons do to their public achievements. Gladstone, radical reformer though he is, created no fewer than seventy-four peers while he was Premier, Lords Beaconsfield and Salisbury together having made only sixty-four; and as Tory peers are supposed to be as rich as American Senators, it may be stated that whereas the average rent-roll of the sixteen members of the Gladstone Cabinet, of whom eight were peers, averaged $21,200 a year, those of the sixteen members of the Salisbury Cabinet, of whom also eight are peers, average only $12,800 a year.



BARON VON BERLEPSCH. HERR HEYL.

Next to the resignation of Prince Bismarck and the appointment of General Caprivi as his successor in the Chancellorate, no subject has so much occupied the public mind during the past few weeks as the International Labor conference now in session here. It was opened on March 15, in the large hall of Congress at the Reichskanz Palace in the Wilhelmstrasse rather unceremoniously; for, beyond a speech by Minister Baron von Berlepsch welcoming the delegates in the name of the Emperor, there were no formalities.

Baron von Berlepsch, who guides the deliberations of this notable body, is the recent appointee for Minister of State. For many years he was in office in the Rhine Province, where he had ample opportunities to familiarize himself with the labor question and more particularly with regard to the condition of miners and ironworkers. He is an able, energetic man, in the prime of life and with remarkable oratorical talent. His wife is the daughter of Baron Thiele-Winkler, one of the richest coal mine proprietors in Upper Silesia and Baron Berlepsch has made a special study of the mining affairs of that district, which has been very valuable to him in the present emergency.

Among the ten men who compose the German delegation is one who would anywhere be regarded as commanding in an intellectual sense. He is the Furstbishop of Breslau, his Eminence Kopp, the cleric through whose skillful intermediation peace was made between Germany and the Vatican. He still stands as the pacific influence between them. Bishop Kopp is the son of a small farmer in Hanover, a native of Hildesheim, and is still comparatively young. He is the leading spirit among the German Catholic clergy, and is regarded as a good patriot and a warm advocate of the labor interests.

A practical figure in the Conference is that of Commencienrath Heyl, of Worms. He is a large employer of labor and the owner of extensive leather factories there, and it is on record that under his management there have been no disturbances among his workmen and no strikes. His men are well cared for, and he is specially solicitous that they should not come in contact with Socialistic societies, of which he is a good hater. Another large employer of labor is Herr Koeth, of Alsace, the proprietor of one of the most extensive cotton factories in that district, and the special representative of the Alsatian population, whose condition he thoroughly understands. The other members of the German delegation are mainly government clerks employed in mining affairs or in the manufacturing districts. These furnish all the necessary data and statistics to the Conference. The secretary to the German delegation is Gegationsrath Kayser, who is famous for his acquirements as a linguist.

SPICY BITS.

THE amateur biologist is perplexed by the anatomy of the oyster. He can not make head nor tail of it.

SOME one who believes that "brevity is the soul of wit" writes: "Don't eat stale Q-cumbers; they'll W. up."

THE law permits a man to use his wife to rob his creditors. Yet in the face of this it is argued that marriage is a failure.

PATIENT (at scientist's office)—"Is the healer in?" Attendant—"Yes, sir; but she is sick to-day and can't do any business."

SOME Boston cynic remarks that "the dignity of letters is largely the ability to starve without making too much fuss about it."

A FLOATING newspaper paragraph says that a Halifax lady, aged eighty, has just begun taking piano lessons. Even the old and feeble can get square with their neighbors when they go about it right.

CLUBS are multiplying in Boston with amazing rapidity; in fact the city seems to be club mad. This gives point to a recent remark of a bright woman: "We are returning," she said, "to the days of savagery, and are being clubbed to death."

CERTAIN CELEBRITIES.

MARY ANDERSON is always a welcome visitor at Tennyson's house.

PROF. HUXLEY is only sixty-five, but is growing deaf and is easily fatigued.

CHARLES FLOQUET, president of the French Chamber of Deputies, is sixty-two years of age, stout, short and near-sighted.

IT is said that General B. F. Butler is interested in a scheme for a railroad through Palestine from Port Said to Damascus.

GENERAL FREMONT is now seventy-six years old, and entered the army fifty-two years ago, when he was appointed to a lieutenancy.

IT is proposed to make Mr. Stanley a life member of the Savage Club in London, a distinction that he will share only with the Prince of Wales and a few others.

GLADSTONE is an example of precociousness in statesmanship, as he is of ability in old age. He was in Parliament at twenty-two, and Lord of the Treasury at twenty-four.

THE Empress Eugenie still owns the chateau at Arenenberg, Switzerland, given her by the late Emperor of the French. There she keeps many relics of her days of prosperity.

MARSHAL MCMAHON, twice President of the French Republic, sent his hearty congratulations to the young Duc d'Orleans upon the step he had taken in going to France in defiance of the law.

IT is said that Robert Louis Stevenson, the novelist, will not return to this country to live, but will settle permanently at Samoa, where his health is good and where he has purchased several hundred acres of land.

ANDREW LANG, the leading literary man in London, is tall, spare and dark, with a fine forehead, dark eyes and a massive jaw. His hair is thick and is streaked with white. He is very nervous and does not look robust.

MR. TALBOT, the father of the English House of Commons, was wealthy as well as old and eccentric. He bequeathed £2,000,000 to one daughter, £1,000,000 to another, £800,000 to a third, and £1,000,000 to a grandson.

MR. WILLIAM MORRIS, the poet, is robust and square-built; he has shaggy hair, and he delights in rude apparel. He loves the sea, and nothing pleases him more than to be mistaken for a sailor; in fact, his appearance is somewhat nautical.

MRS. HUMPHREY WARD, author of "Robert Elsmere," is now high priestess of a sort of Toynebee Hall in Gordon square, London, where the new religion outlined in her famous novel is taught. Dr. Martineau and Stopford Brooke are among her prominent allies in the movement.

TAMAGNO, the great tenor, who gets £100,000 for fifty performances, and has other valuable perquisites, including eight seats every night he sings, has a brother who sings in the chorus for the affluent income of $17 per week. The brothers do not travel together, neither do they have any associations save when the stage business demands.

A LADY who recently met Oscar Wilde in London describes him in the following manner: "I had been expecting—what had I not been expecting? A valiant figure in black velvet, knee breeches and silk stockings, with a sun-flower in his button-hole? I saw a tall, broad-shouldered young man in a gray tweed suit, with nothing in his button-hole at all. Alas! for the vanity of human wishes! But it was Oscar, after all, in the flesh, and in a drawing room in Chelsea." Another writer says of him: "He is the best informed man on people in London. He knows everybody."

CURRENT ODDITIES.

ONE of the latest achievements of *science is the invention of pads for hol*low-cheeked women.

WHILE sinking a well in the Santa Lucia range, San Luis Obispo County, a farmer exhumed the fossil vertebræ of a whale. His well is 2,500 feet above sea level.

THE landlord of a public house at Birmingham has a canary bird that can speak several words distinctly, having learned them from a parrot with which it had been brought up.

ABOUT half of the electric clocks in Danbury, Conn., stopped a morning or two since. Investigation showed that the circuit had been destroyed by a man who cut off a piece of wire to tie up his stove-pipe.

A PETRIFIED tree was found recently in a coal mine at Osnabruck, Germany. The trunk is almost four feet through, and the roots cover a surface about fifteen feet square. The tree has been set up in a special room in the Berlin School of Mines.

BY the use of the phonograph it is now possible for a man to sing at his own funeral. Captain Frank Cunningham, of Richmond, Va., who has sung at three hundred and ninety-five funerals, means to have his voice heard in melody at his own obsequies.

A NOVEL wedding took place in Wilkesbarre a few days since. The combined ages of the bridal party was two hundred and sixty-nine years, the bridegroom being eighty-one, the bride sixty-one, the groom's best man sixty-three, the bridemaid sixty-four. The bride was dressed in her first wedding trousseau, which was made forty-two years ago. The bride was as frisky as a young girl of seventeen, and the bridegroom climbed three flights of steps on a time bet, and performed the feat with the agility of a youth.

WELL-DIGGERS at Little Prairie, Wis., find indications of a buried forest. The cedar or pine found at a depth of thirty-five feet appeared to be branches of a tree; at forty feet the growth was larger, as if near the trunk; at forty-five feet larger still. The first thirty-five feet was through light gravel and the next ten feet through blue clay, exceedingly hard. The impression prevails that a swamp will be struck at a lower depth, as has been the case in previous instances where the wells were abandoned. Good water in that locality is rare, though the land lies high and the surface soil is light. The matter is attracting much attention.

ENGLAND is the only country where members of Parliament are not only unpaid, but have no special rights or privileges whatever.

IN the United States of America the members of both branches of Congress receive the same amount of pay—namely, $5,000 per year.

IN Sweden the members of the Diet receive $330 for a session of four months, but they have to pay a fine of $3 for every day's absence.

IN Norway the members of the Storthing receive $3.50 per day during the session, which usually lasts about six weeks, but which has been extended to that many months.

PEERLESS DYES [illegible]

POETIC PICKINGS.

A True Story.

'Twas just at eve, long years ago,
A little girl lay dying,
And they who soon would miss her so
Stood by her softly crying.
They said: "She's gone." But soon her eyes
Beckoned her father near,
And when he bowed his head more nigh
She whispered low with latest sigh—
"Be a good man, papa dear."

God knows: perhaps the spotless soul
Part way toward glory winging
Turned earthward from its heavenly goal
This precious message bringing.
Perhaps so tender was her love
For those remaining here,
It brought her like a blessed dove
Back with this word of peace and love—
"Be a good man, papa dear."

A change came o'er the father then,
Subduing him, and taming;
No more he sought with sinful men
Resorts of vice and gaming.
For always after that sad day
To wicked taunt and jeer
He answered: "I'll not go astray,
I hear my girl in Heaven say—
'Be a good man, papa dear.'"
—George Horton, in Arkansaw Traveler.

Rejected.

Now play for me a clear, loud, ringing chord,
And sing a long, triumphant, glad "amen."
My love and I have spoken our last word,
I've got my letters back from her again!

My heart pin, photograph and all I gave—
Jehoshaphat! Let's make the welkin ring!
I am no longer [illegible] very slave—
She's sent me back my solitaire diamond ring!

Books, pictures, cards and trick knacks by the score,
Scarfs, ribbons, laces, bracelets, slippers, lace,
Cut glasses, silver trays and dozens more—
By Jove! I think she's sent some other man's!

That silver set was Johnny Bright's, I vow!
This cup was sent by Christie H. De Camp.
Hal Taylor gave this silver dish—but now,
Who in Olympus sent that brazen lamp?

Why should I care? Strike up a jolly song!
And twang the strings clear off the old guitar!
'Tis not my business where these things belong.
I wonder can I sell 'em all at par?

Man's Ambition.

In youth's bright morn he feels ambition's thrill
And in the field of human strife engages,
Resolved to make a glorious name that will Go thundering down the ages.

When age has carved its wrinkles on his brow
And he has drank in life more gall than nectar,
He's very happy if he gets a place
As custom house inspector.

In Hunting Time.

The jolly hunting days have come,
The moment of the year,
When would-be Nimrods with their guns
And dogs in fields appear.

The hunter tramps through many a field,
Through meadow and through bog;
He sees at last a little bird,
But kills instead his dog.

The weary hunter homeward turns
And vows, with temper grim:
"I've got no game, the dog is dead;
I'll blame it all on him."

The bird lives on, the dog is dead,
The hunter frames his lie,
Till a rail fence fires the shotgun off,
You'll meet him by and by.

Priscilla's Pride.

Priscilla was a village maid
Of features wondrous pretty,
Whose father had retired from trade
And likewise from the city.

Of all the country swains, not one
Found favor in her eyes;
She flouted every mother's son
And mimicked all their sighs.

In vain their precious time was spent
In wooing such as she;
In vain were all their presents sent—
Her heart was fancy free.

To all the honest lads who were
By fair Priscilla smitten
And fondly offered love to her
She gave alike—a mitten.

Her saucy nose, so retrousse,
A trifle higher soared;
And in her highfalutin way
She hinted she was bored.

So one by one the lovers took
Their calcined hearts away;
And some the quiet town forsook
To wander far astray.

The years rolled on yet still was she
A single woman rated—
Though gossips said her fancy free
Was getting antiquated.

Her former lovers all were wed,
But all alone she stood—
The paths of spinsterhood to tread—
A vinegarish maid.

Priscilla once so fair and proud,
Now shunned by all the men,
Would give her fortune if allowed
To live her life again.

MORAL.

Damsel, take heed! A lesson true
This ditty has portrayed,
Mark well the moral lest you, too,
Become a sour old maid.

A Cordial Invitation.

Oh! come, my love, at the dawn,
Come at the break of day;
What time the blackbird on the thorn
Chants his first roundelay.

Come, love, when the sun at noon
Sheds his refulgent beams;
When the cricket's chirping tune
Breaks on the poet's dreams.

Come, love, when the twilight falls,
When the dew is on the wold,
When the strident night bird calls,
And the sheep are in the fold.

Oh! come not with the pensive looks,
Or blind devotion rash;
Come, love, with thy banking books
And pockets full of cash.
—Edith M. Norris, in Yankee Blade.

The Serenade.

I hear him 'neath my window sill
His ardent serenade begin.
Ah! heart and brain of mine, be still!
Nor let him guess the thoughts within.

And if the moon be not too bright,
I'll ope my window wide and high,
And in the soft and silvery light
His lithe and agile form may spy.

How often in the days of yore
He's breathed those old, familiar themes,
And now to-night he comes once more
To waken me from happy dreams.

I would he were so near to me
That I might reach and make him feel
The thought that I with joyous glee
Would but too happily reveal.

But ah! I dare not be so bold,
For he would startled be thereat;
Yet if his form I once behold
I'll quickly shoot that yowling cat.

EDUCATIONAL DEVELOPMENT.

THE order and method of presentation determine the order and method of representation.

MOTIVES are high in proportion to the absence of selfishness and the presence of benevolence.

THE best physical development results in health, strength, skill and graceful action.

THE knowledge of general relations must be preceded by the knowledge of special relations.

PHYSICAL skill requires repeated voluntary action of those muscles which are to act skillfully.

THE conditions under which presentation takes place determine the probability of representation.

THE power of demonstrative reasoning is developed later than the power of moral or probable reasoning.

THE development of the moral character depends upon the nature of the motives which influence the will.

THE purpose of education is determined by the civil institutions of the country in which the child lives.

THE highest type of moral character is found in the man who performs right actions from the highest motives.

THE action of the representative faculties is conditioned by the previous action of the presentative faculties.

THAT man is best educated who best knows his duty, is best able to do his duty, and is always influenced in his actions by the highest motives.

THE SPOOPENDYKE PAPERS.

Mrs. Florence Huntley Tells How Her Husband Wrote Them.

She Denies That She Was Their Author, But Admits Having Suggested Them—Glimpses of the Life of a Genius Wife—A New Spoopendyke Sketch.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]

The wife of a genius has, I imagine, a hard time of it. The world, seeing only the charming side of such a man's nature, is apt unduly to envy her who lives in constant association with so brilliant a mind and so delightful a character. But genius is the twin brother of madness, and the madman, however scintillant his mind may be, has never been popularly convicted of being the most agreeable of daily companions.

Stanley Huntley was (as all who knew him will agree) a man of genius. He had but just begun to blossom into fame when death struck him down, but his marvelous fancy, as demonstrated in the odd conceits which went fugitive through the columns of the press a few years ago, and his irresistible humor which shook tears of laughter from those who read "The Spoopendyke Papers," had already gained for him a place as one of the most amusing writers of his day.

His widow would therefore be an object of interest, even if she had no qualities of her own to recommend her to attention. But she herself is only by a slight degree removed from genius. Mrs. Florence Huntley, a stately, handsome woman, with big, bright eyes, a pale, intellectual face, and a nervously enthusiastic manner, lives modestly at No. 806 Twelfth street, this city, in apartments which attest how far good taste may compensate for narrowness of means and turn a literary workshop into an inviting reception-room.

"I am afraid it is too inviting," she says, "for I am so besieged by callers I can hardly find the time for doing necessary writing." It is the general expression of the lady's friends, however, that the room is not the main attraction there.

It has been repeatedly asserted in public prints that Mrs. Huntley conceived the idea of the famous Spoopendyke stories, and wrote many of them herself. She, however, takes pains on all possible occasions to deny this and to laud her husband's wondrous mind. She says he was not only the author of the sketches, but was Mr. Spoopendyke himself. This denial, however, goes too far, for it was Mrs. Huntley who suggested the first of these stories to her genius husband, and these were the circumstances of it: They were boarding in Brooklyn, where Mr. Huntley was employed as a special writer for the Eagle, his particular department being a column headed "Salad," in the Sunday edition. This column (more frequently two or three columns) was always written on Friday, for the matter had to be handed in that night and Huntley had all the weaknesses of genius, of which procrastination is one. He put off his work until the last day and then dug at it like a bear at a beetree.

HE SAT DOWN BEFORE IT.

"Any suggestions for the Salad?" was his regular Friday morning inquiry, and his wife, always keenly interested in his work, frequently sounded a keynote of suggestion which his quick wit and rollicking fancy would seize upon and enlarge into a pleasing medley of absurdities or satire. One evening a member of the household brought home a "Fifteen" puzzle and tossed it into Mrs. Huntley's lap. As she vainly tried to bring the displaced blocks into their proper places, her husband hovered over her in boyish impatience to get hold of the box and solve the problem, for impatience was his ruling characteristic and he had the irrepressible appetite of genius for solving difficult riddles.

"Give it to me," he finally said; "you're not doing it right. I see how it works. I'll straighten it out for you in half a minute." He was perfectly frantic to get at it and his wife, yielding as usual, gave it up. No sooner had he gained possession of it than he became a monument of patience, and until nearly ten o'clock he sat and worked calmly and determinedly over the little box of blocks, never looking up, paying no heed to remarks made to him or about him. His whole mind was intensely at work upon the little puzzle. When the company began to break up he excused himself and bounded upstairs where, seated at his desk, oblivious to his wife and all surroundings, he labored earnestly till after midnight to bring the blocks in 13, 14, 15 order. Then he began to mutter to the blocks as if they were living creatures. This, says Mrs. Huntley, was always an indication that his temper was getting the best of him. His hand began to tremble and his face, always pale, turned white. Then he broke forth in the most violent invective against the senseless bits of wood.

"You will, will you?" he would say in a savage undertone between his tightly-closed teeth, and the adjectives would begin to bubble out. "You miserable, measly, dissolute, dodgasted creatures of eternal earth (or some other place), you think you'll get ahead of Huntley, do you? Well, you won't, you diabolical, sin-drenched imps of Tartarus; you grinning, jibbering, drooling idiots of bedlam. Huntley is going to stay right by you, you wanton fiends of rank, eternal darkness, and he's going to conquer your accursed inborn, ingrained, block-headed obstinacy if it takes till the pearly gates wear off their adamantine hinges. D'ye hear, you sneaking, prowling, crouching hounds of Hades?" And then—well, the language that Stanley Huntley could not command at such times might all with excellent propriety be printed in the Sunday-school tracts.

Faster and faster the blocks moved until their clickings resembled the sound of a telegraphic instrument. Then suddenly Huntley sprang to his feet and, with a long string of wonder*fully-conceived epithets, flung* the box and blocks across the room and, snatching up the innocent little wooden cover, twisted it into splinters which he strewed upon the floor and crushed under his heel with as much apparent satisfaction as if he were really avenging himself on some one. Then he presented one of his most remarkable pe*culiarities, for as soon as he* had taken this imaginary revenge he was restored to good humor. In a minute he was softly humming a good, old-fashioned tune, and in ten more he was sleeping as serenely as if he had never been ruffled.

The next day was Friday. "Salad" day. The usual inquiry for suggestions was made, and Mrs. Huntley said: "Write yourself up. Describe yourself as you appeared with the puzzle last night. Nothing could be funnier."

"This," says the lady, "was, as he afterwards told me, the first time he had ever thought of himself as a subject for humorous sketches, but the absurdity of his actions as I recalled them to him was quickly apparent to his keen sense of the ridiculous, and he sat down there and then and wrote 'The Fifteen Puzzle,' the first of the series of Spoopendyke stories. It attracted attention every where, and Spoopendyke was a permanent creation.

"The best of these sketches, such as 'The Lost Collar Button,' 'Opening the Sardines,' etc., were founded upon actual occurrences. They were distinctly his own creations. If I helped him at all in them it was only in pointing out to him the peculiarities of his own character and in telling him (what he himself would never have known) how amusingly absurd these peculiarities seemed to other people. All things to him, as to Spoopendyke, were endowed with life. If he were annoyed by an obstinate pen or by the momentary loss of any needed article, he would pour out upon it such a torrent of vehement and incongruous epithets as would astound or convulse every body within hearing."

I asked Mrs. Huntley flatly if it were untrue that she wrote some of these sketches.

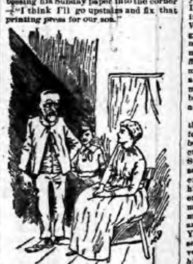
"Well," she hesitated, "I attempted once to imitate his style in such a sketch, and it was published and went over the country as his. It was Mr. Spoopendyke's hunting trip. Mr. Huntley was too ill to write, or even to read it, before it was sent to the Eagle. During the last two years of his life he was a pitiable invalid. The people who laughed over the humorous things he continued to write would have felt tears burning in their hearts if they could have seen this frail, delicate, nervous man, racked with pain and burning with fever, sitting bravely at his desk writing jokes to pay our board bills.

"Now and then when I could not bear to see him working thus I prevailed on him to let me do it for him. In this way I wrote considerably for the 'Salad' column, but it was always supposed at the office that I had acted merely as his amanuensis. Thus, because of his illness and the pressure for money, much of my work went over the country under cover of his name. Once, when driven by necessity, he agreed, against his in*clination, to write a serial story for a* New York young folk's paper. Three weeks after the beginning of 'Daddy Hoppler' Mr. Huntley broke down completely and was ordered to sea by his physician. An increasing board-bill and an unfinished contract stared me in the face and nerved me to the rashness of writing the next installment, for which I received twenty dollars. This encouraged me and I went in deeper. At the end of five weeks Mr. Huntley returned, considerably improved, and found me with bills all paid and a new serial under way; and the gifted editor apparently none the wiser."

Mrs. Huntley has written no Spoopendyke sketches for publication since her husband's death, though publishers have frequently asked her to do so. About two years ago in Minneapolis, where she was an editorial writer for the Tribune, she wrote such a sketch merely for the moment's amusement of a lady friend whose husband had had a sort of Spoopendyke experience. It was but a rough draft that Mrs. Huntley took from her escritoire for me to see. It took a deal of pleading to get it for publication just as it was, but here it is:

MR. SPOOPENDYKE FIXES A PRINTING PRESS.

"I think, wife," said Mr. Spoopendyke, tossing his Sunday paper into the corner—"I think I'll go upstairs and fix that printing press for our son."



"YOU THINK, DO YOU?"

Mr. Spoopendyke, having finished a good dinner, absorbed the news from the paper and refreshed himself with a nap in his easy chair, was in just the humor to straighten the kink out of Charlie's refractory machine.

"Come, my son," and with beaming faces father and offspring lumbered garretward, while Mrs. Spoopendyke glanced after them with conscious pride.

"Now, my son," said Mr. Spoopendyke, seating himself on a rickety garret chair and peering critically into the jaws of the small ink-daubed press—"now, we'll see why this foolish old thing doesn't work for our boy. We'll see whether it is press or boy that is out of kilter," and Mr. Spoopendyke smiled significantly and patted his son's curly head.

"Now, my boy, you see we place this type in position, there, that way, and—adjust—it—so. See? Now we smooth it down this way and lock it up, thus, and then—now, watch me—then we do so," and Mr. Spoopendyke jerked the handle of the press and triumphantly pulled out a sheet of paper.

"Oh! pa, them ain't letters."

"What?" and Mr. Spoopendyke looked surprised. Then he peered into the machine again. "Yes, yes, I see — little too much ink. We'll fix that all right, my son," and he rubbed off ink enough to ruin the handkerchief with which he did it.

"Now, we'll try it again. It will be all right this time. Now watch how I do it, my boy. There she goes."

"W'y, pa, it's worse'n before."

There were just a few faint, scattering lines traced on the virgin sheet.

"Well," said Mr. Spoopendyke rather shortly, the top of his bald place turning red and a few beads of perspiration starting to his brow, "well, this is very strange. What did I pay for this measly machine, any how? and what sort of tinkering has been going on with it? That's what I'd like to know. Guess you've been trying to make railroad spikes instead of letters, haven't you? Oh! I see. The whole thing is loose on the table. How did you expect to print when the press was wobbling around like that?" and Mr. Spoopendyke proceeded to screw it down more firmly. But the screw was too small and the press continued to joggle.

"Dodgast the thing," he muttered, "what d'ye mean by wiggling about like a prohibition candidate in a high-license town? Don't you know that Spoopendyke is here to do business with you?" and he tore the screw out and viciously hammered a big nail partly into the hole.

"There now, we're prepared to put you on cross-examination, you measly scamp, and see what sort of critter you are. Now you'll have a pretty fair opportunity to preserve the sanctity of the Sabbath and to make good the alluring advertisement wherewith you scooped Spoopendyke out of ten good, big, round dollars, consarn ye!"

Once more the paper was put in and once more the press kicked out a certificate to its own unworthiness. The small boy gathered himself for an enjoyable giggle, but a look from Mr. Spoopendyke froze it to an unmeaning grin.

"Oh! you won't print, won't ye," snorted the parent. "You decline to immortalize the subtle fancies that go flitting through Spoopendyk's busy brain, eh? You don't propose to crystalize these dodgasted emanations of inimitable genius, don't ye? You base-born slave of old Perversity himself! You object to transmitting Spoopendyke's thrilling eloquence to generations yet unborn; you don't intend to enroll yourself as part and parcel of the art preservative of arts, hey? Well, we'll see," and he gave the table a yank out to the middle of the floor. "Oh! you won't print, won't you! you dodgasted mule-eared idiot! Well, if you won't print, may be you'll sing," and he grabbed the handle and shook the press till it rattled all over.

Then he gave it another trial, but the result was as bad as before.

"I think, dear," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, who, as usual, had followed that she might assist at critical periods—"I think you have too much ink on the plate."

SPOOPENDYKE RIPS THINGS UP.

"You think!" sneered Mr. Spoopendyke; "oh! you think, do you? Well, with you to think and this thing to print, all I need is a couple of reporters and a congressional candidate to get out a great morning journal. With a mind like yours behind me what's to hinder my starting out in opposition to the London Thunderer? Spoopendyke's Mascot—that's what I'll call it. With a thinking like yours what's to prevent you from thinking the type into line, and thinking this dodgasted press into shape where it'll make marks that'll stand forth like that intellect of yours. Gimme that rag, I say," and Mr. Spoopendyke snatched the cloth with which his wife was about to wipe off the ink, and fired it against the ceiling.

"Stuck full of ink, is it?" bawled Mr. Spookendyke, glaring at his wife, "where is there any ink? I don't see any type full of ink. Just lend me your clairvoyant vision a minute till I spy out these ghosts of departed ink bottles. Bring on your angel hand and clear this too fleshy vision of mine. Pour me out a dose of your dodgasted theosophy that I may catch onto the aforementioned and herein-before-described ink with the delicately sensitive spiritual eye."

"But you are looking at me, papa," pleaded Mrs. Spookendyke.

"Oh, I am, am I?" he exclaimed. "I am really looking at you, eh? Didn't you s'pose I knew I was looking at you? Did you imagine I supposed I was looking at the Seven Wise men of the East? What if I am looking at you? Ain't you gratified to know that you've charmed me like a snake till I can't see the measly ink on the dodgasted type? A fine sample of female you are, that gets mad because her husband is lured from a lop-sided, crooked-backed old printing machine to contemplate the dazzling brilliancy and entrancing voluptuousness of her angelic charms.

"Well, Mrs. S., I'm going to continue this unwelcome gaze until you take your forepaws off'n this guillotine and clamber down-stairs. You've missed your cue. You don't come in on this scene. Spoopendyke has the stage all to himself at this thrilling juncture. Spoopendyke is the hero of this tragedy in high life. It's Spoopendyke, and Spoopendyke all alone, without any other members of the family, who is stage manager, star performer, Roman army and howling populace all at once. You're not in it, Mrs. S., and your absence at this important epoch would be very precious to Spoopendyke," and the highly excited gentleman hit the press a whack with the hammer.

"There!" he yelled, triumphantly, as the inky plate flew against the wall, "this is where the lover finds he's been betrayed," and he wrenched the roller from its sockets. "And here's where he resolves beneath high Heaven to be avenged. Now watch him lure the lovely maiden to the far-away, impenetrable mountain fastnesses," and he flung the chase into the farthest corner of the garret.

"D'ye want to see the repentant villain brought in in chains?" he continued, as he jerked the rest of the machine off on the floor and hammered it with his heel. "Now, Mrs. Spookendyke, the curtain's going to ring down on the happy denouement.

"This is where the dodgasted audience that don't know the difference between printers' ink and the emancipation proclamation calls the star performer before the curtain and fires bouquets at him with the bills inside," and Mr. Spoopendyke with one last, mighty effort kicked the table over and strewed the garret with type, nails, ink, rags and implements until the place looked like a junk-shop struck by lightning.

"My son," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, as she gathered her boy in front of her and hurried him into her own room, "your pa is not feeling well to-day. Let us not annoy him with the press any more."

I preferred the rough draft of the sketch to a more highly-polished one which Mrs. Huntley wished to make. It was just as she had hastily penned and scratched and interlined the only Spoopendyke story written since the death of the genius who made himself famous by caricaturing himself.

CULTIVATE CHARACTER.

The Kind of Men and Women Most Needed in Our Times.

It must be granted that no person is so far a "good-for-nothing" as that he may not sometimes be found doing a good thing, or showing a right feeling. But it is not what we occasionally do, or feel, that determines the kind of character we bear. What we usually, what we habitually, do or feel — it is this which declares us. One honest act does not make an honest man — nor would many such acts, scattered here and there over a life-time, achieve this result. You must be honest, not in single instances, but always; having begun in honesty, you must keep on in the same straight line through all your transactions, and despite every temptation to swerve from it, if you would be deservedly ranked with those nobles of the race whose integrity is as a fixed law of their being. Thus, too, a single tender outgush of benevolence does not entitle one to be styled a benevolent man; nor would many such bursts of kindly emotion raise him to so high a name. It is when he continues in a course of benevolent conduct — it is when the principle of benevolence goes forth from his heart like light from a burning lamp or water from an active spring, ceasing only when the heart ceases to beat—that he is at liberty to claim a place amongst the benefactors of the world. It is certainly better for a man to be honest or benevolent once in awhile than never at all to be the one or the other; but it is infinitely better still if he have the honesty or benevolence graven into his soul as a portion of its very life, so that he shall be always honest or uniformly benevolent; for only thus can his manhood in these respects be worth all that it ought to be.

"What a pleasing little stream this is," said we once to a dweller among the hills, referring to a rivulet near by that went flashing down the slope and dancing through the meadow. "Yes, but it is of almost no account," was the response, "for in a day or two it will be dried up, it being just a wet-weather rill with no fountain of its own. But yonder," he added, "is a stream not much bigger than this, and far less noisy; well, it is always there, rain or no rain; and we build upon its banks whilst it turns our mill-wheels, waters our pastures, enlivens our homes, gives beauty to our landscape, and in a hundred ways is our reliable friend; it seems to come from the very center of things." The difference between these two streams represents the difference between an occasional good impulse and a steadfast character.

Is it not they who do what is right just because it is right that the world most needs—that all true enterprise most relies upon? The cultivation of strong character such as no changeful winds can shake is what our times re*quire; and this character creeds do not* form, nor does any hold upon mere ecclesiastical distinctions foster it. It is of God alone, and is grounded in undoubted truths, not intended for the learned alone, but open to the view and within the grasp of all.—Church Union.

A PUBLIC LOSS.

By the recent death of Samuel J. Randall, ex-Speaker and for over twenty years a prominent member of the National House of Representatives from the City of Philadelphia, the country has sustained a serious loss.

Mr. Randall was not only an able and distinguished statesman, but a citizen of unblemished personal character, and although, from our Democratic point of view, not entirely sound on the tariff question, justice bids us give him credit for standing loyal to the will and wishes of a Pennsylvania constituency.

He was an honest and upright man.

No stigma sullied his private reputation.

No corrupt jobbery ever [illegible] his legislative [illegible].

To utter such facts concerning Samuel J. Randall is to pronounce the highest eulogium mortal lips can speak or pen indite.

After a lengthened career in Congress, he died not rich in worldly goods, but the possessor of far more precious and enduring wealth—virtue and integrity.

Happy would our country be were Congressional seats occupied by more such men of sterling public honesty and unclouded personal repute.

PRINCIPLES AND MEN.

"Principles not Men" is a familiar political expression, and a sound one so far as it goes, but, does it go far enough?

That is a question deserving of thought.

Principles and Men would be [illegible] more appropriate, or couched in other words, right principles and the right kind of men to give them practical effect.

According to the theory of our government, and the letter of organic law under which we live, equal and exact justice to all the people is a vital principle.

A principle of priceless value.

Yet, as a matter of fact, what does it profit the people if they persist in electing as law-makers and law-administrators unprincipled men, men devoid of moral rectitude, corrupt spoilsmen, who will not hesitate to sacrifice for selfish personal or partisan purposes the [illegible] principles, and thereby wantonly ignore the requirements of honor, honesty and justice.

Principles are sure and steadfast.

But, unfortunately, not so the [illegible] of professional politicians.

Our country sadly needs men in public office, Executive and Legislative, National, State and Local, who will fearlessly and conscientiously obey the dictates of right, at all times and under any and every circumstances.

Did the American people, as individual voters, exercise closer scrutiny in the casting of ballots, and did they, instead of going it blind and dumb for any disreputable or incompetent Tom, Dick or Harry caucus wire-pullers may see fit to nominate, refuse positively to vote for any candidate, regardless of his partisan name, whose character for honesty and morality was not [illegible] and whose ability to honestly discharge all the requirements of office, according to unbiassed judgment, and with an eye ever single to the public welfare, were well established, right principles would be sustained by right men, and the [illegible] of the venal be greatly curtailed.

Vote for men of principle.

THE POINT OF THE MILLER CASE.

The point is this: Is the Common Council invested with any right or power to regulate and restrict when a man may open and must close his kitchen, parlor or even barroom?

The charter says this only: "And be it Enacted, That the common council of said city, or a majority thereof, shall have the exclusive right and power to regulate and prohibit the sale of spirituous and vinous liquors within said city as they shall deem most conducive to the public good; no person or persons shall in any manner sell or dispose of spirituous or fermented liquors unless licensed so to do by the common council."

That's all, and the fact that the Council is given no power to forbid a man unlocking his own barroom door and throwing up the light whenever he pleases, is probably the only point on which the Miller case could have been appealed with any prospect of success.

Counsellor Kalisch failed to see [illegible]—really the only strong point—and the opportunity for its use in the Miller case is lost. The City Attorney undoubtedly saw it; but, then, there's the difference again. Many believe that if Counsellor Marsh had been Miller's counsel he would have secured the defendant's acquittal on the first trial. And The Press is aware of such reason in, and foundation for, such belief.

In view of the fact—and it is a fact—that the Council have no power to regulate and restrict the closing, and opening of a man's doors, the Central Press is proven to be as dishonest as it is silly in saying that in arresting Miller for standing inside of his barroom door with [illegible] Councilmen at twelve o'clock, Carey was merely carrying out President Moffett's orders to "ferret out illicit sellers."

FOR INSTANCE!

We do not believe we are giving [illegible] credit for more common sense and propriety than they deserve, when we say that if the "representative" citizens who have been meeting in secret to discipline, enlighten and instruct the Common Council of 1890, would stop and consider themselves, for instance, for a few minutes, they would put on their hats and go home and mind their own business.

For instance, when Messrs D[illegible] and Bowers, and Whiton and S[illegible] were Councilmen, and the good [illegible], for instance, met and decided the proper way to regulate and restrict the sale of liquor, for instance, and presented "petitions," and "whereases," and "resolutions" signed by hundreds, these documents were promptly filed. These Councilmen rightly considered themselves perfectly competent to attend to their own affairs without the intermeddling of other people.

So also, when these "representative" citizens—actuated by diverse motives, including parlor circle politics—have finished their peculiar amusement of chipping dollars for Carey, and resolving how to run somebody's else Council, their opinions will be promptly filed and their [illegible] will be all the reward [illegible] of their interference.

For the delicate and aged and all in whom the vital current is impoverished and sluggish, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the very best tonic. It restores the wasted tissues, and imparts to the system [illegible] vitality and vigor. Price $1. Worth $5 a bottle.

ITS OUTLOOK BRIGHTENS AND BROADENS IN EVERY SENSE.

Good Seen Manifested Towards the Scheme. Required—The Names of the Givers, and the Officers.

The outlook for the Boys Club brightens and broadens continually. Those interested are using every means to have it placed upon such a basis as to insure success, when it shall be opened.

The Rev. J. C. Collins, whom all will remember as the originator and successful organizer of Boys Clubs, has been made a member of the Advisory Board, and the starting of the club will be placed in his hands. He will provide an experienced superintendent who will report to him, and Mr. Collins will act entirely in harmony with the Executive Committee. The superintendent will receive his salary conditionally upon success.

At present a suitable hall cannot be had. As manual training is to be an especial feature larger accommodations will be necessary than for the club simply. It is hoped that this difficulty will be surmounted before long.

The Century Company of New York has offered, through W. Lewis Fraser, manager of the art department, to loan indefinitely to the club, 75 original drawings by the best painters in the country, some of which have appeared in the pages of the magazine and some have not. They are all valuable and many have taken medals abroad. This has come to the club through G. Wharton Edwards. Plainfield will be the pioneer club in New Jersey. The committees are moving slowly in order to move surely. Absolute success is what they expect and for what they work. The subscriptions made by the gentlemen named below have been received since the 111 names at $5 each were published in The Press:

W. B. Wadsworth, $50; D. W. Pond, 25; Walter Scott, 25; W. L. Patton, 25; C. W. Opdyke, 25; F. F. Beals, 25; T. A. Cruikshank, 25; Wm Miller, 25; H. G. Runkle, 50; Charles J. Fisk, 25; Alex. Gilbert, 25; Mason W. Tyler, 50; Geo. H. Babcock, 25; Charles Potter, 25; W. B. Post, 10; Charles Hyde, 25; B. P. Talmage, 10; W. F. Smith, 15; S. K. Kross, 10; George R. Thomas, 25; Joseph W. Langhorne, 10; Otis Arms, 25; Rev. F. E. Smith, 25.

These monies are being sent in and are deposited in the City National Bank. Subscriptions, however small, will be acceptable and will help toward the $1,500 required. All subscriptions may now be sent to the Treasurer, Dr. W. H. Murray, Broadway.

The committees are as follows: President—Mr. Aaron M. Powell; Secretary—Miss Nettie Haviland; Treasurer—Dr. W. H. Murray.

Vice Presidents—Job Male, Hon. Nathan Harper, William Miller, F. Wood, F. F. Beals, William Bloodgood, A. D. Shepard, Geo. H. Babcock, James T. Closson, D. W. Pond, W. L. Patton; Executive Board—Mrs. D. W. Pond, Mrs. W. L. Patton, C. W. Opdyke, W. B. Wadsworth, G. Wharton Edwards.

Advisory Board—Isaac Miller, Howard Fleming, T. A. Cruikshank, Alex. Gilbert, H. A. Ondermonk, Geo. D. Patton, B. C. Corwin, K. F. M. Chase, F. G. Langhorne, J. C. Pierson, Jr., H. P. Reynolds, Leo. The following letter has been received from the W. C. T. U.:

To Mrs. Patton:

At a meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union held yesterday, (March 5,) your communication was read and discussed. A vote was taken to co-operate by giving our sympathy and help in the work of the Boys Club.

Yours in behalf of the Union,

BEWARE OF THE MAD DOG.

A Boy and Several Canines Bitten by a Strange Dog Showing Symptoms of the Rabies—The Animal Still at Large.

Residents in the Eastern section of the city, are greatly alarmed over the appearance, Monday morning, of a strange dog showing symptoms of the rabies. The dog, which is of the shepherd breed, almost killed a valuable sky terrier belonging to Mr. Wm. Bloodgood on the hill near Netherwood.

The animal next attacked Sidney Sykes, a fourteen-year-old boy employed by Mr. W. S. B[illegible] on the Rahway Road. The brute tore the boys trousers into shreds and badly lacerated his right leg, so that Dr. Jenkins to whom he was taken for treatment, was obliged to cauterize the wound.

The dog also bit two dogs belonging to Mrs. David Jones, and a dog or two owned by dog-catcher James Babbitt, it is said, were also attacked.

Mr. Bloodgood's dog was perhaps bitten the worst of any that were attacked. The strange animal is still at large, and no determined effort has been made to put an end to his earthly career.

EXPLOSION AT NETHERWOOD.

Mr. H. P. Talmage's Private Gas House Blown Up on Sunday Night—No One Injured.

About ten o'clock on Sunday evening as the residents of Netherwood were retiring for the night they were surprised to hear a loud report resembling the discharge of cannon. Investigation disclosed the fact, that the private gas house of Mr. H. P. Talmage, situated about fifty yards from the house on Belvidere avenue, had been blown up with terrific force, scattering the bricks in all directions. Fortunately at the time the explosion occurred no one was near the building, and no one was therefore injured.

The explosion is thought to have resulted from a leak, and strange to say the machinery in the building was but little injured. The loss will probably not exceed $150.

Township Committee Meeting.

The North Plainfield Township Committee met in Spencer's Hall, Tuesday, and appointed Mr. J. W. A. Bauermeister Overseer of the Poor. Mr. C. W. Blaine was appointed overseer of Road District No. 5, and Mr. Aaron Allen overseer of Road District No. 6.

Who Cares?

Because of the assertion of a denial that at a meeting of indignant citizens $15 was contributed for Carey, The Press can repeat the statement with a feeling of all the greater assurance. It was $15!

But who cares? It is the indignant citizens' own money, and surely Carey does not object. It is no one's else funeral, but theirs.

—The members of the Police Board met in Councilman Roberts office on Monday evening, but transacted no business of special importance to the public.

—There is no news to add to what has already been published in these columns about the new [illegible] church the Seventh Day Baptists are about to build, except that $5,000 will be appropriated for its organ.

Don't hawk, hawk, blow, spit and disgust everybody with your offensive breath, but use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and end it. 50 cents, by druggists.

THE PLAIN UNVARNISHED FACT.

Carey Himself Has Expressed His Pleasure That Miller Was Not Punished, Which Proves That He Was Not After Any Violator of the Law.

To the Editor of The Press:—I have listened patiently and attentively to all that has been said, read all that has been in print, and noticed all that has been done, with regard to the "great and high handed outrage," which was committed by citizen J. B. Miller, in opening his barroom for five minutes to accommodate three Democratic Councilmen with temperance drinks, after eleven o'clock at night.

It has been said that Officer Carey acted from a pure sense of duty. Now let us see whether he did or not. According to the testimony of two respectable witnesses on the trial of the cause, Officer Carey said that Moffett was the man he was after—calling him, (Moffett,) an obscene name. But as Mr. Moffett had not committed any offense, he could not complain against him, so all that was left to be done was to charge Mr. Miller with a technical violation of the law, and put Mr. Moffett and his colleagues' names in the complaint as being the persons who congregated in the barroom, so as to bring Mr. Moffett and his companions if possible into ridicule before the community.

It is reported that Officer Carey has said since the semi-conviction of Mr. Miller, that he was glad that Miller got off so lightly; showing conclusively to my mind, and in the minds of all unprejudiced people, that Officer Carey was not acting from a sense of duty, by trying to bring his superiors into ridicule—which was the ostensible object in making the complaint, and not for the conviction of Mr. Miller.

The people of Plainfield have known all of these gentlemen—Messrs Moffett, Hetfield and Gallup—for a long time; in fact I believe two of them were born here and always have lived in our midst, neither of whom have ever committed any crime, nor been guilty of any offense against the law, but have always enjoyed and maintained the highest reputation and character among our citizens and elsewhere. In my opinion, as also was said by the Corporation Counsel, "That Officer Carey did have considerable nerve and courage" but no judgment, in trying to convict three Democrats by charging one Republican with an offense, which the jury saw by the verdict, was only a technical violation, if any at all. But last and not least, is the meeting together of a few Republicans—called heretofore by the name of "representative citizens," though they might properly be called the "Parlor Circle"—and after hearing only what Officer Carey had to say about his conviction before the Police Board of our city, for using vile, indecent and obscene language to members of our Common Council, immediately resolved that Officer Carey must be upheld at all hazards both by contributions (which I am informed amounted to $15.00) and other aid, in spite of the fact that Carey did not deny the charges before the Board, under oath. Now I am informed that some, if not all of these "representative citizens," are members of Christian churches in our city. Some of them hold prominent offices in their church, take an active part in spreading the Gospel, and who have families at home looking up to them for their example. What I would like to know is if they consider their position in this matter consistent with their religion and good morals; and if they want to appear before their children and the community, as the champions of any one who will use profane, indecent and obscene language?

No, Mr. Editor, I will answer for them, they do not, because with them it is only a question of politics—not morals or religion. They consider the Democrats have no right to elect one of their number as President, when they are in the minority, and it is a very bitter pill for some "representative citizens" to swallow. They must crush such audacious Democrats who would dare do such a thing or even assert their rights. But go ahead Messrs Moffett, Hetfield and Gallup and do your duty as you have done. The people are with you.

The Rev. Dr. Yerkes Speaks in New York.

The New Trace Line Pantaloons.

Early this season Watson & Co., made a purchase of the best patterns of these handsome new goods in the market, and now they are in such great demand by Merchant Tailors who want them for custom trade that they could sell them over again at a large profit—but they prefer to make up and divide them among their customers at $5 and $6 a pair, as they are just the thing to wear with an unfinished worsted Coat and Vest, like Watson & Co. show in window next to Market street at $13.

Their special sale of stylish Spring suits cut from choice Cheviots, in solid colors, handsome striped Cassimeres and quiet silk mixtures, at $12 50 for any style you may fancy was caused by the delay of their decorators in getting ready their new suit salesroom in their Market street extension, which makes it impossible to provide racks for this immense stock as fast as their tailors finish them, but $12.50 a suit will make room quickly and somebody will get prizes.—Newark Press.

The Death of Col. James A. L. McClure.

Legal, political and social circles of Baltimore were astounded and grieved Monday morning to learn of the death of the Hon. James A. L. McClure. For a quarter of a century Mr. McClure has been a leading citizen of Baltimore. In his chosen profession, the law, he won an enviable reputation, and in many ways he was thoroughly identified with the interests of the city of his adoption. He died at 10 o'clock Monday morning at his home, 1700 North Charles street, Baltimore, as stated in The Press the same day.

He left a wife and two daughters, besides three brothers one of whom is Counsellor McClure of this city. The Board of Police Commissioners adjourned because of his death, and the Courts, the Journalists club and other associations throughout the city, passed resolutions of regret.

The pall bearers were: Ex-Minister to France, Robert L. McLain, U. S. Senator Gorman, Chief Justice Daniel B. Lucas, the Hon. Beverly Johnson, Jr., Judge Dennis of the Circuit Court, States Attorney Charles Kerr, City Solicitor Albert Ritchie, Gen'l Andrew Pennington, Gen'l David Hunter, Mr. John T. Ford and several others who made personal requests to act.

—The Plainfield Sewer bill passed the House of Assembly at Trenton, Tuesday [illegible], without a dissenting voice.

OVER TRAINED AND OVER ANXIOUS.

The Olympics Lose Two Important Games, and The Crescents Step to the Top of the Tournament.

There was great desire on the part of Plainfield's bowling teams to win the second series of games in which they were pitted against one another. The Plainfield bowlers had already passed the Westfields, Somervilles and Fanwoods, and the struggle was now between the team of the Crescent League and the Olympics.

Saturday evening they met in the alleys of the League in the presence of a large attendance that included many ladies. Mr. Stitt, of Westfield, was the umpire and the match began just as the clock, which was ten minutes slow, struck eight. VanEmburgh started the game with a strike, and Wilber with a spare. When the first frame was footed, the score stood: Crescents, 74, Olympics, 73.

But after that the latter were never in it. On the second frame the Crescents led by 22 pins and gained upon each roll. It was evident at once that Collier himself, in particular, and his team in general were over anxious. They also showed that they were over-trained. The second game of the Olympics was even lower than the first. The score was:

BOROUGH COUNCIL MEETING.

Mayor Pitce and Messrs Emmons, Hegeman, Needham, Smalley and Sebring constituted a quorum of the Borough Council which met in special session, on Monday, for the purpose of appointing a Chief of the Fire Department to succeed Chief H. J. Martin, whose term of office expired on April 15, and also to provide for street lights.

Clerk Harry Brokaw read the call, after which the Mayor presented a communication nominating Mr. H. J. Martin to succeed himself as Chief of the Borough Fire Department.

Mr. Emmons offered a resolution confirming the appointment, and fixing the compensation at $50 per annum—$50 less than last year's salary.

Messrs Smalley and Emmons favored a reduction of the Chief's salary, but Mr. Hegeman thought that it should remain the same as last year. The resolution was adopted, Mr. Hegeman voting "no."

Mr. Sebring offered a resolution which prevailed, authorizing the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee to negotiate a loan of $900 in addition to the loan already made, for street lighting purposes.

Chief Martin sent in his resignation, but action was deferred until a subsequent meeting.

Council then adjourned.

DOWN WENT OLYMPIC.

The Westfield Bowlers Defeat Collier and Wilber and the Colts, Two Games.

If the Somerville bowling team had a few more games to roll, they would stand a chance of passing the Olympics of this city. The latter are bowling like duffers, just now, and could not win anything in the Central Bowling Tournament, if there were five prizes instead of three.

The score below will show the result of Tuesday's games on the Olympics own alleys. The only excitement in the match was during the last game. It was anybody's from start to finish. The two teams were tied at the close of the fifth frame. On the wind-up the Olympics were two pins ahead down to the last man's turn. Collier made a spare and it looked like sure victory for the Plainfielders. Alpers wound up, however, with a strike and a spare which won for Westfield by just one pin. The score was:

HURT BY THE CARS.

A Young Son of Mr. Frank Vail Struck by an Engine While Walking on the Track.

Frankie, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vail of Park avenue, was struck by drill engine No. 200, while walking on the track near the Richmond street crossing, Tuesday afternoon, and seriously injured.

The boy did not notice the engine approaching until it was too late, when turning around, he was struck on the head, and thrown some distance, landing alongside the track. The unfortunate youth was taken to his home in a United States' express wagon, where Doctors Boone, Fritts, Long and Hedges attended him. An examination disclosed a compound fracture of the right leg, and the little finger of the right hand was crushed. Besides these injuries there was a deep and ugly looking gash on the head.

The boy displayed remarkable courage, scarcely making an outcry while on the way home. Late above evening, after a reaction set in, the doctors succeeded in setting the broken bones and amputating the first joint of the little finger. Today the patient's condition is reported as improved.

The accident, Tuesday, is another illustration of the danger of walking on the railroad track.

THE YOUNG DAUGHTERS OF THE KING.

A Novel Entertainment to be Given in Holy Cross Chapel.

The inquiry which was published last Saturday, headed, "Who is the King of Washington Park?" has been most satisfactorily answered. The Press is informed that an entertainment will be given by the Young Daughters of the King—residents of Washington Park—in Holy Cross chapel, next Saturday at 4 P. M. The mistaken idea which prompted the inquiry appears to have arisen from a slight typographical error in the tickets.

The programme, which will be most interesting and attractive is not yet complete, but will consist of music, vocal and instrumental, tableaux vivants and recitations. The special feature is to be the rendering, for the first time in Plainfield, of a Kinder Symphony, which will be performed by over thirty young people and children, in costume, and under the leadership of Mr. A. T. Newman of New York city.

Bound to Satisfy the People.

Saturday afternoon the Crescent League ball team will play the Lafayette College nine of Easton, Pa. In the out field Carbonell will again play in place of McLaughlin, and right field will be filled by a New York player who comes highly recommended. If Livingston does no better, the League will look for a new pitcher. It is proposed to give the Plainfield people this season the best that can be found.

For nearly half a century Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been the most popular cough remedy in the world. The constantly increasing demand for this remedy proves it to be the very best specific for colds, coughs, and all diseases of the throat and lungs.

DROPPED IN THE FIELD.

The Crescents Lose a Game to the Celebrated Acmes of New York.

The spectators of last Saturday's ball game should remember that the Acmes are undoubtedly one of New York's strongest professional teams. They beat the Crescents by a score of 10 to 2 last season.

Saturday the Acmes' runs were every one made after two men were out. The two runs in the first inning were made on Spencer's muff, and the three in the second inning on Carbonell's muff. Livingston had a bad nine of batters to pitch against but he held them down much better than Gaiely did last year. In fact, the Acmes only got two more hits than the Crescents.

The season is young yet; the Crescents' pony battery like warm weather best; the out-field will be changed somewhat; and it won't be many days before the Crescents will strike a winning gait and keep it. The score was:

The Loss Adjusted.

Mr. Charles Smith estimates the loss occasioned by the fire in his residence on Friday at about $500. The loss has been amicably adjusted. The fire started in an alligator satchel that was suspended from a hook in the clothes closet, and ate its way up the wooden partition to the ceiling.

The Seventh Day Baptist Chapel.

The Building Committee of the Seventh Day Baptist church met Sunday, and decided to remove the present structure to the lot corner of Madison avenue and Fifth street, and to build the new chapel on the Central avenue lot, where the church building now stands.

Lawn Tennis.

A series of tennis matches will be played this week between the classes of '90 and '91 of the High school, on the court of Mr. F. G. Smith of Central avenue. The first match will be played Thursday, April 24, at 4 P. M., the second on Friday at the same hour, and a final match in case of a tie will be played Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

Exempt Firemen's Election.

At a recent meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association, the following officers were elected for the coming year: President—A. Titsworth; Vice President—T. J. Gillies; Recording and Financial Secretary—G. Thorn; Treasurer—Jos. A. Hubbard.

Board of Trustees—D. W. Littell, Chas. P. Sebring, H. M. Sherwin, W. H. Harding, A. Saltzman.

Changes in Real Estate.

The property on West Fifth street, for many years owned and occupied by Mr. Wm Estil, has been purchased by Mr. P. Homan, who owns the property adjoining it, for $3,500. Mr. Estil has taken up his residence with his son, Mr. Mulford Estil, who recently purchased from Mr. George F. Brown, a handsome house on Grove street, North Plainfield, paying $13,500 cash for the property.

Plainfield vs. North Plainfield.

"You Can't Lose Us," was the assertion made by one of the players who constituted the base ball team from this city, which crossed bats with a nine from North Plainfield, on the grounds back of Mr Chas Hyde's residence, Sunday afternoon, and the assertion proved to be true. For at the end of seven hard fought innings, the Plainfield team was declared victorious by a score of 9 to 8.

Squared Up the Back Accounts.

Counsel for Louis Reese, late of the firm of Reese & Layton, came up from Newark, Monday, and settled the claims left unpaid when the firm removed from this city about two weeks ago. Reese also furnished $500 bail for his appearance before the Somerset County Grand Jury to answer to the criminal charge of attempting to defraud Messrs R. W. Rice & Co., out of two hundred bushels of potatoes.

Fix Those Board Walks.

The Press is again requested to call attention to the dangerous condition of many of the board walks in North Plainfield, and to urge upon the owners the necessity of having the same repaired without delay.

The same request might well be applied to certain property-owners in this city. For instance, on Washington avenue, between Front street and the bridge, there is a very dangerous strip of board walk that should be attended to at once. The walk has been in a wretched condition for a long time and needs immediate repairs.

Muzzle the Dogs.

Considerable alarm is felt by certain persons in this city over the appearance of the supposed to be rabid dog, early on Monday morning. All of the dogs which are known to have been bitten, have been tied up and are closely watched.

What has become of the strange dog, no one seems to know. One thing is certain, however, the dog has not yet been reported shot.

As the warm weather approaches it may not be out of order to "jog the memory" of the owners of dogs, by stating that there is at the present time a city ordinance which prohibits dogs from running about without muzzles at all seasons of the year. Section one of "an ordinance concerning dogs," reads as follows:

That no dog, not in charge of its keeper, shall be permitted to run at large within the City of Plainfield, unless a good and sufficient muzzle shall be placed over the mouth of such dog in such manner as to render biting impossible; and any person who shall permit or suffer any dog owned or harbored by him to run at large contrary to the provisions of this ordinance, shall upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine not exceeding ten dollars for each offence.

Dangerous Trifling.

It is not only foolish, but dangerous, to trifle with indigestion or liver derangement. Take the proper remedy as soon as possible, and avoid all danger incident to delay. HAMBURG FIGS are a specific for these affections. 25 cents. Dose, one fig. Mack Drug Co., N. Y. For sale by J. G. Miller.

JUDGE HARPER TELLS THE PURPOSE.

A Noble Aim Rewarded by Noble Results.

The attendance in Reform Hall Sunday evening was fair. Vice President E. B. Titsworth presided, and Mr. Vanderbeek, after a long absence caused by illness, was again at his post of duty as leader of the choir. Mr. G. M. Angleman offered prayer.

The speaker of the evening was ex-Judge Harper, who commenced by saying, "The purpose of these Sunday evening meetings is to promulgate the truths and benefits of total abstinence from liquor drinking and to avow hostility to the liquor traffic, that being temperance reform, and temperance," he maintained, "was the close ally of religion, because it seeks to overthrow evil and to raise into dominion Christian faith, virtue, sobriety and human happiness. We here meet as non-sectarians and non-partisans, but as the resolute advocates of the eternal principles of right. What aim can be nobler. It is a significant fact that from the pledge table of Reform Hall many have found the pathway to lives of usefulness and human bliss, and not a few to the portals of church membership."

Judge Harper then proceeded to expose the terrible effects of and the enormous expense inflicted upon the people by intoxicating liquor, showed why laws were not enforced; held up to view the fallacy of high license; pointed out the great growth of temperance sentiment throughout the United States, and advocated at length the value of personal determination to do right. Mr. Angleman followed with a few remarks in favor of the pledge.

The following announcements were made: There will be an oratorical contest between a number of young ladies in Reform Hall on Thursday evening, April 24, at 8 o'clock, under the auspices of the Woman's Temperance Aid Society, to which a cordial invitation is extended to all. Admission free. No reserved seats.

Samuel A. Haines, Esq., will speak in Reform Hall next Sunday evening, 27th, and the Rev. Dr. Rodman the Sunday following, May 4.

The meeting closed with the doxology.

APPRECIATE PLAINFIELD TALENT.

Mr. Elmer E. Runyon Carries New Brunswick by Storm—Comments by the Local Press of That City.

The amateur minstrel entertainment given by the students of Rutgers College, at New Brunswick, on Friday evening, was a pronounced success. The press of that city in commenting upon the entertainments, has nothing to say but praise for Mr. E. E. Runyon, the Crescent League's popular tenor, and Mr. Ed. Marble, Thatcher's inimitable interlocutor.

The Home News says: "Mr. Runyon's solo, 'The Song I'll ne'er forget,' was beautifully rendered. He and others received handsome bouquets."

(From the Fredonian.)

Mr. Marble, the interlocutor, then announced the famous tenor of the Crescent League of Plainfield, Mr. Elmer E. Runyon. His solo "The song I'll ne'er forget," was sung in a clear pure tenor voice of unexceptionable quality. The chorus was a duet, trio and full company ending. After he had bowed acknowledgement to two encores, a handsome boquet of cut flowers was handed to him.

Wanted to Kill the Whole Family.

A young law student from Philadelphia came to this city, Sunday, to visit his sister. During the day the young man became temporily insane and violent. Police Captain Grant was sent for and he detailed Officer Sliter to watch the man.

The unfortunate young man was put on board the 1:17 A. M. train for Phildelphia, Officer Sliter accompanying him to his home.

Took a Dose of Laudanum.

One of the two-year-old twins of Mr. and Mrs. John Emmons of Washington avenue and Prospect place, North Plainfield, nearly lost its life Sunday night, by taking an over dose of laudanum. The child got hold of the vial containing the liquid, and drank a quantity of it, soon afterward becoming stupid from the effects. Dr T. S. Davis was hastily summoned, and today the child is reported to be out of danger.

New Market's Arbor Day.

Arbor Day exercises were observed at New Market last Friday, and the programme embraced:

Address—Arbor Day	Miss Carpenter.
Planting of the apple tree	Lulu Davis.
Flower song	Emma Smalley.
The squirrel's lesson	Alfred Osman.
A legend	Alice Harris.
Our flag	Two little girls and two little boys.
Pictures of memory	Nellie Tabb.
The oak tree	Mahlon Dayton.
Little Anemone	Mary Johnson.
The Bee and the Butterfly	Florence Nelson.
Paul Revere's ride	Miss Titsworth.
A perplexing question	John Nelson.
Planting of trees by the higher grade.

Memorial Sermon to His Father.

Sunday morning the Rev. Cornelius H. Patton preached a memorial sermon to his father, the late Rev. W. W. Patton, D. D., LL.D., in Westfield Congregational church. Mr. W. L. Patton of East Ninth street, eldest son of Dr. Patton, with his family, attended the service.

The sermon was most dignified, judicious and just, bringing out well the sterling qualities and strict adherence to principle of this eminently pious man. The text was "Honor thy Father," and the discourse will probably be published.

A Mysterious Disappearance.

Mr. Benjamin B. Newton, brother of Mrs. George H. Goddard, 19 East Ninth street, who has been in ill-health on account of overwork, disappeared from his sister's house during Sunday night. He is 35 years old, of dark complexion, dark brown hair and full beard and moustache. He was dressed, probably, in black wide welt diagonal coat and vest, striped dark trousers and black derby hat.

He has been until recently acting Assistant Superintendent of the main line of the Philadelphia and Reading R. R., his office being in Philadelphia. His friends think he may have gone to that city, but they have no trace of him whatever. He was in bed all day Sunday and as late as ten o'clock that night.

Blood Will Tell.

There is no question about it—blood will tell—especially if it be impure blood. Blotches, eruptions, pimples and boils, are all symptoms of an impure blood, due to the improper action of the liver. When this important organ fails to properly perform its function of purifying and cleansing the blood, impurities are carried to all parts of the system, and the symptoms above referred to are merely evidences of the struggle of Nature to throw off the poisonous germs. Unless her warning be heeded in time, serious results are certain to follow, culminating in liver or kidney disorders, or even in consumption. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will prevent and cure these diseases, by restoring the liver to a healthy condition.

Doings in the City Court.

Charles McCann was Tuesday tried by Judge Codington on a charge of assaulting a colored man named Peterson. He was adjudged guilty and fined eight dollars.

James Sebring was arraigned for disorderly conduct. He pleaded guilty and was fined three dollars.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became a Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

The usual treatment of catarrh is very unsatisfactory, as thousands of despairing patients can testify. A trustworthy medical writer says: "Proper local treatment is positively necessary to success, but most of the remedies in general use by physicians afford but temporary benefit. A cure cannot be expected from snuffs, powders, douches and washes." Ely's Cream Balm is a remedy which combines the important requisites of quick action, specific curative power with perfect safety and pleasantness to the patient.

A MISSING MAN.

An Aged New Yorker Wanders Away From a Mountain Avenue Residence—All Efforts to Discover His Whereabouts Unavailing.

A man named Waldron, aged 65 years, came out from New York on Thursday afternoon last, ostensibly to visit a family on Mountain avenue. About six o'clock on that afternoon Mr. Waldron wandered away from the house, coming in the direction of this city, and since that time nothing has been heard from him. Sunday evening the police were acquainted with the facts concerning the man's sudden disappearance, together with a description of him.

Mr. Waldron, it is said, was in the habit of visiting friends in Bound Brook, and it was at first thought that he had gone there. But inquiry at that place dispelled this thought.

The man is said to have a mania for picking up articles, and it was thought that perhaps he had been arrested on this account. Consequently the police were notified above evening.

WESTFIELD TO HAVE STREET LIGHTS.

The Contract Awarded on Thursday Night.

The town committee of Westfield met Thursday evening at the town rooms and awarded the contract for lighting street lamps from May 1, 1890, to April 1, 1891, the price being 45c per month per lamp. A committee from the board of trade appeared for the purpose of having the new law regarding the licensing of hackmen and peddlers put into force. The matter was referred to the town counsel, Frank Bergen. Communications were received from the Westinghouse and Thomson-Houston Electric Light companies regarding the establishment of a plant in Westfield. The matter is still being considered by the committee.

Who is the King of Washington Park?

A youthful reader of The Press having received a ticket to "A musical entertainment to be given in the Holy Cross chapel by the Young Daughters of the King of Washington Park," respectfully asks the above question.

Birthday Sociable.

A birthday sociable was tendered to Master Albert Naylor, at the residence of his parents, No. 15 Lake street, Friday night. A large number of the boy's companions were present and enjoyed an evening of real pleasure, singing and dancing being features of the entertainment.

The Magnificent Generosity of Lynch, and the Indignant Citizens.

It is told that when Officer Lynch was asked his price for guarding over night the bric-a-brac and tapestries of the late Charity Ball, he nobly said: "I don't ask nothing. Give it to the Horspital."

A similar tale of an unbounded self-sacrifice of wealth, is this: The purse subscribed for ex-Captain Carey at the recent meeting of indignant citizens, contained just fifteen dollars.

A Disgraceful Scene.

On East Second street, late Friday evening, a drunken man, said to be a resident at Oak Tree, jerked his ten-year-old son from a buggy, and declared that the boy should not ride home with him. To a Press reporter the boy said that he had been standing around in the cold for over four hours, waiting for his inebriated father to go home. The boy did not even have on an overcoat.

Persons interested themselves in the boy's welfare, and offered to provide a room for him in a hotel, wherein he might spend the night.

What's Sauce for the Goose is Sauce for the Gander.

A policeman by the name of Carey applied to the President of the Common Council, a most obscene epithet. Carey was therefore suspended by the Board of Police. Then a handful of "representative" citizens—actuated ostensibly by indignation, but in reality by nothing but common politics—met together to kiss Carey and provide for the impeachment of the Police Board.

Friday a man by the name of Clark applied to policeman McCue, the same epithet as policeman Carey had applied to President Moffett. Clark was arrested and City Judge Codington sentenced him to sixty days in the County Jail. Now, therefore, it is proper for the indignant and representative citizens to meet again and kiss Clark and provide for the impeachment of Judge Codington.

Arbor Day Exercises at Bryant School.

There were interesting exercises at the Bryant School building, Friday morning, according to the following programme:

Singing—Morning hymn ..... School.
Responsive Exercise—"Who made the Rocks, the Hills, the Trees ..... Clara Armstrong and School.
Quotation from the Bible—"The tree of the field is man's life."
Quotation from Bryant—"The groves were God's first temples."
Origin of Arbor Day ..... Miss Valentine.
Singing—Up in the tree top ..... School.
Reading—The Brown Thrush ..... Katie Smith
Singing—Voice of the Grass ..... School

RADAM'S MICROBE KILLER
Cures All Diseases.

After myself and wife had used your Microbe Killer with great benefit, although I have not a farthing's pecuniary interest in your remedy, unsolicited and on my own responsibility, I wrote to nearly forty of those whose certificates you publish, embracing nearly all diseases, "please give your present impressions of Wm. Radam's Microbe Killer;" I am happy to state the replies were not only favorable but enthusiastic. Many of the cures of complicating diseases almost surpass belief.
Sincerely yours,

ANNOUNCEMENT.

On April 1, I reopened the Riverside Stock Farm Branch Stables, at Nos. 29 and 31 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J., with a choice lot of Horses.

I shall endeavor to keep on hand at all times horses suitable for all purposes but shall make a specialty in coach and carriage teams, roadsters, family and saddle horses.

Believing that there is a growing demand in this city for such a business, I have remodeled my stable, put in large, well lighted box stalls and other improvements and have engaged an experienced salesman, who will be in charge of the business.

By running this stable in connection with, and as a branch of the Riverside Stock Farm Stables, I shall be enabled to select and keep on hand only such horses as are especially suited for this market.

The stock will always be shown, during the week, with pleasure, and you are respectfully invited to inspect the same.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION.

L. A. DEMAREST, City Editor.

—Oh, for a Y. M. C. A. building.

—The receipts from Thursday's performance in Music Hall amounted to over $[illegible].

—The town of Westfield is already considering the subject of a Fourth of July demonstration.

—It is understood that ex-Captain of Police Tunis J. Carey has been appointed a State detective.

—Harbingers of Spring come again some more. The organ grinder was abroad in Plainfield today.

—Officer Laine last evening arrested a disorderly person on Jefferson avenue. He was locked up in the City Jail.

—Some people imagine that the appearance of the crocus takes a season an increase of [illegible], but such is not the fact.

—The streets about town are getting very dusty, notwithstanding the fact that the street sprinklers make their usual trips.

—The annual election of Fire Department officers both in this city and North Plainfield, will take place on Monday, May 5.

—Already this Spring great changes are noticed about Pearl street, North Plainfield. Richard Elliott has moved his house back.

—A new and attractive signboard, with the words "Central Hotel," was yesterday placed in position in front of the post office building.

—The libel suit of Maxwell against Rice has gone over for the term by consent of counsel concerned. The reason was stated in these columns.

—Mr. Thomas Dowd, of West Third street, had his right arm caught in some cog wheels at the Pond Tool Works, on April 16. He was not seriously hurt, however.

—Soon will be heard the beat of muffled drums as the veterans march with solemn tread to decorate with the choicest flowers of Springtime their comrades gone before.

—The days increase in length as follows: In April, one hour and 13 minutes; in May, one hour and one minute; and in June, 11 minutes. Then they begin to shorten.

—Mr. Gideon Burnes, of Washington avenue, North Plainfield, recently speared about a dozen fine suckers in Green Brook, some of the fish tipping the scales at a pound each.

—The Court of Common Pleas at Somerville has adjourned until May 26, because many of the petit jurors are farmers and wanted a few weeks off for Spring plowing and planting.

—Work was begun on the two hundred foot extension to the Pond Machine Tool company's works at Front avenue, last week, and the work will be pushed rapidly forward to completion.

—The new Pullman parlor car now being built to order for the exclusive use of the Howard Club of commuters, will be completed in June. It will be furnished with accommodations for sixty people.

—The annual election of officers to serve the Home Building and Loan Association for the ensuing year took place [illegible] night. All the old officers were re-elected, excepting the three auditors.

—The Summit Lyceum rifle team will contest with the rifle team of the Park Avenue Social Club of this city, for the silver cup which is now in possession of the Lyceum team, on April 29, at Plainfield.

—Mr. I. L. Manning has just completed an $800 monument for Mr. Mulford Estil, in Hillside cemetery. The monument is one of the most prominent in the cemetery, and can be seen for a long distance.

—In spite of reports to the contrary, Joseph Blatz made no application in the County Court for a license to sell liquor on the premises recently purchased by him at the corner of Somerset and Chatham streets.

—Messrs Manning, Maxwell & Moore, of No. 118 Liberty street, New York city, have contributed $100 to the Mutual Aid Society of the Pond Machine Tool company, which is composed of the company's employes.

—Architect A. L. C. Marsh's hands are full. He has just signed the contract for Mr. John M. Crane's handsome new house on West Eighth street, and is figuring on one for Assistant Cashier Wm. F. Arnold of the City National Bank.

—The Board of Fire Underwriters has ordered removed all of the woodwork, excepting the flooring, in the electric light station in this city, thus exposing all wires to view. Chief Doane of the Fire Department is doing the work.

—"The flowers that bloom in the Spring have nothing to do with the case;" but H. S. Miller's "Harvest Queen" and other Fertilizers make the flowers bloom and the grain grow. Pierson's Hardware Co., 63 West Front street, keep a full line.

—As the "Monday" bowling team of Westfield have boycotted Ulrich's alleys in that town, the match between them and the Fanwood's scheduled for Friday evening at Westfield, will be rolled on the Olympia alleys in this city some other evening.

—The Hon. John Ulrich has temporarily removed his office from the First National Bank building to the office of J. T. Vail, opposite the station. In a week or two Judge Ulrich will be permanently located in his own handsome new building on North avenue.

—Mr. P. T. S. Nevius denies explicitly that there is a word of truth in the report of a strike among the Italians employed in his stone crusher. He says there "was no strike at all," and that "those who struck and tried to arouse others to strike, had no knives nor pistols."

—A laughable incident occurred on the sidewalk in front of a South Second street residence, Monday afternoon. Two full-blooded game cocks were having a fierce and bloody battle, when a pug dog, belonging to one of the neighbors, appeared on the spot and took part in the fight.

—Music lovers will enjoy a rare treat in attending a musical recital to be given by the eminent pianist, Mr. William H. Sherwood, at Seminary Hall on Tuesday evening, May 13, at 8 o'clock, under the management of Mr. Dorsey W. Hyde. Tickets can be procured at the usual places.

—The musicale which was to be given in Vincent chapel, Friday evening of last week, under the auspices of the Epworth League, in which some musicians from New York, as well as some of the best local talent, were to take part, has been postponed until the next regular meeting of the League, May 2.

—The thoroughbred mare belonging to Councilman Seymour [illegible] handsome bay [illegible] team, injured herself in the stable and died Sunday. The team has been noticeable on the streets for many months, because of their beauty, and the style with which the Councilman's imported coachman handled them.

—During the ball game on Saturday between the Crescents and Actives, and while Carbonell was at the bat in the last inning, one enthusiastic spectator bound a copper penny to him on a [illegible] of good luck. Carbonell pocketed the penny, knocked a safe hit and brought in the only run made by the Crescents since the first inning.

The marriage of Miss Case, daughter of Major Rufus K. Case, of East Ninth street, and Mr. Dudley S. Miller of Randolph's pharmacy, will take place Tuesday, the 29th.

The Misses Tucker of 33 North avenue, will receive a large sum of money, September 15, 1890, which was left to them by their father who has been dead for a number of years.

Patrick Donohue, formerly a resident of this city, died at his home in Somerville, on Thursday. The remains were brought to this city on Saturday, and interred in St. Mary's cemetery.

The members of the Shakespeare Club were entertained by the Misses Hasbrouck at the latter's home on East Fifth street, Friday night. Dancing and refreshments made up the evening's enjoyment.

The wedding will take place at two o'clock of Wednesday afternoon of next week, at the bride's home, 37 West Second street, of Miss Emma U. King, daughter of Mrs. L. Prescott, to Mr. Theodore H. Hardy of this city.

At the M. E. parsonage, Tuesday, April 15, at 7:15 o'clock, Mr. Thomas Cundy and Miss Lillie Jane Bulley, of this city, were married by the Rev. Charles B. Mitchell. Mr. and Mrs. Cundy will continue to live in Plainfield.

At St. Mary's church with mass, at 7:30 o'clock on Thursday morning, by the Rev. Father Stafford, Mr. Charles Bourgoyne and Miss Julia O. Sullivan were united in marriage. The bride was dressed in green velvet and cream colored lace.

A draft on the Supreme Treasurer of the Royal Arcanum for $3,000, was received April 17 by Plainfield Council to be handed to the widow of J. Newton Jenkins. It is the amount always paid the next of kin upon the death of a Royal Arcanum member.

It is with pleasure that THE PRESS informs the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Morse, of Rotterdam, Holland, that they sail for this country on the steamship "Maasdam," Saturday of this week. Mrs. Morse is a daughter of Mr. Morgan Bird of Park avenue.

Young Mr. Lutie Waring is confined to his bed awaiting recovery from the effects of a serious fall Tuesday. His trousers caught in the wheel of his bicycle, and he was thrown to the ground. He struck the back of his head so hard that he was unconscious for some time.

The net proceeds of the Charity Ball, $[illegible], were turned over to the Ladies Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday, by the patronesses: Mrs. Chas. E. Brooks, Mrs. Fitzy Fisk, Mrs. Frederick J. Kuhne, Mrs. Robert H. Burnett, Mrs. Wm. T. Kaufman, Mrs. DeWitte C. Ivins and Mrs. Charles J. Fisk.

Mr. Elmer E. Runyon, who was introduced to the people of New Brunswick at the Opera House entertainment of Rutgers College, Friday night, as the most charming vocalist of the Plainfield Crescent League, was publicly presented with a handsome floral piece from a number of his admirers in this city who were present to witness his triumph.

The intention now is that as soon as Miss Carrie Kirkner recovers sufficient strength, her mother and sister will start with her from Dresden to their home in this city. Mr. Kirkner is in daily communication by cable, and the feeling of the family is that even if the worst must come it would be a source of some comfort to all to be together at home in Plainfield.

Mr. Harry VanEmburgh was presented on Saturday evening with the silver prize cup offered by the Trustees of the Plainfield Crescent League, he having won it three times. The presence of a large audience of ladies and gentlemen upon the occasion of the presentation, rather embarrassed the handsome young bowler, as he waved his hand in thanks to the gentlemen, smiled on the ladies and sat down.

Almost a Serious Conflagration.

At a little after noon Friday while Mr. Chas. Smith and family of Front and Somerset streets were at dinner, they detected the smell of smoke. An investigation disclosed a well advanced fire burning in a clothes closet adjoining one of the rooms on the second floor. The fire had gained such headway that it was only extinguished with much difficulty but without the assistance of the firemen who with Chief Doane were on hand ready in case of emergency.

In the closet were all of the family's best clothes, including a valuable sealskin cloak belonging to Mrs. Smith, and costing $250. This was entirely ruined, as were nearly all of the other garments. Mr. Smith's presence of mind saved the building from perhaps total destruction. He crawled into the closet on his hands and knees, and through his heroic efforts the flames were subdued.

Thanking the Firemen.

The undersigned wishes to express his thanks to the firemen, police and others who so kindly assisted in extinguishing the fire in Mr. John S. Johnson's residence on Park avenue, Thursday afternoon.

Signed, CLARENCE S. JOHNSON.

PROTECTING DUMB BEASTS.

The S. P. C. A. Meet in Adjourned Session—Officers Elected and Other Business Transacted.

The adjourned meeting of the "Plainfield Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals," was held at 7 East Front street on April 16, with the Rev. T. Logan Murphy in the chair. This being the first annual meeting of the organization the Secretary and Treasurer's reports were presented and ordered filed. It was moved and carried that the Treasurer be empowered to purchase badges for special officers. Councilman John Johnston's name was proposed for membership and he was unanimously elected a member of the Society. Mr. H. G. Stephenson was elected as an honorary member.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Rev. T. Logan Murphy; Vice Presidents, Messrs Julian Scott, S. E. Flower, the Rev. W. J. Leonard and M. M. Dunham; Secretary and Counsel, Wm. A. Coddington; Treasurer, Tunis J. Carey.

The following gentlemen were appointed on the Executive Committee: Messrs T. Logan Murphy, W. J. Leonard, Wm. A. Coddington, Julian Scott, John Johnson, T. J. Carey, Dr. H. H. Lowrie, S. E. Flower and F. S. Browne. The following resolution was offered by Wm. A. Coddington:

Resolved, That in consideration of the kindness and courtesy extended by the Plainfield editors in publishing notices of the society's meetings, their dues and initiation fees be remitted.

The society is in a flourishing condition and has suppressed many cases of cruelty during the past year. The Counsel reported that there were still two cases pending in Court for alleged cruel treatment to horses. The total membership of the society is seventy-six members.

PRESIDENT REED.

A Close Contest for the Executive Office of the Crescent League.

There was an unusually large attendance of members at a meeting held April 16, of the Plainfield Crescent League. An election for a President to fill the unexpired term of Mr. E. C. Kish, resigned, was to take place, and for two days past the contest had been very warm.

Among the members present were Counselors Jackson and McClure, Lawyers Emerson, Coddington and VanWinkle, Assemblyman Ulrich, Councilmen Smith, Jenkins, Roberts and Johnston, and City Judge Codington. The Hon. John Ulrich in an eloquent speech nominated J. T. Fritts, M. D., and Mr. J. A. Demarest followed with the nomination of Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed.

The ballot resulted in the election of Mr. Reed by a vote of 37 to 30. Dr. Fritts immediately proposed that Mr. Reed's election be made unanimous, which was done, and Dr. Fritts then escorted the new President to the chair. President Reed's speech evidenced that he is the man for the place. If his personal effort and wise advice is followed, the League will be second in power and standing to no like organization in the State.

CAREY vs. MAYOR MALE AND OTHERS.

The Supreme Court Asks for the Documents in the Police Board Suspension Matter.

The members of the Board of Police of this city, have just received writs of certiorari from the New Jersey Supreme Court, of which the following is a copy:

NEW JERSEY } ss

[L. S.] The State of New Jersey to Daniel Roberts, Job Male, Walter L. Hetfield, Leonard Spangenberg, and Elmore D. Moffett, styled "The Board of Police" of the City of Plainfield:

"We being willing, for certain reasons, to be certified of and concerning a certain accusation, or charges in writing, made by Elmore D. Moffett against Tunis J. Carey, a member of the police force of the City of Plainfield, on the thirty-first day of March last, and presented to said Board on said day, and all proceedings and orders had and taken thereon and in pursuance thereof, by the said The Police Board of the City of Plainfield and the said Daniel Roberts, Job Male, Walter L. Hetfield, Leonard Spangenberg and Elmore D. Moffett, as is said, do command you, that the said accusation or charges in writing with all things touching and concerning the same and all orders and proceedings had and taken thereon or in pursuance thereof, together with this writ by whatever name the said Tunis J. Carey may be called in the said proceedings, you do distinctly and openly send, under your hands and seals, to our Justices of our said Supreme Court of Judicature, at Trenton, on the first Tuesday of June next, that our said Justices may cause to be done thereupon what of right, and according to the laws and customs of the State of New Jersey ought to be done therein."

Board Walks in the Borough.

Complaint is made of the dangerous condition of many of the board sidewalks in North Plainfield, with the request that the owners repair the walks at once. A similar request was made by the Street Committee at the Borough Council meeting, on Tuesday evening, and the matter should be attended to without delay.

The Bazar at Netherwood.

Afternoon and evening of April 16, a Bazar was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Palmer Smith, Netherwood, for the benefit of the Church of Our Saviour.

Such a show of beautiful, ornamental and artistic articles have seldom, if ever, before been displayed. The attendance was large, and the generous purchases made by the friends of the chapel, delighted the ladies in charge of the various tables. In fact the affair was a great success—the net proceeds being about $500.

The Borough Marshal.

The License and Marshal Committee of the Borough Council reported Tuesday, April 15, that it was not yet prepared to present the name of a regular Marshal for the Council's confirmation, and an extension of time was granted the Committee in which to prepare its report. The almost universal choice of the people in North Plainfield seems to be the reappointment of Thos. McDonald, who last year proved himself to be a capable and efficient officer, always looking out for the borough's interests.

The reappointment of Mr. McDonald to the office he has just vacated, will meet with the hearty approval of all law-abiding citizens in North Plainfield.

The Late J. Potter Johnson's Funeral.

The funeral of the late J. Potter Johnson, whose tragic death occurred on Saturday last, took place from his late home on East Third street, afternoon April 16, the house being completely filled with the relatives and friends of the family, including a large delegation from Jerusalem Lodge, F. and A. M., of which Mr. Johnson was a member, together with delegates from other secret societies.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, who paid a fitting tribute to the departed dead. The floral display was rich and modest, consisting of a handsome floral Masonic emblem from Jerusalem Lodge and a bunch of callas. At the close of the service the remains were escorted to Evergreen Cemetery, where they were interred with Masonic honors, Past Master R. F. Coriell officiating as Master, upon invitation from Master H. S. Mason.

Sleeplessness.

DR. FLINT'S REMEDY is the best remedy known for insomnia or sleeplessness which afflicts so many persons, and which leads to so many serious nervous diseases, particularly to insanity. Descriptive treatise with each bottle; or address Mack Drug Co., N. Y. For sale by J. G. Miller.

The Second Cherubim.

Plainfield's vote in 1911 will be a large one. Again THE PRESS chronicles the birth of another boy. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Miller are the little lad's happy parents. There has not been a girl born in Plainfield or North Plainfield, that has been heard of, in many months.

A Warning to Fast Drivers.

The dangerous practice of fast driving was again illustrated on the Boulevard, Thursday afternoon, when an indiscreet youth on horseback galloped up and down that thoroughfare, succeeding in knocking down a three-year-old boy, rendering the child unconscious. The fellow on horseback should have been arrested.

The Late Daniel J. Marshall's Funeral.

The funeral of the late Daniel J. Marshall, who died on Friday morning, took place from his late residence on Park avenue, Monday afternoon, Mr. J. B. Cleaver officiating. The house was filled with relatives and friends of the family, noticeable among which were many of the older and representative residents of this city. The remains were interred in the Presbyterian cemetery in North Plainfield.

Snakes in the Park.

Snakes are said to be plentiful in Washington Park, North Plainfield. Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed, last week killed two good-sized flat-headed adders on Myrtle avenue, and several other large snakes have been seen in that locality of late.

There seems to be a difference of opinion as to whether or not the reptiles are of the poisonous species, some persons claiming that they are while others declare that they are not.

A Word to Advertisers.

As a matter of interest to those who do not believe in advertising, it may be stated that a yearly advertisement in one column of the Chicago Tribune cost $36,554 for the lowest, and $65,000 for the highest; in the New York Herald, $38,204 is the lowest and $130,000 for the highest priced columns.

These figures will doubtless be of interest to men who invest $2 or $3 and flatter themselves with the idea that they are extensive and liberal advertisers.

A Society Tea and Dance.

The Misses Pentz, of Fanwood, gave at their home on Saturday last, a tea in the afternoon, and a german in the evening for the young persons.

Among those present at the German were Miss Jessie Gage and Miss Louise Bacon of Brooklyn; Miss Jean M. Pentz of New York; Miss Alice Kyte, Miss Bertha smith, Miss May Carter, and Miss Tuzo of Fanwood; Miss May Snow of Newark; Miss Hubbard of Chicago and Miss Bass of Plainfield.

Messrs McManus and Kutzee, of Brooklyn; Mr. S. G. Williams and Mr. Johnson of New York; Mr. A. Snow of Brooklyn; Mr. Martin of Plainfield, and Messrs Paul and Louis Tuzo of Fanwood.

Mrs. William E. Pentz of New York presented the favors and acted as chaperone for the young people. The favors were numerous and pretty. The affair was one of the most enjoyable ever given in Fanwood. The German was led by Mr. Wm. E. Pentz.

Dan Marshall's Will.

Shortly after the funeral of the late Daniel J. Marshall, Monday, his will was read at the home on Park avenue. It was a very lengthy document. The provisions for the disposal of his property—which is much less than generally supposed—are as follows:

After the death of his wife, who has the use of the entire property for life, he wills to George Marshall, his son, for life, the brick block on New street.

To Mr. and Mrs. J. Lot Marshall, another son, he wills the property on Park avenue for life. To his daughter Annie (Mrs. Bond), he wills for life the income of an $8,000 mortgage.

This mortgage and all the other entailed property, at the death of the above, is to be divided among the grandchildren of the deceased.

The executors named are: Harry Marshall of Paterson, grandson of the deceased; Frederick McCully of Paterson, who married a granddaughter of the deceased; and ex-Mayor John H. VanWinkle.

Presentation to "Easter" Lodge.

At the regular meeting of Easter Lodge No. 3542, K. of H., Monday evening, there were present Grand Vice Dictator Richard C. Jones, and Grand Reporter John M. Mahew, of the Grand Lodge of the State of New Jersey.

After the initiation of a candidate Grand Officer Jones, on behalf of Brother S. W. Hartshorn, Grand Dictator of the State, in a few well chosen and appropriate words, presented "Easter" with a large and handsomely bound copy of God's holy word, on the cover of which was stamped in gold the letters, "Presented to Easter Lodge, Knights of Honor, of Plainfield, N. J., by S. W. Hartshorn, G. D., April 21, 1890." The holy book was accepted and placed upon the altar, by "Easter" through its Dictator, Brother T. H. Burdsdale, who returned to Brother Hartshorn, through Brother Jones, the thanks of the lodge for his beautiful and very acceptable gift.

After routine business the lodge adjourned until the next regular meeting night, Monday, May 5. This lodge has the material in it to make it grow and prosper both in numbers and in usefulness.

A Communication that is True in Some Respects.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Your article of yesterday entitled "The Point in the Miller Case," is hardly fair to my adversary, Mr. Kalisch, and I cannot permit myself, even by silence, to seem to sanction it. I can readily understand the impression made upon you by the omission of Mr. Kalisch to make the point which you state with so much force, but you doubtless are mistaken in supposing that he overlooked the point. It is not conceivable that counsel of his recognized ability should not have noticed and fully considered this point.

I suggest that in all probability Mr. Miller gave his counsel positive instructions not to question the right of the city to pass such an ordinance. Mr. Miller had expressly agreed in writing to abide by and conform to that ordinance among others, and he may naturally have considered that it would not be honorable to attack what he was pledged to uphold. It is also possible that his counsel regarded the point as not well taken or decided to leave it as a dernier ressort. The point was fully considered by the Common Council before the passage of the ordinance, and that body conceived that the regulation as to closing could readily be sustained, not necessarily under the clause of the charter quoted by you, but by virtue of the police power inherent in all municipal corporations. In view of a possible question on the point, however, the Common Council took the precaution to provide for the agreement between the licensed party and the city referred to above. It may well be that the astute counsel for Mr. Miller advised the latter that if the ordinance should be declared invalid for the reason suggested by you, it might result in the Common Council having recourse to this agreement and forfeiting the license.

CRAIG A. MARSH.

In the preparation of Hires' Cough Cure, medical science has achieved another triumph. Ask your neighbor what he or she thinks of it, and then go and buy a bottle.

FIRE.

Mr. John S. Johnson's Residence Damaged to the Extent of About $2,000.

About 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, as Mr. E. J. Richards, a clerk in Mr. R. J. Shaw's drug store, was passing along Park avenue, in the vicinity of 5th street, he discovered smoke issuing through the roof of a kitchen extension to the two-story-and-attic frame dwelling house owned and occupied by Mr. John S. Johnson and wife, parents of Mr. J. Wesley Johnson of LaGrande avenue.

Mr. Richards hastened into the house and notified the inmates, Mrs. Johnson and the girl, that the house was on fire. He then directed his efforts to extinguishing the fire, but without avail. Mrs. Johnson was taken to her son's residence on La Grande avenue.

Meanwhile an alarm was sent out and the entire department responded with its usual alacrity. Two engines took suction from the well at Park avenue and Fifth street, and in about a half-hour's time the building was flooded and the fire extinguished. But little of the furniture, clothing, etc., was removed, and what remained in the house was thoroughly saturated with water.

The fire originated from a defective flue, and damaged the building and contents to the extent of about $2,000. The structure was partly insured in the Phenix of Brooklyn company of which Mr. Wm. A. Woodruff is the agent in this city.

OBITUARY.

DANIEL J. MARSHALL.

At his home on Park avenue, a quarter before 5 o'clock Friday morning, occurred the death of Mr. Daniel J. Marshall, an old and highly respected resident of this city, after an illness from inflammation of the bladder, dating back for a period of about five weeks. Mr. Marshall was in the 83d year of his age, and leaves a wife and three children, namely, Geo. Marshall of Newark; Annie E., wife of Vandervoer Bond of Newark, and James L. Marshall of this city. The funeral will take place from the house on Monday at 2:30 P. M., and interment will be made in North Plainfield.

Mr. Marshall was born in Washington Valley in 1808, and in 1832 he was married to Phoebe Clendenin, then of New York, who now survives him. He was a carpenter by trade, but gave up active labor soon after his marriage. He was also at one time largely interested in the flour and feed business in Sullivan street, New York, but most of the time since his removal here, 42 years ago the 10th of this month, he has lived a quiet and retired life.

Mr. Marshall was at one time a member of the City Council, but he held no other political office. He was a man of strict business principles and was possessed of considerable wealth.

Not Excommunicated.

Mr. James Day and his wife who was Miss Mary Cunningham, are not excommunicated from St. Mary's church for being married in Lent. They were married by a Catholic priest, Father Cunningham, of West 40th street, New York, and he probably had a special dispensation for so doing. They were married at St. Raphael's church.

A Good Time.

The musical and literary entertainment under the management of Crescent Division, No. 13, Uniformed Rank Knights of Pythias, of Plainfield, in Excelsior Hall, Fanwood, on Thursday, was a success. Wetapah Lodge Independent Order of Odd Ladies, of this city, and Unity Division, U. R. K. of P., of Elizabethport, attended in a body. After the programme dancing was indulged in till morning.

Dislocated His Ankle.

Master Allen Laing, son of Mr. R. M. Laing of West Fourth street, met with a painful accident while playing on the tennis court, corner of Washington and Mercer avenues, North Plainfield, Thursday afternoon. At the time the accident occurred he was wrestling with one of his playmates, when he fell to the ground, dislocating his left leg at the ankle. The injured boy was taken to his home in a carriage, where Dr. Tomlinson attended to the injury.

A Contest for Empty Titles.

The Monday Afternoon Club will hold its annual meeting at the Seminary, Monday afternoon, May 5, at 3:30 o'clock. Besides routine business, and matters of importance, there will be the election of officers for the ensuing year. The following two tickets are in the field:

President—Mrs. Rowland Cox; First Vice President—Miss Eliza Elvira Kenyon; Second Vice President—Mrs. David W. Pond; Third Vice President—Miss Adeline P. Newton; Treasurer—Mrs. Wm. H. Sterling; Recording Secretary—Miss Jessie Munger; Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. George Wharton Edwards.

Or, for President—Mrs. David P. Hall; First Vice President—Mrs. Rowland Cox; Second Vice President—Mrs. Augustus C. Baldwin; Third Vice President—Mrs. David W. Pond; Treasurer—Mrs. Chas. D. Wadsworth; Recording Secretary—Mrs. George P. Mellick; Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers.

The Last Sad Rites.

Solemn and impressive ceremonies were enacted at the funeral of the late Albert Martin, whose death occurred under peculiar circumstances on Tuesday last week at his late home, corner of Central avenue and Eighth street, Thursday afternoon at half past three.

The house was densely filled with the relatives and sympathising friends of the family, noticeable among which was the large number of young people, who had learned to love the deceased while in life, and had now gathered about his bier to mourn his loss.

The Rev. Mr. Phillips, the family's former pastor in Brooklyn, delivered the opening prayer and pronounced the benediction. The Rev. Charles B. Mitchell, pastor of the M. E. church, officiated and spoke affectingly in beautiful and eloquent commendation of the dead lad. Music appropriate to the occasion was rendered by Mrs. Chas. B. Mitchell and Miss Adelaide McGee.

The floral display was exquisite, the casket being literally banked with handsome set pieces and choice cut flowers. The remains were taken to Greenwood Friday for interment.

Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Just now a very determined effort is being made to increase the membership of the New Jersey Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, and it is requested that persons of eligibility who desire to join, or wish further information, will apply to the Secretary of the Committee on Admissions, Andrew D. Mellick, Jr., Box 251, Plainfield, N. J., from whom application blanks and all the necessary data can be obtained.

Any person may be eligible for membership in a State Society who is above the age of 21 years, and who is descended from an ancestor who assisted, while acting in any of the following capacities, in establishing American Independence during the Revolutionary War:

A military or a naval officer.

A soldier or a sailor.

An official in the service of any one of the thirteen original States or Colonies.

An official in the service of the States or Colonies.

A recognized patriot who rendered material service in the cause of Independence.

IN MEMORY OF GODFREY A. HASSELL WHO DIED AT PLAINFIELD, APRIL 9, 1890.

MRS. M. A. GRIFFIN.

Age creeps along. The deep poetic fire
That blazed within my heart in bygone years,
Has nearly died away; But let me try
To stir the smouldering embers, that they shed
A little light upon the memory of a noble man.
There's much of real, true manhood in the world
Performs its daily task; moves quietly along
Steady and true, unswerving, like
Some noble planet in its sphere;
And while it moves with steadfast, sturdy steps,
Nor makes a noise as if to attract the world,
And say, "see of what mighty consequence I am."
But those the noblest men who make the great est fuss,
And deem themselves above the humble soul
Who walks with modest mien,
True to himself, his family, his God.
Who sole ambition is to do the right,
Live his allotted years, perform his daily tasks,
And then perfected by his school life here,
Goes forth to dwell with those perfected souls,
Who see such splendor as the world knows not.
Adieu, my friend! When thou went forth
Upon thy journey to the upper world,
Angels surrounded thee, and took thee by the hand,
And guided thee to thy celestial home.

ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETE FOR THE MEET.

A Special Train Will Run From Plainfield to the Races, and a Wheelmen's Minstrel Company Will Perform at Music Hall.

An adjourned meeting of the New Jersey Division Board of Officers of the League of American Wheelmen, was held on Tuesday, April 15, at the Club house of the Elizabeth Wheelmen. Among those present were Chief Consul, Dr. G. Carleton Brown, of Elizabeth; Vice Consul Dr. H. A. Benedict, of Jersey City; Secretary-Treasurer, Geo. C. Pennell, and F. C. Gilbert of Elizabeth, H. P. Stoney of Englewood, Elliott W. Johnson of Jersey City, A. T. Dodd of Newark, and local Consul, Frank L. C. Martin of this city. At this meeting considerable important business was transacted relative to the Division Meet to be held in Plainfield on May 30 and 31.

The League is now divided into 7 racing districts—New York and New Jersey, composing District No. 2. Each district is in charge of a District Racing Board and it has entire charge of all matters pertaining to the running of the championships in its district. As the District Racing Board consider the track in this city unfit for bicycle racing, they refused to allow the district races to be run here. They will therefore be run on the N. J. Athletic Club track at Bergen Point, on the afternoon of Saturday, May 31, and a special train will be chartered from this city for the convenience of the large number of Plainfielders who will no doubt wish to attend them. The races will be the wind up of the meet.

The theatre party will be a first-class affair, and will be purely amateur. It will be under the management of Mr. Elliot W. Johnson, one of the members of the Hudson County Wheelmen of Jersey City, and is styled "The Hudson County Wheelmen's Amateur Minstrel and Vaudeville Combination." During the Winter this "company" has played to crowded houses in Jersey City, meeting with great success. The tickets will be on sale about the middle of May and will cost $1, 75c. and 50c. The following resolution was passed by the Board:

Resolved, That it is the opinion of the Board of officers of the N. J. Division that as road racing is illegal and detrimental to the cause of wheeling, that wheelmen are requested to refrain from holding such races in New Jersey."

APPREHENDED IN NEWARK.

One of the Absconding Firm of Reese & Layton Overhauled as He is About to Dispose of 200 Bushels of Potatoes Belonging to R. W. Rice & Co., of North Plainfield.

As THE PRESS stated exclusively Thursday the co-partnership heretofore existing in the wholesale fruit and vegetable firm of Reece & Layton, which was established in this city about ten days ago, abruptly came to an end on Wednesday when the members of the firm left town, taking with them 200 bushels of potatoes belonging to Messrs R. W. Rice & Co., of North Plainfield, valued at 85 cents a bushel.

The firm came here from Newark, and opened a fruit and vegetable store in part of the building recently vacated by ex-Assemblyman John Vetterlein on West Front street, building up a good trade.

On Wednesday the proprietors sold off what little stock of fruit they had on hand and quietly left the city. The potatoes bought of Rice & Co., were shipped to Newark, where Mr. Rice, with the assistance of Chief of Police Hopper, found them loaded on a car, that evening.

Mr. Rice as soon as he learned that the firm had decamped, started for Newark. Besides ferreting out the potatoes, he found the man to whom Reece & Layton had sold them, and the payment for the same was stopped. The police also succeeded in finding Reece, and when apprehended he made a clean breast of it, admitting that his intention was to defraud Mr. Rice. The latter desiring not to prosecute Reece, did not prefer a charge against him, but returned home late Thursday rejoicing in the thought that he had at least recovered his property, thereby saving $170.

Justice Hardy Friday sent an officer to Newark to bring Reece back to this city.

"Is Back."

The Council of 1890 offers the fire tower and bell for sale. If THE PRESS is not mistaken, the Council has no right to dispose of any of the Fire Department's property. It is all pledged to the First National Bank.

Another Building Enterprise.

Mrs. S. A. Green is erecting a handsome frame residence on the Southwest side of Park avenue, just below Ninth street. The house was designed after the old colonial style by Architect William H. Clum. It will be 30x50 feet in dimensions and will cost about $5,000 when completed.

Catarrh

Is a blood disease. Until the poison is expelled from the system, there can be no cure for this loathsome and dangerous malady. Therefore, the only effective treatment is a thorough course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla—the best of all blood purifiers. The sooner you begin the better; delay is dangerous.

"I was troubled with catarrh for over two years. I tried various remedies, and was treated by a number of physicians, but received no benefit until I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A few bottles of this medicine cured me of this troublesome complaint and completely restored my health."—Jesse M. Boggs, Holman's Mills, N. C.

"When Ayer's Sarsaparilla was recommended to me for catarrh, I was inclined to doubt its efficacy. Having tried so many remedies, with little benefit, I had no faith that anything would cure me. I became emaciated from loss of appetite and impaired digestion. I had nearly lost the sense of smell, and my system was badly deranged. I was about discouraged, when a friend urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and referred me to persons whom it had cured of catarrh. After taking half a dozen bottles of this medicine, I am convinced that the only sure way of treating this obstinate disease is through the blood."—Charles H. Maloney, 113 River st., Lowell, Mass.

Somerset County Courts.

The April term of the above Courts opened at Somerville on April 15, Judge Magie presiding and Judges Bartine, Jamison and TenEyck on the bench. The list of cases for the present term is small, and the session will therefore be of short duration.

The Grand Jury, which includes John A. Thickstun, foreman and H. N. Spencer, both of North Plainfield, was sworn, and at once entered upon its duties.

Among the hotel and inn licenses granted were those of Geo. Demler, in the "Notch" and N. H. Heideloff at Mt. Bethel. Wholesale licenses were granted to Gustave Sutterlein and Eugene Hoerster of North Plainfield. The wholesale application of Frank Linke was laid over. Following are the petit jurors from North Plainfield: Wm. A. Sperry, Wm. L. Brown, Wm. S. Campbell and Geo. Lewis.

—The pupils in the public schools in this city and North Plainfield, will soon be in the midst of the final examinations.

HOW CAN THE LONG BE THE SHORT ?

A line may be a very long one and yet be the shortest between given points. For instance, the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway has over 3,000 miles of road; magnificently equipped and managed, it is one of the greatest railway systems of this country; for the same reasons it is the traveler's favorite to all points in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana. It is the only line to Great Falls, the future manufacturing center of the Northwest; to the fertile free lands of the Milk River Valley: and offers a choice of three routes to the Coast. Still it is the shortest line between St. Paul, Minneapolis, Fargo, Winnipeg, Crookston, Moorhead, Casselton, Grafton, Fergus Falls, Wahpeton, Devils Lake and Butte City. It is the best route to Alaska, China and Japan; and the journey to the Pacific coast, Vancouver, Tacoma, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco will be remembered as the delight of a life-time once made through the wonderful scenery of the Manitoba-Pacific Route. To fish and hunt; to view the magnificence of nature; to revive the spirit; restore the body; to realize the dream of the home seeker, the toiler, of the gold-seeker, the capitalist, visit the country reached by the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway. Write to F. I. WHITNEY, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn., for maps, books and guides. If you want a free farm in a lovely land, write for the "Great Reservation" read it and resolve to accept the golden HAND OF FORTUNE!

SOMEWHAT SINGULAR.

A MUTE at the Flint (Mich.) Institution has issued a challenge to fight any other mute in the United States.

A NEBRASKA wife prays the court to restrain her lawful husband "from patting her on the head, poking her in the ribs and talking baby talk to her."

A SCHWENKSVILLE (Pa.) man lately ate forty-two oranges and a half-pound of sugar, drank two tumblers of water and smoked three cigars in about two hours.

A MAN of Saco, Me., cut his initials in the peel of a Florida orange as it hung on its tree last winter. That same orange was one of a dozen he recently bought of a Saco dealer.

A RESIDENT of Nashville, Mich., recently came across three rats in the road, and all of them had hold of a straw traveling along. On closer investigation he found the two outside rats were leading the center one, which was blind.

A FARMER living a few miles from Culpepper, Va., has a mule which, for sagacity and agility, "takes the cake." Mr. Lewis found the mule in the hay-loft the other morning. The only mode of ingress to the loft is by a ladder.

A REMARKABLE coincidence in connection with the death of the president of an electric railway in Ohio is that he was killed while violating a rule he himself had made forbidding passengers to get off or on the front platform while the car was in motion.

At a recent banquet in San Francisco of the Undertakers' association, the menus were printed on cardboard cut in the shape of a coffin, and among the dishes were chicken dressed a la shroud, noodle on stretcher and stewed tomatoes a la grippe.

A HUNCHBACKED man at Chicago gets a living by selling the time of day. He has a chronometer, and it is warranted [illegible]. He has a certain territory which he goes over, and furnishes the housewives in that territory with the time of day once a week. He gets ten cents a week from each person.

EDUCATION does not seem to make people any the less superstitious. About 1,500 different kinds of dream books are in the market, and all of them find buyers, while sales steadily increase about in proportion to the increase of people. Nor is the demand for dream books confined to the poor. Women with sealskins and diamonds buy them.

THE singular spectacle of a man walking along the street eating greenbacks was presented in Duluth, Minn., the other afternoon. He swallowed forty-eight dollars in fives, tens and ones, when he was caught by the police and taken to the station house. A search revealed $607 between his inside shirt and skin. He suffers from the hallucination that people are trying to steal his money.

A MAN who mysteriously disappeared from his home in Keyport, N. J., a short time ago, has been found in the vault of a cemetery there. He took his departure on account of the disobedience of his daughter, aged seventeen years. She has a lover, a young Englishman, employed in a carriage factory. His attentions to her displeased the father. The girl wouldn't give up her lover and the father took a few of his effects and moved to the vault of the Green Grove Cemetery.

FUN FOR EVERYBODY.

REGISTRAR OF VOTERS—"How old are you, madame?" Female—"I have seen nineteen summers, sir." Registrar—"Er, how long have you been blind?"

"THOMAS, spell 'weather,'" said the master. "W-i-e-t-h-i-u-r-e, weather." "You may sit down, Thomas; you've given us the worst spell of weather we've had this year."

STOUT MAN (in something of a hurry) —"I'll give you five dollars to get me to the station in three minutes." Cabman (with provoking slowness)—"Well, sir, you might corrupt me, but you can't bribe that horse."

A MAINE man told his wife he was going to [illegible] fishing, and got all his friends to go to his house and ask where he was. When he returned the poor woman was so exhausted she couldn't speak for a week.

A POST-MORTEM examination revealed in the stomach of a bull terrier that died suddenly several yards of string, burned matches and a cigarette-holder. The cigarette-smoking youth appears to have been thoroughly digested, but it is rather strange that a few buttons were not also found.

A CLERGYMAN preached several sermons from the text: "Peter's wife's mother lay sick of a fever." One morning the church bell tolled, and the minister asked the servant who was dead. The man replied that he believed it was Peter's wife's mother, as she had been sick for a long time.

"PERHAPS," said a fresh young man, as he plumped himself down on the sofa between the two giddy girls, "perhaps you were discussing some choice secret?" "Oh, no," said one of them, "I was just saying to Minnie that 'nothing should separate us,' but really I didn't expect it to happen so soon." And the beating of his own heart was all the sound he heard.

MR. DE DELANCEY—"I couldn't help running in to see what all this scandalous talk about you means. It was reported at the Faith Cure Society last evening that a doctor, a regular doctor, was seen leaving your house yesterday afternoon." Mr. de Faith—"It is true." Mr. de Delancey—"True? You, who were cured only last month of rheumatism, dropsy, pneumonia, consumption and paralysis, sending out for a doctor?" Mr. de Faith—"I had to do it. It's a boil this time."

A POET asks—"What are the dreams of the days gone by?" The poet has no business to ask such foolish questions. They are gone, irrevocably gone. You can't put up dreams like you can bottle ketchup or can preserves. You have to get all the good you can out of a dream while it is on tap. That's the time to enjoy dreams. Then when the dreams are gone by, if the poet hankers after more, let him eat a mince pie or some pickled tripe before going to bed, and he can secure a new, fresh batch of dreams with no trouble at all.

WOMEN OF WORTH.

MRS. TALMAGE, wife of the celebrated preacher, is said to be the financier of the family. It is she who makes all the doctor's engagements and does his banking business.

MME. PIERRE MARIE, who holds a degree of Doctor of Medicine of the Faculty of Paris, has, after a debate, been admitted to the competition for the office of physician to the bureau of public assistance.

MRS. KENNAN is a great help to George Kennan in his work for the oppressed people of Russia. She prepares manuscripts, reads proofs, translates Russian works, goes over the receipts from his work, and sees to their investment or deposit. Mrs. Kennan is described as a thorough business woman, of considerable business tact, and much personal attractiveness.

MRS. WANAMAKER, the wife of the Postmaster-General, keeps one or two persons busy during the fruit season canning and preserving. The good things thus stored away are all given to poor people. Mrs. Wanamaker's charities are so extensive that she employs a woman whom she can trust to investigate all cases and sift the deserving from the impostors.

MISS JULIET CORSON is said to be a very interesting woman apart from her culinary equipment and celebrity. Those who do not know her presuppose that her conversation is limited to boil and roast, whereas the kitchen is only an incident in her discourse. She is something of an invalid, suffering greatly at times, and has acquired from physicians a great deal of that hygienic knowledge which appears in her books.

MISS MARY F. SEYMOUR, one of the pioneers among women stenographers and typewriters, has associated four other women with her in the formation of a printing and publishing company. They own the stock themselves, they declare that they are going to run the business all alone, and that there shall not be a dollar's interest sold to any man. The chief thing that they have on their hands is the publication of the Business Woman's Journal. Miss Seymour is the editor. She started it some time ago, and, quite well satisfied with its success, has recently enlarged it.

LETTUCE, when served without dressing, is always pulled to pieces with the fingers. Water cress is also taken in the fingers. It is usually served in a shallow basket, or dish, upon a folded napkin, which covers the bottom and sides. Heaped up with the delicate green herb it makes a very ornamental dish. Asparagus is eaten both with a fork and also with the fingers. But the former is perhaps the most elegant way. Celery is always taken from the dish with the fingers.

SURGERY WITHOUT PAIN.

AN ELOQUENT SERMON PREACHED BY REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE.

"The Blind Receive Their Sight and the Lame Walk, the Lepers Are Cleansed and the Deaf Hear," the Text of the Doctor's Remarks April 20.

BROOKLYN, [illegible].—The audiences Dr. Talmage has had on Sunday evenings, since the burning of the Tabernacle drove his congregation to the shelter of the Academy of Music, have been something phenomenal. This evening the spacious building was filled in every part. The popular preacher discoursed on the profession of healing. His text was Matthew xi, 5: "The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear." He said:

"Doctor," I said to a distinguished surgeon, "do you not get worn out with constantly seeing so many wounds and broken bones and distortions of the human body?" "Oh, no," he answered; "all that is overcome by my joy in curing them." A nobler or more beautiful art never came down from heaven than the art of surgery. Catastrophe and disease entered the world so early that one of the first wants of the world was a doctor. [illegible] The first surgeons [illegible] were ministers of religion, namely, the Egyptian priests. And what a grand thing if all clergymen were also doctors, all D. D.'s were M. D.'s, for there are so many cases where body and soul need attention at the same time, consolation and medicine, theology and therapeutics.

As the first surgeons of the world were also teachers of religion, may these two professions always be in full sympathy! But [illegible] the early surgeons had, from the fact that the dissection of the human body was forbidden, first by the [illegible] and then by the early Christians [illegible] no human body could be unfolded for physiological and anatomical exploration, and the surgeons had to guess what was inside the temple by looking at the outside of it. If they failed in any surgical operation they were persecuted and driven out of the city, as was Archagathus because of his bold but unsuccessful attempt upon a patient.

EARLY SURGERY.

But the world from the very beginning was calling for surgeons, and their first skill [illegible] of in Genesis, where they employed their art for the [illegible] of a sacred rite. [illegible] see it again in II Kings, where Ahaziah, the monarch, [illegible] work in the palace and it broke, and he fell from the upper to the lower floor, and [illegible] to the village of [illegible] [illegible] and Hippocrates put successful hand to fractures and introduced amputation; [illegible] and in our own century we have had a [illegible] and a Larrey in France, an Astley Cooper and an Abernethy in Great Britain, and a Valentine Mott and Willard Parker and Samuel D. Gross in America, and a galaxy of living surgeons as brilliant as their predecessors. What mighty progress in the [illegible] of disease since the crippled and sick [illegible] were laid along the streets [illegible]

SURGERY WANTED WITHOUT PAIN.

[illegible] all the surgical and medical skill of the world, with what tenacity the old diseases hang on to the human race [illegible] the world wanted a surgery without pain. Drs. Parre and Hickman and Simpson and Warner and Jackson, with their [illegible] genius, came on, and with their [illegible] the patient with [illegible] [illegible] The world has never seen [illegible] surgeon who could straighten the [illegible] cure the blind eye or restore [illegible] without any pain at the time, or [illegible] after, and that surgeon was Jesus Christ [illegible] the mightiest, grandest, gentlest and [illegible] surgeon the world ever saw or ever will see [illegible] [illegible] the blind receive their sight and the lame walk [illegible] cleansed and the deaf hear.

[illegible] He had a fondness for [illegible] cases. Many a surgeon, when he has had a patient brought to him, has said: [illegible] "You have waited too long [illegible] You have waited [illegible]" But Christ the Surgeon seemed to prefer inveterate cases. One was a curvature of twelve years, and [illegible] Another was a curvature of eighteen years, and he straightened it. Another was a cripple of thirty-eight years, and he [illegible] The eighteen-year patient was a woman bent almost double. If you could call a convention of all the surgeons of all the centuries, their combined skill could not cure that body so drawn out of shape.

[illegible] Yet this divine Surgeon put both his hands on her, and from that doubled up position she began to rise, [illegible] and the spinal column began to adjust itself, [illegible] of the woman with gratitude and upturned [illegible] After eighteen years [illegible] straight! [illegible]

The thirty-eight years' case was a man who lay on a mattress near the mineral baths at Bethesda. There were five apartments where these people were brought, so that they could get the advantage of these mineral baths. The stone basin of the bath is still visible, although the waters have disappeared, [illegible] The pool was one hundred and twenty feet long, forty feet wide and eight feet deep. [illegible] Why, thirty-eight years is more than the average of human life. [illegible] But Christ the Surgeon walks along these baths, and I [illegible] who had been nearly four decades [illegible] and to this thirty-eight years' [illegible] said: "Wilt thou be made whole?" [illegible] "Would you like to get well?" "Oh, yes," says the man, "that is what I came to these mineral baths for; I have tried everything. All the surgeons have failed, and all the prescriptions have proved valueless, and I have got worse and worse, and I can neither move hand or foot or head. Oh, if I could only be free from this pain of thirty-eight years!" Christ the Surgeon could not stand that. Bending over the man on the mattress, and in a voice tender with all sympathy, but strong with all omnipotence, he says, "Rise!" And the invalid instantly scrambles to his knees, and then puts out his right foot, then his left foot, and then stood upright as though he had never been prostrated. While he stands looking at the Doctor with a joy too much to hold, the Doctor says: "Shoulder this mattress, for you are not only well enough to walk, but well enough to work, and start out from these mineral baths. Take up thy bed and walk!" Oh, what a Surgeon for chronic cases then, and for chronic cases now!

CHRIST THE SURGEON.

This is not applicable so much to those who are only a little hurt of sin and only for a short time, but to those prostrated of sin twelve years, eighteen years, thirty-eight years. Here is a surgeon able to give immortal health. "Oh," you say, "I am so completely overthrown and trampled down of sin that I cannot rise." Are you flatter down than this patient at the mineral baths? No. Then rise. In the name of Jesus of Nazareth, the Surgeon who offers you his right hand of help, I bid thee rise. Not cases of acute sin, but of chronic sin—those who have not prayed for thirty-eight years, those who have not been to church for thirty-eight years, those who have been gamblers, or libertines, or [illegible], or outlaws, or blasphemers, or infidels, or atheists, or all these together, for thirty-eight years. A Christ for emergencies! A Christ for a dead lift! A Surgeon who never loses a case!

In speaking of Christ as a surgeon, I must consider him as an oculist, or eye doctor, and an aurist, or ear doctor. Was there ever such another oculist? That he was particularly sorry for the blind folks, I take from the fact that the most of his works was with the diseased optic nerves. I have not time to sum up the number of blind people mentioned who got his cure. Two blind men in one house, also one who was born blind; so that it was not removal of a visual obstruction, but the creation of the cornea, and ciliary muscle, and crystalline lens, and retina, and optic nerve, and tear glands; also the blindness of Bethsaida, cured by the saliva which the Surgeon took from the tip of his own tongue and put upon the eyelids; also two blind men who sat by the wayside. In our civilized lands we have blindness enough, the ratio fearfully increasing, according to the statement of Boston and New York and Philadelphia oculists, because of the reading of morning and evening newspapers on the jolting cars by the multitudes who live out of the city and come in to business.

But in the lands where this Divine Surgeon operated, the cases of blindness were multiplied beyond everything by the particles of sand floating in the air, and the night dews falling on the eyelids of those who slept on the top of their houses; and in some of those lands it is estimated that twenty out of a hundred people are totally blind. Amid all that crowd of sightless people, what work for an oculist! And I do not believe that more than one out of a hundred of that Surgeon's cures were reported. He went up and down among those people who were feeling slowly their way by staff, or led by the hand of some one or by [illegible] dog, and introducing them to the faces of their own household, to the sunrise and the sunset, and the evening star. He just ran his hand over the expressionless face, and the shutters of both windows were swung open, and the restored went home, crying: "I see! I see! Thank God, I see!"

WE WERE ALL BORN BLIND.

That is the oculist we all need. Till he touches our eyes we are blind. Yes, we were born blind. By nature we see things wrong if we see them at all. Our best eternal interests are put before us and we cannot see them. The glories of a loving and pardoning Christ are projected, and we do not behold them. Or we have a defective sight which makes the things of this world larger than the things of the future, time bigger than eternity. Or we are color blind and cannot see the difference between the blackness of darkness forever and the roseate morning of an everlasting day. But Christ the Surgeon comes in, and though we shrink back afraid to have him touch us, yet he puts his fingers on the closed eyelids of the soul, and midnight becomes mid-noon; and we understand something of the joy of the young man of the Bible, who, though he had never before been able to see his hand before his face, now, by the touch of Christ, had two bright lights kindled under his brow, cried out in language that confounded the jeering crowd who were deriding the Christ that had effected the cure, and wanted to make him out a bad man, "Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not; one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I see."

But this Surgeon was just as wonderful as an aurist. Very few people have two good ears. Nine out of ten people are particular to get on this or that side of you when they sit or walk or ride with you, because they have one disabled ear. Many have both ears damaged, and what with the constant racket of our great cities, and the catarrhal troubles that creep through the head, it is remarkable that there are any good ears at all. Most wonderful instrument is the human ear. It is harp and drum and telegraph and telephone and whispering gallery all in one. So delicate and wondrous is its construction that the most difficult of all things to reconstruct is the auditory apparatus. The mightiest of scientists have put their skill to its returning, and sometimes they stop the progress of its deafness, or remove temporary obstructions, but not more than one really deaf ear out of a hundred thousand is ever cured. It took a God to make the ear, and it takes a God to mend it. That makes me curious to see how Christ the Surgeon succeeds as an aurist.

We are told of only two cases he operated on as an ear surgeon. His friend Peter, naturally high tempered, saw Christ insulted by a man by the name of Malchus, and Peter let his sword fly, aiming at the man's head, but the sword slipped and hewed off the outside ear, and our Surgeon touched the laceration and another ear bloomed in the place of the one that had been slashed away. But it is not the outside ear that hears. That is only a funnel for gathering sound and pouring it into the hidden and more elaborate ear. On the beach of Lake Galilee our Surgeon found a man deaf and dumb. The patient dwelt in perpetual silence, and was speechless. He could not hear a note of music or a clap of thunder. He could not call father or mother or wife or children by name. What power can waken that dull tympanum or reach that chain of small bones or revive that auditory nerve or open the gate between the brain and the outside world? The Surgeon put his fingers in the deaf ears and agitated them, and kept on agitating them until the vibration gave vital energy to all the dead parts, and they responded, and when our Surgeon withdrew his fingers from the ears, the two friends of sound were ready for all sweet voices of music and friendship. For [illegible]

[illegible] wounds healed, and your soul saved. If Christian people get hurt of body, mind or soul, let them remember that surgery is apt to hurt, but it cures, and you can afford present pain for future glory. Beside that, there are powerful anaesthetics in the divine promises that soothe and alleviate. No ether or chloroform or cocaine ever made one so superior to distress as a few drops of that magnificent anodyne: "All things work together for good to those who love God;" "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

What a grand thing for our poor human race when this Surgeon shall have completed the treatment of all the world's wounds! The day will come when there will be no more hospitals, for there will be no more sick, and no more eye and ear infirmaries, for there will be no more blind or deaf, and no more deserts, for the round earth shall be brought under arboriculture, and no more blizzards or sunstrokes, for the atmosphere will be expurgated of scorch and chill, and no more war, for the swords shall come out of the foundry beat into pruning hooks. While in the heavenly country we shall see those who were the victims of accident or malformation, or hereditary ills on earth, become the athletes in elysian fields.

Who is that man with such brilliant eyes close before the throne? Why, that is the man who, near Jericho, was blind, and our Surgeon cured his ophthalmia! Who is that erect and graceful and queenly woman before the throne? That was the one whom our Surgeon found bent almost double, and could in no wise lift up herself, and he made her straight. Who is that listening with such rapture to the music of heaven, solo melting into chorus, cymbal responding to trumpet, and then himself joining in the anthem? Why, that is the man whom our Surgeon found deaf and dumb on the beach of Galilee, and by two touches opened ear gate and mouth gate. Who is that around whom the crowds are gathering with admiring look and thanksgiving, and cries of "Oh, what he did for me! Oh, what he did for my family! Oh, what he did for the world!" That is the Surgeon of all the centuries, the Oculist, the Aurist, the Emancipator, the Saviour. No pay he took on earth. Come, now, and let all heaven pay him with worship that shall never end, and a love that shall never die. On his head be all the crowns! In his hands be all the sceptres! and at his feet be all the worlds!

A NIGHT WITH SNAKES.

A Horrible Experience of a Texas Man During One of the Great Floods.

"I passed a night once that, could the sheer terror I suffered in it have affected my brain, it would have left me a gibbering idiot," said a well known merchant of Orange, Tex. "The night was that of the great storm of '86, which destroyed the town of Sabine Pass, where I happened to be visiting at that time. When the great tidal wave came rolling in, I saw the houses were bound to go, and I made for the tallest live oak tree in sight, preferring to trust to its roots holding than to any work of man's. Well, though, as you may suppose, at my age I was pretty awkward at climbing a tree, that sweeping, maddening world of water was a great incentive to activity and an oiler of stiff joints, so I succeeded in reaching the top of the tree, but I found that even there I was hardly three feet above the water.

"All around me were people in the trees, too, but though we kept calling out encouragement to each other, the situation was not the most cheerful imaginable, and I watched night come on with a feeling of dread. It was so dark I couldn't see my hand before my face, and when presently I felt something cold and slimy flap against my cheek I couldn't tell what it was, so I put out my hand and turned sick to feel the slimy, horrid body of a snake swinging from the limb just above me. It kept hitting me in the face, and you can imagine for yourself my fears that the reptile would fix its fangs into my cheek. But in a few minutes I felt something crawling on my leg, and I knew it must be another of the creatures. Well, they fairly took me, snuggling their heads into my hands, writhing about my ankles, arms, and neck, and one sought a bed in the open bosom of my shirt, where it nestled against my breast, from which refuge I fancied I could see its devilish eyes gleaming at me. I dared not move or halloo for help—though for the matter of that there was none to be had—or hardly breathe, lest the reptiles, which were apparently only seeking some warm shelter, should become angry and aggressive.

"Think of a night spent clinging to the slippery branches of a tree a few feet only above water deep enough to drown me ten times over, and unable to see if it was rising or not, with a dozen or so snakes in direct contact with the body. Well, each hour was a week to me, and when finally the day did dawn I was nearly paralyzed with terror and cold, but, while I was still sitting numb and horror stricken, the snakes uncoiled themselves and dropped one by one into the water, going off no doubt to look for food. I counted thirteen of them, all big, deadly water moccasins. One of the rescuing boats took me off the tree about 10 o'clock that day, and I just fell into the bottom of the boat in a faint that lasted over an hour, and to this day I have never been able to revisit the scene of that night of horror."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Luckless Great Eastern.

We have so often been called upon in past years to announce the last, and the very last, and positively the very last of this magnificent but generally useless ship, which has lingered on through an obscure and profitless existence since her voyages to New York proved a commercial failure, that the stranded hull on the Mersey shore, to be broken up for a few thousand pounds' worth of old iron, may seem but a reminiscence of the fate repeatedly declared to be imminent and commonly believed to be past. It is thirty years since she first put to sea from the Thames, and her passage down the channel was marred by a shocking disaster—the blow up of her steam apparatus, which cost ten lives; but the laborious efforts to launch this enormous leviathan, as she was at first called, in 1857, from Mr. Scott Russell's building yard at Millwall, had been ominous of ill success.

Men were killed by the breaking of a gear attached to hydraulic engines that slowly pushed her broadside on into the comparatively narrow river, and Mr. Brunel, the eminent engineer, dying a few days afterward, was thought to be a victim of sore anxiety and severe disappointment. One serviceable and honorable performance, the laying of an Atlantic telegraph cable in 1866, is set down to the credit of the Great Eastern, but experience has shown that vessels of moderate size can do such work just as well. It is a sad chapter in the history of marine architecture, and some people must have lost at one time or another nearly $5,000,000 altogether by this immense mistake. The Great Eastern might, perhaps, have been converted into a very commodious floating hotel, moored in some tranquil bay; she could never have been a good sea going ship, or competed in speed, comfort or safety with the admirable liners of recent construction. Her engines, indeed, were manifestly of insufficient power, and she rolled grievously for lack of a keel.—London Graphic.

Broad Jumping Records.

The amateur record at broad jumping without weights is 10 feet 9¾ inches by M. W. Ford. L. Helwig holds the amateur record with dumbbells, 12 feet 9½ inches. The very same motion is used in jumping with weights as without, and the reason that a greater distance can be covered in the former way is that the weights after they are in the air are used to push against and lift the athlete further. It can be readily seen that if the athlete, as shown in the illustration of the "standing broad jump," had dumbbells weighing from fifteen to twenty pounds apiece in each hand, and he brought his arms down quickly and dropped the bells after he had pulled all he wished to on them, he would be carried higher and further in the air than though he had nothing to pull against. That is the principle of jumping with weights, and the heavier dumbbell an athlete can carry, the further he can jump. The best professional record for jumping with weights is 14 feet 8¼ inches by George W. Hamilton. He carried a twenty-three pound dumbbell in each hand.

Prizes for Ideas.

The London Schools Dinner association has offered prizes of $250, $150 and $100 respectively for the three best essays giving information as to the most suitable methods and regulations under which to furnish meals to necessitous children in the great centers of population. That the subject is expected to be dealt with exhaustively may be judged from the fact that writers will be permitted to use either the English, French or German language.—San Francisco Chronicle.

LOBSTERS and crabs masticate their food with their horny jaws, but they have also sets of teeth in their stomachs, where they complete the work of chewing. But there is one peculiar kind of crab called the king or horseshoe crab which chews its food with its legs. This is an actual fact, the little animal grinding its morsels between its thighs before it passes them over to its mouth.

THE first woman ordained to the Unitarian ministry was Mrs. Celia Burleigh, the wife of the poet, William H. Burleigh, and the foundress of the Brooklyn Woman's Club, which will shortly come of age. He and his wife were members of Mr. Chadwick's society. Her success was remarkable, both as a preacher and pastor. She has had few successors in the Eastern churches, but in the Northwest there is a round dozen of women preaching to Unitarian churches, with an effectiveness that is putting their brother ministers on their mettle. Some of them command large and enthusiastic congregations.

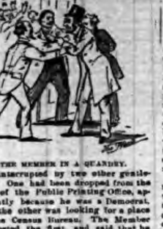
A CONGRESSMAN AT WORK

How a Representative is Forced to Toil for His Country.

His Effort to Reach His Committee-Room—Why He Loses the Thread of Legislation—His Physical Work Equal to His Mental Labors.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

A member of the House of Representatives attended a committee-meeting at 10 o'clock the other morning. It was held in the committee's room at the Capitol. He had hardly entered this temple of legislation before he was stopped by an old soldier. The veteran was nearly blind and partially disabled. He was a Democrat. He had been an attendant for the House of Representatives and had lately received notice of his discharge. He made his complaint to the Representative and besought his aid by asking him to go before the Committee on Accounts and argue his case. While the Representative was talking with the soldier he was interrupted by two other gentlemen. One had been dropped from the rolls of the Public Printing Office, apparently because he was a Democrat, and the other was looking for a place in the Census Bureau. The Member comforted the first, and said that he would do what he could for the second. He reached his committee-room without further interruption.



THE MEMBER IN A QUANDARY.

A very important bill was under discussion. He was just getting into the merits of the case when a page told him that he was wanted at the telephone in the House lobby. Through the long dark corridors he wended his way to the elevator, and was carried to the lobby above. By the time he reached the telephone the connection at the central office had been broken, and he could get no satisfaction. He started once more for his committee-room. While passing through the Hall of Statues he was accosted by a gentleman from New Jersey, who bore a letter of introduction. A bill in which the Jerseyman was interested had landed in the Military Committee. As its passage would place him on the retired list of the army and give him $16,000 back pay, he was much interested in its fate. He wanted the Member to ascertain what sub-committee the bill had been referred to and to importune that committee in his behalf. The Representative promised to ascertain the status of the claim and again started for his destination.

He had hardly entered the rotunda before he was stopped by a fellow Member who had written a letter to some Farmer's Alliance in response to an invitation from them. The letter had been printed in a Western newspaper and he wanted his friend to read it. The reading was done in a perfunctory manner, the mind of the Member being concentrated upon the bill before his committee. He caught hardly a clue to the points of the letter, but returned the newspaper with the remark that it was certainly a very able document.

The Representative made his exit from the rotunda by the West door and was about to descend the stairs, when he was overhauled by an esteemed friend. The friend insisted upon his visiting the restaurant. He replied that his duties just then were urgent. But the friend was fully as urgent as the duties. He had a petition for an appointment. He wanted to secure the signatures of all the State delegation to Congress. The Representative was exactly the man to oblige him. It was suggested that he could pass the petition around in the House sometime when the delegation were all present. He promised to do this. It was a safe promise. The thirty-four members of the delegation have never been in the House together at one time since the organization of the Fifty-first Congress.

SHE WANTED TICKETS FOR THE MEMBER'S GALLERY.

Again the Representative headed for the committee-room. This time he gained it. He arrived at the tail-end of the discussion over the bill in which he was interested. He gained what information he could by questioning a brother member of the committee. His attention had again become fixed upon the business before the committee when a doorkeeper announced that a lady and gentleman outside desired to see him. It was a prominent banker and his wife from an inland city. They desired cards of admission to the Members' Gallery. Back through the dark corridors and up the elevator the Representative went.

He was accompanied by the banker and his wife. The party entered the House lobby. Blank cards were obtained from the proper official. The Member signed them and escorted his visitors to the gallery.

By this time it was a quarter of twelve. The Representative made a third break for his committee-room. Four times was he stopped by personal acquaintances. He reached the room and found it empty. The committee had concluded its business and adjourned. Its clerk told him briefly what had been done, and he started for the hall of the House so as to be in time for prayers.

He stopped at the postoffice on the way and gathered in thirty-six letters by actual count, a peck of newspapers, and nearly a bushel of circulars. He climbed the private staircase to the House lobby, and entered the Chamber in time to hear the blind Chaplain say "Amen." Placing his letters and papers upon his desk, he made his way to the cloak-room. Before he could hang up his coat and hat and get out of the cloak-room, he had to listen to two or three stories from a Member who had been absent two weeks and had just returned.

Once in his seat, he mechanically began to open his letters. The first one required immediate attention. A New York importer wanted three copies of the Administrative Tariff Bill as it passed the House, and he wanted them right away. The Representative had already received and granted fifty similar requests. As he was only entitled to five copies of the bill, he was forced to skirmish among brethren representing agricultural districts, who had no use for their own copies. This took up a good ten minutes of his time. He had just thanked his friend, and sent a page for the tariff bill, when a brother Member borrowed ten dollars from him. He was not from Chicago.

The second letter opened was a terror. It was from a gentleman who had known the Congressman when he was a schoolboy. He asked his friend to go up to the War Department and get for him the names of all the soldiers engaged in the late war.

Meantime the legislative mill was at work. The journal had been read. Little tid-bits were being ground out by unanimous consent. Members were correcting the Record. The Speaker was laying executive documents before the House. Leaves of absence were being granted and half a dozen fellows were clearing their desks for a fight on a contested election case. There was a morning hour intervening and nobody could tell what measure might pop up before the House in that hour.

The Representative had succeeded in getting the run of legislation when a doorkeeper handed him a card with the remark that its owner was awaiting him at the east entrance. As the man was unknown to him the Congressman fancied that he could ascertain what he wanted and return to the House before the real work of the day began. The visitor was a dignified gentleman with gray hair and goatee. He was interested in a bridge project out West. Congressional action was necessary and he wanted the Member's aid. He was fortified with letters of introduction and had newspaper extracts and pamphlets enough to fill a four-quart measure. The Representative stood within sound of the voice of the Clerk of the House. His attention was divided between what the bridge man said and what the clerk was reading. He feared that a bill levelled against the interests of some of his constituents would turn up before he got back.

THE STORY TELLING BORE.

Meantime two or three other persons in the corridor had recognized him and were waiting to get hold of him when the old gentleman let him go. They caught him. One was an old pilot deeply concerned in the fight over the Dingley bill abolishing compulsory pilotage. Another was a member of a typographical union interested in the International Copyright bill. A third was a Custom House officer from Baltimore who was anxious to ascertain the probable fate of the bill granting fifteen days vacation each year to men in that department receiving per diem compensation. The other employes in the department already have such a vacation, and he could not see why the per diem men should be left out.

Once more the Representative applied himself to his legislative duties. An election contest was on the tapis. Rowell of Illinois was thundering on behalf of the contestant, and Crisp, of Georgia was sending in mitrailleuse replies. The Representative again applied himself to his mail. A dozen times was he called from the hall. There were trips to the Document Room, to the Congressional Library, to the Senate Chamber, to the galleries, to Clerk McPherson's office, to the docket of the Supreme Court, and to a dozen other places in the great building. All were made on behalf of some constituent or some visitor.

The House adjourned that day after five o'clock. The Member who has never missed a roll-call since the opening of Congress was in his seat exactly thirty minutes out of the five hours. He probably did more physical work in this time than any coal-heaver about the Capitol, and as much mental work as a Civil Service Commissioner when he is not under investigation. That night he answered his thirty odd letters and paid the postage from his own pocket. The Member slept sweetly after retiring. He had spent another day in the service of his country.

A PHILADELPHIA chemist says of the rise in camphor: "Not long ago it could be bought at forty-five cents per pound by the barrel; now it is selling at sixty-five cents. The cause of the increased price is owing to the fact that camphor is being used for making smokeless powder."

THE great monsters of mechanical skill and genius call for the sacrifice of a great deal of life and limb in their construction. The greater the engineering feat the more extensive is the loss of life. In the construction of the Eiffel tower, for instance, twenty-six lives were lost, according to the official returns of the French Government, while on the great Forth bridge in Scotland a list of forty lives lost has been published.

STRAY STATISTICS.

PHYSICIANS say blindness has increased in New York State during the past five years thirteen times as fast as the population.

STATISTICS show, according to the reports made from all the insane asylums in the United States, that less than six per cent. of the patients incarcerated are cured.

ACCORDING to George P. Rowell & Co.'s American Newspaper Directory for 1890 Illinois is now the second State in the Union in the number of newspapers printed, having 1,308, while Pennsylvania has but 1,281. New York has 1,778.

INQUIRY made in France in order to carry out the new law giving certain advantages to fathers of more than seven children has elicited, among other things, the fact that there are 2,000,000 households in which there has been no child.

ACCORDING to figures given by a San Francisco newspaper California is the bloodiest State in the Union. In 1889 it had one homicide to 3,479 of the population. In the other States it runs up from one in 8,912 in Kentucky to one in 80,000 in other States.

FRANCE produces annually 20,000,000 tons of coal; Germany, 70,000,000, and England, 165,000,000. The annual consumption of France amounts to 1,500 pounds for every inhabitant; in Germany, 3,000 pounds; in Belgium, 4,200 pounds, and in England, 7,400 pounds.

ACCORDING to the Prussian army list of 1890 the percentage of noblemen among the officers is 98.32 in the Horse Guards, 97.14 in the Foot Guards, 79.1 in the cavalry of the line, 41.87 in the infantry of the line, 23.16 in the artillery and 10.59 in the railway, pioneer and train forces.

THE latest and most trustworthy statistics show that there are in operation in this country and in the course of construction at the present time no fewer than 179 electric railways, operating 1,885 cars, with 1,260 miles of track. The number of passengers carried it would be difficult to estimate, but it may not be far from 100,000,000.

THE French Chamber of Deputies, which is the most decidedly unruly legislative body in the world, has been obliged to adopt a rule for enforcing the speaker's call to order. A member who refuses to recognize the speaker's authority is to be suspended from his functions and excluded from the chamber for thirty-six sessions.

A NEW swindle has appeared in Europe. Prominent persons received letters dated at the military prison in Madrid purporting to come from the late secretary of the Egyptian Mahdi, who knows where 4,000,000 of francs are concealed. He asks a small sum to satisfy the creditors who keep him in prison, in return for which he will tell where the treasure is.

AN English court has lately decided that a wife married in Japan after the fashion of that country is a legal wife in England, on the ground that "Japan has long been recognized as a civilized country." A previous decision in a case where the wife was a Hottentot and was married after the Hottentot fashion had upset the union on the ground that the Hottentots were heathens and polygamists, and did not know what marriage, in the civilized sense, meant.

PAY OF PARLIAMENTARIANS.

IN Austria the pay is $5 a day.

IN Germany members of both houses receive about $2.50 per day.

IN France members of each house receive the same—$5 per day.

IN Greece the Senators get $100 per month and the deputies $50.

IN Belgium each member of the Chamber of Representatives gets $85 a month.

IN Denmark the members of the Landsthing each receive about $3.75 a day.

IN Portugal the Peers and Commons are paid the same sum, which is about $335 a year.

IN Spain the members of the Cortes are not paid for their services, but enjoy many advantages and immunities.

IN Switzerland the members in the National Council get $2.50 per day, and the Council of State, the lower house, $1.50.

Why, Mary, how your baby cries!
Yes, he has colic again.
Why don't you give him Dr. Taylor's Best Soothing Syrup?"
Is that good?
Yes, for Pains, Colds, Coughs, &c., it is excellent for either young or old. Of the many kinds of medicines I have used in my family I have found none to equal it.
Thank you, Jane, I will try it. Margaret Ann, go as soon as you can to either Reynolds', or Shaw's Drug Store, and get a bottle of Dr. Taylor's Soothing Syrup. 1-6-6m

READABLE RHYMES.

When Even Cometh On.

The mother-heart doth yearn at eventide,
And wheresoe'er the straying ones may roam,
When even cometh on they all fare home.
'Neath feathered sheltering the brood doth hide;
In eager flight the birds wing to their nest,
While happy lambs and children miss the sun,
And to the folds do hurry one by one.
As night doth gather slowly in the west,
All ye who hurry through life's busy day
Hark to the greeting which the ages tell,
"The sun doth rise and set. Hail, and farewell!"
But songlight ye your hearts wheresoe'er ye stray,
For those who through this little day do roam,
When even cometh on shall all fare home.
—Lucy E. Tilley, in Harper's Magazine.

The Modern Muse.

He sang of the balmy spring-time breeze,
Of the sunlight glinting thro' the trees,
Of lowing cattle and droning bees,
Of April showers and of sunsets red;
"Oh! what a chestnut," the editor said.

He sang of the wild and wintry sea,
Of a good ship struggling to be free,
With [illegible] and breakers a-lee;
And how down on a fifty [illegible] fled;
"This sheet is no morgue," the editor said.

He sang of a maid beyond compare,
With eyes of azure and golden hair,
Loved by a Roman young and fair,
Who fled in the night with him to wed.
"Well! of all the rot," the editor said.

He sang at last of the city's "sins,"
And called their betting "sports," "divine,"
Their sprinting "swift," and their fishing "fine,"
And told how all clubs at their opening fed.
"Now, that is a poem," the editor said.
—Clare Kearney, in The Jury.

Guard Well Thy Heart.

Guard well thy heart lest passions sweep
The chords, and God's sweet melody
Be lost; lest from the ruins leap
The spirit of unrest set free,
And o'er thy life dark chaos fall.

Guard well thy heart! Rest not content
With visions fair. Unwearied seek
Till thy heart found the true love sent
By Him who watcheth o'er the weak,
Who heeds the suppliant's call.

Guard well thy heart! Its throbbing life
Protect with jealous care. Be not
Dismayed, though bitter grow the strife,
And dark contention mark thy lot,
Fear not; He ruleth over all.
—Ottawa College Owl.

Papa's Nose Displaced.

A sweet little lassie
Whose years numbered four
Used to watch every evening
For me at the door;
She welcomed me home with
A hug and a kiss,
Which set my heart singing
With paternal bliss.

I asked her one evening,
While perched on my knee,
To tell me exactly
How much she loved me;
She pondered a moment,
Then earnestly said:
"I love oo, dee' papa,
Almos' oo's'y dead!"

* * * * *

'Tis years since my daughter
Has watched for her "pa;"
She now leaves that duty
To dear, faithful "ma;"
In fact there's another
Who comes in my stead—
My child loves a "hubby"
"Almos' oo's'y dead."
—Frank H. Welch, in Detroit Free Press.

Disenchantment.

She said to me she liked my sentiment,
She praised me ev'ry time she had a chance to,
And then, as oft, on dancing we were bent,
She asked me just what time I liked to dance to.

But quickly matrimonial was I've found,
For ev'ry chance to find a fault she seizes,
"Unlike the ball when first we met, I'm bound
To dance to whatsoever time she pleases;"
—Nathan M. Levy, in Munsey's Weekly.

In Quiet Revery.

Sometimes in quiet revery
When day is growing dim,
The heart is singing silently
A sweet unwritten hymn.

The strains are not to measure wrought,
By cunning of the mind,
But seem like hymning angels brought
From Heaven, and left behind.

The misty hills of bygone grief,
Once dark to look upon,
Stand out like blessings in relief
Against the setting sun.

The rain may fall, the wind may blow;
The soul unhindered sings,
While, like the bird 'neath sheltering bough
She sits with folded wings—

A brief and pleasant resting space,
A glance at Beulah land,
Before she girds herself apace
For work that waits the hand.

Then, giving thanks to Him who poured
Refreshments in her cup,
She hears the calling of her Lord,
And takes her labor up.
—Thomas Mackellar, in Woman's Journal.

Mystery of the Gate.

At early morning Farmer Brown
Had hastened from the door;
His face was darkened with a frown
That oft had shone before.
"It's hard," said he, "to keep things straight;
Last Tuesday 'twasn't so.
Confound that miser'ble old gate!
What makes it sag so low?"

And bonny Kate, a dainty sight,
Stood still, demure and shy;
The house dog, who had barked all night,
Half closed a knowing eye;
The swallow, chuckling, told his mate
Of shade 'neath star beam's glow;
And Farmer Brown said: "Drat that gate!
What makes it sag so low?"
—Washington Post.

Going, or Gone.

Nothing that lives can bloom
Long upon earth;
Joys that our days illume,
Die in their birth;
All that the soul admires,
All that the heart desires,
From heart and soul expires,
Leaving but dearth.

Stars, as they light the hours,
Steal them away;
Rays which unfold the flowers,
Bring them decay;
Even morn's beams of light,
Fresh on their heavenly flight,
Shine but to speed the night;
Nothing can stay.

Pleasures, like cloudlets, smile
When the day's done;
Golden and purple while
Lingers the sun;
All that our hearts can say
Of those who blessed our way,
Is that, like meteors, they
Shone—and are gone.
—Selected.

Compensation.

There are smiles in the morning and tears at night,
The wide world over;
There are hopes in the morning and prayers at night,
For many a rover.

There are tears unwept and songs unsung,
And human anguish keen,
And hopes and fears and smiles and tears—
But the blessings fall between!
Louis Andrews, in Demorest.

FACTS ABOUT FLAGS.

THE black flag is a sign of piracy.

To "STRIKE the flag" is to lower the National colors in token of submission.

THE yellow flag shows a vessel to be in quarantine or is the sign of a contagious disease.

DIPPING the flag is lowering it slightly and then hoisting it again to salute a vessel or fort.

A "FLAG of truce" is a white flag, displayed to an enemy to indicate a desire for a parley or consultation.

A FLAG at half-mast means mourning. Fishing and other vessels return with a flag at half-mast to announce the loss or death of some of them.

FLAGS are used as the symbol of rank and command, the officers using them being called flag officers. Such flags are square, to distinguish them from other banners.

IF the President of the United States goes afloat the American flag is carried in the bows of his barge or hoisted at the main of the vessel on board of which he is.

THE red flag is a sign of defiance and is often used by revolutionists. In our service it is a mark of danger and shows a vessel to be receiving or discharging her powder.

THE white flag is a sign of peace. After a battle parties from both sides often go out to the field to rescue the wounded or bury the dead under the protection of a white flag.

GIDDY MARRIED WOMEN.

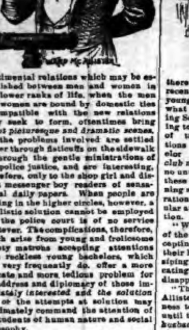
Ward McAllister Lays Down the Law in Regard to Flirting.

The Attentions a Married Lady May Receive from Young Men—Society Does Not Show Its Disapproval Until the Husband Objects.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

"What attentions may a married woman legitimately accept at the hands of her young men acquaintances?"

This was the question I asked Ward McAllister the other day, and it was prompted by the stories that have secured circulation in the clubs of late, connecting the names of young married women in a very unpleasant way with the names of men who were supposed not only to be friends of the family to which the women in question belong, but tried friends of the women's husbands. The stories concern people who are of considerable consequence in the social world of New York, and are therefore peculiarly interesting. The sentimental relations which may be established between men and women in the lower ranks of life, when the men and women are bound by domestic ties incompatible with the new relations they seek to form, oftentimes bring about picturesque and dramatic scenes, but the problems involved are settled either through fisticuffs on the sidewalk or through the gentle ministrations of the police justice, and are interesting, therefore, only to the shop girl and district messenger boy readers of sensational daily papers. When people are moving in the higher circles, however, a pugilistic solution cannot be employed and the police court is of no service whatever. The complications, therefore, which arise from young and frolicsome society matrons accepting attentions from reckless young bachelors, which they very frequently do, offer a more delicate and more tedious problem for the address and diplomacy of those immediately interested and the solution of it or the attempts at solution may legitimately command the attention of all students of human nature and social philosophy.



WARD McALLISTER.

"According to the best social usage," replied Ward McAllister frankly, "a young married woman may accept any attentions from a friend of her husband which she might have accepted before her marriage, so long as those attentions are offered publicly and offered without any attempt whatever at concealment. She may freely accept from bachelor friends invitations to the theater, to the opera, or to balls. She may accept escort of this kind to supper and may accept at the hands of gentlemen flowers and other trifling presents which simply denote the friendship and esteem of him who makes such offerings. On the other hand the wife may invite such friends to dinner at her home as frequently as she cares to do so or her husband cares to have them there, and she may do so without incurring any comment or any criticism. It is generally agreed however that one inflexible rule must be observed, and that is, that no attentions which are paid by him or accepted by her shall be of a clandestine character. Just as soon as there is anything secret about such intimacy it contributes an unfortunate and undesirable color which condemns it at once. There is no impropriety whatever in a married lady walking in the streets with a friend of her husband's so long as the street is one of the principal thoroughfares of the town."

THE YOUNG WIFE WHO CANNOT HELP FLIRTING.

"Do you mean that all these attentions may be paid by one man to a married woman without legitimately exciting remark?"

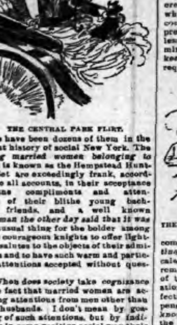
"No, I don't mean that. I mean that the sentiment of society people is that any of these attentions, singly or taken together in moderation, may be offered and accepted without any impropriety. Good taste must govern a woman in this, as in everything else. Of course, if a man pays all these attentions to a married woman it is bound to provoke the comment of the woman's friends or so-called friends, and no woman must do anything which will provoke comment. Just as soon as gossip is excited over what she is doing she must call a halt. The friendship between a man and a woman may be perfectly proper. That has nothing to do with the case. She must avoid the very appearance of evil."

There is one branch of this subject on which Mr. McAllister naturally did not care to talk, and that was the branch which deals with the possible action of the husband when matters come to a critical point, so far as the attentions of some man or other to his wife are concerned, and reach a stage where silence is no longer possible. Some club men say that, in a case like this, the only thing to do is to thrash the interloper. Another class of men who may or may not have had experience to guide them say that the very best thing to do is to go to the gallant knight who insists on paying attentions to a giddy and thoughtless matron and tell him that if he does not withdraw his attentions a very prompt resort will be had to firearms. The only trouble with this scheme is that a very few men who hold any kind of a position care to use such explosive measures, and a threat of this sort is taken as an empty threat. Another class of authorities on this delicate point think that the wife alone should be dealt with and instructed to inform her admirer that his attentions must be dropped and his visits to the husband's house must cease. There is one trouble, however, with this method. It is not always efficacious. There are cases in society to-day where men who are not permitted to visit the house of the lovely matrons they admire do not hesitate to ask them to dance in a ballroom, or request permission to take them down to supper, although the husbands who have forbidden them the house may be in the immediate neighborhood at the time and witness this curious renewal of the companionship and association.

A number of cases are to be found in society to-day where young and attractive married women are accepting the attentions of unmarried men, accepting them constantly and without any particular disguise. And each of these cases are marked by the clandestine character to which Ward McAllister, in voicing the sentiment of society, declares cannot exist without suggesting impropriety. In two cases the women are wives of millionaires, and in another case the woman is a society woman of magnificent face and figure, who is included in Ward McAllister's celebrated hundred beauties, with a husband, however, who treats her with persistent and systematic neglect. There are other cases besides these and there have been dozens of them in the recent history of social New York. The young married women belonging to what is known as the Hempstead Hunting Set are exceedingly frank, according to all accounts, in their acceptance of the compliments and attentions of their blithe young bachelor friends, and a well known club man the other day said that it was no unusual thing for the bolder among these courageous knights to offer lightning salutes to the objects of their admiration and to have such warm and particular attentions accepted without question.



THE CENTRAL PARK FLIRT.

"When does society take cognizance of the fact that married women are accepting attentions from men other than their husbands. I don't mean by gossiping of such attentions, but by indicating in some positive social way their disapprobation of such proceedings?"

"The rule of society," said Mr. McAllister, "is that society has no business to recognize anything of the kind until the husband does. So long as a husband expresses no disapprobation of what his wife is doing, her conduct is regarded as something with which nobody else has any concern."

The rule here formulated by Mr. McAllister is the one generally recognized, and has been expressed in various ways at other times by women who are high in social position; but, as a matter of fact, it is a rule so liberal that society only adheres to it in a modified form. Numbers of society women in New York, who possess such hampering adjuncts as husbands and children, and who have accepted sentimental attentions from admirers, have found that the kindness of their husbands did not protect them in a social way. In several cases such women have been left out in the distribution of invitations for leading social affairs, where the affairs have been given by recognized society leaders, and when they have concluded to behave more sensibly, and have brought their every-day life more into accordance with conventional notions, their names have been replaced on the list of guests for such entertainments. Of course, when society is moved to act in such cases, it is influenced to a great extent by the position which the husband holds. If the husband's position is powerful, and he expresses no public disapprobation of his wife's eccentricities, society is very slow to criticize in a practical and direct way.

An Englishman who lived for a year in New York, and who saw a great deal of society here, and saw a great deal of society women, declared just before returning home that there was more flirting and more sentimental nonsense in New York among married women than in any social center where he had ever been. A. H. REWITT.

SKEIN OF LEGISLATION.

How It Is Unravelled in the House of Representatives.

Bewilderment of the Spectators in the Galleries—Why the New Member Is Troubled—Dazed by the Legislative Kaleidoscope.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

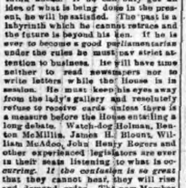
Visitors who watch the proceedings of the New York Stock Exchange from the galleries vainly try to catch an inkling of what is going on. They see brokers below them rushing to and fro, shouting all at once, and shaking their forefingers at each other. Groups rush hither and thither like boys over a school-yard and the racket is terrific. Visitors to the galleries of the House of Representatives frequently witness similar scenes. Vainly do they stretch their necks to try to ascertain what is up. At times a score of Members are on their feet, all seeking the eye of the Speaker. Some are asking unanimous consent to consider bills; others are making parliamentary inquiries, and some are shouting for the regular order. Legislative work is kaleidoscopic. The House will be shifted into Committee of the Whole in a twinkling. The leading advocate and the opponent of the bill in the committee to which it was referred after its introduction control the time allotted for debate. One Member will give time to another, and others will vainly seek time. Occasionally a Member will snatch five minutes by moving to knock out the last word of a section.

A NEW MEMBER TRYING TO GET THE HANG OF THINGS IN THE HOUSE.

The confusion at times is bewildering. Messages from the Senate and from the White House arrive, and the changes in the situation are many and frequent. The hall buzzes like a bee-hive. Continual streams of representatives pour through the entrances in answer to requests from constituents and others. It will be absolutely impossible for the occasional visitor to ascertain what is going on by listening to the proceedings. Those who visit the House frequently gradually acquire a knowledge of the rules. With some effort they can keep a shadowy track of what is transpiring. Measures of the utmost importance, however, may be passed even under their eyes without their knowledge. In the last Congress Martin A. Foran reported a pension bill appropriating over $60,000,000. The House went into Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union for its consideration, reported it back favorably, and the bill was passed. The whole thing was done inside of three minutes.

The new Members have full as much trouble as the visitors. It takes them a long time to get the hang of things. The rules are so intricate and the procedure so complicated that they are dazed. They hardly get an idea of what is up before the scene shifts and something new appears. The consideration of a bill will be cut off at a second's notice by some special order giving some other measure preference. Privileged committees will step in and secure preference in legislation. Senate bills will rise from the Speaker's desk unexpectedly and confront the House. There is always a pile of unfinished business to distract attention, and any quantity of executive documents which are thrown into the interstices by the speaker. The thread of legislation is quickly lost. An old Member frequently loses it while answering the simplest questions.

Months pass before the new Member begins to feel the least at home in legislative matters. He may ascertain what is before the House, but he will find it difficult to learn why it is before the House. It will be sometime before he knows why certain bills are considered in Committee of the Whole, and why others jump from the bosoms of committees into open House, and take precedence. There is always more or less confusion in the chamber. His mind becomes distracted in its effort to keep track of what is before him. It requires the closest attention to become in anywise familiar with the routine. The old Members watch the calendars and the special orders. They remember what days of the month and of the week are given for the consideration of private bills and legislation affecting the District of Columbia. Suspension day is never forgotten. They know what committees have the call in the morning hour and can tell almost by intuition what bills will be called up by the chairmen of those committees.

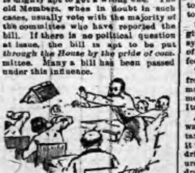


THE NEW MEMBER DISTURBED BY THE PAGE.

The new Member never has time to think ahead. If he can only get an idea of what is being done in the present, he will be satisfied. The past is a labyrinth which he cannot retrace and the future is beyond his ken. If he is ever to become a good parliamentarian under the rules he must pay strict attention to business. He will have time neither to read newspapers nor to write letters while the House is in session. He must keep his eyes away from the lady's gallery and resolutely refuse to receive cards unless there is a measure before the House entailing a long debate. Watch-dog Holman, Benton McMillin, James H. Blount, William McAdoo, John Henry Rogers and other experienced legislators are ever in their seats listening to what is occurring. If the confusion is so great that they cannot hear, they will rise and demand order. The new Member is too modest to do this.

Men like Hitt of Illinois, Butterworth of Ohio, Lodge of Massachusetts, Henderson of Iowa, Crisp of Georgia, Culberson of Texas and Tillman of South Carolina may wander through the halls and parade back of the curtains, but every one of them will know exactly what is going on, and when it is necessary to pay attention to it. Others, like Flower and Moffit of New York, Cowles of North Carolina, O'Neill of Pennsylvania, Shively of Indiana, and Breckinridge of Kentucky, may remain in their seats writing letters and reading newspapers, but you may be sure that their ears are open. Let something out of the way occur. Quick as a flash the words, "I object," or "Regular order" will fly from their lips. The man who tries to slip a job through on the sly is almost invariably detected and disappointed.

No wonder that the new Member at times becomes wearied and retires to the cloak-room to enjoy a new story and a good cigar. He tries to gauge his leisure time by what is before the House. If he is from the East, and the Committee on Indian Depredations is hammering away at a bill, he knows that he has no Indians in his district and, metaphorically speaking, takes a walk around the block. If he leaves the House and joins a convivial party in the restaurant, he is very apt to hear the words, "Call of the House," or "Yeas and nays," shouted by pages sent out into the corridors. When he returns he will find himself out on the ocean. He may be voting upon seconding a demand for the previous question, upon an amendment or upon a substitute for a bill, or upon ordering it to a third reading. His party vote in one case is a yea and in the other a nay. He is forced to depend upon his friends for a cue, and he is mighty apt to get a wrong one. The old Members, when in doubt in such cases, usually vote with the majority of the committee who have reported the bill. If there is no political question at issue, the bill is apt to be put through the House by the pride of committee. Many a bill has been passed under this influence.



COX THROWING THE BIBLE AMONG THE REPUBLICANS.

If a new Member spends a week at home while the House is in session he can never recover the ground lost. A newspaper man might as well try to get track of the news of the day after missing the daily papers for a week.

At times there are rich scenes upon the floor. Experienced men handle the legislative foils and the parry and thrust are exquisite. Fire flashes from the steel, and once in a while somebody gets hurt. Sharp personalities are exchanged and there is much badinage. The cloak-rooms are emptied. All rush to see the fight. Everybody is on the qui vive. The aisles are crowded, and groups of interested men gather round the speakers. After the fight is over, the cloak rooms are again filled. Reminiscences of similar contests are told, and many a good story is heard.

After the sharp bout between Joe Cannon and Seth Milliken, while the public building bills were under consideration, the other day, Hennepin Canal Murphy of Iowa described an interesting scene that occurred years ago. It was after the report of the famous Electoral Commission. Sunset Cox had the floor. He was limited to thirty minutes. He made an eloquent speech. His time expired as he was about to clinch his argument with a quotation from the scriptures. Down came the Speaker's gavel. Cox raised the Holy Book on high and asked unanimous consent to read the verse.

"I object," and "regular order," came from a dozen Republican throats. Again Mr. Cox appealed to the House. The din was deafening. Fifty Republican Members protested. For an instant Cox stood like a statue. Then he hurled the Bible into the Republican arena and shouted: "If you won't take the word of God direct, then take it aliunde!"

Henry Cabot Lodge recently related an amusing scene in the United States Senate. Some proposition was under discussion that was extremely distasteful to old Zach Chandler. The great Michigander waxed eloquent. He said that the passage of the bill would be a disgrace to the government. It would humiliate every conscientious American citizen. As for himself, if it became a law he should feel like going to the Southwest and living forever among the Comanches.

This brought Senator Wigfall to his feet. With stately dignity the Texan responded: "I really hope, Mr. President, that this proposition will not pass the Senate. The Comanches are among my constituents, and they are already sufficiently contaminated with the civilization of the white man."

These two incidents are unique samples of occasional scenes in the House. New Members and old ones are always on hand at such times. All enjoy them, and none more than the visitors in the galleries. The visitors, however, hear only what is said upon the floor. The new Member gets the cream of the thing afterwards in the cloak rooms and is the more highly edified.

NEW NOTES OF INTEREST.

THERE are 208,749 railroad bridges in the United States, spanning 3,213 miles.

NEBRASKA offers a cent a pound bounty on sugar made within its boundaries, and the beet is crowding the succulent sorghum-stalk on the prairies of the West.

THE greatest tunnel in the world is the new aqueduct which has been built to convey the waters of Croton lake to New York, and which will be completed by midsummer. It is thirty-three and one-eighth miles long.

THE Chinese Minister at Washington has so far overcome his national prejudices that he has consented to allow his wife to hold a reception after the American fashion. In China a woman of the upper classes never thinks of such a thing.

THE new State of Washington is not favored with a very dignified set of legislators. Thirty members of the Legislature went to the theater a few nights ago and threw paper balls, rubber overshoes and orange peelings at each other and hooted and guyed the players.

THE Fellowcraft Club, of New York, has put Stanley on the honorary list of life members. President Richard Watson Gilder will notify Mr. Stanley of the honor conferred upon him by this club of his brethren in America. The only other honorary member is Mr. James Russell Lowell.

THERE are now thirteen monitors lying idle, the original cost of which was nearly $7,000,000. In their present condition they are not only useless, but a source of expense, and Rear Admiral Jouett favors a plan for converting them into floating batteries for coast and harbor defense, which could be done at an estimated cost of $1,000,000.

THE Bismarckskopf is the name given to a mountain in the neighborhood of Ems, Germany, because it so much resembles Bismarck in its outlines. Mount Valerian bears a striking resemblance to M. Thiers. Mount Blanc and several mountains in the Pyrenees and elsewhere were supposed to furnish good portraits of the first Napoleon. A hillside in the Isle of Wight is said to furnish a very striking likeness of Lord Brougham.

THE city of Mexico is to have the finest hotel on the American continent, according to present plans and estimates. It will cost $2,000,000, and among the attractive features mentioned is a Turkish bath apartment the fixtures in which will cost $85,000 and a bar upon the fittings of which $90,000 will be expended. With such provisions for his mental and physical enjoyment and welfare, the guest will probably be perfectly satisfied with the other arrangements, which are of little moment.

SOME descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty, living on Pitcairn Island in the South Pacific, some months ago boarded the barque Carrie Winslow, which arrived at Philadelphia from Valparaiso recently. They had with them a bundle of letters which they wanted forwarded, and two boatloads of tropical fruit. The latter they wished to exchange for any thing on the vessel they could get, and flour, clothing, etc., were given them. The islanders number one hundred and twenty persons. They said their only fear was that their ocean home would become over-populated. It is only three and a half miles long and a mile wide, and is incapable of producing much more than enough to supply the wants of its present population.

SUMMARY OF EVENTS.

THE official use of the French language in Manitoba has been abolished by the Legislature.

A BREACH of promise suit had to be postponed in Columbus, S. C., last week, as the defendant was absent on a bridal tour and the plaintiff was helping him to enjoy it.

SOME professors who have been digging into the Indian mounds of Pennsylvania have unearthed the skeleton of a brave who must have stood twelve feet high.

THE mayor of Boston lately received from King Humbert, of Italy, a communication conveying his thanks to the men who saved the lives of several Italians at a recent fire in that city.

A BRIDGE across Eagle creek, Ore., was finished recently by Baker County taxpayers, who paid $2,600 for it. Before it was a week old a drove of cattle were driven upon it, when the whole structure collapsed and fifty animals were drowned.

A WIDOW in New York has, it is said, brought a suit for damages against a well-known neurologist for taking her husband's brain, and also for violating an alleged contract to give her $1,000 for using her husband as a medical object lesson.

AN exhibition of toys is about to be opened in St. Petersburg. It is intended to illustrate the history of toys from the earliest ages. Particular attention is to be given to Asiatic toys, which are said to be marvels of taste and fine workmanship.

A LITTLE girl five years old has arrived in Paterson, N. J., having traveled by rail alone from Saginaw, Mich. The child, at the request of her father, was shipped as express matter, with a tag about her neck giving her name and destination and also the key of her trunk.

A NEW etching of "The Angelus" has just been completed in Paris. Only a very limited number of copies are to be struck off, and the price is said to be 2,000 francs, or $400 each. The most expensive copies on sale in this country are the photographs, which sell for $30 each, and the issue of which has been limited to 100 copies.

THE Eiffel tower, which has been closed since the exposition, is about to be reopened. It has been overhauled and refitted as to its platforms and other accommodations for the public, the restaurant service has been reorganized, and the elevators have been tested until it is sure that the cold weather does not affect them injuriously.

When Ev'n Cometh On.

The mother-heart doth yearn at eventide,
And whereso'er the straying ones may roam,
When even cometh on they all fare home.
'Neath feathered sheltering the brood doth bide;
In eager flocks the birds wing to their nest,
While happy lambs and children miss the sun,
And to the folds do hurtle one by one.
As night doth gather slowly in the west,
All ye who hurry through life's busy day
Hark to the greeting which the ages tell,
"The sun doth rise and set. Hail, and farewell!"
But comfort ye your hearts where'er ye stray,
For those who through this little day do roam,
When even cometh on shall all fare home.

The Modern Muse.

He sang of the balmy spring-time breeze,
Of the sunlight glinting thro' the trees,
Of lowing cattle and droning bees,
Of April showers and of sunsets red;
"Oh! what a chestnut," the editor said.

He sang of the wild and wintry sea,
Of a good ship struggling to be free,
With storm-sails set and breakers a lee;
And how down sank fifty seamen dead;
"This sheet is no morgue," the editor said.

He sang of a maid beyond compare,
With eyes of azure and golden hair,
Loved by a Romeo young and fair,
Who fled in the night with him to wed.
"Well! of all the rot," the editor said.

He sang at last of the city's "nine,"
And called their batting "superb," "divine,"
Their sprinting "swift," and their fielding "fine,"
And told how all clubs at their coming fled.
"Now, that is a poem," the editor said.

Guard Well Thy Heart.

Guard well thy heart lest passions sweep
The chords, and God's sweet melody
Be lost; lest from the ruins leap
The spirit of unrest set free,
And o'er thy life dark shadows fall.

Guard well thy heart! Rest not content
With visions fair. Unwearied seek
Till thy heart found the true love sent
By Him who watcheth o'er the weak,
Who heeds the suppliant's call.

Guard well thy heart! Its throbbing life
Protect with jealous care. Be not
Dismayed, though bitter grow the strife,
And dark contention mark thy lot,
Fear not; He ruleth over all.

Papa's Nose [illegible].

A sweet little lassie
Whose years numbered four
Used to watch every evening
For me at the door;
She welcomed me home with
A hug and a kiss,
Which set my heart singing
With paternal bliss.

I asked her one evening,
While perched on my knee,
To tell me exactly
How much she loved me;
She pondered a moment,
Then earnestly said:
"I love oo, des' papa,
Almos' nea'ly dead!"

* * * * * *

'Tis years since my daughter
Has watched for her "pa;"
She now leaves that duty
To dear, faithful "ma;"
In fact there's another
Who comes in my stead—
My child loves a "hubby"
"Almos' nea'ly dead."
—Frank B. Welch, in Detroit Free Press.

Disenchantment.

She said to me she liked my sentiment,
She praised me ev'ry time she had a chance to,
And when, as oft, on dancing we were bent,
She asked me just what time I liked to dance to.

But quickly matrimonial woe I've found,
For ev'ry chance to find a fault she seizes,
Unlike the ball where first we met, I'm bound
To dance to whatsoever time she pleases!

In Quiet Revery.

Sometimes in quiet revery
When day is growing dim,
The heart is singing silently
A sweet unwritten hymn.

The strains are not to measure wrought,
By cunning of the mind,
But seem like hymning angels brought
From Heaven, and left behind.

The misty hills of bygone grief,
Once dark to look upon,
Stand out like blessings in relief
Against the setting sun.

The rain may fall, the wind may blow;
The soul unhindered sings,
While, like the bird 'neath sheltering bough
She sits with folded wings—

A brief and pleasant resting space,
A glance at Beulah land,
Before she girds herself again
For work that waits the hand.

Then, giving thanks to Him who poured
Refreshments in her cup,
She hears the calling of her Lord,
And takes her labor up.
—Thomas Mackellar, in Woman's Journal.

Mystery of the Gate.

At early morning Farmer Brown
Had hastened from the door;
His face was darkened with a frown
That oft had shone before.
"It's hard," said he, "to keep things straight;
Last Tuesday 'twasn't so.
Confound that miser'ble old gate!
What makes it sag so low?"

And bonny Kate, a dainty sight,
Stood still, demure and shy;
The house dog, who had barked all night,
Half closed a knowing eye;
The swallow, chuckling, told his mate
Of shade 'neath star-beam's glow;
And Farmer Brown said: "Drat that gate!
What makes it sag so low?"
—Washington Post.

Going, or Gone.

Nothing that lives can bloom
Long upon earth;
Joys that our days illume,
Die in their birth;
All that the soul admires,
All that the heart desires,
From heart and soul expires,
Leaving but dearth.

Stars, as they light the hours,
Steal them away;
Rays which unfold the flowers,
Bring them decay;
Even morn's beams of light,
Fresh on their heavenly flight,
Shine but to speed the night;
Nothing can stay.

Pleasures, like cloudlets, smile
When the day's done;
Golden and purple while
Lingers the sun;
All that our hearts can say
Of those who blessed our way,
Is that, like meteors, they
Shone—and are gone.
—Selected.

Compensation.

There are smiles in the mornin' and tears at night,
The wide world over;
There are hopes in the morning and prayers at night,
For many a rover.

There are tears unwept and songs unsung,
And human anguish keen,
And hopes and fears and smiles and tears—
But the blessings fall between!
—Louis Andrews, in Demorest.

FACTS ABOUT FLAGS.

THE black flag is a sign of piracy.

To "STRIKE the flag" is to lower the National colors in token of submission.

THE yellow flag shows a vessel to be in quarantine or is the sign of a contagious disease.

DIPPING the flag is lowering it slightly and then hoisting it again to salute a vessel or fort.

A "FLAG OF TRUCE" is a white flag, displayed to an enemy to indicate a desire for a parley or consultation.

A FLAG at half-mast means mourning. Fishing and other vessels return with a flag at half-mast to announce the loss or death of some of them.

FLAGS are used as the symbol of rank and command, the officers using them being called flag officers. Such flags are square, to distinguish them from other banners.

IF the President of the United States goes afloat the American flag is carried in the bows of his barge or hoisted at the main of the vessel on board of which he is.

THE red flag is a sign of defiance and is often used by revolutionists. In our service it is a mark of danger and shows a vessel to be receiving or discharging her powder.

THE white flag is a sign of peace. After a battle parties from both sides often go out to the field to rescue the wounded or bury the dead under the protection of a white flag.

GIDDY MARRIED WOMEN.

Ward McAllister Lays Down the Law in Regard to Flirting.

The Attentions a Married Lady May Receive from Young Men—Society Does Not Show Its Disapproval Until the Husband Objects.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

"What attentions may a married woman legitimately accept at the hands of her young men acquaintances?"

This was the question I asked Ward McAllister the other day, and it was prompted by the stories that have secured circulation in the clubs of late, connecting the names of young married women in a very unpleasant way with the names of men who were supposed not only to be friends of the family to which the women in question belong, but tried friends of the women's husbands. The stories concern people who are of considerable consequence in the social world of New York, and are therefore peculiarly interesting. The sentimental relations which may be established between men and women in the lower ranks of life, when the men and women are bound by domestic ties incompatible with the new relations they seek to form, oftentimes bring about picturesque and dramatic scenes, but the problems involved are settled either through fisticuffs on the sidewalk or through the gentle ministrations of the police justice, and are interesting, therefore, only to the shop girl and district messenger boy readers of sensational daily papers. When people are moving in the higher circles, however, a pugilistic solution cannot be employed and the police court is of no service whatever. The complications, therefore, which arise from young and frolicsome society matrons accepting attentions from reckless young bachelors, which they very frequently do, offer a more delicate and more tedious problem for the address and diplomacy of those immediately interested and the solution of it or the attempts at solution may legitimately command the attention of all students of human nature and social philosophy.

"According to the best social usage," replied Ward McAllister frankly, "a young married woman may accept any attentions from a friend of her husband which she might have accepted before her marriage, so long as those attentions are offered publicly and offered without any attempt whatever at concealment. She may freely accept from bachelor friends invitations to the theater, to the opera, or to balls. She may accept escort of this kind to supper and may accept at the hands of gentlemen flowers and other trifling presents which simply denote the friendship and esteem of him who makes such offerings. On the other hand the wife may invite such friends to dinner at her home as frequently as she cares to do so or her husband cares to, have them there, and she may do so without incurring any comment or any criticism. It is generally agreed however that one inflexible rule must be observed, and that is, that no attentions which are paid by him or accepted by her shall be of a clandestine character. Just as soon as there is anything secret about such intimacy it contributes an unfortunate and undesirable color which condemns it at once. There is no impropriety whatever in a married lady walking in the streets with a friend of her husband's so long as the street is one of the principal thoroughfares of the town."

THE YOUNG WIFE WHO CANNOT HELP FLIRTING.

"Do you mean that all these attentions may be paid by one man to a married woman without legitimately exciting remark?"

"No. I don't mean that. I mean that the sentiment of society people is that any of these attentions singly or taken together in moderation, may be offered and accepted without any impropriety. Good taste must govern a woman in this, as in everything else. Of course, if a man pays all these attentions to a married woman it is bound to provoke the comment of the woman's friends, or so-called friends, and no woman must do anything which will provoke comment. Just as soon as gossip is excited over what she is doing she must call a halt. The friendship between a man and a woman may be perfectly proper. That has nothing to do with the case. She must avoid the very appearance of evil."

There is one branch of this subject on which Mr. McAllister naturally did not care to talk, and that was the branch which deals with the possible action of the husband when matters come to a critical point, so far as the attentions of some man or other to his wife are concerned, and reach a stage where silence is no longer possible. Some club men say that, in a case like this, the only thing to do is to thrash the interloper. Another class of men who may or may not have had experience to guide them say that the very best thing to do is to go to the gallant knight who insists on paying attentions to a giddy and thoughtless matron and tell him that if he does not withdraw his attentions a very prompt resort will be had to firearms. The only trouble with this scheme is that a very few men who hold any kind of a position care to use such explosive measures, and a threat of this sort is taken as an empty threat. Another class of authorities on this delicate point think that the wife alone should be dealt with and instructed to inform her admirer that his attentions must be dropped and his visits to the husband's house must cease. There is one trouble, however, with this method. It is not always efficacious. There are cases in society to-day where men who are not permitted to visit the house of the lovely matrons they admire do not hesitate to ask them to dance in a ballroom, or request permission to take them down to supper, although the husbands who have forbidden them the house may be in the immediate neighborhood at the time and witness this curious renewal of the companionship and association.

A number of cases are to be found in society to-day where young and attractive married women are accepting the attentions of unmarried men, accepting them constantly and without any particular disguise. And each of these cases are marked by the clandestine character to which Ward McAllister, in voicing the sentiment of society, declares cannot exist without suggesting impropriety. In two cases the women are wives of millionaires, and in another case the woman is a society woman of magnificent face and figure, who is included in Ward McAllister's celebrated hundred beauties, with a husband, however, who treats her with persistent and systematic neglect. There are other cases besides these and there have been dozens of them in the recent history of social New York. The young married women belonging to what is known as the Hempstead Hunting Set are exceedingly frank, according to all accounts, in their acceptance of the compliments and attentions of their blithe young bachelor friends, and a well known club man the other day said that it was no unusual thing for the bolder among these courageous knights to offer lightning salutes to the objects of their admiration and to have such warm and particular attentions accepted without question.

"When does society take cognizance of the fact that married women are accepting attentions from men other than their husbands. I don't mean by gossiping of such attentions, but by indicating in some positive social way their disapprobation of such proceedings?"

"The rule of society," said Mr. McAllister, "is that society has no business to recognize anything of the kind until the husband does. So long as a husband expresses no disapprobation of what his wife is doing, her conduct is regarded as something with which nobody else has any concern."

The rule here formulated by Mr. McAllister is the one generally recognized, and has been expressed in various ways at other times by women who are high in social position; but, as a matter of fact, it is a rule so liberal that society only adheres to it in a modified form. Numbers of society women in New York, who possess such hampering adjuncts as husbands and children, and who have accepted sentimental attentions from admirers, have found that the kindness of their husbands did not protect them in a social way. In several cases such women have been left out in the distribution of invitations for leading social affairs, where the affairs have been given by recognized society leaders, and when they have concluded to behave more sensibly, and have brought their everyday life more into accordance with conventional notions, their names have been replaced on the list of guests for such entertainments. Of course, when society is moved to act in such cases, it is influenced to a great extent by the position which the husband holds. If the husband's position is powerful, and he expresses no public disapprobation of his wife's eccentricities, society is very slow to criticize in a practical and direct way.

An Englishman who lived for a year in New York, and who saw a great deal of society here, and saw a great deal of society women, declared just before returning home that there was more flirting and more sentimental nonsense in New York among married women than in any social center where he had ever been.

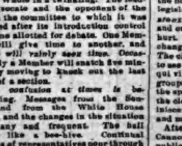
SKEIN OF LEGISLATION.

How It Is Unravelled in the House of Representatives.

Bewilderment of the Spectators in the Galleries—Why the New Member is Troubled—Dazed by the Legislative Kaleidoscope.

COPYRIGHT 1890.

Visitors who watch the proceedings of the New York Stock Exchange from the galleries vainly try to catch an inkling of what is going on. They see brokers below them rushing to and fro, shouting all at once, and shaking their forefingers at each other. Groups rush hither and thither like boys over a school-yard and the racket is terrific. Visitors to the galleries of the House of Representatives frequently witness similar scenes. Vainly do they stretch their necks to try to ascertain what is up. At times a score of Members are on their feet, all seeking the eye of the Speaker. Some are asking unanimous consent to consider bills: others are making parliamentary inquiries, and some are shouting for the regular order. Legislative work is kaleidoscopic. The



A NEW MEMBER TRYING TO GET THE HANG OF THINGS IN THE HOUSE.

House will be shifted into Committee of the Whole in a twinkling. The leading advocate and the opponent of the bill in the committee to which it was referred after its introduction control the time allotted for debate. One Member will give time to another, and others will vainly seek time. Occasionally a Member will snatch five minutes by moving to knock out the last word of a section.

The confusion at times is bewildering. Messages from the Senate and from the White House arrive, and the changes in the situation are many and frequent. The hall buzzes like a bee-hive. Continual streams of representatives pour through the entrances in answer to requests from constituents and others. It will be absolutely impossible for the occasional visitor to ascertain what is going on by listening to the proceedings. Those who visit the House frequently gradually acquire a knowledge of the rules. With some effort they can keep a shadowy track of what is transpiring. Measures of the utmost importance, however, may be passed even under their eyes without their knowledge. In the last Congress Martin A. Foran reported a pension bill appropriating over $80,000,000. The House went into Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union for its consideration, reported it back favorably, and the bill was passed. The whole thing was done inside of three minutes.

The new Members have full as much trouble as the visitors. It takes them a long time to get the hang of things. The rules are so intricate and the procedure so complicated that they are dazed. They hardly get an idea of what is up before the scene shifts and something new appears. The consideration of a bill will be cut off at a second's notice by some special order giving some other measure preference. Privileged committees will step in and secure preference in legislation. Senate bills will rise from the Speaker's desk unexpectedly and confront the House. There is always a pile of unfinished business to distract attention, and any quantity of executive documents which are thrown into the interstices by the speaker. The thread of legislation is quickly lost. An old Member frequently loses it while answering the simplest questions.

Months pass before the new Member begins to feel the least at home in legislative matters. He may ascertain what is before the House, but he will find it difficult to learn why it is before the House. It will be sometime before he knows why certain bills are considered in Committee of the Whole, and why others jump from the bosoms of committees into open House, and take precedence. There is always more or less confusion in the chamber. His mind becomes distracted in its effort to keep track of what is before him. It requires the closest attention to become in anywise familiar with the routine. The old Members watch the calendars and the special orders. They remember what days of the month and of the week are given for the consideration of private bills and legislation affecting the District of Columbia. Suspension day is never forgotten. They know what committees have the call in the morning hour and can tell almost by intuition what bills will be called up by the chairmen of those committees.

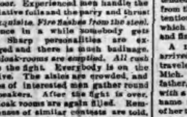
The new Member never has time to think ahead. If he can only get an idea of what is being done in the present, he will be satisfied. The past is a labyrinth which he cannot retrace and the future is beyond his ken. If he is ever to become a good parliamentarian under the rules he must pay strict attention to business. He will have time neither to read newspapers nor to write letters while the House is in session. He must keep his eyes away from the lady's gallery and resolutely refuse to receive cards unless there is a measure before the House entailing a long debate. Watch-dog Holman, Benton McMillin, James H. Blount, William McAdoo, John Henry Rogers and other experienced legislators are ever in their seats listening to what is occurring. If the confusion is so great that they cannot hear, they will rise and demand order. The new Member is too modest to do this.

Men like Hitt of Illinois, Butterworth of Ohio, Lodge of Massachusetts, Henderson of Iowa, Crisp of Georgia, Culberson of Texas and Tillman of South Carolina may wander through the halls and parade back of the curtains, but every one of them will know exactly what is going on, and when it is necessary to pay attention to it. Others, like Flower and Moffit of New York, Cowles of North Carolina, O'Neill of Pennsylvania, Shively of Indiana, and Breckinridge of Kentucky, may remain in their seats writing letters and reading newspapers, but you may be sure that their ears are open. Let something out of the way occur. Quick as a flash the words, "I object," or "Regular order" will fly from their lips. The man who tries to slip a job through on the sly is almost invariably detected and disappointed.

No wonder that the new Member at times becomes wearied and retires to the cloak-room to enjoy a new story and a good cigar. He tries to gauge his leisure time by what is before the House. If he is from the East, and the Committee on Indian Depredations is hammering away at a bill, he knows that he has no Indians in his district and, metaphorically speaking, takes a walk around the block. If he leaves the House and joins a convivial party in the restaurant, he is very apt to hear the words, "Call of the House," or "Yeas and nays," shouted by pages sent out into the corridors. When he returns he will find himself out on the ocean. He may be voting upon seconding a demand for the previous question, upon an amendment or upon a substitute for a bill, or upon ordering it to a third reading. His party vote in one case is a yea and in the other a nay. He is forced to depend upon his friends for a cue, and he is mighty apt to get a wrong one. The old Members, when in doubt in such cases, usually vote with the majority of the committee who have reported the bill. If there is no political question at issue, the bill is apt to be put through the House by the pride of committee. Many a bill has been passed under this influence.



COX THROWING THE BIBLE AMONG THE REPUBLICANS.

If a new Member spends a week at home while the House is in session he can never recover the ground lost. A newspaper man might as well try to get track of the news of the day after missing the daily papers for a week.

At times there are rich scenes upon the floor. Experienced men handle the legislative foils and the parry and thrust are exquisite. Fire flashes from the steel, and once in a while somebody gets hurt. Sharp personalities are exchanged and there is much badinage. The cloak-rooms are emptied. All rush to see the fight. Everybody is on the qui vive. The aisles are crowded, and groups of interested men gather round the speakers. After the fight is over, the cloak rooms are again filled. Reminiscences of similar contests are told, and many a good story is heard.

After the sharp bout between Joe Cannon and Seth Milliken, while the public building bills were under consideration, the other day, Hennepin-Canal Murphy of Iowa described an interesting scene that occurred years ago. It was after the report of the famous Electoral Commission. Sunset Cox had the floor. He was limited to thirty minutes. He made an eloquent speech. His time expired as he was about to clinch his argument with a quotation from the scriptures. Down came the Speaker's gavel. Cox raised the Holy Book on high and asked unanimous consent to read the verse. "I object," and, "regular order," came from a dozen Republican throats. Again Mr. Cox appealed to the House. The din was deafening. Fifty Republican Members protested. For an instant Cox stood like a statue. Then he hurled the Bible into the Republican arena and shouted: "If you won't take the word of God direct, then take it afitunde!"

Henry Cabot Lodge recently related an amusing scene in the United States Senate. Some proposition was under discussion that was extremely distasteful to old Zach Chandler. The great Michigander waxed eloquent. He said that the passage of the bill would be a disgrace to the government. It would humiliate every conscientious American citizen. As for himself, if it became a law he should feel like going to the Southwest and living forever among the Comanches.

This brought Senator Wigfall to his feet. With stately dignity the Texan responded: "I really hope, Mr. President, that this proposition will not pass the Senate. The Comanches are among my constituents, and they are already sufficiently contaminated with the civilization of the white man."

These two incidents are unique samples of occasional scenes in the House. New Members and old ones are always on hand at such times. All enjoy them, and none more than the visitors in the galleries. The visitors, however, hear only what is said upon the floor. The new Member gets the cream of the thing afterwards in the cloak rooms and is the more highly edified.

NEW NOTES OF INTEREST.

THERE are 208,749 railroad bridges in the United States, spanning 3,218 miles.

NEBRASKA offers a cent a pound bounty on sugar made within its boundaries, and the beet is crowding the succulent sorghum-stalk on the prairies of the West.

THE greatest tunnel in the world is the new aqueduct which has been built to convey the waters of Croton lake to New York, and which will be completed by midsummer. It is thirty-three and one-eighth miles long.

THE Chinese Minister at Washington has so far overcome his national prejudices that he has consented to allow his wife to hold a reception after the American fashion. In China a woman of the upper classes never thinks of such a thing.

THE new State of Washington is not favored with a very dignified set of legislators. Thirty members of the Legislature went to the theater a few nights ago and threw paper balls, rubber overshoes and orange peelings at each other and hooted and guyed the players.

THE Fellowcraft Club, of New York, has put Stanley on the honorary list of life members. President Richard Watson Gilder will notify Mr. Stanley of the honor conferred upon him by this club of his brethren in America. The only other honorary member is Mr. James Russell Lowell.

THERE are now thirteen monitors lying idle, the original cost of which was nearly $7,000,000. In their present condition they are not only useless, but a source of expense, and Rear Admiral Jouett favors a plan for converting them into floating batteries for coast and harbor defense, which could be done at an estimated cost of $1,000,000.

THE Bismarckskopf is the name given to a mountain in the neighborhood of Ems, Germany, because it so much resembles Bismarck in its outlines. Mount Valerian bears a striking resemblance to M. Thiers. Mount Blanc and several mountains in the Pyrenees and elsewhere were supposed to furnish good portraits of the first Napoleon. A hillside in the Isle of Wight is said to furnish a very striking likeness of Lord Brougham.

THE city of Mexico is to have the finest hotel on the American continent, according to present plans and estimates. It will cost $2,000,000, and among the attractive features mentioned is a Turkish bath apartment the fixtures in which will cost $35,000 and a bar upon the fittings of which $80,000 will be expended. With such provisions for his mental and physical enjoyment and welfare, the guest will probably be perfectly satisfied with the other arrangements, which are of little moment.

SOME descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty, living on Pitcairn Island in the South Pacific, some months ago boarded the barque Carrie Winslow, which arrived at Philadelphia from Valparaiso recently. They had with them a bundle of letters which they wanted forwarded, and two boatloads of tropical fruit. The latter they wished to exchange for any thing on the vessel they could get, and flour, clothing, etc., were given them. The islanders number one hundred and twenty persons. They said their only fear was that their ocean home would become over-populated. It is only three and a half miles long and a mile wide, and is incapable of producing much more than enough to supply the wants of its present population.

SUMMARY OF EVENTS.

THE official use of the French language in Manitoba has been abolished by the Legislature.

A BREACH of promise suit had to be postponed in Columbus, S. C., last week, as the defendant was absent on a bridal tour and the plaintiff was helping him to enjoy it.

SOME professors who have been digging into the Indian mounds of Pennsylvania have unearthed the skeleton of a brave who must have stood twelve feet high.

THE mayor of Boston lately received from King Humbert, of Italy, a communication conveying his thanks to the men who saved the lives of several Italians at a recent fire in that city.

A BRIDGE across Eagle creek, Ore., was finished recently by Baker County taxpayers, who paid $2,600 for it. Before it was a week old a drove of cattle were driven upon it, when the whole structure collapsed and fifty animals were drowned.

A WIDOW in New York has, it is said, brought a suit for damages against a well-known neurologist for taking her husband's brain, and also for violating an alleged contract to give her $1,000 for using her husband as a medical object lesson.

AN exhibition of toys is about to be opened in St. Petersburg. It is intended to illustrate the history of toys from the earliest ages. Particular attention is to be given to Asiatic toys, which are said to be marvels of aesthetic and fine workmanship.

A LITTLE girl five years old has arrived in Paterson, N. J., having traveled by rail alone from Saginaw, Mich. The child, at the request of her father, was shipped as express matter, with a tag about her neck giving her name and destination and also the key of her trunk.

A NEW etching of "The Angelus" has just been completed in Paris. Only a very limited number of copies are to be struck off, and the price is said to be 2,000 francs, or $400 each. The most expensive copies on sale in this country are the photographs, which sell for $20 each, and the issue of which has been limited to 100 copies.

THE Eiffel tower, which has been closed since the exposition, is about to be reopened. It has been overhauled and refitted as to its platforms and other accommodations for the public, the restaurant service has been reorganized, and the elevators have been tested until it is sure that the cold weather does not affect them injuriously.

BALLOT REFORM.

In addition to the Senate Committee appointed to investigate ballot box frauds in the County of [illegible], the House of Assembly has taken similar means to ferret out alleged election crookedness in other sections of the State.

That is exactly right.

The more investigation the better, provided, it is carried on in the interest of honesty and truth and not to serve mere partisan purposes.

Hudson County has no doubt been plundered and disgraced by corrupt politicians, but the belief is well-founded, that other Counties have not escaped like political rascality.

Let the work of unearthing political fraud go on, thoroughly and impartially, until every miscreant violator of the integrity and sanctity of the ballot is brought to the bar of just punishment and exposed to popular scorn.

Election cheating is [illegible] robbery upon the dearest prerogative of citizenship.

To effectually end it is the paramount duty of every honest man in the land.

When none but the legally qualified vote, and when each and every individual voter deposits a ticket that represents his own unawed and unpurchased judgment, and when ballots so cast are truthfully counted and reported, our [illegible] will become a reality and not a farce.

Investigate from Sussex to Cape May, from the Hudson to the Delaware, correct all abuses, and let no political offender escape, be he high up or low down, Democrat or Republican.

Give the people genuine BALLOT REFORM!

A DAKOTA PROTEST.

The Senate of the United States by a vote of 37 to 15, last week, passed a bill, introduced by Mr. Blair, appropriating $50,000 for the erection of an equestrian statue of the Revolutionary hero, General Stark, in the City of Manchester, New Hampshire.

One of the newly-elected Dakota Republican Senators, Mr. Moody, opposed the proposition in the following emphatic manner:

"There is no just right to expend the money of my constituents for such a purpose; and now, when it is before the country that the low price of farm products in the West and in Dakota, where the failure of crops has brought many people to the verge of pauperism, it is not just or right, and cannot be justified, that money shall be taken from the Treasury and expended for such a purpose."

Hold up, Senator! Can it be possible that you are not versed in the policy of your congressional and administration party friends.

Spend the surplus, and tax the people's living necessities to raise more money for lavish expenditure, is their settled plan.

Be guarded, Senator; you are a fresh hand at the machine, and [illegible] may be posted as a mugwump.

Besides, why do you speak so sadly about your constituents, the farmers of the West?

Does not Mr. McKinley and his fellow Republicans in Congress intend to confer ample protection upon the farmers of America, making them all rich by increased taxation, and the protection of eggs and garden sass from [illegible]?

In view of such a glorious benefit, is it not rather disloyal to find fault with the spending of a beggarly fifty thousand dollars to perpetuate remembrance of a brave New England soldier of '76, even though he did fight to secure for all the people the blessings of equal and exact justice.

The Duty of Night Watchmen.

All of the night watchmen who patrol the streets on the outskirts of the city, are required to ring up the District Messenger office every half hour during the night. In the morning a full report of the calls is made out and handed to Captain Grant, who carefully examines each report.

A [illegible] in Time With [illegible]

At the meeting of the Borough Council, Friday evening, an ordinance will probably be introduced for adoption requiring those who have board walks out of repair, or none at all, in front of their premises, to lay flagging or the Borough will do it and place a lien on the premises for the cost.

The readers of THE PRESS—who [illegible] the sensible folks over the borough—will take advantage of this warning, and at once repair the walks they have or lay board walks where there are none, thus saving themselves the expense the proposed ordinance would put upon them.

Let's Hear From Them.

Policeman Carey's [illegible] sends this [illegible] appeal: "People are eager to hear from our citizen's committee. Justice demands that some action be taken to right the wrong and protect our city."

Who are "our" citizens? What committee have the citizens of Plainfield appointed? From what is "our" city to be protected and how?

There is already a self appointed [illegible] of indignant politicians engaged in [illegible]ing how the councilmen elected by the people, shall conduct themselves. If the city is to be protected from anything just now, it is another such busybody organization as the quoted appeal above intimates is in existence.

But if "our" citizens really have a committee, by all means let's hear from them.

The Value of the Press in [illegible]

The Union, a paper published in this city March 9, [illegible], printed an account of a great sickness in Europe, principally in Sweden. Nearly 20,000 people had died, or were sick, and the mortality was very great. The disease spread to London in December, [illegible], and there were thousands of cases, 130 clerks in the Bank of England were sick, and 150 deaths occurred in the Naval Hospital at Greenwich. The symptoms described were the same as in the epidemic of 1889-90, and was styled a kind of Influenza. The paper states that it was called La Grippe in Europe.

This same paper in giving news from New Jersey, states that a branch post office had been established in Elizabethport and Thos. B. Wood was appointed postmaster.

Board in Plainfield was advertised at $2.25 per week.

The New Jersey Railroad speaks of the fact that it had reached New Brunswick from New York, and would run four trains per day; fare to Elizabethtown 50 cents. A stage ran from Elizabeth to Plainfield.

THE CRESCENTS HOLD SECOND PLACE.

Two Fine Games Tuesday Evening. Prove They're the People.

On their own alleys, above evening, the Crescent League's bowling team rolled its last two games in the Central Tournament. Scores of over 800 in both games, won. Second place in the championship struggle between Elizabeth, Plainfield, Westfield, Fanwood and Somerville, therefore perches upon the banners of this city.

The Crescents scores, above evening, were:

The Wedding Postponed.

The marriage of Miss Ida Naylor of Lake street, to Mr. Nathan Lees of North Plainfield, was to have been consummated at Grace church, Wednesday at four o'clock, but owing to the sudden and dangerous illness of Miss Naylor on Thursday last, the ceremony had to be indefinitely postponed.

Arrested for Non-Support.

Patrick Cahill of South Second street was again a prisoner before City Judge Codington Tuesday, on a charge preferred by his wife for non-support. The complaint was made to Overseer of the Poor, J. O. [illegible], who in turn lodged a complaint with the City Judge.

Cahill said that he was able and willing to provide for his wife's support, but the money he left at home for household purposes, his wife invariably spent for beer. He promised to do better in the future, and the Judge ordered his release, as the complainant was not present to press the charge.

On Trial for Stealing Chickens.

Wm. Carkhuff was put on trial in the Somerset County Courts on April 23, for stealing chickens from John Long of Warren township and disposing of the same to a butcher on North avenue, this city. The indictment was for grand larceny, but after the State's evidence had been put in Carkhuff pleaded guilty of petit larceny, and the plea was accepted.

The chickens were stolen from a brother of Dr. M. B. Long of this city, and they were a big lot of choice Wyandotte and other fine breeds of fowls.

Plainfield's Pure Drinking Water.

Messrs Stillwell & Gladding, the celebrated analytical and consulting chemists of New York, who never put their names to aught not absolutely true, and in implicit good faith, have certified to the following as the analysis of the water taken from the wells now being sunk for the Water Works Company of Plainfield:

WINFIELD SCOTT MEMORIAL SERVICE.

The above named post held an open camp fire and memorial service in the post room, Tuesday. The large room was comfortably filled, and the services were of a solemn and impressive nature. Post Commander Charles B. Stevens presided, and around him the post formed a square during part of the services. In front of the Commander there was a row of seven vacant chairs, representing that many members of the post who have died since the post was organized, seven years ago. The names of the dead members and the order in which they died are as follows: Dorian Martin, Dr. Burlingham, H. [illegible], Wm. Roxbury, Samuel Moore, Isaac Brokaw and J. Newton Jenkins.

During the evening, Past Commander L. V. F. Randolph and J. V. D. C., James M. Atwood eulogized the late Isaac Brokaw, and there were also responses by the Commander and members of the Post.

It Won't Cost a Citizen a Cent.

All talk of the enormous expense to the city and terrible burden upon the taxpayer, as a certain outcome of the "case" of policeman Carey against the Mayor and other members of the Police Board, is as false as the methods and personal characters of those who circulate such talk.

It is, of course, very improbable that the "case" will be pushed to a finish by the complainant. All preliminary talk and walk in such direction, are merely brag and bluff. But should it be, the City Attorney—who will [illegible] sides and appear against Carey this time—is a salaried officer, and doesn't cost an extra cent.

The Board of Police have, it is true, engaged counsel to assist Mr. Marsh, but such counsel they have retained at their own personal expense. So there remains nothing to be paid by the City even if Carey should win and the Corporation Counsel be beaten, except the policeman's three months' salary which the City would have had to pay if he had not been suspended.

OF INTEREST TO PLAINFIELD'S LADIES.

What the Bicycle Boys of the State are Looking Forward to in This City.

A correspondent of a cycling organ published in Boston, says:—"I am informed (and correctly too) that a grand treat is in store for those who attend the theatre party to be held at Music Hall, Plainfield, Friday evening, May 30, in connection with the Meet, as it will be a first-class affair, and will be purely amateur. It will be under the management of Mr. Elliott W. Johnson, and is styled 'The Hudson County Wheelmen's Amateur Minstrel and Vaudeville Combination.' During the Winter this 'company' has played to crowded houses in Jersey City. The price of tickets for the theatre party will be $1, 75 cents and 50 cents; the price of tickets for the banquet has not yet been settled.

Each club in the State will be asked to notify the Committee in charge how many tickets they will require, as it is very important that the tickets should be disposed of early to avoid the rush and complications liable to arise if the sale of tickets is left to the last minute. Everything in connection with the meet is moving along nicely. About the 15th of May a handsome souvenir programme will be sent to each member and when it is received let me suggest that its contents be carefully read before attending the meet.

"New Jersey is in Racing District No. 2, with New York, and soon the arrangements for the preliminary meets will be made. In this connection I want to say that I do think it would not be just to the flyers to hold the races on a dirt track like the one at Plainfield, as it would in all probability result in the defeat of the fast men and the victory of the strong men, thereby debarring the fast men from the National Championships. The committee in charge of the racing at the meet decided after giving the matter due consideration, to have the races run on the track of the New Jersey Athletic Club at Bergen Point. The races will be the wind-up of the Division Meet, and will be run on the afternoon of Saturday, May 31st. A special train will be chartered to run from Plainfield. The loss of time will be very slight, as it is only about half an hour's ride.

MEMORIAL DAY ARRANGEMENTS.

The Two Grand Army Posts Will Unite in a Grand Public Demonstration—Company C., of the Third Regiment to be Invited.

Comrades E. J. Olmon, W. B. Drake, Chas. Randolph, E. T. Dunn and John Mackey, constituting the Memorial Day detail from Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., met jointly with Comrades I. McVoy, H. C. Drake and W. W. Coriell, representing the Memorial Day detail from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., at Mr. H. C. Drake's residence on East Front street, Monday evening, to make the preliminary arrangements for a grand public demonstration on Decoration Day, May 30. This is the first time in the history of the two posts that they have acted jointly in observing the day, and the public may therefore this year expect something more than the ordinary Memorial Day exercises. Officers of the joint detail were elected as follows:

Chairman—Isiah McVoy.
Secretary—H. B. Drake.
Treasurer—W. W. Coriell.

Although the arrangements are not yet completed, it is definitely known that in the morning the graves of the dead heroes will be strewn with flowers, followed in the afternoon by a parade through the principal streets of the city and appropriate exercises in Music Hall. A chorus of over one hundred voices is now being rehearsed in Reform Hall every Wednesday afternoon, by Mrs. W. C. Smith and Mrs. H. Westphal assisted by other members of the Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, Auxiliary to the G. A. R., and besides this other interesting features will be introduced in the programme.

The orator of the day, it is expected, will be the Rev. Mr. Stewart of Easton, Pa. Company C., of Elizabeth, Third Regiment, National Guard, with Captain DeHart in command, will be invited to participate in the celebration.

"Wetumpka" to Have an Excursion.

At the next regular meeting of Wetumpka Lodge, No. 3401, Knights of Honor, to be held Thursday evening, a proposition will be made to have an excursion for the members and their friends.

The excursion is to be held the last of June or the first week in July; and its consideration is now in the hands of Messrs C. J. Feytel, J. F. Barber, G. T. Benedict, E. C. Frase, F. A. Ransom, S. M. Johnson, R. A. Frey, B. Leerssen, S. E. Flower, F. P. Haffner, J. C. Bovey, F. M. Slater.

The Young Widow Wins.

The hearing in the contest over the will of the late Charles Jenkins, President of the Manhattan News Company, one of whose heirs is his niece, Mrs. Mary Underhill, of Third place, has been concluded in the Richmond County Surrogate's Court at Richmond, S. I. The Surrogate admitted the will to probate

Mr. Jenkins left the bulk of his estate, valued at $400,000, to his young widow, Catherine Jenkins, to whom he had been married but a short time, and who was formerly in his employ as a typewriter. Mrs. Frances Hunter, a sister, contested the will on the ground that her brother was not mentally capable of making a will, the document being drawn up while he was on his death bed.

The Best Hall in the City.

The most centrally located and altogether available hall for church and society fairs, festivals, public and private meetings and entertainments, is that which occupies the entire upper story of the large building on the East corner of North and Park avenues.

Central Hall, as it is called, has just been completed and finished. The floor surface newly laid in hard wood, is about 3,000 feet square, and by day is lighted by windows on three sides. Four hundred people can be comfortably seated. Cloak and toilet rooms are connected with the Hall. The entrance from the street is to be rebuilt, at once. It will have vestibule doors, and in other ways made attractive. In rooms just below the Hall, supper can be prepared and served to any number of guests.

To Be Guarded Against, Here.

At the recent revival services in Jersey City conducted by Evangelist B. Fay Mills, who is coming to Plainfield in the Fall, cards were given out to be filled in by converts with their names, addresses, and the names of the churches of which they desired to become members. The filled-in cards were returned to the evangelist every night, and he distributed them among the clergy then according to the church preference expressed on the cards.

The clergymen agreed to call at the addresses on the cards and complete the work of salvation. They have been doing it ever since the meetings closed. At the addresses given on about one in every five cards they have found either a vacant lot, a stable, or a factory; that the person whose name was on the card, had been dead for several years, that he never lived at the address, or that he had moved away years before. Sometimes the name of the same person is written on several cards.

The superior merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral as an anodyne expectorant is due to a skillful combination of the most powerful ingredients. Nothing like it has ever been attempted in pharmacy, and its success in the cure of Pulmonary complaints is unparalleled.

A DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR.

A Large Audience Charmingly Entertained by the Young Daughters of the King.

Holy Cross chapel was crowded Saturday afternoon with the many friends of the Young Daughters of the King, the occasion being the first performance in this city of the "Weinacht Kinder Symphonie" and to say that the audience was delighted is putting it very mildly.

The first part of the programme comprised vocal and instrumental music, and tableaux. Mrs. Martin I. Cooley sang "Marguerite" exceedingly well, and as an encore gave the musical rendering of James Whitcomb Riley's beautiful poem, "There, Little Girl, Don't Cry." She also sang "Fiddle and I," accompanied on the violin by Mr. Gifford Cooley. Miss Adelaide McGee sang two solos in her usual delightful manner and was heartily encored.

The tableaux, which were under the direction of Miss May Taylor, deserve more than passing notice. There were four of them—Greek Slaves in the Market Place; Somebody's Darling—Nobody's Darling; Old Fashioned Courtship, and The Bachelor's Reverie. The stage setting of the first and last tableaux was most tasteful and artistic, and the charming costumes and pretty faces completed an effect the beauty of which is not often equalled.

The Bachelor's Reverie was a unique conception nicely carried out and everybody envied the lucky Bachelor in his proximity to the four fair Reveries. Mr. George P. Taggart essayed to while away some spare moments with a few of his characteristic remarks, and succeeded in provoking many a smile. Both his wit and its delivery, are unequalled by any amateur of the day. There were also some pretty choruses well sung by those who took part in the symphony.

The second half of the programme was the "Kinder Symphonie." It was rendered by some thirty girls and boys, in picturesque Alsatian costume, under the direction of Mr. A. S. Newman of New York, and was about as near perfection as it is possible to get. The idea of the thing is most unique, being a genuine symphony, with full orchestration, performed almost entirely on children's instruments, horns, whistles, cuckoos, bells, triangles, drums and the like. The effect produced was wonderful and the way the young people kept time and attended to their respective parts reflected the greatest credit upon Mr. Newman. The audience was most demonstrative in its appreciation and at the conclusion of the performance the applause was prolonged and enthusiastic.

The whole affair was under the supervision of Mrs. A. W. Haviland to whom its success is chiefly due. The young people who took part in the Symphony were the Misses May Thompson, Kate Miller, Edith Taylor, Emma Haviland, Hattie Shreve, Mary Wells, Leontine Meade, Blanche Miller, May Shreve, Edith Clapp, Nellie Faber, Marion Henderson, Gertrude Haviland, Helen Van Deventer, Alice Thompson, Elsie Horne, Dolly Wells and Dottie Haviland. Messrs Clifford McGee, Max Munger, Gifford Cooley and Charles Cook. Masters Philip Wells, Harry McGee, Ned Waring, Henry Wells, Fred Taylor, Raymond McGee, Willie McCutchen and George Horne.

OPENING OF THE NETHERWOOD.

Much in the Way of Additional Attraction and Comfort, Has Been Provided.

During the past Winter Mr. Frank E. Miller, owner of Hotel Netherwood, has devoted his entire time and personal attention, and expended a great deal of money, in renovating, improving and adding to the Hotel much that will provide additional attraction and comfort to his guests. A very successful season, consequently, may be expected.

A handsomely lithographed pamphlet, illustrated with pictures of the Hotel's exterior and interiors, has been prepared for general circulation and the convenience of those desiring to select rooms by mail. It goes on to say that this large and elegantly appointed hotel is delightfully situated on Netherwood Heights, overlooking the City of Plainfield. It is built entirely of brick, with tiled floors, surrounded by broad piazzas, affording a varied view of sweeping country, bounded by the Orange Mountains, which are covered with piney groves and traversed by the most perfect macadamized drives.

Its convenient proximity to the City of New York, the elevation and healthfulness of location, its pure dry air, tempered by the salt breezes from the ocean, make this Hotel especially eligible as a luxurious resort for business men and their families. The Hotel is three minutes' walk from Netherwood Station, but forty five minutes from the foot of Liberty street, New York, over the Central Railroad of New Jersey, noted for its granite roadbed, its freedom from dust, and the civility of those in charge. Forty-six trains daily, running half-hourly morning and evening. Excursion tickets, 95 cents; commutation rate, 19½ cents per trip.

The Hotel has undergone many changes, adding to the pleasure and comfort of its guests—special attention having been given to the sanitary arrangements. In connection with the house is a commodious stable and livery, with ample accommodations for fifty horses.

The cuisine will be kept up to its high standard of excellence, fresh vegetables from the neighboring farms, and milk from the Netherwood dairy. The hotel is amply furnished with all modern conveniences—private baths, elevator, electric bells, etc. Provision is made for direct telegraphic and telephone communications with the city from the hotel office.

A Westfielder Married in Brooklyn.

Mr. Orrin Pierson of Westfield, was united in marriage to a Mrs. Richardson of Brooklyn, at the latter place, on Thursday evening at eight o'clock. The wedding was to have taken place several weeks ago, but owing to an accident to Mr. Pierson the ceremony was postponed until Thursday evening.

Mr and Mrs Pierson will spend their honeymoon in Washington, D. C.

HANDSOME PANTALOONS.

It is worth taking a day off to see the immense stock of handsome pantaloons that WATSON & CO. are now showing, which embraces all the choice styles you see in Merchant Tailors windows. Five dollars is the standard price, but the finest goods from the best looms in the World are shown at $6 and $7, which you should see before you buy. All are hand cut, as WATSON & CO. use no cutting machines, and you can see the difference it makes in the shape of their garments by looking at samples shown in window next to Market street. Their great sale of Spring suits at $12.50 for any kind you may select still continues, and it is a poor buyer who cannot pick out a suit at this price that would cost him $15 or $18 elsewhere.

See the new trace line patterns that go with the test at $12.50 for the complete suit.

The delay of their decorators in finishing their new Suit Department in their Market street extension makes it impossible to provide racks for this immense stock as fast as their tailors finish them, but $12.50 will make room.—Newark Press.

OBITUARY.

COLONEL HUGH B. REED

Colonel Hugh B. Reed, father of Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed, died at his home near Somerville, on the morning of Friday last.

He was born at Zanesville, Ohio, March 18, 1818, and studied medicine at the Ohio Medical College in Cincinnati. Not fancying the life of a physician, he abandoned that profession, and in 1843 engaged in the drug business in Cincinnati. In 1845 he removed to Fort Wayne, Indiana, where he was an active and energetic merchant up to the breaking out of the war of the rebellion. He took an active part in support of the Government from the outset, and was appointed by Gov. Morton, Commandant of Post with camp at Fort Wayne. He raised and organized the Twelfth, Thirtieth, and Forty-fourth Regiments of Indiana Volunteers, and was commissioned Colonel of the latter regiment, which gained by gallant conduct in the field the sobriquet of the "Iron Forty-fourth." He participated with his regiment in the battles of Fort-Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Perryville, and in driving Bragg out of Kentucky. In Sunday's battle of Shiloh he lost more than half his regiment in killed and wounded. Colonel Reed on that day was struck four times by rebel bullets, and had two horses shot under him. The regiment was publicly complimented by both brigade and division commanders, and Colonel Reed was nominated Brigadier General by President Lincoln, but being completely broken down in health he resigned his commission and returned to his home in Fort Wayne.

At the close of the war he removed to New Jersey, hoping that a change of climate would benefit him, and since then has lived near Somerville, but never recovered his health. His death was very sudden and resulted from cerebral hemorrhage, brought on by a slight over-exertion. He leaves a wife and seven children, Charles A. Reed, Esq., of North Plainfield, being the eldest son. At the time of his death he was largely interested in Fort Wayne real estate.

MR. HAINES AT REFORM HALL.

An Eloquent Address on "Who is Responsible?"

A goodly number met in Reform Hall Sunday night. President Harper was at his post of duty, as were the choir, led by Mr. King, with Mr. George Rogers as organist. The Rev. Mr. Honeyman being prevented from attending, the devotional services were conducted by Mr. Samuel A. Haines, the announced speaker for the evening.

Mr. Haines then delivered his address entitled, "Who is Responsible?" and for over an hour he held the unbroken attention of his hearers. It was an effort of eloquence, ability and searching logic, and should have been heard by a much larger audience. He vividly portrayed the crime, misery and destitution wrought by the open door saloon, and declared that the day was coming when the popular edict would be proclaimed and enforced that the saloon must go. Mr. Haines carried the responsibility for the evils of the liquor traffic and liquor drinking beyond the saloonist, and placed it squarely upon the law makers who gave legality to the terrible curse, and to those who by their influence and votes consented to the continuance of such a human scourge, the direct road to ruin and death, for which, in his judgment, no amount of license money could possibly compensate.

Still Under Treatment.

Sidney Sykes, the boy employed by Mr. T. B. Benton, who was bitten by a supposed mad dog about ten days ago, is still at his home in Newark under treatment by a skillful physician. The doctor who is treating the boy declares that a rabid dog will drink water, but that a human being similarly affected will turn from it.

And He Had a Meter in the Store, Too.

One of the Front street merchants had his store brilliantly illuminated by electricity during all of Saturday and Sunday nights. An oversight on the part of some one in failing to shut off the lights when the store was closed, Saturday night, left the circuit open, consequently when the current was turned on, the place was lighted up.

Baptizing at the Park Avenue Church.

There were solemn and impressive baptismal services at the Park Avenue Baptist church, Sunday afternoon, when the Rev. Mr. Boswell of New York immersed eighteen colored converts who were converted during the late revival at the Mt. Olive Baptist church. Several other members, making twenty-seven in all, were admitted.

We are Eager to Hear From You!

The Eminently Respectable Citizens met again one evening last week, but as yet there has issued from the Public Library no thunderbolt of indignation nor even cyclone of protest.

Make a report, gentlemen! As the penny whistle on Somerset street, proclaims: "People are eager to hear from our citizens' committee."

"Trouble Never Comes Singly."

The above quotation is fittingly illustrated by the accident which happened to little Frankie Vail, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Vail of Park avenue, on April 22. Two days later, on April 24, Ira R. Vail, a brother of Mr. Frank Vail, died, and on the following day his father passed away. On Saturday night, Mrs. Maria L. Adams, an aunt of Mrs. Edward Vail, the latter being the daughter-in-law of the late Ira Vail, died.

But all this trouble was not unaccompanied by a ray of sunshine, for Sunday morning Mrs. Edward Vail gave birth to a boy.

Raiding the Gamblers.

Captain Grant Sunday afternoon made another raid on the gamblers who congregate in the neighborhood of Berckman street, Sundays, and play cards for money. The group consisted of men and boys, white and black, Americans and foreigners, and they selected a spot directly on the Berckman street railroad bridge, where they could see the officer as he approached. Captain Grant's appearance caused the party to scatter, some of them seeking a more congenial location outside of the city limits. The names of most of the players were taken, and a wholesale arrest may soon be expected.

Father and Son Laid at Rest.

The funeral of the late Ira Vail, who died on Thursday last, took place from the late home of the deceased, on West Front street, at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, the house being densely filled with relatives and friends of the family. The Rev. Cornelius Schenck officiated, and spoke eulogistically of Mr. Vail, alluding also to his career while in the army. Interment was made in the Friends' cemetery. The pall-bearers were Messrs Frank and Nelson Runyon, Peter Hoagland and Charles Randolph.

An hour and a half later, at four o'clock the funeral of the late Asa Vail, father of Ira, took place from the house No. 9 Peace street, where his death occurred on Friday. The Rev. Mr. Schenck also officiated at this service, and the body was buried alongside of his son in the Friends' cemetery. The pall-bearers were Messrs Wm. McD. Coriell, Theo. Fredon, John Stewart, John Berkaw, Geo. Houseman and Freeman Shotwell.

The Remarkable Success of a Business Career Started in Plainfield.

A Philadelphia paper of last Thursday, contained a large portrait of Mr. George Fenton DeRevere, who for many years was the proprietor of both the City Hotel and the Park House in this city where he began the career which has since made him a very wealthy man.

Within a day or two, Mr. DeRevere has purchased a home in this city and installed therein his family including the little child of George DeRevere, Jr., who has already shown himself, young as he yet is, to possess all the faculties of suavity, and judgment that have made his father one of the greatest of hotel men.

As the elder DeRevere numbers his friends in Plainfield by the score, a short sketch of his life will be of much interest to many readers of THE PRESS. Like most successful business men, George DeRevere started at the foot of the ladder. Something less than thirty years ago he was a struggling clerk behind a hotel desk; today he has a half interest in each the Union Square Hotel and the Hotel Dam, New York City, and is, in addition, proprietor of Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, which, though less pretentious, is in its way quite as prominent a house as either of the others.

He was born in the great metropolis on July 3, 1841, nearly a half century ago. In the Spring of 1861, when not quite twenty years of age Mr DeRevere began his hotel career. He started as an inexperienced clerk, but it was with the advantage of an able teacher—Colonel Richard French, who conducted old French's Hotel.

Here Mr. DeRevere remained for eight years. When he "graduated" in 1869, it was to accept a managerial position at the old Merchants' Hotel, on Cortlandt street. Clark & Schenck conducted the house at that time, but shortly after Mr. DeRevere's appearance there Mr. Clark retired, leaving the management divided between his former partner and Mr. DeRevere. The latter remained at the Merchants' until March 1877, when ambition impelled him to start out for himself.

Leasing the City Hotel in this city and afterward the Park House, Mr. DeRevere did what no other person had previously succeeded in doing—conducted both houses with profit during all the time he controlled them. But Plainfield was limited and Mr. DeRevere's enterprising spirit longed for a change. In 1882 he leased the Rye Beach Hotel, a fashionable Summer house on Long Island Sound, and in less than a year thereafter—January 11, 1883—he added Taylor's Hotel, at Jersey City, to his field of labor.

The latter institution was in bad shape when Mr. DeRevere assumed control, being run down about as low as it could very well get without collapsing completely. The new management, however, worked a complete change, having succeeded through persistent hard work and close attention to business in placing it upon a basis which enables Taylor's to rank favorably with most of the New York City hotels. It is the favorite center for the big politicians of New Jersey. Mr. DeRevere is still operating Taylor's Hotel and making money out of it. On August 1, 1885, he had amassed capital enough—and it required a good deal—to purchase a half interest in the Union Square Hotel and the Hotel Dam, New York City, and these two he now operates in conjunction with Andrew J. Dam. His vocabulary knows no such word as "fail."

The March of Improvement in Putnam Avenue.

A constant reader of THE PRESS sends the following account of important events stirring in Putnam avenue with the opening of Spring:

"Mr. Henry Miller is having his house, No. 38, painted in a very modest tone. It is time a certain one of his neighbors did the same thing."

"Mr. F. X. Schoonmaker is curbing his sidewalk, which reminds us there is an old lady within a few blocks who would please her husband if she did likewise to her temper."

"It is requested by many of the residents of the avenue, that Street Commissioner Meeker should jump on the neck of the man who is laying a board walk where it should be flagged. If there is no ordinance to prohibit this, there should be, say we."

Half Holiday at Pond's.

The employees of the Pond Machine Tool company in this city on Monday began work at 6:30 o'clock A. M., instead of seven o'clock as heretofore. This is done in order to give the men a half-holiday on Saturday, and in order to do so they must work through the noon hour on Saturday, the works shutting down at 1 o'clock P. M.

About the first of the present year a petition was circulated among the men, and universally signed, which was presented to the firm, requesting that the time for beginning from April 1, to November 1, be changed from 7 A. M., to 6:30 o'clock, Saturdays excepted, when the hours should be from 6:30 to 12 o'clock noon. The company granted the petition with the exception of changing the time from April 1 to May 1, and compelling the men to work until one o'clock on Saturday an hour longer than the petitioners asked for.

By so doing the employees get their half-holiday, and make a week of fifty-nine hours, only losing one hour's time in the whole week. Most of the men, however, favor shutting down at noon on Saturdays, thus losing two hours in the week.

A century of progress has not produced a remedy equal to Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh, cold in the head and hay fever. It is not a liquid or a snuff, but is perfectly safe and easily applied into the nostrils. It gives immediate relief and cures the worst cases.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Don't say there is no help for catarrh, hay fever and cold in head, since thousands testify that Ely's Cream Balm has entirely cured them. It supersedes the dangerous use of liquids and snuffs. It is easily applied into the nostrils and gives relief at once. Price 50c.

TWENTY GONDOLA COAL CARS PILED UP.

A Coal Train Breaks in Two and Then Crashes Together With Terrific Force, Blocking All Four Tracks—Three Wrecking Crews Work All Night Removing the Debris—One of the Laborers Perhaps Fatally Injured.

One of the most disastrous wrecks which has occurred on the New Jersey Central Railroad in a long time happened just West of the Berckman street bridge crossing in this city about eight o'clock, Friday night, which resulted in the piling up and total destruction of about twenty gondola or double-sided coal cars, blocking all four tracks for a time.

At that time P & R. coal engine No. 413, of the camel-back pattern, in charge of Engineer "Joe" Final, was approaching Fanwood attached to a train of 125 empty coal cars, when the train broke in two. The first section ran along until after Netherwood was passed, when the engineer slowed up so as to allow the 8:09 o'clock P. M. train from New York to deposit its passengers at the station in this city, when the two sections came together with terrific force.

The accident happened alongside of the Scott Press Works, and the wreckage was piled up fully two stories high. The two main tracks and the North siding were completely blocked, and a couple of the cars were thrown across the third track or South siding, but the latter track was soon cleared and all traffic over the road at that point was over that siding.

The work of removing the wreckage was slow, as the first wrecking crew did not arrive until three hours after the accident occurred. General Train Dispatcher Freck of Bound Brook and Assistant Train Dispatcher Cassidy were soon on the spot, and directed the movements of the workmen. About midnight the wreck train from Junction arrived, and at 1:10 o'clock the third wrecking crew came up from Elizabethport. Drill engine No 30, and Philadelphia and Reading engine No. 351, also aided materially in clearing away the wreck.

At 3 o'clock next morning the North siding was opened, but it was two hours later when the East bound main track was clear.

John Casey, the hind brakeman on the wrecked train, in conversation with a PRESS reporter said that the first section had passed the Netherwood station when the crash came. He was sitting in the caboose looking out of the window, and was thrown across the car, striking against an ice cooler, but fortunately escaped serious injury. Mr. Casey said that he hastened back to flag the passenger train and inform the engineer of the wreck. This action on his part, he claimed, saved the passenger train from being wrecked also.

Standing on the side track just opposite the Scott Press Works were several flat cars loaded with telegraph poles belonging to the railroad company. The poles were scattered promiscuously along the track and down the embankment into the adjoining field.

Head brakeman John O'Brien of the wrecked train, declared that he saw two well dressed men, one of them wearing a silk hat, board the train at Elizabeth. He further declared that when the crash came he saw one of the men hurled into the air fully thirty feet. There is nothing in the man's statement, however, as nobody was found in the ruins.

Conductor Frank Yaeger of the wrecked train told the most plausible story. He said that the train had broken in two at Bergen Point, before reaching this city, but no damage resulted. The accident last evening, he considered, was purely accidental, and the blame could therefore be attached to no one. Engineer Final, he said, was a careful man, and had been in the employ of the Philadelphia and Reading road for a long time. The train was running at the rate of ten miles an hour when the accident occurred.

The wrecking crews worked all night, but it was long after sunrise when the main line was opened for travel.

O. O. S. S.

The members of "Our Own Social Society," about thirty in number met at the home of Miss Mabel Woodruff on East Second street, Friday night, and spent a few hours pleasantly together in dancing and other social amusements. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Quite Right.

(From the New York Sun.)

The Plainfield Crescents have this year the best team since the club's existence, thanks to the efforts of C. C. Burnet and C. P. Leggett, the present managers, who are hustlers, and this is sufficient guarantee that the club will have an exceedingly prosperous season.

The P. A. T. Club.

A club has recently been organized in this city, that includes among its charter members some of the best known men-about-town in Plainfield. It is to be incorporated under the title of the "Put Away Trouble Club." Laing's Hall has been leased for a term of years, and will be furnished with billiard tables and all club appurtenances for the pleasure of the P. A. T's.

Westfield's Athletic Club.

The people of Mount Ararat are talking of a club with a brick house, library, bowling alley, tennis lawn, billiard room and possibly a ball nine.

Thursday night at a meeting of the "Nameless" bowling club, the following committee was appointed: Captain Coger, N. B. Gardner, W. G. Delemater, F. Lent and Postmaster Whittaker. They are to interview the townsmen of Westfield, and report at a subsequent meeting the feeling of the people towards the scheme.

Plainfield's Clergy Unite in Calling Evangelist Mills.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills, the young evangelist, and his choral leader Sherwood, were in this city Saturday in conference with ministers relative to the coming of Mr. Mills to Plainfield. All denominations were represented in the meeting, and a majority of the city's clergy were present.

Mr. Mills expressed a strong desire to begin a season of work in Plainfield, and informally accepted the urgent call of the ministers. He would fix no date, however, but it will probably be in October.

This city will be greatly honored, as well as benefited if he comes. Should he accept such invitations as he has already received from large cities, his time would be filled for three years ahead. It will therefore be quite a compliment to Plainfield if she is favored before so many other and larger places.

Injured at the Wreck.

Patrick Ryan, one of the Elizabethport wrecking crew, while at work clearing away the wreck near the Scott Press works at two o'clock this morning, became wedged in between two of the disabled cars and was badly injured about the body. He was carried into a tool car *and Dr. J. T. Fritts, the railroad physi*cian, was summoned. The doctor found upon examination that no bones were broken, but that the patient suffered from a severe shock, and perhaps from internal injuries. The doctor inserted morphine into the injured man's arm, which made him rest more easily.

It was at first thought that Ryan would die, and Father Stafford of St. Mary's church was sent for, arriving there soon after the doctor. Father Stafford administered the rites of the church to the injured man, and later he was transferred to a passenger train and taken to his home at Elizabethport.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

On April 1 I reopened the Riverside Stock Farm Branch Stables, at Nos. 19 and 21 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J., with a choice lot of Horses.

I shall endeavor to keep on hand at all times horses suitable for all purposes, but shall make a specialty in coach and carriage teams, roadsters, family and saddle horses.

Believing that there is a growing demand in this city for such a business, I have remodeled my stable, put in large, well lighted box stalls and other improvements and have engaged an experienced salesman, who will be in charge of the business.

By running this stable in connection with, and as a branch of the Riverside Stock Farm Stables, I shall be enabled to select and keep on hand only such horses as are especially suited for this market.

The stock will always be shown, during the week, with pleasure, and you are respectfully invited to inspect the same.

CITY DEPARTMENT

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE COUNTY OF UNION

A. DEMAREST, - - City Editor.

—Oh, for a Y. M. C. A. building

—The Olympic bowling club closed its season, last evening. It will resume in September.

—Another [illegible] flag now floats over Park avenue at its intersection with Front street.

—Arrangements are being made to organize a Band of Mercy in the Friends' First Day school.

—It is said that the local ice dealers intend to raise the price of ice during the Summer to $1.50 a hundred.

—A sporting party of young men report having caught 30 fine suckers in Cedar Brook, one evening recently.

—A truck load of furniture, in charge of Captain Hand of this city, was stuck in the mud over night at Elmora, Monday.

—Devotions in honor of the Sacred Heart will be held in St. Mary's church, Friday evening of this week at eight o'clock.

—Don't all speak at once? Who will be the man to present Bryant School with a flag? Janitor [illegible] has the pole all up and ready.

—Mr. Michael [illegible], it is said, is about to erect a frame building near the railroad station, to be used for stores and residence places.

—Mrs. A. Cairncross of Park avenue, has recently been admitted to Muhlenberg Hospital, suffering from a complication of diseases.

—A library of commentaries, books of reference, etc., is being purchased for the use of the teachers of the Crescent Avenue Sunday school.

—Mr. David Conrad, who has returned from Rhode Island, began an engagement at the works of the Pond Machine Tool Company Friday.

—The members of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein gave a ball in their hall, on Thursday, that proved to be a very enjoyable affair.

—If the young lady who took the white hat from a house on Orchard place, a day or two since, will return the same, she will receive the thanks of the owner.

—Freeholder Jones of North Plainfield reports that the total cost to Somerset county for line and interior bridges, incurred by the late freshet, will be over $11,000.

—The members of the Bachelor's club are arranging to tender their lady friends a reception, in the course of a few weeks, further details of which will be given later on.

—It is reported that Patrick Ryan, one of the Elizabeth wrecking crew who was injured at the wreck near Berckman street in this city on Friday night, died on Saturday.

—Arrangements are being made for Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., to join with Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., in a public demonstration on Memorial Day.

—The appeal of a zealous woman at one of the many meetings for prayer, on Sunday, was that the Lord would convert those who play checkers and dominoes as a pastime. What next?

—The Hillside Cemetery Association has succeeded in purchasing property between its grounds and Park avenue, so that an entrance may at once be laid out from that thoroughfare.

—The police were summoned to the railroad station on Saturday night, to eject an unruly customer from the smoking room. The man was piloted home by his friends, thus escaping arrest.

—Captain Grant Friday night discovered two boys trying to enter into Music Hall through an upper window, and he placed them under arrest. The boys were subsequently released with a reprimand.

—A man who was evidently crazy called at Officer Flanagan's house, on Liberty street, Monday night, and inquired for a man named [illegible], who, he said, he wanted to kill. The supposed lunatic escaped.

—Manager Miller of the District Messenger office, has just completed a handsome flag-staff for the North Plainfield public school. The pole is of hard wood, 73 feet long, and will be placed in position at once.

—Judging from the number of marriages which are about to take place in this city, together with those which have occurred already, the argument that marriage is a failure doesn't seem to count for much.

—A New Brunswick paper says: "Ex-City Treasurer Henry [illegible], whose mind has been failing for several years, has been taken to Plainfield, where he will abide with his daughter, Mrs. A. E. Paddock."

—The city has gained a roadway. Street Commissioner [illegible] dug up the grass in the lane from Park to Arlington avenue, and found an opened Sixth street. Two wagons can now pass one another there.

—Mr. "Tom" King, assisted by his hired man, "Dave," kindly and considerably removed from this earth, on Saturday, a pet dog belonging to Mr. J. C. Randall of Evona. The animal showed marked signs of madness.

—Friday night of this week the Borough Council will meet in regular session, when the citizens of North Plainfield expect to see a regular marshal appointed. Thomas McDonald is the man most prominently spoken of for the position.

—Police Captain Grant makes a tour through the Boulevard, late every night, to see how the police regulations are carried out in that section of the city, but it is needless to say that that part of town is well protected by the two efficient officers detailed there.

—On Monday next the annual election of company officers for the Plainfield and North Plainfield Fire Departments, will be held in the various engine and truck houses. There are several candidates for some of the offices, and the election will therefore be exciting.

—The following item appeared in the last issue of the Somerset Record: "Suit was instituted on Tuesday against John W. Schorb of Plainfield by Justice Kelly to recover costs on the [illegible] to property between Schorb and [illegible] tried by a Jury a couple of months ago."

—Neither the man who made the presentation, nor the "John," received the approval of those present Friday night, when a gentleman who had devoted his time and money to the success of the Olympic bowling team, was made the victim of an uncalled for [illegible] at the hands of some of the Club members.

A Surprise Party.

Miss Hattie Currie tendered a surprise party to her sister, Miss [illegible], at their home on Arlington avenue, on Tuesday. About thirty-five young people were present, and enjoyed a few hours in social ways.

Changes in Real Estate.

The property belonging to the Arnold estate, situated at the corner of Arlington avenue and Seventh street has been purchased by Mr. Wm. D. Kinney, of the banking firm of Messrs. [illegible], Fisk & Sons of New York. Robert Moore of the Electric Light company has also sold to Mr. Kinney some desirable lots on Arlington avenue, adjoining the Arnold estate.

PERSONALIA.

Mrs. George L. VanEmburgh is visiting her sister at Greenwood Lake, for a few weeks.

Miss Sarah Dunn of East Seventh street has returned from her Winter stay in New York city.

Dr. F. A. Kinch, Sr., of Broad street and Elm avenue, Westfield, is lying dangerously ill from old age.

Mrs. M. Duryea and daughters arrived in this city from Chicago, Tuesday, and spent the day among their many friends here. They are now stopping at the Gilsey House, New York city, where they will remain until the Netherwood opens on May 15.

Somerset County's School Tax.

The State Board of Education has apportioned the school tax in the various counties. Somerset will pay to the State $62,391.03 and will receive for school purposes $62,017.07, or $7.04 per capita. Thus it will be seen that Somerset county pays more school tax to the State than it will receive for school purposes. This county pays $90,210.57, and gets back $96,521.50.

A Quiet Home Wedding.

At the residence of the bride's parents on Manning avenue, North Plainfield, on April 23, occurred the marriage of Mr. Joseph F. Shuttise of New Brunswick and Miss Cornelia A. Goodwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Goodwin. The ceremony was performed by Mr. J. B. Cleaver in the presence of a few of the relatives and near friends of the bride and groom. The bride was the recipient of a number of handsome gifts.

Led By a Brooklyn Divine.

The Rev Edwin F. See, General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., of Brooklyn, N.Y., led the meeting of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church, on Monday. The attendance was very large.

Mr See congratulated the society upon its growth in numbers and the evidence it gave of its spiritual prosperity. He then interested the large audience present for a half hour by one of his simple but earnest appeals to accept the promises of Christ as offered in the first verse of the 55th chapter of Isaiah.

A Crazy Man at Large.

A man whose name could not be ascertained, escaped from his boarding place on Brook avenue, North Plainfield, Monday evening, and created consternation among the residents on that usually quiet thoroughfare. The man is said to be out of his mind, and that night he became violent, threatening to annihilate all with whom he came in contact.

Several of the special marshals were detailed to arrest the man, but the latter escaped before the officers arrived at the house.

Fanwood Items.

By Saturday night the county road will have had its last course of stone and then all that remains to be done is trimming up the sides in places. Then when the "connecting link" from Terrell road to Richmond street is put in good repair, there will be a drive way of over seven miles, as fine as any in the State, and a credit to the county.

Mr. Chas. Richardson's pretty and unique cottage is nearing completion, also Baker & Mead's store which he is building and which will be an acquisition to Fanwood.

A Quiet Home Wedding.

A very pretty home wedding took place at the residence of Major Rufus K. Case, on East Ninth street, Tuesday, when Miss Kitty, his daughter, was united in marriage to Mr. Dudley S. Miller, the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes officiating. The ceremony was private, only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom witnessing it. The bride was becomingly attired in lavender silk. She was given away by her father.

The usual wedding feast followed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Miller were driven to Fanwood, where they took passage on a late train, to spend their honeymoon at Elmira, N. Y., followed by the best wishes of a host of friends.

All for Carey and None for Lynch.

By the way, why don't the parlor circle politicians express some of their indignation for Officer Lynch, and salve with $15 the outrageous wounds inflicted upon him? If there is but little doubt that Carey has been treated unjustly, then there is none concerning Lynch's case.

Carey was suspended for the use of profane and obscene language, and nobody doubts his guilt. But Lynch claims to have been charged with one offence, tried on another, and suspended for something else.

The Press respectfully submits, that the "representative citizens" may be as indignant as they please, for that is simply amusing; but they should not be blamed for Carey, as that is unjust to Lynch.

Death of David C. Smith.

At the home of his son Mr. Charles H. Smith on Church street, at about seven o'clock Thursday last, occurred the death of Mr. David C. Smith, in the 85th year of his age. Mr. Smith has been a resident of this city for many years past, and has always been held in high esteem by those who knew him. Of late he has been taking care of Mr. John Chandler's unoccupied house on East Third street, sleeping there nights. That morning he arose as usual, and between five and six o'clock called at his son's residence, where he was later found sitting on a bench at the side of the house, complaining of feeling unwell. He was assisted into the house, and Dr. Griffen was immediately summoned, but the patient died soon afterward.

Mr. Smith leaves a family consisting of two sons and six daughters. Heart failure and old age is assigned as the cause of death.

Diabetes.

DR. FLINT'S REMEDY, when taken in cases of diabetes, will show the corrective effects; the restoration of a normal appetite, and in the banishment of pain. Descriptive treatise with each bottle; or address Mack Drug Co., N. Y. For sale by J. G. Miller.

CONVENTION OF LADIES LOYAL LEAGUE

Brought to a Close in This City Thursday—Officers Elected and Other Business Transacted.

The seventh annual convention of the Loyal Ladies League, Auxiliary to the G. A. R., closed its session in this city Thursday. The reports of the Department Secretary and Treasurer showed a marked gain in the numerical and financial strength of the order, which is composed of lady relatives of veterans of the Union army and of the war of the rebellion.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Department President—Mrs. Mary S. Gibson.
Senior Vice President—Mrs. Margaret A. Clift.
Junior Vice President—Mrs. Jane A. Van Syckle.
Secretary—Mrs. Emma J. Cory.
Treasurer—Miss Laura L. Brady.
Chaplain—Mrs. Mary J. Beers.
Inspectress—Mrs. Sarah M. Jolly.
Advisory Council—Mrs. L. A. Houghton, Mrs. V. F. Brady and Miss Emma Cory.

These officers were installed at the close of the convention by Past Department President, Mrs. Col. C. H. Houghton of Metuchen.

An impressive feature of the convention, was the draped vacant chair of the late Mrs. Emily A. Clarkson of this city, who was a member of the State Department, and whose death was feelingly alluded to in the opening address of the Department President.

Lecture by the Rev. Chas. B. Mitchell.

The Rev. Chas. B. Mitchell will lecture under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., at Reform Hall, Tuesday, May 13, at eight o'clock. The proceeds of the lecture will be devoted to the Y. M. C. A. building fund.

Testing the Wells.

The Water Works company have started up their engine, and will continue to pump water from the wells at Netherwood, for a few days. The supply of water is being noted and thus far it has been entirely satisfactory.

Brief, but Oh!

At the 114th meeting of a local C. L. S. C., to be held at the home of Miss Hasbrouck, 9 East Fifth street, next Wednesday evening, the following programme will be carried out:

Constantine	Miss Hasbrouck.
The Historians	Mr. Sperry.
The Renaissance	Miss C. Randolph.
Sight	Mrs. Newell.

The Record Broken.

The Press recently called attention to the rapid growth of the male population, both in this city and North Plainfield, adding that within a certain period not a single female birth had been recorded. The record has been broken, however, by the arrival of a female heir, born to Mr. and Mrs. James Taylor of West Seventh street, on Sunday, April 20.

Death of Mr. Asa Vail.

The death is announced of Mr. Asa Vail, another of the old and respected residents of this city, which occurred at his home on Peace street at 4:30 o'clock on Friday, from softening of the brain. The deceased was 76 years of age, and has been ailing for a long time, being unconscious most of the time for the past two weeks. Mr. Vail was a hatter by trade. He leaves a wife, one son and two daughters. One son died Thursday.

Bishop Vincent Caned.

Bishop John H. Vincent, Chancellor of the Chautauqua University, was given an enthusiastic reception by Temple College at Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, on Monday evening. The Rev Russell H Conwell, President of the College, presided. Addresses were made by the Bishop, Prof. MacAlister, and Robert J. Burdett. Many other prominent persons were present. Bishop Vincent was presented with a gold-headed cane by the students.

Some Queries for North Plainfield's Committee.

To the Editor of The Press:—We desire to ask the Town Committee of North Plainfield Township the following questions through your most valuable paper.

Why are our public roads neglected so long, and why are our road overseers not allowed to go to work as soon as elected? Why do they not have more crushed stone to use on the roads, and why is there not a certain amount of money allotted to each district for crushed stone? Why are the sections of certain districts (which have been made good by private individuals and taxpayers at their own expense) allowed to go to ruin, when a small sum spent in repairs will keep them good for years?

Answers to the foregoing questions are earnestly requested and will be thankfully received by Several Taxpayers.

Young People's Sociable.

A sociable was held in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church, Thursday, under the auspices of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. The attendance was not large, but an enjoyable time was had by those who participated.

The programme included two recitations by Miss Allen, a violin solo by Mr. Andrew Carpenter, accompanied on the piano by Miss Lottie Connett, and a solo by Miss Fannie Mattison, accompanied by her sister, Miss Nettie.

Mr. H. J. Martin officiated as Master of ceremonies. During the evening refreshments were served.

The success of the entertainment is largely due to the following ladies who constituted the Committee of Arrangements: Miss Emma Gillen, Miss Grace Nevius, Miss Ella Gardner and Mrs. Wm. Oliver.

The Monday Afternoon Club Have an Evening.

About 200 society people were favored last evening, by being present at the Seminary, upon the occasion of an entertainment arranged by a committee of ladies of the Monday Afternoon Club, and carried out to the full extent of success and gratification.

The main feature of the evening was the performance of Mr. Charles Marsh Rea's comedietta, "The Fair Encounter." Mrs. Charles Brooks interpreted the character of Lady Clara St. John with remarkable skill and ability, and Mrs. Charles Hart as Mrs. Celia Greville was equally as perfect in the rendition of her part. The play was most beautifully placed upon the stage. The decorations of palms and flowers were from the conservatories of Mrs. J. K. Myers and Mrs. C. D. Wadsworth, and were elaborate. Other members of the club contributed to the setting, rich rugs and tapestries, and costly furniture.

Miss Marsh and Miss May each played. Miss Marsh had her own piano there for the occasion, and her playing of Chopin's Ballade in A flat, was the one particular matter of general commendation. She never deserved the universal praise more. Mrs. J. K. Myers' singing of selections by DeKoven and Trotere, was also warmly applauded. At the close of the programme, there was a reception and supper was served.

Bad Habits.

Habitual disease, and other dangerous and painful affections, may be cured by the use of HAMBURG FIGS, a fruit laxative which even children like. 25 cents. Dose, one fig. Mack Drug Co., N. Y. For sale by J. G. Miller.

—Italians are becoming quite numerous in this city.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets, or Anti-bilious Granules, have no equals. 25 cents a vial; one a dose. Cures headache, biliousness and indigestion.

THE ORATORICAL CONTEST.

Reform Hall Crowded Thursday Night With An Appreciative Audience. Recitations, Music and a Collation—Awarding the Prize.

Reform Hall was crowded to the doors, on Thursday, by an appreciative audience, gathered there upon invitation, to listen to the grand oratorical contest by gold medal winners, arranged by and given under the auspices of the "Woman's Temperance Aid Society" of this city.

The platform was tastefully and artistically adorned with flowers in full bloom, the same being arranged by Mrs. J. Rounsaville. Mrs. C. F. Woodbury, General Superintendent of "medal contests," presided. The contestants were: Misses Annie Wensting, Grace M. Taylor, Sadie E. Walkley, Kittie Kelsey, Marguerite Cohen, and Carrie Patterson. The Board of Judges consisted of the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, the Rev. T. L. Murphy and the Rev. W. R. Richards.

Judge Nathan Harper made a few preliminary remarks, after which Miss M. A. Maxson rendered a piano solo, and the Rev. E. M. Rodman led in prayer. The audience joined in singing "Coronation," and the chairman made the introductory address. She said among other things that the first gold medal contest was held in New York city on April 19, 1886, and that during the first two years over one thousand medals were awarded. During March last 1,155 medals were awarded in prize contests, showing a marked increase in the temperance movement in the interest of which the contests are given.

The first and second recitals, "The new declaration of independence" and "What is Heroism?" were clearly and distinctly rendered, and were followed by a solo by Miss K. D. Gion.

The third and fourth recitals, "An Angel in a Saloon" and "Home Versus Saloon" were remarkably well delivered, and elicited loud applause. Miss L. L. French followed with a piano solo, after which the two concluding recitals in the contest, "The duty of the Hour," and "The Surrender," were given.

The judges then retired to decide upon the merits of the several contestants, and the Rev. C. B. Mitchell made a witty appeal for financial aid. After a piano solo by Miss M. M. Lowrie, the Rev. Dr. Lewis, as Chairman of the Board of Judges, announced the winner. He said that Nos. 4, 5 and 6 bore a close relationship to each other, but the committee were unanimous in deciding upon No. 5 as the winner of the prize—Miss Kitty Kelsey. Honorable mention was also made of Nos. 4 and 6, Miss Annie Wensting and Miss Carrie Patterson. The Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut then awarded the prize.

A dialogue, "Mr and Mrs. Tipple," by Miss Annie Wensting and Miss Kitty Kelsey, caused much laughter, and a solo by Miss A. E. Green, which followed, brought forth loud and prolonged applause.

The remainder of the programme included recitations by Miss Odell and Miss Kittie B. Ferris, and the pronouncing of the benediction.

On the whole the entertainment was a perfect success, and at its close those who participated were tendered a collation in the basement.

AN EVENT IN COLORED CIRCLES.

The Choral Society of Mt. Olive Church Give a Concert Dressed in Their Best Suits of Clothes.

There was a vocal and instrumental concert and entertainment, on Thursday, at the Mount Olive church, given by the colored Baptists and their friends. It was attended by a very large audience, who had a very large time. At the close of the programme, a cake revelry was held in the basement and thoroughly enjoyed by all. Seventy-five dollars was the financial result above all expenses.

The entertainment opened with a march led by Master Harry Kingsland. Then Miss Lydia Laine sang "Her Bright Smiles," in brown silk trimmed with nibil green. Miss Laura Robinson, attired in a handsome embroidered dress, trimmed with pink ribbon and flowers, played a divine waltz on the piano forte; and was followed by Miss Emma Robinson, in pink silk, who captivated all the young men by her singing of that passionate conundrum, "If a body kiss a body?"

Mrs. William Fisher, who was also dressed in a very handsome pink covered with white lace, sang one of the new songs, "When the Swallows Homeward Fly." A duett by the Misses Green, "Come where the Lilies Grow," was well received. Miss Annie wore black silk, and Miss Josephine white lace. The contrast was most charming.

Other vocalists and instrumentalists were: Miss Ella Doyle in green silk; Miss Amy Manning in blue plush; Mrs. John Randolph in garnet silk; Miss Alice Maynard in a combination suit of light green cashmere, and light green surah; Miss Martin in black silk and black lace; and Messrs Vermeule, Alfred White and Horatio Randolph.

Mr. Charles Mann once more favored the public with his celebrated solo: "The Song That Reached My Heart." He was dressed in his best suit of clothes. There was a recitation by Miss Pettiford, "The Cowboy," dressed in white cashmere with white satin reveres and gores. Mrs. Mahew conducted the affair which was a great success. She wore lavender satin and black lace. The stage manager was Mr. Jones, assisted by Messrs Fisher and Barbor.

At the close of the concert, the grand march again led by Master Harry Kingsland, passed down stairs where everyone was welcomed by Mrs. Robinson, the chairman of the committee. A bountiful supper was provided.

The Moore Will Case.

The taking of testimony in the contested will case of the late William Moore, the railroad contractor, of this city, which has dragged along wearily for some months in the Union County Orphans' Court was brought to a close Wednesday.

The contestant is the only son of the deceased contractor. He filed a caveat against admitting the will to probate. The issue was badly complicated by the sudden death of Mrs. Moore, who expired on the day of her husband's funeral. He had bequeathed to her in his will the bulk of his property.

Owners of Dogs Should Take Warning.

Perhaps there is no section either in this city or North Plainfield that is more infested with dogs than Washington Park. It seems to be quite proper over there for nearly every family to harbor one or more dogs, many of them being of a very vicious nature. Some of the owners of canines have due respect for human beings, while others allow their dogs to roam about the streets at night, growling and snapping at whoever comes in contact with them.

One dangerous and vicious-looking brute took possession of Washington avenue, near the bridge, Tuesday night, and kept continually growling at people as they passed along that thoroughfare on the way to or from their homes. Any man would have been justified in shooting the brute on the spot, which fate some of these dogs are sure to meet, if their owners persist in allowing them to roam around at night.

In the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, you need have no fear of arsenical poison, this medicine being entirely free from all dangerous drugs. Its powerful effects are due to the skillful combination of the best ingredients, and hence no ill results ever follow its use.

"AN EXTRAORDINARY SHOWING."

The Construction Company Report a Supply of Water Beyond Reckoning and Very Pure.

Upon the completion of six of the wells as a beginning of the supply for the Water Works company of Plainfield, The Press gave the result of a preliminary test, and announced that everything was entirely satisfactory. These wells were driven by the Hydraulic Tube Well Construction Co., under contract, and four additional ones are now almost finished. Another test will then be made, although twenty of the wells are to be driven to complete the plant.

As it will be very interesting and gratifying reading to everybody in Plainfield, The Press is pleased to be able to give a synopsis of the official report of the Construction company upon the preliminary test made of only the first six wells. This report goes on to say:

"Regarding the results of the wells we have sunk, we would say that we have six wells connected to a temporary centrifugal pump and have pumped from them at least one thousand (1,000) gallons of water per minute for several hours at a time without perceptibly lowering the water levels in the wells. We consider this an extraordinary good showing, as in all our previous experience when we were pumping such a quantity of water, the levels began to fall from the start."

The contractors are now putting down the wells for the second "gang," and as soon as down they will be connected to a temporary pump, and both "gangs" tested together day and night for several days, which will fully determine the question of quantity and quality of the water to be determined. "But," say the Construction company, "from the result so far obtained, we are fully of the belief that a much larger quantity of water than that required—viz: four million (4,000,000) gallons per day—can be obtained in the locality. The water-bearing stratum being 30 feet below a bed of very tough clay and hard-pan, proves in our minds that the water must be of very pure quality."

WHO CAN ENLIGHTEN THE MANY CURIOUS.

Why Do Not the People Patronize Plainfield's Music Hall?

The Press solicits answers to the question—"Why is it that first-class entertainments in Music Hall are not better patronized?"

Let's hear any one or various reasons from the people, so that they may be published and remedy, if possible, the cause.

But It's Coming.

The Rahway papers in speaking of Wiegand, Lufbery and Martin of the Crescent League's ball team, say: "The players who left the Rahways to go to Plainfield, are not meeting with the success they expected."

Paying Sick Benefits.

Plainfield Lodge No. 105, Order of Tonti, met in Odd Fellows Hall, in the new Hand building, on Thursday, with President W. B. Codington in the chair. Secretary J. C. Randall was also at his post of duty. The main business transacted was the auditing and payment of a claim of Mr. J. A. Hubbard for $50, a two weeks' sick benefit.

A $35,000 Church for Scotch Plains.

The New Brunswick Home News in an editorial, yesterday, says:

"The money left by miser Lee to the Scotch Plains Baptist church is to be used in erecting there a handsome place of worship, to cost $35,000. That is a good deal of money to expend for a village church, which will be occupied for a few hours about once a week."

Adjusting the Losses.

The loss occasioned by the recent fire in Mr. John S. Johnson's house on Park avenue, recently, has been adjusted, the Phoenix company of Brooklyn, allowing the owner $500.

Thursday the German American Insurance Company of New York, through Messrs J. C. Pope & Co., the agents in this city, settled the claim of Mr. Chas. Smith, for the loss he sustained by the fire in his home some days since. The company allowed him between $450 and $500.

What Some Ananias Circulates Regarding Plainfield.

The following from the New Brunswick Home News shows how even so otherwise a sensible paper can be imposed on. The item is a "special" despatch, but probably from some monumental liar on a telephone:

PLAINFIELD, April 16, (Special)—A largely attended meeting of prominent citizens was held in Liberty Hall last evening to take action on the removal of Chief of Police Carey. It was decided to prosecute the Police Board for conspiracy, both criminal and by civil suit, and also to take action to prevent the city's suffering from the alleged illegal removal. Eminent counsel have been engaged to prepare the case.

Save Your Hair

By a timely use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. This preparation has no equal as a dressing. It keeps the scalp clean, cool, and healthy, and preserves the color, fullness, and beauty of the hair.

"I was rapidly becoming bald and gray; but after using two or three bottles of Ayer's Hair Vigor my hair grew thick and glossy and the original color was restored."—Melvin Aldrich, Canaan Centre, N. H.

"Some time ago I lost all my hair in consequence of measles. After due waiting, no new growth appeared. I then used Ayer's Hair Vigor and my hair grew Thick and Strong.

It has apparently come to stay. The Vigor is evidently a great aid to nature."—J. B. Williams, Floresville, Texas.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past four or five years and find it a most satisfactory dressing for the hair. It is all I could desire, being harmless, causing the hair to retain its natural color, and requiring but a small quantity to render the hair easy to arrange."—Mrs. M. A. Bailey, 9 Charles street, Haverhill, Mass.

"I have been using Ayer's Hair Vigor for several years, and believe that it has caused my hair to retain its natural color."—Mrs. H. J. King, Dealer in Dry Goods, &c., Bishopville, Md.

Plainfield the Healthiest City in This Section.

The annual report of the health board of this State is just out, and there is a good deal of valuable information in it. It shows that during last year there were 26,543 deaths in the State, 15,726 marriages, and 29,099 births. Camden leads all the counties in the State in the number of its weddings. Pennsylvania couples, driven across the line by the stringent marriage laws of that State, brought the total of weddings solemnized by Camden ministers up to 4,655.

Comparisons of the death rates in the cities show that outside of Atlantic City, where invalids swell the total beyond normal proportions, Harrison, in the Passaic river section of Hudson county, is the most unhealthy city in the State. The rate there was 26.65, that of Newark 25.59, Hoboken's was 25.57, Orange's 22.85, Jersey City's 22.66.

Plainfield's death rate is only 16.97, while Rahway's is 19.20, and Elizabeth's and New Brunswick's is 20.18.

HOW CAN THE LONG BE THE SHORT ?

A line may be a very long one and yet be the shortest between given points. For instance, the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway has over 3,000 miles of road; magnificently equipped and managed, it is one of the greatest railway systems of this country; for the same reasons it is the traveler's favorite to all points in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana. It is the only line to Great Falls, the future manufacturing center of the Northwest; to the fertile free lands of the Milk River Valley; and offers a choice of three routes to the Coast. Still it is the shortest line between St. Paul, Minneapolis, Fargo, Winnipeg, Crookston, Moorhead, Casselton, Glyndon, Grafton, Fergus Falls, Wahpeton, Devils Lake and Butte City. It is the best route to Alaska, China and Japan; and the journey to the Pacific coast, Vancouver, Tacoma, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco will be remembered as the delight of a life-time once made through the wonderful scenery of the Manitoba-Pacific Route. To fish and hunt; to view the magnificence of nature; to revive the spirit; restore the body; to realize the dream of the home seeker, the gold-seeker, the toiler, or the capitalist, visit the country reached by the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway. Write to F. I. Whitney, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn., for maps, books and guides. If you want a free farm in a lovely land write for the "Great Reservation" read it and resolve to accept the golden

COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY.

THE American consumption of iron and steel is about [illegible] tons per year.

Wood pulp is now being used as the basis of a plastic compound to serve as a substitute for mortar in covering and finishing walls.

Steel is likely to supplant cast-iron in the construction of water-pipes, their superiority being in respect to lightness and strength.

THERE are a dozen factories in America kept busy night and day making genuine old spoons, knives and forks for idiotic American tourists.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has decided to experiment in the manufacture of its own ice, about [illegible] tons of which are consumed yearly.

In Europe iron slag is cast into blocks and used for street pavements and in house-building. In Cleveland there is a factory which converts it into mineral wool. It is a mass of very fine fibers filled with glassy particles. It is soft, pliant and [illegible].

A process of sterilizing milk has recently been perfected, and by it milk can be kept for years without losing its freshness or failing to produce cream or butter. It has been found of great use on steamers, and, as it is claimed all danger of infection is avoided, it will prove useful in the nursery and kitchen. The results are accomplished by putting fresh milk in cans which are hermetically sealed, then heated and cooled alternately, until the germs are destroyed.

Figures gathered by State officials throughout the South show that during the past ten years the increase of manufacturing establishments in that section is [illegible] per cent.; the increase in capital so invested, [illegible] per cent., and the increase in the value of the product is [illegible] per cent. The total number of manufacturing establishments now existing in the South is [illegible], representing an invested capital of [illegible] and a product valued at [illegible].

A new mill for the manufacture of paper from moss has been recently established in Sweden. Paper of different thickness and pasteboard made of it have already been shown, the latter even in sheets three-quarters of an inch thick. It is as hard as wood and can be easily painted and polished. It has all the good qualities, but none of the defects, of wood. The pasteboard can be used for door and window frames, architectural ornaments and all kinds of furniture.

STATISTICS recently tabulated show that there was consumed during the past year of clay products in building in twelve of the leading cities, the following number of brick: New York City, [illegible]; Chicago, [illegible]; Philadelphia, [illegible]; Boston, [illegible]; St. Louis, [illegible]; Washington, [illegible]; Cincinnati, [illegible]; Cleveland, [illegible]; Omaha, [illegible]; Pittsburgh, [illegible]; New Orleans, [illegible]; Indianapolis, [illegible]; making a total for these cities of [illegible], which fairly hints at the enormous consumption in the country at large.

IN DISTANT DOMAINS.

LAST year one American and two German ladies were married to Japanese at Tokio.

A drove of forty-seven elephants were recently captured in a single drive in the Garo Hills in India.

GERMANY is the only civilized country in the world wherein murderers are still beheaded with an axe or sword.

THE project of tunneling the English Channel is still cherished by a company of British capitalists, who have expended [illegible] on experimental works which are not yet completed.

THE kangaroo is being successfully propagated in England, and there is some likelihood of this curious animal taking its place among the [illegible] familiar domestic animals of that country.

A VIENNA baker is advertising his business by putting a gold ducat in one loaf out of every thousand that he bakes. The people in the poor suburb where his shop is situated fairly fight to buy the loaves.

THE newest freak of Paris fashion is a looking-glass stand for the [illegible], so that the ladies can see how they look at the table. The Princess of Monaco recently secured four dozen of these in repoussé silver of exquisite workmanship. The fashion comes from Russia.

THE civil commissioner of Johannesburg, South Africa, has ordered that only the Dutch language shall be talked in his court, and that the English, who compose the bulk of the population, when they appear before him must talk Dutch or hire an interpreter.

THE circulation of counterfeit money in Italy was never so enormous and general as at the present time; the authorities are kept constantly on the track of the manufacturers of it, though an immense number of counterfeiters have been successfully lodged in the galleys at hard labor for life.

IT is said that a large proportion of the plumes worn by the ladies who attend the Queen's drawing-rooms are hired from a shop which makes a business of renting out plumes. The feathers are worth from four to ten dollars, and the rent of them is two dollars and fifty cents for each occasion.

FIVE little Italian boys were recently sold by their parents to a stranger for "some olive oil and ten francs apiece." They were about to be taken to Hamburg and shipped to different parts of the world [illegible] while the police descended on the party [illegible]. The boys were all returned to their homes.

IN Turkey the house in which a man lives cannot be seized for debt, and sufficient land must be left him to serve for his support. The homestead is inviolable. The creditors must even provide the debtor with some humble dwelling if the land forfeited to them has none sufficient for his needs. [illegible] "I have nothing in the world but one little house," and, after the heavy winter snows, there are [illegible] entreaties to repair a roof which has fallen in.

SCIENTIFIC SELECTIONS.

IT has been found that steel ships become magnetized [illegible], and this has, in some instances, greatly affected the needle. The magnetism seems to be acquired during building.

MICA is now being used as an electrical insulator, while preparations of it are said to form an excellent lubricant for machinery, so that the field of use for this material—hitherto chiefly used for stove doors—is rapidly extending.

A NEW process for burning coal without smoke has lately been discovered. It consists in sprinkling water containing a special preparation of [illegible] over the coal, and the result is that there is no smoke and the glow is as intense as [illegible].

A FURTHER step toward the artificial production of the diamond has been made by passing an electric current through carbon electrodes in a cell containing a fine white sand and [illegible], the whole being under considerable pressure.

THE depth of a sea about six miles deep is reduced 100 feet by compression. If the ocean were incompressible the level of the surface would be 116 feet higher than it is at present, and about 2,000,000 square miles of land would be submerged.

SIR JAMES HECTOR, New Zealand's foremost scientist, [illegible]

THE medicinal virtues of the apple are being extolled on all sides in Europe. It is said to neutralize the evil effects of eating too much meat, and the German chemists state that it is richer than any other fruit or vegetable in phosphorus, an element that is useful in renewing the essential nervous matter of the brain and spinal cord.

A RUSSIAN scientist has by experiment found that fifty per cent. of the solar heat is absorbed by the atmosphere, and only [illegible] per cent. reaches the soil. This figure rises in October to [illegible] per cent. and sinks to [illegible] per cent. in January and February. [illegible]

IF you are full of affectation and pretense, your voice proclaims it. If you are full of honesty and strength of purpose, your voice proclaims it. If you are cold, and calm and firm, and consistent, or fickle, and foolish, and deceptive, your voice will be equally truth-telling. You can not wear a mask without its being known that you are wearing one. You can not change your voice from a natural to an unnatural one without its being known that you are doing so.

THE VOICES OF NATURE.

DR. TALMAGE DECLARES THEM ARTICULATE AND HARMONIOUS.

The Academy of Music Thronged to Hear the Brooklyn Divine Preach a Sermon Appropriate to the Season of the Year. [illegible] the Text.

BROOKLYN, April [illegible].—The attraction of the parks in their early spring time garb, which [illegible], does not diminish the crowd which pours into the Academy of Music to hear the eloquent preacher. This morning the great edifice was thronged, as usual, as soon as the doors were opened. After the reading of an appropriate passage of Scripture and the singing of the hymn, "Glory to God on High," Dr. Talmage announced as his text Isa. lx, 13: "The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary." Following is his sermon in full:

THE GLORY OF LEBANON.

On our way from Damascus we saw the [illegible] of Lebanon white with snow, and the [illegible] from which the cedars were hewn [illegible] to Joppa, and then again drawn by oxen up to Jerusalem to build Solomon's temple. Those mighty trees in my text are called the "glory of Lebanon." Inanimate nature felt the effects of the first transgression. When Eve touched the forbidden tree [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] who went to country came back to be fool.

After what I myself saw during my recent absence, I conclude that any one who can go through the Holy Land and remain an unbeliever is either a bad man or an imbecile. God employed men to write the Bible, but he took many of the same truths which they recorded and with his own almighty hand he graved them into the rocks and drove them down into dismal depths, and, as documents are put in the corner stone of a temple, so in the very foundation of the earth he folded up and placed the records of heavenly truth. The earth's corner stone was laid, like that of other sacred edifices, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. The author of revelation, standing among the great strata, looked upon Moses and said, "Let us record for future ages the world's history; you write it there on papyrus; I will write it here on the bowlders."

THE STATELY SYCAMORE.

Again, nature offers an invaluable contribution to Christianity by the illustration she makes of divine truth. The inspired writers seized upon the advantages offered by the natural world. Trees and rivers and clouds and rocks broke forth into holy and enthusiastic utterance. Would Christ set forth the strength of faith, he points to the sycamore, whose roots spread out, and strike down, and clinch themselves amid great depths of earth, and he said that faith was strong enough to tear that up by the roots.

At Hawarden, England, Mr. Gladstone, while showing me his trees during a prolonged walk through his magnificent park, pointed out a sycamore, and with a wave of the hand said: "In your visit to the Holy Land did you see any sycamore more impressive than that?" I confessed that I had not. Its branches were not more remarkable than its roots. It was to such a tree as that Jesus pointed when he would illustrate the power of faith. "Ye might say unto this sycamore tree, 'Be thou plucked up by the root and be thou cast into the sea,' and it would obey you." One reason why Christ has fascinated the world as no other teacher is because instead of using severe argument he was always telling how something in the spiritual world was like unto something in the natural world. Oh, those wonderful "likes" of our Lord! Like a grain of mustard seed. Like a treasure hid in a field. Like a merchant seeking goodly pearls. Like unto a net that was cast into the sea. Like unto a householder.

EXPRESSIVE SIMILES.

Would Christ teach the precision with which he looks after you, he says he counts the hairs of your head. Well, that is a long and tedious count if the head have the average endowment. It has been found that if the hairs of the head be black there are about 120,000, or if they be flaxen there are about 140,000. But God knows the exact number: "The hairs of your head are all numbered." Would Christ impress us with the divine watchfulness and care, he speaks of the sparrows that were a nuisance in those times. They were caught by the thousands in the net. They were thin and scrawny and had comparatively no meat on their bones. They seemed almost valueless, whether living or dead. Now, argues Christ, if my Father takes care of them, will he not take care of you? Christ would have the Christian, despondent over his slowness of religious development, go to his corn field for a lesson. He watches first the green shoot pressing up through the clods, gradually strengthening into a stalk, and last of all the husk swelling out with the pressure of the corn: "First the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear."

Would David set forth the freshness and beauty of genuine Christian character, he sees an eagle starting from its nest just after the molting season, its old feathers shed, and its wings and breast decked with new down and plumes, its body as finely feathered as that of her young ones just beginning to try the speed of their wings. Thus rejuvenated and replumed is the Christian's faith and hope, by every season of communion with God. "Thy youth is renewed like the eagle's." Would Solomon represent the annoyance of a contentious woman's tongue, he points to a leakage in the top of his house or tent, where, throughout the stormy day, the water comes through, falling upon the floor—drip! drip! drip! And he says: "A continual dropping in a very rainy day and a contentious woman are alike."

Would Christ set forth the character of those who make great profession of piety, but have no fruit, he compares them to barren fig trees, which have very large and showy leaves, and nothing but leaves. Would Job illustrate deceitful friendships, he speaks of brooks in those climes, that wind about in different directions, and dry up when you want to drink out of them: "My brethren have dealt deceitfully as a brook, and as the stream of brooks they pass away." David when he would impress us with the despondency into which he had sunk, compares it to a quagmire of those regions, through which he had doubtless sometimes tried to walk, but sank in up to his neck, and he cried: "I sink in deep mire where there is no standing." Would Habakkuk set forth the capacity which God gives the good man to walk safely amid the wildest perils, he points to the wild animal called the hind walking over slippery rocks, and leaping from wild crag to wild crag, by the peculiar make of its hoofs able safely to sustain itself in the most dangerous places: "The Lord God is my strength, and he will make my feet like hind's feet."

ALL NATURE PAYS TRIBUTE.

Job makes all natural objects pay tribute to the royalty of his book. As you go through some chapters of Job you feel as if it were a bright spring morning, and, as you see the glittering drops from the grass under your feet, you say with that patriarch, "Who hath begotten the drops of the dew?" And now, as you read on, you seem in the silent midnight to behold the waving of a great light upon your path, and you look up to find it the aurora borealis, which Job described so long ago as "the bright light in the clouds and the splendor that cometh out of the north." As you read on, there is darkness hurtling in the heavens, and the showers break loose till the birds fly for hiding places and the mountain torrents in red fury foam over the rocky shelving; and with the same poet, you exclaim, "Who can number the clouds in wisdom, or who can stay the bottles of heaven?" As you read on, you feel yourself coming in frosty climes, and, in fancy, wading through the snow, you say, with that same inspired writer, "Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow?" And while the sharp sleet drives in your face, and the hail stings your cheek, you quote him again: "Hast thou seen the treasures of the hail?" In the Psalmist's writings I hear the voices of the sea: "Deep calleth unto deep;" and the roar of forests: "The Lord shaketh the wilderness of Kadesh;" and the loud peal of the black tempest: "The God of glory thundereth;" and the rustle of the long silk on the well filled husks: "The valleys are covered with corn;" and the cry of wild beasts: "The young lions roar after their prey;" the hum of palm trees and cedars: "The righteous shall flourish like a palm tree, he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon;" the sough of wings and the swirl of fins: "Dominion over the fowl of the air and the fish of the sea."

The truths of the gospel might have been presented in technical terms, and by the means of dry definitions, but under them the world would not have listened or felt. How could the safety of trusting upon Christ have been presented, were it not the figure of a rock? How could the gladdening effect of the gospel have been set forth, had not Zechariah thought of the dawn of the morning, exclaiming: "The day spring from on high hath visited us to give light to them that sit in darkness?" How could the soul's intense longing for Christ have been presented so well as by the incident of natural hunger and natural thirst? As the lake gathers into its bosom the shadow of hills around, and the gleam of stars above, so, in these great floods of divine truth, all objects in nature are grandly reflected. We walk forth in the spring time, and everything breathes of the Resurrection. Bright blossoms and springing grass speak to us of the coming up of those whom we have loved, when in the white robes of their joy and coronation they shall appear.

And when in the autumn of the year nature preaches thousands of funeral sermons from the text, "We all do fade as a leaf," and scatters her elegies in our path, we cannot help but think of sickness and the tomb. Even winter, "being dead, yet speaketh." The world will not be argued into the right. It will be tenderly illustrated into the right. Tell them what religion is like. When the mother tried to tell her dying child what heaven was, she compared it to light. "But that hurts my eyes," said the dying girl. Then the mother compared heaven to music. "But any sound hurts me; I am so weak," said the dying child. Then she was told that heaven was like mother's arms. "Oh, take me there!" she said. "If it is like mother's arms, take me there!" The appropriate simile had been found at last.

NATURE'S LAWS DEFEND THE CHRISTIAN.

Another contribution which the natural world is making to the kingdom of Christ is the defense and aid which the elements are compelled to give to the Christian personally. There is no law in nature but is sworn for the Christian's defense. In Job this thought is presented in a bargain made between the inanimate creation and the righteous man: "Thou shalt be in league with the stones of the field." What a grand thought that the lightnings, and the tempests, and the hail, and the frosts, which are the enemies of unrighteousness, are all marshaled as the Christian's bodyguard. They fight for him. They strike with an arm of fire or clutch with their fingers of ice. Everlasting peace is declared between the fiercest elements of nature and the good man. They may in their fury seem to be indiscriminate, smiting down the righteous with the wicked, yet they cannot damage the Christian's soul, although they may darken his body. The wintry blast that howls about your dwelling, you may call your brother, and the south wind coming up on a June day by way of a flower garden, you may call your sister. Though so mighty in circumference and diameter, the sun and the moon have a special charge concerning you. "The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night." Elements and forces hidden in the earth are now harnessed and at work in producing for you food and clothing. Some grain field that you never saw presented you this day with your morning meal. The great earth and the heavens are the busy loom at work for you; and shooting light, and silvery stream, and sharp lightning are only woven threads in the great loom, with God's foot on the shuttle. The same spirit that converted your soul has also converted the elements from enmity toward you into invisible friendship, and farthest star and deepest cavern, regions of everlasting cold as well as climes of eternal summer, all have a mission of good, direct or indirect, for your spirit.

THE STUDY OF NATURE ASSISTS RELIGIOUS THOUGHTS.

Now I infer from this that the study of natural objects will increase our religious knowledge. If David and Job and John and Paul could not afford to let go without observation one passing cloud, or rift of snow, or spring blossom, you cannot afford to let them go without study. Men and women of God most eminent in all ages for faith and zeal indulged in such observations—Paysons and Baxter and Doddridge and Hannah More. That man is not worthy the name of Christian who saunters listlessly among these magnificent disclosures of divine power around, beneath and above us, stupid and uninstructed.

They are not worthy to live in a desert, for that has its fountains and palm trees; nor in regions of everlasting ice, for even there the stars kindle their lights, and auroras flash, and huge icebergs shiver in the morning light, and God's power sits upon them as upon a great white throne. Yet there are Christians in the church who look upon all such tendencies of mind and heart as soft sentimentalism, and because they believe this printed revelation of God are content to be infidels in regard to all that has been written in this great book of the universe, written in letters of stars, in paragraphs of constellations, and illustrated with sunset and thunder cloud and spring morning.

HONORABLE POSITION OF THE CHRISTIAN.

I infer, also, the transcendent importance of Christ's religion. Nothing is so far down, and nothing is so high up, and nothing so far out but God makes it pay tax to the Christian religion. If snow and tempest and dragon are expected to praise God, suppose you he expects no homage from your soul? When God has written his truth upon everything around you, suppose you he did not mean you to open your eyes and read it?

Finally, I learn from this subject what an honorable position the Christian occupies when nothing is so great and glorious in nature but it is made to edify, defend and instruct him. Hold up your heads, sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty, that I may see how you bear your honors. Though now you may think yourself unbefriended, this spring's soft wind, and next summer's harvest of barley, and next autumn's glowing fruits, and next winter's storms, all seasons, all elements, zephyr and euroclydon, rose's breath and thundercloud, gleaming light and thick darkness, are sworn to defend you, and cohorts of angels would fly to deliver you from peril, and the great God would unsheath his sword and arm the universe in your cause rather than that harm should touch you with one of its lightest fingers. "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from this time forth for evermore."

Oh for more sympathy with the natural world, and then we should always have a Bible open before us, and we could take a lesson from the most fleeting circumstances, as when a storm came down upon England Charles Wesley sat in a room watching it through an open window, and, frightened by the lightning and the thunder, a little bird flew in and nestled in the bosom of the sacred poet, and, as he gently stroked it and felt the wild beating of its heart, he turned to his desk and wrote that hymn which will be sung while the world lasts:

Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly,
While the billows near me roll,
While the tempest still is high;
Hide me, O my Saviour, hide,
Till the storm of life be past,
Safe into the haven guide,
O receive my soul at last.

Dr. Mary Walker.

"How did I happen to take up the dress reform costume?" said Dr. Mary Walker the other day; "I will tell you. When I was a little girl I became interested in a lot of medical books which my father had in the house. That was at Oswego, N. Y., fifty years ago. My father had once studied medicine, though he never practiced. He was a dress reformer. He believed in hygienic food, in sanitary dress, in many things which the people of that day knew little about. From him and from my familiarity with the laws of health drawn from the medical books I received the inspiration to take up the dress reform. I never wore a corset, nor did any of my four sisters, while we were at home. My parents supported me in my determination to show the world that I was in earnest, that I had the courage of my convictions, by wearing the reform suits. I will never forget the day I first appeared on the street in one of my own costumes. It was not as mannish as some suits I have since worn, but it was in fear and trembling that I opened the door of our house and started for the sidewalk. I was faint and dizzy, and nothing but the sheer exercise of will power kept me on my feet or continued my limbs in motion.

"The next day it was a little easier, but though the world has thought me hardened and brazen, I have never seen the day when it was not a trial to me to appear in public in a reform dress. Every jeer has cut me to the quick. Many times have I gone to my room and wept after being publicly derided. No one knows, or will ever know, what it has cost me to live up to my principles, to be consistent with my convictions and declarations; but I have done it, and am not sorry for it. For nearly thirty-five years I have worn some form or other of reform suits. I have experimented with different garments, and have worn everything from bloomers and bifurcated trousers to a man's regular outfit, high hat and all." And here the doctor, who is now lying seriously ill at Washington, smiled rather grimly at the tall hat hanging on the bureau, conscious that she may never again have use for it.

Rusk Was a "Rassler."

As I looked at Secretary Rusk in the Ebbitt house the other night the incident of his wrestling match with James A. Garfield came to me, and I resolved to settle the question, which I have never seen settled in the newspapers, which of the two was the victor.

The general told me that the match took place at Newark, O. He was then 18 years old and was driving a stage, while Garfield was a boy leading a mule on the canal.

"Rassling" (that is the way Governor Rusk pronounced it), said he, "was very common in those days, and it was the most natural thing in the world for two young fellows like myself and Garfield to try a rassle. The result did not affect our friendship, and all of the boys tried their strength in this way."

"But how did it turn out, governor?" said I. "Which whipped?"

"That I don't like to say," replied the secretary of agriculture, "and it is hardly a fair question to ask."

"Oh, well," I replied, "Garfield was a very strong man, general, and you need not be ashamed of having had an unsuccessful contest with a man of his caliber."

"Well," continued the general, laughing and slightly nettled at the thought that he might be beaten to anything, "I will say that I was never downed in a rassle until I was 22, and this happened when I was 18. I won't say anything about this Garfield rassle more than this—I was a close friend of Garfield's from that time to his death, though I did not meet him again until the opening of the war. When we were in congress together he used to call me stage driver, and I generally replied that I was not ashamed of it, but thanked the Lord that he had given me four horses to manage instead of condemning me to steer an insignificant bobtail mule."—Frank G. Carpenter's Letter.

Mr. Balfour's Exclamation.

Mr. Balfour threatens to give us a new parliamentary catchword. A hundred times he says in the speech, "Very well, sir." He marked his divisions of subjects by it, his sub-divisions and the progress of his oratorical paragraphs. "I hope I have made it clear to the house. Very well, sir," was said over and over again. Sir Charles Russell's catchword is, "Let that pass." Sir William Harcourt's "A-ah!" Mr. Goschen clears his throat. Mr. Gladstone takes a drink. But Mr. Balfour produces his pocket handkerchief and exclaims, "Very well, sir."—Pall Mall Gazette.

IF individual salts are not used then take some salt from the large salt stand and place it on the corner of your butter-plate or on your plate. When corn is served on the cob, take it in the fingers. Some housekeepers provide little doilies for the purpose. The etiquette of eating a soft-boiled egg is rather a vexed question. The English eat it directly from the shell, using a cup made to hold the egg upright and steady. Americans usually break the egg into a cup.

BE careful not to monopolize the table talk. Do not interrupt others. If you are a dyspeptic do not talk of what does or does not agree with you, but quietly eat what you can, and say nothing about it. I know a celebrated man who eats nothing but potatoes, crackers and chocolate. But so nicely does he manage, in chatting gaily, and making jokes while the others eat, that very few people have observed his scrupulous care as to diet, and he is one of the most delightful "diners-out" that I ever knew.

THE CONGRESSIONAL MAIL

Volume and Quality of the Correspondence in the House.

Letters, Circulars and Newspapers — Political and Religious Tracts—Washington's Pin and Jackson's Cane—Troubles of Godlove Orth.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]

About five thousand letters a day are received by the members of the House. Prominent representatives average daily from twenty-five to one hundred letters. A chairman of a prominent committee gets more than one of the minority of the committee on revolutionary claims. General Harry Bingham, chairman of the post-office committee, averages fifty a day. General Ben Butterworth, chairman of the committee on patents, receives a larger number. Major McKinley, chairman of the committee on ways and means, is overwhelmed with letters from the people. A new member receives eight or ten letters a day at the beginning of his career in Congress. The number gradually increases. If he remains in the House half a-dozen terms it will nearly double with each succeeding term. With the letters come scores of public documents and quantities of newspapers. At times the desk of a member resembles the "exchange" table of a rural editor. The exchanges are thrown in a heap under his desk as fast as they are opened and perused. The pages gather them in and they are sold for old paper. Letters sent to Representatives in Congress come from men representing nearly every trade and profession in life. Some are written in a beautiful hand, while others are fearful scrawls. A few are pointed and pithy, but many are verbose and unmeaning.

Quaint and funny letters are scattered through a Congressman's mail. The Representative is beset by many correspondents seeking financial aid. More than this, the managers of fairs and festivals for benevolent, religious and other purposes send him scores of tickets and request him to remit the money for them. He gets them not only from his own district, but also from the District of Columbia. Washington levies a personal tax upon all Congressmen. It charges them more for board and rooms than others are charged. It takes one day in twelve in the House for legislation in its interest. It has lately, to use a sententious slang expression, "got onto the ticket racket" and is working it for all it is worth.

Along with the letters come scores of circulars, gaudily printed and otherwise. Tailors, jewelers, real-estate men, caterers, printers, corn-doctors, clergymen, racing associations, distillers, type-writers, claim agents and others seek patronage. Political and religious tracts and woman's suffrage and prohibition circulars load down his mails. There are protests from farmers, Knights of Labor, post-office clerks, printers, pilots and hundreds of others against legislation threatening their interests. The tariff agitation brings him communications from a thousand trades and industries imploring attention. They range from the great iron manufacturer down to the makers of toothpicks and corks.

A wise Congressman never allows his mail to accumulate. He sifts it every day and answers his letters promptly. In this way he pleases his correspondents and saves much time and annoyance for himself. Some of the missives received are very amusing. Not long ago a Representative from a Gulf State opened a letter while sitting at his desk. He smiled and passed it to a brother member. It came from a constituent. The writer was evidently a poor man on the lookout for a fortune. After a long preface about his health and the health of his family he came to business. He said that his wife had a big gold breast-pin with a wooden back. Upon the back were carved the initials, "G. W." He claimed that the carving was done by George Washington himself, at Mt. Vernon, soon after the close of the revolution. He had tried to sell the pin in the county where he lived, but had never been offered more than two dollars for it.

"One man," said he, "tried to swap a hog for the pin, but I got shut of him mighty quick. I done reckoned that you, bein' a Congressman, knowed some milyonare up in the House, who comes from Noo York or Boston, who would be right glad to pay foro or five hundrid dollars for the pin."

He added that if his Congressman could find such a man he would be willing to pay him five dollars for his trouble. He wanted to hear from him right away. The quicker he got to work the better.

This letter was shown in the cloakroom during a dull debate. It brought out another letter received by a Florida Representative. The writer said that he understood there was a reward of five hundred dollars offered for a duplicate of the cane carried by General Jackson while he lived in the White House. He added that he had lately heard that this cane was on exhibition in the National Museum in Washington. He besought his Congressman to hire a photographer and go down to the museum and take a big photograph of the cane. Then he could send him the photograph, and he thought he could make a perfect duplicate with his jack-knife. His confidence in his whittling powers was so great that he promised to pay all the expenses of the Congressman and to give him fifteen dollars besides if he would forward the photograph and find the man who offered the five hundred dollars for the duplicate.

The writer was anxious that the Representative should go to work as soon as possible, as he wanted to invest the money in some iron land near Rome, Ga.

The exhibition of this letter evoked another received by a North Carolina Representative. A few weeks ago he found in his mail a letter from the wife of a constituent in the mountains. She was making a crazy quilt. She besought him to go to the President, the members of the Cabinet, the General of the Army, the Admiral of the Navy, the Justices of the Supreme Court, and all the Senators and Congressmen and get an old tie from each one. She asked that he would do so immediately and forward the ties by express. They would be used in making the quilt. The quilt could then be sold at a church fair and enough money raised to buy a new Bible for the preacher.

Another member displayed a letter received from West Virginia. A square of white silk was inclosed. The writer was a young lady who was getting up an autograph quilt for a church fair. She asked that the Representative would put his autograph upon the strip of silk and give twenty-five cents to have it sewed into the quilt. He was to wrap the twenty-five cents in the silk and inclose it in a letter. The Representative did as requested. If each Representative sent his sample and quarter the young lady received four hundred and nineteen autographs and one hundred and four dollars and seventy-five cents.

Benton McMillin retailed an amusing story which he said he had heard from the lips of Godlove S. Orth, formerly a well-known Representative from Indiana. Soon after the beginning of the war an old Hoosier, who lived in his district, wrote him a letter. It was addressed to the

HONRIBEL GODLESS S. ORTH,
HOUSE OF REPS,
Washington, D. C.

It began thus:

"DEAR JUDGE: I take my pen in hand to let you know that we are all well an' hope [illegible] will find you enjoyin' the same blessin'."

He wrote that he had a wife and a boy that was mighty smart. He said that he had voted for the "judge" every time that he had been a candidate, and he thought it was about time he got somethin'. He said that he understood that the Government had lots of guns on hand, and he wanted him to send him by express right off a double-barreled shotgun for his boy.

"Get a breech-loader if you can," he continued, "and if you can't git a breech-loader send on a good muzzle-loader, stub and twist barrels. The boy is jist thirteen year old, an' he kin shoot like ole Dannel Boon. After you send the shotgun please to send me yer latest report on agriculter an' a lot of garden seeds for my wife."

Mr. Orth hesitated awhile before replying to the letter. He finally wrote that he was very sorry he could not send the shotgun, because the Government was in need of all the guns that it could get to put down the rebellion. He took great pleasure, however, in sending his latest agricultural report and the garden seeds for the man's wife.

Four years afterward, when the war had closed, Orth picked up another letter one day with the same direction:

HONRIBEL GODLESS S. ORTH,
HOUSE OF REPS.
Washington, D. C.

In this letter the old man called his attention to the fact that the war had just ended and that the Government must have "heaps uv guns on hand." He therefore wanted him to send by the first express a double-barreled shotgun, "breech-loadin'" for his boy. "The boy is now a-gotn' on for seventeen year, an' he is the best shot in Injeany. Git him a good gun an' git it quick, for the holleday shootin' is a-comin' on an' he wants to kill somethin' for Chris'mis." In conclusion the old Hoosier said: "I want you to send me the latest copy of your agricultural report, an' my wife wants sum more garden seeds."

Mr. Orth was in a quandary. He had given a good excuse for not sending the shotgun in his former letter, but now he was stuck. He thought over the matter for some time, and finally concluded that there was only one way out of the difficulty. He bought a second-hand shotgun, breech-loading, and sent it to the old man by express. At the same time his latest agricultural report and the garden seeds were forwarded.

Mr. McMillin says that he afterwards heard that Orth was avenged. One day as the old man was trying the power of the gun, it exploded and killed him. But McMillin does not say that "Godless S. Orth" told him this.

At times letters tell their own stories. Here is one that ought to touch the heart of many a professing Christian who pays hundreds of dollars for a pew in a fashionable church in Boston or New York. It comes from an humble colored clergyman who evidently has the welfare of his flock at heart.

Money has been sought to aid in building many a palatial church in the North, but no clergyman, however bright, ever penned a more original or apparently sincere letter.

NOTES FOR NATURALISTS.

THOUGH the cavity of the whale's mouth is big enough to contain a ship's long boat, the gullet is not larger than a man's fist.

THE elephant's teeth are its unduly developed upper incisors; those of the walrus are its upper canines, and so are those of the wild hog.

THERE are two birds at the London Zoo that have great reputations as ventriloquists. One is a crane-like bird called the trumpeter and the other is the emu.

THE Sneezewood of South Africa, commonly called Neishout, produces wood as hard and handsome as mahogany, the sawdust of which is said to cause violent sneezing—hence the name.

AN electric vegetable is said to have been discovered in India which has the power of affecting the magnetic needle at a distance of twenty feet when the weather is favorable. In rainy weather it has no electric influence whatever.

THE African teak tree is noted for its beautiful and valuable wood, and is often called African oak. This tree is similar to the East Indian teak, but must not be confounded with it, for the Indian teak tree belongs to an entirely different family.

THE blue ageratum, which is cherished in England as a border flower, was introduced into Ceylon by an English lady, where it spread so rapidly, running wild in the island, that it now costs more than $1,250,000 annually to keep it down in the coffee plantations.

THE spider's mouth is quite a complicated affair. It has fangs for holding its prey, masticatory organs for bruising its solid food, and a sucking apparatus for taking up the fluids. Quite as complicated is the mouth of the mosquito, which consists of the lances, the saws and the pumping-tubes.

IN London specimens of Mexican dry moss were shown before the Botanical Society that were green and flourishing, although they had been shut up for three months in a dry place. These plants are said to have the power of rolling up in a ball when dry and becoming apparently dead, only to bloom again, however, when exposed to moisture.

THE Indian soap tree is said to be extensively used in South America for washing purposes, and on the Florida coast two species grow which are said to contain Sopanin, so common in several species of this genus. The hard, round nutlets, or seeds, of some of the species are used for making rosaries, bracelets, necklaces, etc., and a few species have edible outer coverings to their fruits; but the seeds are poisonous.

AT a late meeting of the Royal Botanic Society an interesting sweet-scented fern from the society's garden was exhibited. The perfume closely resembles that of fresh hay, and, like it, is retained after the frond is dry, and lasts for many months if not years, imparting its fragrance to any thing in contact with it. The secretary thought it might be grown as a source of perfume by amateurs, if not commercially.

TIPS ON TABLE TOPICS.

IF WINE is served, do not attract the attention of every one to the fact that you do not drink it. The time for a temperance lecture is not at the table of a friend who has done you the honor to invite you to her house. Quietly shake your head and let the matter rest.

IN THE old country you begin to eat as soon as you are helped, but in America it is better taste to wait until the others are ready. This is a mooted question; different localities have different customs. Do not ask for a second help of any thing at a dinner party. Of course at home and where there is but one principal dish this rule is not obeyed.

ALWAYS take the food offered in a course, even if you not wish to eat it. It is much better to quietly wait and talk while the others eat than to call the attention of the whole table to your likes and dislikes. Never pile up your small dishes upon your plate when the servant comes to remove them. Never fold your napkin unless you are making a stay in the house and have a napkin ring provided for you.

MWANGA, King of Uganda, who has accepted Christianity, is the man who used to have a few wives slaughtered before breakfast now and then. He has also killed a number of missionaries. His reformation gives civilization a great boost in Africa.

THOSE who have been puzzling their brains to find something in the shape of a reason for the alarming increase of divorce cases of late can now take a mental rest. It has just been officially announced that over forty thousand women in this country joined cooking classes last year.

Why, Mary, how your baby cries!

Yes, he has colic again.

Why don't you give him Mrs. Taylor's Best Soothing Syrup?

Is that good?

Yes, for Pains, Colds, Coughs, &c., it is excellent for either young or old. Of the many kinds of medicines I have used in my family I have found none to equal it.

Thank you, Jane, I will try it. Margaret Ann, go as soon as you can to either Reynolds', or Shaw's Drug Store, and get a bottle of Mrs. Taylor's Soothing Syrup.

BITS BY THE BARDS

The Word of Cheer.

Is it a kind word, dearie?
Else leave it still unsaid.
The world is thick with thorns for blooms,
With stones where should be bread.

The heartaches are so many,
The hurts that men must bear;
And days bring heavy burdens
Of heavy anxious care.

It may with fancy sparkle,
Or glow with satire fine,
And they who list may cheer you
With praise as sweet as wine;

But has it aught of comfort—
This word of pen or tongue—
Of help for those who struggle,
Of hope for those who long?

The world needs sunshine, dearie,
Sweet words that fall like oil,
Balm for its wounds a-bleeding,
Its souls bespent with toil.

The world needs courage, darling,
Brave words of faith and cheer,
A cordial for its fainting,
Like music to the ear.

Oh! give such in full measure;
All joy, all gladness bring;
But leave unsaid, by tongue or pen,
The word that holds a sting.
—Ella Thomas, in Harper's Bazar

Noblesse Oblige.

'Tis wisdom's law, the perfect code,
By love inspired,
Of him of whom much is bestowed,
Is much required.
The tuneful throat is bid to sing,
The oak must reign the forest's king
The rushing stream the wheel must move,
The tempered steel its strength must prove;
'Tis given with the eagle's eyes
To face the midday skies.

If I am weak and you are strong
Why then, why then
To you the braver deeds belong!
And so again,
If you have gifts and I have none,
If I have shade and you have sun,
'Tis yours with freer hand to give,
'Tis yours with truer grace to live,
Than I who giftless, sunless, stand
With barren life and hand.
—Carlotta Perry, in Iowa State Register

Last Night.

Last night strange whisperings woke me,
Last night when all was still.
I opened my casement gently
And leaned from the window sill.

I opened my casement gently
And peered through the silent night
And far on the terraced roof tree
I saw weird forms of white.

I heard a sound in the darkness,
A shuddering here and there;
I saw writhing figures trembling
And vanishing into the air.

A writhing arm in the shadow,
A swirling and ghostly limb,
And still through it all the whispering
That spoke to the midnight dim.

The morning broke and the daylight
Came in through my lattice wide,
And I looked across at the roof tree
With its tenantless towers beside;

And I saw in the sheen of the sunshine
That the spirits and sounds of the night
Had been only my neighbor's weekly wash
Winging its clothes-pinned flight.

Then I opened my casement gently
And leaned from the window sill,
And oh! the tones of his loud checked vest
Were whispering still.
—Kate Masterson, in Judge.

May Day.

The sky is all dappled with azure and white
The woodlands are dotted with posies,
The blue-hooded larkspur looks smiling and bright,
And the butterfly flirts with the roses.
And jack-in-the-pulpit is nodding his head,
While the honey bees cheerily hum;
The oriole swings in his snug hammock bed,
And the robin sings May day has come!

The hawthorns are dropping their petals around,
The bumble-bee climbs for the clover,
The shy little cowslip in byways is found,
And the king-cups are sprinkled all over.
The dove softly coos in the shade of the wold,
The woodpeck is beating his drum,
The moccasin flower dons her slippers of gold,
And the cuckoo says May-day has come!

The swallows have flown to the chimneys tall,
The thrush to his tryst is winging,
The eglantine over the old stone wall
Her censers of incense is swinging;
And down in the meadow amid the green grass
The crickets so lazily hum,
The daisies nod this way and that as you pass,
And the south-wind says May day has come!
—Helen Whitney Clark, in Good Housekeeping

The Early Robin.

Through the chill of an early April rain
I hear the note of a sweet refrain—
Has the Robin come so soon?
Heavy and dull are the skies without,
And my heart is filled with a dreary doubt,
But the song is a song of June.

O! Robin, Robin, you shame my faith,
Your cheery song to my spirit saith;
"Believe, and away with fear;
I am not afraid though the cold winds blow
I am come at the call of God, and know
That spring is surely here.

"So I seek my mate, and I build my nest
And I sing my song with a merrier zest,
For the joy is yet to be;
Already the fullness of joy I share,
When my nest shall swing in the summer air
On the bough of the maple tree."

Sing on, brave Robin, your song shall be
An inspiration of faith to me,
I, too, will begin to sing.
Though my heart is chilled, and my pulse is low
And my hopes lie buried under the snow,
I am sure of a coming spring.
—Maria Upham Drake, in Youth's Companion.

ELECTRICAL EXTRACTS.

It is estimated that although there are over 100,000 telephone talks a day in the city of New York, there are probably a million people living there who have never yet talked over a telephone. The long-distance telephone service has been made very efficient, as may be gathered from the fact that the roar of Niagara Falls can now be distinctly heard in the city over its lines.

The electric snow plough, which clears the track more quickly and efficiently than an ordinary snow plough drawn by twelve horses, has shown its superiority so convincingly during the past winter that a prominent company are at work on and have nearly completed a special electric sweeper and track cleaner for cleaning the track of dust, dirt, slight snow-falls and other impediments to the good running of the cars.

Electricity is destined to play a permanent part in domestic life. Electric cooking utensils, utilizing its heating properties, have been designed, and in some instances put into practical operation. One of the latest novelties in this respect is the electric flatiron. It consists of a hollow flatiron, in the interior of which a coil is placed which is heated by the current passing through it. The ease and comfort derived from the use of such device, in hot weather especially, is apparent.

The proposal to build a pipe line for sending milk to New York from far away dairy districts was at first considered as a joke, but news from Middletown, N. Y., is to the effect that a company with half a million capital is being formed to lay a pipe by which milk in cylindrical tin cans can be propelled by water a distance of one hundred miles.

The Okefinokee swamp in Georgia has been sold to a party of capitalists for 26¼ cents per acre, which was the highest bid received. The area is upward of 250,000 acres. The buyers say that the timber is worth much more than was paid for the property, and the soil is remarkably fertile. The swamp can be drained for $200,000, and an engineer who has surveyed it says that the parties who have undertaken the enterprise will become millionaires.

The rare ceremony of divorcing a woman from her dead husband, according to the requirements of the old Mosaic law, took place recently in Louisville, in the B'Nai Jakob synagogue. The woman's husband was killed by tramps last summer. She has no children, and the old law of the orthodox Jews is that in such a case the dead man's eldest brother is to marry the widow and raise up children in the name of the deceased. The widow, however, did not desire to marry her husband's brother, nor he her. Accordingly she must be divorced from her dead mate. This ceremony can only be performed by two orthodox Jewish rabbis acting in conjunction.

LABOR'S MAY-DAY BATTLE

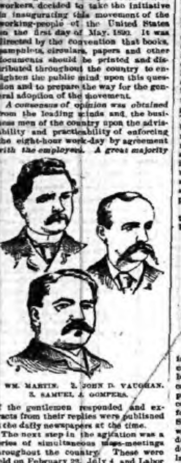
President Gompers Talks of the Coming Eight-Hour Fight.

How the Long Campaign of Agitation and Preparation has been Conducted.—The Federation Confident of Winning.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]

Public interest all over the Union is awakened to the importance of the great movement now in progress for an eight-hour work-day. At its convention held in St. Louis on December, 1888, the American Federation of Labor, representing a membership of over 500,000 workers, decided to take the initiative in inaugurating this movement of the working-people of the United States on the first day of May, 1890. It was directed by the convention that books, pamphlets, circulars, papers and other documents should be printed and distributed throughout the country to enlighten the public mind upon this question and to prepare the way for the general adoption of the movement.

A consensus of opinion was obtained from the leading minds and the business men of the country upon the advisability and practicability of enforcing the eight-hour work-day by agreement with the employers. A great majority of the gentlemen responded and extracts from their replies were published in the daily newspapers at the time.

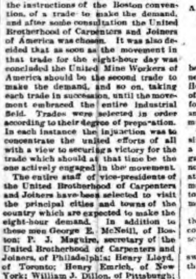


1. WM. MARTIN. 2. JOHN D. VAUGHAN. 3. SAMUEL J. GOMPERS.

The next step in the agitation was a series of simultaneous mass-meetings throughout the country. These were held on February 22, July 4 and Labor Day, 1889.

The convention of the Federation held in Boston last December ratified the decision of the St. Louis convention as to the plan of action, and instructed and authorized the executive council of the Federation to select a trade to make the demand on May 1, 1890, for the enforcement of the eight-hour day. The last of the series of simultaneous mass-meetings, held on February 22, 1890, practically closed the agitation. There have been other meetings held since then, and meetings will continue to be held from now until May 1; but these are more preparatory than agitative. The next step was the selection by the executive council, in accordance with the instructions of the Boston convention, of a trade to make the demand, and after some consultation the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America was chosen. It was also decided that as soon as the movement in that trade for the eight-hour day was concluded the United Mine Workers of America should be the second trade to make the demand, and so on, taking each trade in succession, until the movement embraced the entire industrial field. Trades were selected in order according to their degree of preparation. In each instance the injunction was to concentrate the united efforts of all with a view to securing a victory for the trade which should at that time be the one actively engaged in the movement.

The entire staff of vice-presidents of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners have been selected to visit the principal cities and towns of the country which are expected to make the eight-hour demand. In addition to these men George E. McNeill, of Boston; P. J. Maguire, secretary of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, of Philadelphia; Henry Lloyd, of Toronto; Henry Emrich, of New York; William J. Dillon, of Pittsburgh; John McBride, of Massilon, O.; David Ross, of Oglesby, Ill.; Frank K. Foster, of Boston; F. C. Kilgallon, of Millwood, Pa.; F. M. Shafer, of McKeesport, Pa.; William H. Kliber, of Grand Crossing, Ill.; P. T. Fitzpatrick, of Cincinnati, O.; John S. Kirchner, of Philadelphia; Edward L. Daley, of Lynn, Mass.; J. H. Burt, of Wheeling, W. Va.; Paul Grottkau, of Milwaukee, Wis.; H. J. Skiffington, of Charlestown, Mass.; George Gunton, of New York; J. H. Bates, of Duluth, Minn., and myself will take the field in the same line of preparatory addresses at various meetings until the day for the movement has arrived. Last week I spoke at meetings—on April 15 at Pittsburgh, 16th at Columbus, 17th at Cincinnati, 19th at Indianapolis, 20th at Chicago; and during the coming week I will have meetings in Milwaukee on the 21st, again at Chicago on the 22d, when a large mass-meeting will be held; Detroit on the 23d, Cleveland on the 24th, Buffalo on the 25th, Syracuse on the 26th, Yonkers on the 27th and Louisville on May 1. I mention these matters to illustrate the energy and thoroughness with which the work of agitation and preparation for the culmination of this great movement has necessarily been conducted.



1. C. EVANS. 2. HENRY EMRICH. 3. JOSEPH LABADIE.

Glancing over the field, I think the movement, thus far, comes up to my expectations. We have not indulged in idle boasts. Our course has been open and above board. We have endeavored to enlighten the public mind and have frankly and honestly stated our intention to inaugurate the eight-hour movement on the 1st of May next. We propose, in our own way, to secure success without buncome. I feel greatly encouraged by the general tenor of the correspondence received and the promises of aid from the organizations towards helping those trades that have been selected to act as the vanguard, to substantial success. I am in receipt of communications from all over the country foreshadowing success for the eight-hour movement. Mr. Mesche, a leading member of the Federation of Labor in Denver, writes me that he has never yet seen, in the history of the movement, such enthusiasm and spirit as now prevail. This is the feeling I find everywhere.

The strike in Chicago is directly in line of our movement and so is that of the carpenters and joiners in New York. This was the trade selected to take the initiatory step. When the question of accepting the task was submitted to the carpenters and joiners, they voted upon it and practically voted unanimously. At their recent meeting, when the final vote was taken, there was a small minority against it; but, finding the question overwhelmingly decided in favor of eight hours, they agreed to make the resolution to take the step unanimous.

The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners has a membership of 73,000. In all likelihood, many of the kindred trades will be affected by the action of this union, but how many it is impossible to tell at present. There is a number of other trades that will make the eight-hour demand for the purpose of aiding the selected trades. There are others that since the Boston convention, have already succeeded, in establishing the eight-hour day, the arrangement being that it will take effect on May 1. Among those who have done so are the plasterers, the cigar-makers and the German printers, besides a few others. In all probability, the movement will reach the English compositors of the International Typographical Union. I have reason to believe that some newspaper establishments in New York City will adopt the new work-day on May 1, and that several papers will put the eight-hour rule into effect in their mechanical departments on that date. These indications are encouraging, but they are no more so than many received from other points remote from New York.

American workingmen have regarded the international labor conference in Europe with considerable interest. It is merely an advisory conference, yet it can scarcely have any thing else than a beneficial effect, since the different countries that have voted in favor of the propositions for the improvement of the condition of labor doubtless mean to enforce them in their own territory. Should they fail to do so, the wage-workers would be driven to agitate and demand their enforcement. It is highly desirable that the condition of European labor should be improved, as any step in that direction would have an indirect effect on the condition of the wage-worker here. It would tend to keep the European laborers in their own country, and thus give the American worker a better opportunity to grapple with the economic and social conditions demanding his attention at home, and the adjustment of which are so necessary to his interest and advancement.

COULDN'T FOOL HIM.

How Major Bellweather and His Nephew Traded Horses.

A Barrel of Twenty-Seven-Year-Old Whisky and some Ripe Ginger Ale Helped It Along—The "Halt" That Was Never Called.

[COPYRIGHT, 1890.]

Old Major Bellweather is one of the best-known characters living in the neighborhood of Orchard Grass, Ky. He owns an immense farm and is a man of so great an importance that all his foibles are not only excused but are smiled at by the people of the community.

One morning while the Major was sitting on his porch a young man riding a magnificent horse drew rein at the gate. The Major's eyes brightened, not at the sight of the young man, but at the sight of the horse. The young man dismounted, and as he turned toward the house the Major advanced to meet him.

"Good mornin', suh! good mornin'!" the Major exclaimed, with hearty cordiality. "Walk right up and have a seat."

"Thank you," the young man answered, stepping up on the porch. "Is this Major Bellweather?"

"Yes, suh."

"You do not know me, I presume," said the young man when he had sat down.

"Well, never having seen you before I can't say that I do."

The young man smiled. "I am John Grapnell, your youngest sister's only son."

"You don't say so," the Major exclaimed, seizing the visitor and almost shaking him out of the chair.

"Yes, I do say so, uncle, and I have ridden all the way from North Carolina to see you. I arrived in the village yesterday evening and would have called last night but not knowing any thing of your habits I was afraid that I might disturb you."

The truth is that the young man had remained in the village for the purpose of learning all he could with regard to his uncle.

"You might have come right on here," said the old man, "for you ought to have known that I should be delighted to see you."

"I am glad to hear that, uncle, for, in a measure, I have centered my hopes on you. The fact is I have decided to go into business, but haven't the money. I had two hundred and fifty dollars, but bought the horse you see out there, believing that the money we invest in horseflesh is never thrown away."

MY UNCLE.

"You are right, my son. If I had invested more money in horseflesh and less in whisky when I was of your age, I should be a good deal better off now."

"Spent a great deal of money for whisky, eh?"

"Oh, it was not so much the money I spent, my son, as it was the money I gave away while I was under the influence of liquor. Why, it was nothing for me to give away a thousand dollars."

The young man's eyes brightened. "You don't drink now, do you, uncle?"

"My son, twenty-seven years ago to-day, I rolled a barrel of liquor into my cellar and I then said to myself: 'Major,' says I, 'it is time to call a halt.' That's what I said twenty-seven years ago to-day."

"A good resolution, uncle, but as I have perfect control over myself you would not object to my taking a little of that twenty-seven-year-old stuff, would you?"

"Not at all, my son; not in the least. Here, Sam (calling a negro boy), go down in the cellar and bring a glass of that liquor from the corner barrel—and say, Sam, bring me a glass of that ginger ale."

The boy executed the commission. The young man's eyes shone with a peculiar gleam.

"Now, my son," said the Major, "you will find that the best stuff you ever smacked your lips over."

"I have no doubt of it, uncle. By the way, who is that coming down the road?"

The Major turned to look, and the young man, with a quick motion, drank half the ginger ale from the Major's glass and filled the glass with whisky.

"I don't see anybody," said the Major.

"I thought I saw some one," the nephew rejoined. "Well, here's to you, uncle."

"Drink hearty," said the old man, lifting his glass. "Ah—hah! (drinking) that is the juice for the gods, young fellow, and I am sorry that I can't join you, but fate is against me; but by the way, this is the best ginger ale I ever drank. I have had it for some time but I didn't know that it improved so with age. Here, Sam, bring us some more. Bring whisky for the young man."

"Uncle, as I told you just now I must have some money. I want about two thousand dollars."

"Time enough for that, young man. That ginger ale fits me closer than a knit shirt. Here we are."

The young man directed the Major's attention to the magnificent horse standing at the gate and repeated the trick of mixing whisky with the old man's ginger ale.

"Ah hah!" said the Major, putting down his glass, "that rolls me over on the play-ground of my youth. Let's repeat it. Sam, where are you?"

"Now, about that money, uncle."

"That's all right, my son. As we are so close kin and as we have never met before, why, we must make up for lost time. Ha, ha!" he laughed, "that's not a bad idea. Here we are again, as the old clown says. Excuse me just a minute, please. I want to get a chaw of tobacco. This ginger ale brings to my old age the fond visions of years ago."

The young man poured whisky into the old man's glass.

The old fellow soon returned with a mouthful of "natural leaf."

"Now uncle, let us get down to business. I've got to have two thousand dollars, and the worst of it is, I haven't any security to put up. I have always liked you, uncle. My mother has often told me of you and I have never grown tired of hearing her—"

I WANT MY HORSE.

"That's all right, my dear boy; that's all right, I assure you. Let us have some more stuff."

The young man was tickled; the old man was showing signs of intoxication.

They had some more, and again the young man was skillful. When they had drunk, and when the boy Sam, grinning and ducking his head, had withdrawn, the nephew began to talk of the two thousand dollars. He put his arms around the old man and said: "Uncle, I can not help but say it; I love you!"

The old man was moved deeply. He took the nephew's hand and pressed it.

They drank again, and again the old man was deceived.

"Now, my dear nephew," said he, "let me show you my hosses. Get your nag and bring him around to the stable. Go on, my dear boy, and then we will talk about the money. I want you to see my hosses."

The nephew acted as his uncle directed.

"That's a pretty fair hoss," said the Major, when the young man had led his animal to the stable lot.

"Yes, you bet," the young fellow answered. "Best horse in the country." The young fellow was drunk. The old man brought out a horse and began to draw comparisons between the two steeds. The young man, in attempting to walk around his horse, staggered. The two men sat down on a trough and talked. Occasionally they got up and examined each other's horses. After awhile they closed in a deep conversation. The young man uttered generous sentences. The old man put his arms about his nephew and spoke of the peculiar warmth of old ginger ale.

Sometime during the afternoon the young man, mounted on a strange horse and uttering many wild thoughts, rode into the village. The next day, while the Major was sitting on the porch, a young man walked up.

"How are you, suh," said the Major.

The young man, pressing his brow with a feverish hand, replied:

"Uncle, I want my horse."

"What hoss?"

"Why, the horse I left here yesterday."

"You swapped him for the old bay."

"Yes," said the young man, "but the old bay is blind and spavined."

"I can't help that, young fellow. Say! when you try to get an old man drunk, you'd better look out."

"Uncle, you told me that you hadn't drunk any thing for twenty-seven years, and—"

"No I didn't. I said that when I rolled a barrel of whisky in my cellar twenty-seven years ago, it was time to call a halt. It was time but I didn't halt."

HE FILLED THE GLASS.

"Uncle, are you going to let me have my horse?"

"Haven't got your horse. I traded for the horse that used to be yours."

"Yes; but are you going to let me have two thousand dollars?"

"Wall, I reckon not. You didn't make me quite drunk enough, young feller. Say, the next time you set out to make an old timer drunk so you can beat him out of his money, you'd better keep both eyes on your hoss. Good-bye, youngster."

"Criminal" animals frequently expiated their offenses, like other malefactors, on the gallows, but subsequently they were summarily killed without trial and their owners mulcted in heavy damages.

During the fourteenth century oxen and cows might be legally killed whenever taken in the act of marauding, and asses for a first offense had one ear cropped, for a second offense the other ear, and if after this they were asses enough to commit a third offense their lives became forfeit to the Crown.

In the fifteenth century cocks were somewhat credited with the power of laying accursed eggs, from which sprang winged serpents. In 1474, at Bale, a cock was publicly accused of having laid one of those dreadful eggs. CONTINENTAL.

The representative Congress of North and Central American Republics for some months past in session at Washington, pursuant to the invitation of the United States, has concluded its deliberations and adjourned. Nothing of a positive character appears to have signalized its official actions other than a mutual agreement to submit national disputes, should such unfortunately arise, to arbitration, thereby avoiding the horrors of war.

That was a glorious victory for the cause of peace and humanity, and if the Congress accomplished naught else, that alone amply recompensed its assembling.

If all the nations of earth were to adopt and faithfully observe the just and peaceful method of settling difficulties by arbitration, what an eternity of expense, devastation and misery would be avoided. That such is the growing tendency of the age brightens the future with hope.

The members of the International Congress in question would doubtless have taken decided steps towards securing the mutual advantages of free commercial traffic, had they not been confronted by the Chinese wall of our absurd tariff policy.

Barring out the British possessions, the entire continents of North and South America are now governed by Republics of congenial feelings, and by the laws of nature and of right, business intercourse with each other ought to be unrestricted and mutually encouraged.

These Republics cover a majestic territorial expanse and by far the richest on the face of the globe. Possessing unbounded resources, as yet largely undeveloped, every variety of soil and climate, grand avenues of transportation, and in abundance all the productions essential to human wants, together with the crude material necessary to keep capital and labor actively and profitably employed as fabricators of the useful, if their people dwelling between the St. Lawrence and the La Plata, were only permitted to freely exchange products, both natural and manufactured, unvexed by tariff exactions and extortions, all would prosper, and none to a greater extent than the toiling and enterprising millions of our own, widely-stretched land.

It is a source of regret that such splendid reciprocal advantages cannot be at once secured.

But, there is light ahead.

An era of practical intelligence and common honesty is slowly though surely developing.

THE SIZE OF IT.

(From The Press of Saturday.)

Recent consultations among those "lordly," but eminently respectable citizens, continue. It is possible therefore that the wide, wide World will soon reverberate with the echoes of their pronunciamento. At the Council meeting of next Monday evening, probably, "Our Citizens Committee" may be heard from.

All of this is "on all fours"—as the [illegible] Counsel might say—with the tale of the three tailors of Tooley street. Something the English Parliament did failed to meet the approval of the tailors, and they met—just as indignant in their mind, and preposterous in their pretensions, as the Plainfield Art Gallery publicists. The three tailors of Tooley street then issued a proclamation, thus beginning: "We, the Citizens of London."

Wait a Minute!

The Central Times says:

> The street railway project may be making progress, but the fact has not materialized to any extent. The opposition to the road by property holders along proposed routes, is discouraging to those who are desirous of pushing the undertaking.

Now just wait a minute, brother! Don't be in haste, or you may spend years in a too late repentance. Probably the property owners along the routes, like THE PRESS, would like to look a little deeper into this street railway "project," as you call it.

Can This be the Case?

Complaint is made against the janitor of one of the public schools in this city, who, it is alleged, noticed one of the school boys riding around in a delivery wagon, on Thursday afternoon, and he jerked the boy from the wagon, tearing his clothes, and escorted him to school. The boy had remained away at the morning session, ostensibly to accompany his mother into town to purchase a new hat.

The janitor it is said, had been sent to the boy's home to inquire the cause of the latter's absence from school, and he was on his way back to the school when he saw the boy in the wagon.

HOME OF THE Y. M. C. A.

THE BUILDING WE HAVE "[illegible] FOR," COME AT LAST.

A Young Plainfield Architect Wins in the Competition of Designs—A Handsome Structure to be Erected at a Cost of $35,000, Exclusive of Ground and Interior Furnishings—Gymnasium, Swimming Bath and Bowling Alleys a Part of the Attractions to be Offered the Young Men and Boys.

(From The Daily Press of May 3.)

At the home of Mr. C. W. McCutchen, on Rockview avenue, last evening, a gathering of representative men of wealth and judgment voted as an expression of their opinion that the erection of the long projected Y. M. C. A. building should begin as soon as $35,000 shall have been subscribed. Up to that time the amount subscribed was $32,455.63 Upon the passage of the expression of opinion quoted above, $500 more was subscribed at once.

OH, FOR A Y. M. C. A. BUILDING.

On April 23, 1888, THE PRESS placed at the head of its local columns, this appeal: "Oh, for a Y. M. C. A. building." Day after day for over two years, the two thousand eyes of its one thousand subscribers, and the ten thousand eyes of its five thousand readers, have seen that appeal. Meetings have been held at the homes of Mr. Charles Potter, Mr. J. W. Jackson, and others, where ways, and means, and plans have been discussed; untiring canvassers have spent months in the solicitation of subscriptions; numerous locations have been considered and compared as to availability and publicity, yet at the same time as to cost; plans have been solicited that would give everything that could be desired to attract and gratify all sorts and conditions of young men, but within a certain limit of expense; and all this has at last culminated successfully and to the entire satisfaction of the Association and the people.

The exterior of the building as it will appear when finished, is pictured on the first page of this issue.

The building as designed is in the Romanesque style, and is to be built of Lorillard brick with red sand stone trimmings. It will be erected on the lot purchased at $7,500, on Front street, opposite Peace. The lot may be called a corner one, as an open lane now runs along one side from Front street to the brook to which the lot also extends. This lane will eventually be made the continuation of Peace street into North Plainfield.

The first floor plan provides for the Secretary's office at the left of the reception hall, and a library and reading room to the right. Back of the reception hall on the left, is located the members' room, so arranged that all may be used en suite. On the right, back of the library and stairs to second floor, is located the lecture room, which has a seating capacity of 150.

The second floor provides for a large assembly hall, with a seating capacity of about 300, including the gallery. The remainder of second floor is divided into offices to rent. In the third floor are located the class rooms, janitor's apartments, etc.

The gymnasium, which is almost a separate building, is back of the main building to the right. In the basement of this is located the heater and boiler rooms, plunge bath, and bowling alleys. The first floor is the gymnasium, which is provided with running track and visitors' gallery. The size of the main building is about 60x80, and the gymnasium, 40x60.

The architect was present last evening and thoroughly explained the exterior and interior plans, arrangements and construction. Before introducing him to the gathering, however, President Wm. D. Murray gave a brief sketch of what had been done by the committee in charge of the project.

PRESIDENT MURRAY'S ADDRESS.

What he said was in effect as follows: When the Young Men's Christian Association decided to undertake a canvass for a building the following committee was appointed: Chas. W. McCutchen, Henry A. McGee, Edward St. John, H. O. Newman, David E. Titsworth, Charles T. Kinsman and Wm. D. Murray. As soon as the fund had reached a point which seemed to assure the erection of the building the committee selected six architects and asked them to compete for the design of the building, in accordance with conditions submitted to them.

The architects who were selected and who accepted the invitation to enter the competition with each other were as follows: Fuller & Wheeler, of Albany, N. Y., who have built six or seven Y. M. C. A. buildings; DuFais & Canfield, of New York, who are building the Rochester, N. Y., building, said to be the best so far designed for association work; A. C. Barlow, of New York, who came to the committee highly recommended as having carefully studied the question of association architecture; Charles H. Smith, O. S. Teale and A. L. C. Marsh, all of Plainfield, as it was thought proper that our own townsmen should have an opportunity to be the designers of a building which will be in a certain sense a public building.

The plans of each architect were designated by a nom de plume and their authors were only known to the committee by these fictitious names. After a great many meetings and careful consideration of each design the committee, for various reasons, rejected all the plans, and paid each competitor the stipulated price. The two authors whose designs had most nearly satisfied the conditions of the competition, DuFais & Canfield and A. L. C. Marsh, were invited to enter a second competition, under modified conditions, and having submitted new designs, that of Mr. Marsh was unanimously selected as the design of the proposed building.

It was the unanimous opinion of the committee that the design selected, more than any other, combined the three features deemed to be essential in our Y. M. C. A. building: Proper interior arrangements, attractive and characteristic exterior and within the limit of cost.

THE PLAINFIELD BRED ARCHITECT.

Plainfield may be proud of the consummation of its particular desire for a home for the Y. M. C. A., because of another reason Mr. A. L. C. Marsh, the successful architect who has won the competition over others more noted and experienced, is a Plainfield boy. He was bred and educated right here. His first work in this city was the Plainfield Bicycle Club house, and the houses of Mayor Cooley, of North Plainfield, and Dr. T. S. Davis. It was mentioned in THE PRESS a few days ago, that he had begun the erection of houses in this city for Mr. John M. Crane, Manager of the Union Mutual Life Insurance Co., in New York, and Mr. Wm. F. Arnold, Asst. Cashier of the City National bank, and Treasurer of the Crescent Avenue church. Besides this he is building a Summer residence at Little Silver for Mr. Walter A. Bass, Jr., of this city.

Although one of the youngest in the profession, Architect Marsh has probably more work on hand today than any of his competers. He is associated with Mr. H. F. Kilburn, one of New York's best known and most successful architects in the country. Some of the buildings he has in process of erection are the Occident Club House, N. Y., costing between $150,000 and $200,000; the Park Presbyterian church, N. Y., $100,000; a private house at St. Louis, $60,000; Second German Baptist and Calvary churches, New York; a Presbyterian church, Bayonne City; a Baptist church, Gloversville, N. Y.; a Baptist church at Flushing, and many other buildings of more or less note. A few days ago, Mr. Marsh was elected a member of the Executive Committee and the Treasurer of the New York Sketch club, an organization of leading architects.

After the discussion of the plans and the expression of opinion that the committee make contracts at once for the erection of the building described by THE PRESS today, last night's gathering fell into the hands of a most hospitable hostess, who, assisted by Mrs. S. St. J. McCutchen, gilt-edged the evening's fruition.

Union County Courts.

The May term of the Union County Courts opened at Elizabeth on Tuesday, when Judge Vanslyckle charged the Grand Jury strongly on the matter of bookmaking on the race track He said that both the owners of the tracks and the bookmakers were liable to conviction. He also charged the jury on the matter of excise violations.

The Grand Jurors from this city are Messrs J. G. Miller, S. C. Baker and J. Fred MacDonald.

[illegible]—Plainfield Has a [illegible] President of Its Council.

(From the Elizabeth Journal.)

Senator McPherson claims to be the man who first renominated Grover Cleveland for president in 1888, and Plainfield is the place he made famous by the speech in which he did this perfunctory work for Mr. Cleveland But if Mr. Cleveland's chances are no better in the rest of the country than they are in Plainfield, he will never get nearer the presidential chair than Senator McPherson's speech did to the probabilities in 1892.

A Warning to Certain North Plainfielders.

There seems to be a few boys and young men who are evil disposed, and disturb the religious services of Warren Mission in North Plainfield. Tuesday, last week, four or five of these disturbers of the peace assembled outside the Mission, and created considerable disturbance, and greatly annoyed those assembled within the building.

The borough authorities have been notified, and they propose to cause the arrest of any person who disturbs the meetings held in that Mission. The offence of disturbing religious meetings is an indictable one, and a few of these young persons may find themselves in Somerset County jail ere many hours have passed. They are known and are being watched.

Outsiders Paying Liberally That Which is Free to Plainfield's People.

At the Board of Education meeting, on Monday, President Kirkner and Trustees Murray, Hurlbut, Babcock and Probasco were present. Besides the business transacted as published elsewhere, the Board received from Principal Goodrich $479, the amount of tuition fees paid by those attending the public schools in Plainfield, but living outside the district.

The total amount for the year will be about $1,800, of which $1 100 is from scholars in the High School alone. This latter amount pays the salary of two teachers, and is so much clear gain. The outside pupils are only admitted where there is room, and there is no more cost or expense than if they stayed away.

Equestrian Casualties.

Saturday was a large morning for horseback riding, yet two of Plainfield's equestrians got all they wanted in a very brief space of time. As the first passed Richmond street on Putnam avenue, two dogs sprung out at his horse. The result was the rider went off, and the horse stepped on the inside of the fallen man's left leg above the knee.

Drs. Endicott, Murray and Allis happened to all arrive from different directions, and the man was taken into an adjoining house and cared for. About fifteen minutes after his fall, and while the crowd still stood around, another rider approached. Just a few feet from where the first casualty occurred, the second man was thrown into the gutter, but he was not much hurt.

KILLED BY THE CARS.

James McNally, an Employee of Pond's Meets With a Horrible Accident at Dunellen, Early Sunday Morning.

Word was received at Muhlenberg Hospital, about three o'clock Sunday morning, stating that a man had been hurt by the cars at Dunellen, and asking that the patient be admitted to the Hospital for treatment Soon after the man was brought down in a wagon, and he was recognized as one James McNally, an employee at the Pond Machine Tool Company's works. The man presented a horrible spectacle, the flesh being literally torn from his right leg, from the hip down and the bone being badly crushed The patient lingered along in great agony until eleven o'clock Sunday, when he died. Nine physicians held a consultation at the hospital during the morning but the man was too weak from shock and loss of blood to even take stimulants.

McNally told the hospital authorities that he had been to Cranford during the day, and missing the last train home he boarded a coal train, and that while attempting to alight from the train at Dunellen, he was thrown under the cars. He was 32 years of age, and leaves a wife in the Old Country.

MEETING OF THE JOINT DETAIL.

Additional Arrangements for the Memorial Day Celebration.

The joint detail from Winfield Scott and Major Anderson Posts, G. A. R., met on Monday, with chairman I. McVoy in the chair, and further completed the arrangements for the Memorial Day observances. On the Sunday preceding Decoration Day the Posts will attend divine services in the M. E. church, and the Rev. C. B. Mitchell will probably deliver the sermon.

It was also decided to change the time for holding the exercises in Music Hall to the forenoon. The Rev. Mr. Stewart of Easton will deliver the oration.

Additional members were added to the joint detail, and further arrangements will be made from time to time.

An Exciting Runaway.

A team of black horses owned by one of the livery men in this city, ran away on Park avenue Monday afternoon, but the driver got them under control when near the Park Avenue Baptist church. The horses were attached to a heavy coach in which were seated Mr. Thomas Burns and a young son of the late Chas. Aborn The occupants report having had a most thrilling experience.

To Attend Divine Service.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T. of this city, have extended an invitation to Cour de Leon Commandery, No. 8 of New Brunswick and St. John's Commandery, No. 9 of Elizabeth, to attend divine service with them in Grace church, this city, on the evening of Ascension Day, May 15, on which occasion the Rev. Mr. Jennings, of Sing Sing, N. Y., will officiate. The Sir Knights will appear in full dress uniform.

Failed to Pay Alimony.

Monday forenoon Vice Chancellor Green heard motions in the Chancellor's chambers in Newark. Among the motions made was one by Messrs Jackson & Codington of this city, to commit for contempt Wm. H. Stryker, the divorced husband of Mrs. Matilda Stryker, of this city, for failure to pay to her $3 per week alimony, as he was directed to do by the Chancellor, in 1887. Leonard Kalisch appeared for the defendant, and stated that his client was unable to pay alimony, as he now had another wife and three children. Decision was reserved.

IMPORTANT CHANGES AT WATSON'S.

Several important changes have been made at the popular Clothing House of MESSRS WATSON & CO., since their entire Boys' Department was removed to their new Market street extension, and customers will find enlargements and improvements all through this extensive establishment. All the South side of their Broad street store is now occupied by their immense stock of extra Pantaloons which embraces hundreds of handsome patterns that WATSON & CO. control.

THEIR SUIT DEPARTMENT

Has been doubled in size and every rack is now filled with the choicest suits that can be made at $10, 12.00, 15.00, 18.00, 20.00, 22.00, 25.00, 28.00 and 30.00, while their entire second floor has been devoted to the display of their elegant stock of Spring Over-Sacks, which is the largest in the city.

BOYS, YOUTHS AND CHILDRENS' CLOTHING

Will be in entirely separate departments, both in making and selling, in their new annex through to No. 168 Market street, but the entrance to all departments will be at 796 Broad street, 4 doors below Market street. Tell your friends about these important changes at WATSON'S, and look in their new Market street or Broad street windows for surprises when you pass. A glance will show you that their hand-cut garments look the best, a try on will convince you that they fit the best, and a cash discount of 10 per cent, will be allowed on every garment, on which you can match their low range of prices.

Try WATSON'S hand-cut clothing once and you will stop buying machine-cut garments if you are particular about your dress appearance.—Newark Press.

A Cure or No Pay

Is guaranteed to those who use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for catarrh in the head, or for bronchial or throat affections, or consumption (which is lung scrofula) if taken in time and given a fair trial. Money promptly returned if it does not cure.

GREAT EXCITEMENT IN NORTH PLAINFIELD.

Ernest Huegel and His Brother Come Out From New York With the Alleged Intention of Kidnapping one of Gustav Sutterlin's Children—Both Men Arrested After a Desperate Struggle.

A romantic story was brought to light in North Plainfield, Sunday afternoon, which is likely to cause trouble of a very serious nature. It is alleged that Ernest Huegel and his brother, Reinhardt, two Germans, came out from New York yesterday with the avowed determination to kidnap Gustav Sutterlin's six-year-old daughter, but the men were foiled in the attempt, and both of them now occupy cells in the borough lockup.

The facts in the case are these: Some time prior to 1884, Huegel, who is a nephew of Sutterlin, and was then an ployee of the latter, went to New York, where, it is said, he joined Mrs. Sutterlin and the two were subsequently married. In due course of time Mr. Sutterlin secured a divorce from his wife, and he was awarded the custody of the children. On the 18th of November, 1884, Huegel and Mrs. Sutterlin came to Plainfield and went to Sutterlin's home on Green Brook road. While there, it is claimed, Huegel assaulted Mr. Sutterlin and the woman ran off with the child. At the time Justice McLaughlin issued a warrant for Huegel's arrest, but the man escaped and did not return again until yesterday.

About three years ago Mr. Sutterlin again succeeded in getting possession of his child, but whether by fair or foul means is not known.

Sunday the two men went to a house on Steiner place, directly adjoining Mr. Sutterlin's premises, and as soon as their presence was noticed Mr. Sutterlin notified the borough officials. The old warrant was procured, and Special Marshal George Becker was deputized to serve it. When the officer arrived at the house, and stated his mission, a desperate fight ensued. The two men set upon him, but he bravely held his own, and with the assistance of Special Marshal Pangborn and others who happened to be near by, the two men were safely lodged in the borough lockup. That evening the prisoners were served in their cells with additional warrants, charging them with resisting the officers.

Cricket Match.

The Secretary's Eleven and the Captain's Eleven of the St. George's Cricket club played a friendly match at Evona, Saturday afternoon. The score was: Captain's Eleven, 60; Secretary's Eleven, 41.

Fined Five Dollars and Costs.

Newton Honeyman appeared before Justice Hardy, in North Plainfield, on Saturday evening, to answer a charge of assaulting a lad named Drake. He was fined five dollars and costs. It appears that Mr. Honeyman was driving a spirited stallion along Craig place, on Friday afternoon, when the boy threw stones at him, which led to the alleged assault.

Warren Mission Industrial School.

The annual meeting of the Warren Mission Industrial School, took place in Warren Mission chapel on Saturday afternoon, and the exercises which consisted of vocal and instrumental music, recitations, etc., were of a very enjoyable nature. Prizes were awarded to the successful competitors in the various branches of the school work

Still a Patient at the Hospital.

James Sherlock, the young man who was last week committed to Muhlenberg Hospital, pending an investigation regarding his sanity, is still a patient there under lock and key. The man has been closely watched and his actions carefully noted, but the attendants have found him apparently rational at all times. Unless other symptoms are shown within a few days, the man will be discharged from that institution.

Ran a Needle in His Finger.

Mr. Michael J. Coyne, the tailor, in Mr. A. C. Horton's store on West Front street, met with a mishap on Saturday afternoon, which will deprive him of the use of his left hand for some time to come. He was working on a Wheeler & Wilson sewing machine when a No. 8 needle pierced the nail and third finger of the hand, breaking the needle into three distinct parts. Dr. Probasco succeeded in removing the broken pieces, after which he dressed the wound.

Nomination of Officers.

At a regular meeting of the Catholic Young Men's Literary Union, held in the Parochial school building, Sunday afternoon, the following officers were nominated, the same to be voted for at the election in June:

President—Geo. Tuttle.
Vice President—M. Whalen.
Treasurer—Rev. J. A. Stafford.
Recording Secretary—Philip Butcher.
Financial Secretary—Frank Malarvey.
Board of Directors—M. Mack, E. B. Daly, Andrew Nolan, John McNally, John Gallagher, Joseph Gavin.
Librarian—Dennis Galbraith.
Auditing Committee—Thos. Hughes, W. F. Brown.

Another Lunatic at Large.

At four o'clock morning of April 30, Officers Flanagan and Cooney responded to a call from the electric light station, and when they arrived there Andrew Nolan, the night fireman, told the officers that only a few minutes before a man bareheaded and in his shirt sleeves had run by the station as though escaping after a robbery. The man carried a bundle under his arm and he was soon climbing the railroad bank. Later he was seen sitting on the trestle work back of Mr. John A. Thickstun's coal yard, at Madison avenue and Third street, but notwithstanding the fact that a thorough search was made, the officers were obliged to return without their man.

Gately and His Nine Shut Out.

Hundreds were present on the grounds of the Crescent League, Saturday afternoon, to see the home team stand up against their old pitcher Gately and the rest of a picked nine from the New York College of Deaf Mutes.

Some cranks had thought the Crescents should have engaged Gately this year. But Saturday changed their minds. This year's Crescents are traveling too hot a pace for men like Gately. That crack pitcher was knocked out of the box Saturday in just three innings. Six safe hits, one of which was a home run, was the total. Another pitcher was substituted in the fourth inning, but he did not fare much better.

Says the House is Poorly Constructed.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—"Why is Music Hall not better patronized?" This question is easily answered. It is because of the badly designed plan on which the building is constructed. Any one setting a few seats back from the stage hears the actors as though they spoke with their mouths full of mush, and as it is not every one that can get a reserved seat and a great many persons are undecided about going to an entertainment until the last moment, and then perhaps reason like the writer, that it is too late to get a reserved seat and knowing the utter impossibility of hearing, hence they stay at home. When the association fills up the "hole in the wall" in the front of the building and lowers the ceiling from six to eight feet and covers the same with half-inch Norway pine the hall will be better patronized.

NED NETHERWOOD.

Changes in Real Estate.

During the past week property has changed hands in this city, as follows:

Alexander Stamm, et ux, to Christopher Baker, East Fourth street.

Emelia C. T. Carter, to G. F. T. Carter, et al, Belvidere avenue.

Israel J. Coon, admr, to Philip C. Voorhees, Randolph road.

William Swalm, et ux, to Andrew L. Smalley, Everett place.

Ada L. Gardner, to Cornelia G. Dunn, East Front street.

Elias C. Milliken, et ux, to Hugh McClaren, West Front street.

The Mutual Life Ins. Co., of New York, to Leonora F. DeRevere, Woodland avenue.

Julia B. F. Fisk and husband, to Phebe Dearing, West Sixth street.

Judith A. Wyckoff and husband, to Geo. W. Welles, West Sixth street.

Finton Hibbits et ux, to John J. Hibbits, South avenue.

C. N. J. Land Impt. Co., to William W. Wilson, West Third street.

Another Victim of That Mad Dog.

A young handsome and valuable bull terrier, belonging to Mr. W. P. Smith of Netherwood, was shot at 9:30 Saturday, because the animal lay on the ground in spasms, biting so much of the fence as was within reach of his chain. Mr Smith decided there should be no question as to the safety of his neighbors, and had the dog killed.

A week ago last Sunday night, when the mad dog THE PRESS told of was running around Netherwood, Mr. Smith heard dogs on his premises yelping and growling. The next morning the dog spoken of, was found to be bitten on the shoulder and legs. He was at once tied up and kept tied. About nine days after he showed symptoms of sickness and unsteadiness on his legs, and as that morning spasms set in, he was shot.

Other dogs about Netherwood, besides those told of in these columns, were undoubtedly bitten Yet some of them may be running at large now. Mr. Smith's example of care for the safety of others, might be followed by many with credit to them and good results to the community.

A Worthy Work Among the Young.

Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in Warren Mission took place the closing exercises of the Industrial school for the Summer months.

After a piano solo by Miss Florence Randolph, and a song by the school, the primer match was contested by three little girls—their knowledge of dressmaking, shirt making and sewing in general, showed how carefully they had been instructed. Miss Kittie Glen sang two solos in an acceptable manner. Miss Lilian Force and Miss Randolph rendered an instrumental duett

The report of the year's work read by the Secretary, Miss Murray, showed the school to be in a most prosperous condition under Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen as Superintendent, and an efficient corps of teachers. After the distribution of prizes for the best piece of work from the various departments, an abundance of ice cream and cake were served This school is a most worthy charity, and it is hoped when it is re-opened in the Fall, the difficulty it has had in securing teachers for the classes will be met by others interesting themselves in the good work.

A dry, hacking cough keeps the bronchial tubes in a state of constant irritation, which, if not speedily removed, may lead to bronchitis. No prompter remedy can be had than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which is both an anodyne and expectorant.

A century of progress has not produced a remedy equal to Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh, cold in the head and hay fever It is not a liquid or a snuff, but is perfectly safe and easily applied into the nostrils. It gives immediate relief and cures the worst cases.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became a Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Don't say there is no help for catarrh, hay fever and cold in head, since thousands testify that Ely's Cream Balm has entirely cured them. It supersedes the dangerous use of liquids and snuffs. It is easily applied into the nostrils and gives relief at once. Price 50c

Real Estate Transfers.

Within the past few days transfers of real estate have been made in the borough, as follows:

Wm. E. Marsh et ux to Wm. H. Wilcox, property in North Plainfield, $1,000.

Albert H. Wilson et ux to Ida M. Wilson, property in North Plainfield, $3,000.

Almost Bit His Hand Off.

Benjamin, a young son of Mr. Ellis Eddy of Muhlenberg place, met with a painful accident on Thursday afternoon, which nearly resulted in the loss of his left hand The boy was putting a bridle on a horse when the animal bit his hand, terribly lacerating the flesh. Dr E. W. Hedges, the attending physician, was obliged to sew up the wound, taking ten stitches in the flesh.

An Obstreperous Servant.

Rosa Droada, a Hungarian servant girl, imported from New York to work in Schorb's restaurant on East Front street, was arrested at that place by Captain Grant and Officer Cooney, night Apl. 30, on a charge of disorderly conduct. The woman fought and screamed on the way to the station house, but when she arrived there she became more docile. The whole matter originated from a dispute the woman had with her employer about wages. Judge Codington suspended sentence.

The Royal Hungarian Government Wine of Budapest, Hungary.

There are no vineyards on the face of the Globe which produce finer grades of wines than do those of Hungary, and Hungarian Wines are becoming fast the leading wines of this country, as in Europe.

The Red Wines of Hungary (Clarets) are famed throughout the World for their marvelous bouquet and strength-giving properties. No French claret, even of the highest quality, can be compared with any of the better grades of Hungarian clarets. The same can be said of the White Hungarian Wines in comparison with Rhine Wines or Haut Sauternes of France.

Little needs to be said in praise of the World-famed Tokay, "The King of Wines," which virtually has no rival. This wine is particularly recommended by the medical faculty, of both hemispheres as invaluable in impaired digestion, in sustaining the sick and aged, and restoring the convalescent to health and vigor.

This recognition on the part of physicians has created a demand and built up an increasing trade in them, inducing some unscrupulous persons, with more of the commercial instinct than of integrity, to substitute other and inferior products for Hungarian Wines. These facts have come to the notice of the Hungarian Government, and in order to overcome this falsification, and protect its great industry, which is also its great pride, has established at Budapest (the seat of government) immense Government Wine Cellars, for the inspection, selection, storage, bottling and certification of the higher grades of wine grown in that country.

The thus certified wines are shipped exclusively in bottles, and as a proof of their purity, the Government Coat of Arms is impressed on each cap, and a Protection Label so placed around the neck of each bottle that it must be destroyed when the cap is removed.

Mr. E. P. Thorn, No. 17 Park avenue, has been appointed exclusive agent for these wines for Plainfield.

A Difficulty Surmounted.

It is often very difficult to tell what kind of a laxative to give to a very young child who is suffering from pain. The only medicine which is at the same time perfectly safe, effective, and pleasant to take, is HAMBURG FIGS. 25 cents. Dose, one fig. Mack Drug Co., N. Y. For sale by J. G. Miller.

Rheumatism,

BEING due to the presence of uric acid in the blood, is most effectually cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Be sure you get Ayer's and no other, and take it till the poisonous acid is thoroughly expelled from the system. We challenge attention to this testimony:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months, and am pleased to state that it has effected a complete cure. I have since had no return of the disease."—Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th st., New York.

"One year ago I was taken ill with inflammatory rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."—Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H.

The visiting committees will be elected at the June meeting.

Another Mad Dog.

About noon Sunday, a white bull dog, said to belong to [illegible] on Broadway, made his appearance on [illegible] place, causing fear and consternation among the residents of that thoroughfare. The animal showed signs of the rabies, growling and snapping at everything he came in contact with. The brute bit two goats in that neighborhood, one of which belonging to John [illegible], was afterward shot. The dog also bit a calf, but did not hurt it.

The supposed mad dog was followed to the corner of Front and Beckman streets by Special Officer Hope and John Peterson, where the latter shot the dog.

The Reform Club Meeting.

A goodly number met in Reform Hall Sunday night. President Harper occupied the chair. Music was rendered by the regular choir under the leadership of Mr. King, and Brother [illegible] invoked the divine blessing.

The Rev. Dr. [illegible], the expected speaker for the evening, being prevented from attending, the President threw the meeting open for general remarks, which elicited several very pointed and highly interesting testimonials in behalf of total abstinence, some of them being from men who had experienced the evils of liquor drinking and [illegible] proclaimed the beneficial results obtained by taking and keeping the Reform Club pledge.
